One of the Monidars' delegates led a lone fight to stop the increase of the department's officials' salaries from $6,000 per year to $7,500, the same as the officials of the building trades department. The officers got the raise altho the effort to extend the term of the officials more than one year was defeated.

Chicago Organization Resolutions.

Resolutions coming from the Chicago Metal Trades Council calling for an organization drive of the metal trades unions in the Chicago district and urging that wage agreements expire at the same time, were pigeonholed thru reference to the executive council.

The usual platonic resolutions for the organization of the auto industry were also adopted.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: James O'Connell, Machinists, president; Joseph A. Franklin, Boilermakers, first vice-president; John Coffield, Plumbers, second vice-president; John J. Hynes, Sheet Metal Workers, third vice-president; Michael J. Keough, Molders, fourth vice-president; W. W. Britton, Metal Polishers, fifth vice-president; Roy Horn, Blacksmiths, sixth vice-president; Albert J. Berres, Pattern Makers, secretary-treasurer.

THIS WITNESS GOT NOTHING AT ALL IT APPEARS

Messrs. Daugherty and Miller Hogged Boodle

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—George Williams, former managing director of the alien property custodian's office, resumed the witness stand in the trial of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, on conspiracy charges, today denied that he had been given the papers in the $7,000,000 American Metals company property return by the late Jesse Smith, close friend of Daugherty.

Williams said that the papers were delivered to him by Richard Merton, German industrialist, thru whose offices the holdings which had been seized during the war were returned. He denied knowledge of any connection with the deal of the late John T. King, Connecticut politician.

ure. When you take into consideration the agony of parents who toot their sons, sisters their brothers, wives their husbands and children their fathers, the cost of the war in suffering is incalculable. And what is the result? More armed men in Europe today that before the war. More money spent on preparedness. Capitalist dictatorships. Lower standards of living for the workers, and another war a question of a few short years.

DO the people, who must fight wars, think of this? Only very few, we must admit. Some cynical journalists even argue that the people get a kick out of war; that only addle-brained pacifists are opposed to war. It may be true that a comparatively small number of morons get a thrill out of the slaughter of human beings. But, type of mind represented by the two young sons of Chicago millionaires who murdered a young lad, for the thrill of the deed. But normal people are not particularly anxious to witness the sight of mangled human bodies, and seeing human flesh being spattered over the landscape. Any human being who craves for that kind of "excitement" is not higher in the scale of civilization than a dog addicted with hydrophobia.

AND yet we admit that a war is inevitable, under capitalism. In fact, we have a few wars going on now, due to capitalism. There is the war in China and the protracted struggle on the part of the Druses with French imperialism. But they are comparatively small compared to the next debacle into which the human race will be thrown if the demons of greed who fatten on human sweat and blood thru the capitalist system are not stopped in their tracks. Communists are accused of having a hankering for bullets and a profound contempt for all "peaceful" methods of struggle.

THE people who make this charge are either ignorant or malicious. It seems to me that the events of the past twelve years should prove to anybody's satisfaction that a step-at-a-time policy, towards working class emancipation is impossible under capitalism. The capitalists rule by the sword, and when the exploited masses step beyond the dead line, the capitalists draw the sword and the step-at-a-time draws back or loses his foot. Only when the sword is in the other hand will the shoe be on the other foot.

The Underworld of Crime Knew the Real Criminals in Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

WHAT the underworld KNOWS, the police are supposed to know, or try to find out. Hundreds of millions of dollars are spent annually to detect crime. Immense police systems are built up, especially in the great cities.

It will be the purpose of this and the succeeding article to show that the daily workings of this police system, in the cities of Boston, Mass.; Providence, R. I., and down in New York, not to mention the smaller mill towns involved, could easily reveal the real criminals who were in the South Braintree holdup and murders that were charged against the two workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

It will be shown, however, that immediately the police got the cue that the United States government wanted to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti, the police quit the hunt for the actual payroll bandits and murderers.

The real story of the holdup and shootings at South Braintree, Mass., April 15, 1920, was told in the confession of the Italo-Portuguese, Celestino Madeiros. This confession is supported in every detail by James F. Weeks, whose real name is Croft, a confederate of Madeiros in the Wrentham National Bank murder on Nov. 1, 1924, for which the former is now serving a term of life imprisonment, while the latter is sentenced to death, the work of the executioner, however, having been stayed temporarily so that Madeiros might appear as a witness in case Sacco and Vanzetti are granted a new trial.

James F. Weeks says:

"IT IS WELL KNOWN, AND HAS LONG BEEN WELL KNOWN AMONG A CERTAIN CROWD, WHO DID THE SOUTH BRAINTREE JOB."

Weeks undoubtedly refers to the criminal elements that move about under the eyes of the police very often, as has been frequently shown: committing their crimes in not with the aid at least with passive consent of the police system.

The admissions of Weeks are also of tremendous importance in that they show that Madeiros admitted his participation in the South Braintree affair long before Colonel Fred D. Fenn sent his note of confession concealed in a magazine to Sacco in the Dedham jail.

James F. Weeks says he has known Madeiros for six years. He described Madeiros frequently, especially in planning the Wrentham National Bank robbery, told him about the South Braintree job and gave him the names of his associates in that crime as members of the Morel or Morelli gang of Providence, Rhode Island. Weeks knew Joe Morelli, consisting of Joseph, the leader, with his brothers, Mike, Pasquale or "Patsy"; Fred, sometimes called "Butsy"; Frank, a man called Bibber Barone; one called "Gyp the Blood," not however, the "Gyp the Blood" associated with the Rosenthal crime in New York City years ago.

Weeks begins his affidavit, now among those filed with Judge Webster Thayer, who has the power to grant or refuse a new trial, with the story of preparing with Madeiros the job at the Wrentham, Mass., National Bank. Shortly before this crime, Madeiros and Weeks were in a barroom or "speakeasy" at the corner of Southampton St. and Dorchester Ave., in Andrews Square, South Boston, for the purpose of arranging some of the details.

Madeiros said it was strange that he should be in the very barroom he visited four years before when he was in the South Braintree job. Madeiros told Weeks that he and the gang in the South Braintree job came to this saloon early that morning to get information.

Earlier in the summer of 1924, Weeks says, he was in the Bluebird Inn at Seekonk, Mass., which was run by Barney Monterio and Mary Burke. The place was a roadhouse and a disorderly house, as well.

Bibber Barone, Weeks says, was with some others in a taxicab and demanded a girl named Violet, who had recently been kept in the house. Madeiros, who was at that time, employed as a bouncer, told Barone that he and his gang had double crossed him (Madeiros) out on a job (the South Braintree affair); and that he might forgive them for that, but if they took the girl he would bump them all.

Weeks said Madeiros told him that the South Braintree job was arranged by the Joe Morelli gang, whom he had known as a gang of thieves with headquarters in Providence, R. I., where they had done most of their stealing, shipping the stolen goods to be disposed of in New York City. Some of the Morelli gang had been arrested months before the South Braintree job for robbing freight cars in Providence, but were out on bail.

Madeiros said that for the Wrentham bank job he wanted a Hudson car to get away with, and did not want a Buick; that he had used the Buick in the South Braintree job.

Weeks also says that Madeiros often talked about the Sacco-Vanzetti case, saying they had plenty of money to get out with, but that if they were ever convicted he would come to the front before he would see them go to the chair.

Thus Madeiros had divulged the part played by the Morelli gang in the South Braintree affair, absolving Sacco and Vanzetti from any part in this crime, at least a year before he finally got in touch with Sacco in the Dedham jail.

In order to show that the above evidence is new evidence, as required by capitalist law in order to secure a new trial, Jeremiah J. McAnarney, counsel for Vanzetti in the Sacco-Vanzetti trial, declares in an affidavit that he never heard of the Morelli gang of Providence, nor of their connection with the South Braintree murders, nor did he ever learn of the existence of Celestino Madeiros until after the Wrentham holdup.

There is another affidavit from Edward J. Lennon, a newspaper reporter of Boston, in which he says that he knew the Morelli gang many months before the holdup consisting of Joseph, the leader, with his brothers, Mike, Pasquale or "Patsy"; Fred, sometimes called "Butsy"; Frank, a man called Bibber Barone; one called "Gyp the Blood," not however, the "Gyp the Blood" associated with the Rosenthal crime in New York City years ago.

Weeks begins his affidavit, now among those filed with Judge Webster Thayer, who has the power to grant or refuse a new trial, with the story of preparing with Madeiros the job at the Wrentham, Mass., National Bank. * * *

William G. Thompson, attorney for Sacco and Vanzetti, filed an additional affidavit, presenting the court proceedings against Joseph, Fred and Pasquale Morelli for freight car thefts in Providence, showing that on March 15, 1920, just a month before the South Braintree crime, Joseph Morelli was surrendered by his bondsmen and obtained another bondsman who gave him bail in $6,000.

Thus the Morelli gang of freight car robbers was in sore straits to furnish bail money and raise funds to pay lawyers to fight their case in the courts. So they turned from petty freight car thieves to the more lucrative role of payroll bandits, committing the crime at South Braintree on April 15, 1920, that the United States government and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts seized upon as a weapon with which to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair, "to dispose of them."

Here is the powerful truth. Labor must use the truth as an effective weapon to fight for and free its own —Sacco and Vanzetti.

Tomorrow:—The affidavit of John T. McKay, a captain of the New Bedford, Mass., police department, who admitted that pursuit of the Morelli gang was "dropped" with the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti.

PASSAIC STRIKERS NEED CLOTHING

Overcoats, shoes and other clothing are needed for the Passaic textile strikers and their families.

The strike is now on for eight months and those brave men and women are still bravely marching on the picket line in spite of all the cruelty of the authorities used against them in order to whip them into submission. This battle is now raging more fiercely than ever, arrests and torture in the Passaic and Clifton jails are the latest weapons of the textile barons and their tools.

Now the winter is coming with its gnawing colds and those people have no shoes or clothes on their backs to protect them. Do what you can to help them. LOOK AROUND NOW! See what clothing you can spare. Discarded things which you do not use any more will be very welcome to the strikers. Send all you can. Speak to your neighbors and see if they have any clothing which they want to give away.

Reporting Case

[illegible] three iron rungers [illegible] dizzy deep off the eighth level of the [illegible] alone as witnessed [illegible] hoisting [illegible] was begging [illegible] for federal investigation of the probably avoidable accident is being raised in all quarters. Three men were killed when a cave-in in a shaft caused the cage, or mine elevator, to drop to the bottom.

Intimating that the Oliver [illegible] Mining Co., a steel trust subsidiary, deliberately allowed its greed for profits to outweigh the safety of its workers, the Ashland Daily Press has mercilessly scored Mrs. Coolidge a demand for a federal probe of the causes leading to the fatalities.

Safety Exit Caved In.

Among the thinly veiled charges directed against the Oliver Iron Mining Co. by the Daily Press are that the safety exit had been allowed by the company to cave in, that the shaft was almost constantly in dangerous condition, and that no effort at making it safe were allowed to quell the dust in the company office, that Associated Press for many hours refused to report the terrific accident, that the wives of the dead and entombed men were not notified by the company, that the so-called safety [illegible] on the elevator were no good and that callous indifference was shown by the company officials.

As evidence of the last charge, the Press states that a prominent company official, when reached by [illegible] phone at his house after there had been no response at the door, replied to say anything except, "This is hell of a time to wake a man up."

In the past 80 years, according to this Coolidge-Lenroot deity, there have been over 500 fatal accidents in Gogebic county with an average of 1 miner killed for every 100,000 tons of iron ore mined.

means decreased production, which, in turn, is a dead loss to the employer."

With Ford, Green believes that increased leisure goes hand in hand with increased production.

Sound Economics He Thinks.

"The five day week is a sound economic principle," said Green. "The employer should bear in mind that it is good business as Henry Ford said."

Green declared that this was the principle under which the federation would fight for the shorter week.

"Social inequality, industrial instability and social conflict must increase unless the workers' real wage, the purchasing power of their wages, coupled with a continuing reduction in the number of hours per week, the working day are progressed in proportion to man's increasing power of production."

Green leaves tomorrow for the Federation's annual convention in Detroit starting Monday.

As last year, the federation is expected again to adopt a strictly nonpartisan attitude in the coming election. Leaders said that this policy has reaped the greatest rewards for labor.

There may be some fireworks over Mexico, though leaders are trying to keep this question from breaking out on the floor for fear it may stir up a religious fight. The Mexican labor leaders are staunchly supporting the Calles government in its struggle with the Catholic church.

Chase Head of C. L. U. in Kansas City

Nelson Charged With Blackmail by Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 1.—C. B. Nelson, secretary-manager of the Kansas City Central Labor Union, was suspended from office, deprived of attending the A. F. of L. convention and awarding about five hundred dollars in the union's money at the session, by the fat boys in Detroit. An investigation committee charged him with malfeasance in office on two counts, and blackmail. Some of this grows from investigation of Nelson's methods of getting advertising.

A trial committee of seven was elected to give the deposed secretary a trial, and in the meantime Dale Mallet of the carpenters, is temporarily secretary pending the outcome. The vote to temporarily oust the secretary was carried by a vote of 16 to 24.

More Charges Coming.

The investigation committee brot in charges with three counts against the secretary and reported that this is a partial report. The committee is continued as they say other matter detrimental to the labor movement are pending and will be brot in when complete.

The expression of the committee and delegates are that there is something rotten in Denmark, and before the movement in Kansas City can defend the interests of the workers and grow, they will have to clean house.

Other Corruptionists Hunt Their Holes.

The trial committees recommendations will be referred to the council and at the next meeting they look for a good turn-out of the corrupt, crooked crowd who will back their man, Nelson.

To those workers for whom it has struggled—and to ALL LABOR—it now appeals for funds to be able to continue the fight for another year.

Ten thousand dollars must be collected at once—fifty thousand in the next three months. If the campaign is a success we can "Keep the Daily Worker"—FOR THE MILITANT LABOR MOVEMENT.

Federation Executive Council Demands Repeal of "Syndicalist" Law

Officials of the Federation are in a jubilant mood over the victory of C. C. Young in the primaries over his reactionary opponent, Governor Richardson, for the republican nomination for governor. Young was endorsed by the Conference for Progressive Political Action, the State Federation of Labor, the Farmers' Educational Co-operative Union, and the Railroad Brotherhoods, all of whom feel that they will get something when he gets into office after the November elections.

In the report of Paul Scharrenberg, federation secretary for many years, he urged labor to fight against the proposed law before the state legislature requiring the bible in the schools of California.

Oppose Peonage System.

Scharrenberg declared his opposition to a system of the Fresno County Labor officials who made arrangements with the government to import Mexican laborers for a few months of the year, under a virtual system of peonage, and then ship them back to Mexico. This plan does not differ one iota from the methods used on the Hawaiian sugar plantations to import Chinese coolies, and the federation declared it could not allow such a policy.

The secretary urged the A. F. of L. to appoint and convene a Joint-Mexican-American Commission representing both organizations which would study the entire Mexican situation and consider what the policy of American labor should do.

The federation re-iterated its stand favoring the complete exclusion of Japanese from California, and denounced the Federal Council of Churches which recently went on record favoring allowing a limited quota of Japanese immigrants to enter this country.

The report further denounced attempts of California open shop employers to enforce "yellow dog" contracts on their employes. Organizations like the Industrial Association of San Francisco, against which the federation have waged a bitter struggle for several months to enforce the closed shop, have raised over two million dollars to put the American plan into operation in the Bay District.

Scharrenberg modestly claims that he has been called by his opponents the "outstanding labrat in California." A little author, he said on what grounds his radicalism rests; it consists in supporting the progressive candidate of the Hearst papers for governor, C. C. Young.

His success in the primary elections, which was so closely contested that he won by a bare margin, has encouraged labor to continue their "non-partisan" political policy, ignoring the sentiment which swept the state two years ago for a labor party. George Kidwell, leading figure who succeeded in knifing the labor party in 1924, is silent on that question today.

Progressive Resolutions Introduced.

Resolutions in support of the British miners, the Passaic textile workers, for the freeing of political prisoners in the state, for the formation of a state labor party, for a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, against the Citizens' Military Training Camps, against the circulating of chamber of commerce literature in the public schools of Los Angeles lauding the open shop, are among those to be considered.

Attack Criminal Syndicalism Law.

One of the first resolutions adopted, as this is written, was one urging the repeal of the criminal syndicalism law, under which scores of I. W. W. members are in San Quentin penitentiary, for terms ranging from 14 years to life.

C. C. Young, republican nominee for governor, addressed the convention Thursday.

President R. H. Baker of San Francisco, from latest reports, was defeated for re-election by John F. Dalton, Los Angeles Typographical Union, to head the State Federation of Labor for the coming year.

Bauer Cab Drivers Face Injunction to Break Their Strike

Chicago labor faces another injunction, as asked for in a petition before the superior court by the Bauer Taxicab company, to restrain the 750 members of Local 727 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers from "interfering with the business of the company."

There are no Bauer cabs on the streets because the strike was unanimous. It was called when the company cut into the already low wage return of from $22 to $30 per week with an announcement that the chauffeurs would have to pay five cents a gallon for the gasoline they used while on duty making profits for the company.

Flirting With Fascism

Soviet Workers Wise Step

Fears (by cable) of the Socialist element of the International Trade Union Committee which visited Russia, that it was attached by the Communist element, was voiced in Paris Sept. 17 by Jacob Pyde, secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, according to Wilhelm of the Amsterdam Federation of Food and Drink Workers.

Wilhelm accused trade union unity nationally and internationally, to fight the employers "peacefully." In this respect, he said, the food and drink international was a step in advance of the Amsterdam International, as it had admitted the Food Workers' Union of Soviet Russia.

Admitting Russians Wise Step.

For this reason, said Wilhelm, his international had been sharply attacked by the other international secretariats, as well as by the Amsterdam International itself, but experience had shown that the step was a wise one, and there had been no reason to regret it. They had naturally had their differences of opinion with the Russian organization, but a spirit of open-mindedness now marked all debates.

Find Worse Countries Than Russia.

The Transport Workers' Congress protested the action of the Esthonian government, which forbids the Esthonian railway men from joining the I. T. F.

Also it "viewed with alarm" the forcible dissolution of the Transport Union of Italy by the fascist government. This, said the congress, was "in violation of the right of combination laid down in the peace treaties signed by the Italian government."

This is a joint hike with our junior section and all proletarians are urged to send their children between the ages of 12 to 18 years for a day of healthful recreation and exercise. ## Flirting With Fascism

Russia [illegible] Mr. Irving wasn't supposed to be discussing the [illegible] difference at all; he was supposed to be seeing to it that his students remembered the horrors of battle and encouraging them to [illegible] French-Prussian war. But one theme led so easily to [illegible] and it was so difficult to keep the "sore-heads" quiet! That thing was happening in other class rooms, and in other [illegible] of the United States, where men encountered their fellows, and [illegible] become exposed to "dangerous thoughts." Before long the [illegible] hidden ideas were being voiced in congress, and after that they could not be kept out of the newspapers. It was like a stream that [illegible] over the whole country, a million idealists like Bunny waking up all at once to the cruel fact that their dolly was stuffed with sawdust.

IV

Yes, it was a trying time to be alive in the world. All those golden promises that had been made to us, those bright hopes we had cherished! All the blood of the young men that had been shed, three hundred thousand of them dead or wounded in Flanders—and here were the allied statesmen, grim, cruel old men, sitting at the council-table and putting the world right back where it had been before! Perpetuating all the old hatreds, all the old tyrannies—with a thousand new ones to torment the future! Tearing Germania away from their own land and giving them to Frenchmen, giving Austrians to Italians, Russians to Poles—so on, for a long list of bunders; condemning millions of people to live under governments which they feared and despised and thus making certain they would revolt and throw Europe into uproar again.

Men could not realize these things all at once; they got them little by little, as details of the negotiations leaked out. Every country in the world was carrying on its own propaganda, thinking about its own selfish interests; and President Wilson was in the midst of the mess, being pulled and hauled about, this way and that, quite powerless for the good aims he had proclaimed. As the picture of this got back to America, there spread over the land such a wave of disgust as had never been known before.

And then the president himself came home, to declare that he had achieved a complete victory. In the name of "self-determination of all peoples" he was giving the German Rhineland to France, and German Africa to Britain and the German Tyrol to Italy and a Chinese province to Japan and to the United States a mandate over Armenia!—Also he had made a perpetual alliance with France and Britain, whereby we bound ourselves to maintain this brand of self-determination forever! When this program had been thoroughly realized, a case of hilarious cynicism became the correct thing among the young intellectuals of America; fashionable young matrons took to deceiving their husbands in the name of chastity and college boys began toting hip-pocket flasks out of loyalty to prohibition.

The thing was particularly hard upon Bunny, because he had to go to Paradise every once in a while, and come face to face with Ruth, and explain how self-determination for the people of Siberia meant that her brother must stay there in peace time and hold a bayonet at their necks. In elucidating this singular situation, Bunny became almost as skillful a trickster as he; he had a regular diplomatic job with extra-territorial immunity. For a month or so he managed it, while the Germans were dragged to Versailles and made to sign an agreement to pay an indemnity so vast that it could not be named.

Then one day a letter that made his task all but impossible. It was an innocent-looking letter, written in a crude hand on some sheets of cheap paper, postmarked Seattle, and addressed to "Mr. Bunny Ross, Paradise, California." It said:

"Dear Mr. Bunny: You dont know me but I am a returned soldier that used to punch cattle in Salinas valley. Paul Watkins said I should write you because he cant get no news by the censors. I am invalidded back, have had the Asiatic dissenterry, am bleeding at the bowls three months and you should wash your hands good when you have read this letter, because it is an easy disease to catch. I am in issolation and this will be smuggled, for God's sake dont let on I have wrote it they would sure put me in the can. But Paul said your father might do something to get us boys out if he knew what a hell it was. Mr. Bunny what are we doing in that place and why do we have to stay? It is forty below zerow most of the winter and big storms a lot of the time and you have to do sentry duty and in summer the muskeeters is as flies and where they bite the blood runs. And the Japs take shots at us, they are suppose to be our allies but they are sure grabbing that country. There is supposed to be only seven thousand but there is seventy and why did we take them in there? Our boys is not allowed to have not side arms and the Japs have got bayonets and we have only fists. We have zones that we are supposed to control but the Japs will not keep out of them and I have saw them put out with machine guns lined up, and if we have to have a war with them over Siberia there will sure be a lot of our boys massacreed at the startoff. And them Russian refugees and officers that we have orders to help I heard our colonel say, you give them money to start a government and they go on a bust and that night you have to pull them out of a sporting house. They have got one idea which is to shoot all the workingmen they can get hands on and the women crazy and they torture them, Mr Bunny I seen things that it would make you sick to read them. From General Graves down our army is sore on this job and some of them is gone crazy, there has been more than twenty in our regiment, and some has been sent home in a strait jacket. But the people at home is not allowed to know nothing, there is boys in our regiment that is not close just to keep us working. Please send me some cigarettes that will be a way to say that you have got this letter and if you send two packages I will know that you want me to write some more. Yours respectfully, Jeff Korbitty."

The British Miners Fight On

The British coal strike enters its sixth month with British coal operation at less than 10 per cent of normal, proving that the miners, estimated at 150,000, who have been driven back to the pits by downright starvation, constitute a negligible factor in breaking the strike.

The stern endurance of the miners is in direct contrast to the shifty-eyed and black treachery of their own leaders and the leaders of the Trade Union General Council.

First came the desertion of the miners by the calling off of the general strike, then the refusal to institute an embargo on scab coal. Words, words, words—but no action from the official leadership of British labor which has contented itself with calling Premier Baldwin names and "accusing" him—the spokesman of the capitalist class of Britain—of aiding the coal owners.

Of course, he is. That is his job. It was his job when he induced the trade union general council to call off the general strike and his job now is to smash the British labor movement. In this he is being aided by the British trade union leaders from Cook, with his fawning acceptance of the Judas kiss of the reactionaries at the Scarborough congress, to Thomas and MacDonald.

British industry is in a desperate condition. The beginning of winter, according to dispatches, will see the transfer of huge orders from British plants to other countries if the coal strike is not settled. 140 blast furnaces are closed as are dozens of textile mills unable to pay the high price exacted by the thrifty importers of foreign coal.

The Bournemouth Trade Union Congress could have won the coal strike. It had only to show a united front to the British government, call for the whole trade union movement to refuse to handle scab coal, and the government would have had to capitulate.

The situation of British imperialism, at home and abroad, is now so desperate that it needs but a determined stand by the working class to bring it to its knees.

But this is exactly what the leaders—Thomas, Pugh, Cramp, Cook, Tillet, Purcell, Swales and all the rest of them with a few notable exceptions not be found in the upper strata—are afraid of. They are imperialists to a man in spite of their brave words from time to time.

The miners must battle thru for another month and they will have won. Perhaps they may not be able to resist entirely, without any aid from the T. U. C. except that of scant financial support, a reduction in wages, but they will have dealt a blow to British imperialism from which it will never recover.

No blacker page in British labor history has been written than that which records the betrayal of the glorious struggle of the miners. It is likewise a betrayal of the whole British working class and of the labor movement of the world. There is no one who has followed the struggle in Great Britain but that knows that the rank and file of labor thruout the world were thrilled and inspired by the general strike as they had not been since the Russian revolution. The masses stood ready to aid in every way had the British Trade Union General Council issued the call for uncompromising support on every front that the masses expected.

Such treachery has far-reaching effects and already it has created serious demoralization in the ranks of British labor and discouraged the workers in other lands.

Were it not for the British Communist Party and the Minority Movement, the trade unions would be in full retreat and the victory of British capitalism all but complete.

As it is, the Communists and the organized left wing are rally ing the workers for new struggles, preventing desertion of the unions and preparing to establish a new leadership free from the damning taint of British imperialism.

The advanced section of the British workers has said that the agents of British imperialism in the ranks of the labor movement, whether they masquerade under left phrases like Purcell and Cook, or openly fight for the master class like Thomas and MacDonald, must go.

The British labor movement has entered a new period. The end of the coal strike will mark not an end of struggle as the reactionary leadership hopes, but the beginning of the fight to organize the British labor movement for the struggle for power.

No Check-Off in the Anthracite Shown by District 7 Convention

The recent convention of District 7, where the delegates called upon John L. Lewis to come into the anthracite fields, meet with the board of conciliation, and attempt to secure the check-off which the board has not yet established, is the best of proof that the charges made by the progressive forces, headed by Brophy, Stevenson and Brennan, that John L. Lewis surrendered the check-off and jammed an agreement which does not provide for it down the throats of the anthracite miners, are correct.

Never before since the unionization of the anthracite field has a district convention had to raise such an issue.

It is the same with the arbitration clause in the anthracite agreement. The Lewis-Cappelini machine claims that it is not an arbitration agreement. Nevertheless, they dare not wage a struggle on this issue, even tho they were militant enough to do so, because their full treachery would be exposed.

As soon as provisions of the anthracite agreement were known the Communist Party denounced it as an arbitration agreement, which surrendered the check-off and the closed shop. The convention of District 7, has confirmed our statement.

There are a number of things the miners will have to do. The first is to clean out the Lewis machine from top to bottom, strengthen the union, force the check-off and closed shop and absolutely reject the arbitration clause in the agreement and by a series of well-organized strikes put the union back on its feet in a position to protect the miners and build it into a weapon of the rank and file to resist the assaults of the operators and their agents in the union.

Will the A. F. of L. Fight for Its Wage Policy?

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor, held last year, adopted a declaration on the wages of the workers, which was hailed as a new wage policy. The section of the resolution on wages which contains this new statement of policy, reads as follows:

"Social inequality, industrial instability and injustice must increase unless the workers' real wages, the purchasing power of their wages, coupled with continuing reduction in the number of hours making up the working day are progressed in proportion to man's increasing power of production."

This statement of policy by the A. F. of L. is a frank acceptance of the existing capitalist system under which the workers are exploited by the owners of industry. The A. F. of L. accepted the right of the capitalist employers to take a large share of the product of the workers in the form of interest on bonds, dividends on stock and profits generally.

According to a study made by the National Bureau of Economic Research, in the year 1918, the capitalist employers took 46 per cent of the net value product of all industries in this country, and labor received 54 per cent. The wage policy of labor, as visualized by the Atlantic City convention of the A. F. of L. was to continue to give the capitalist employers 46 per cent of the product of the workers and that labor should be satisfied with the 54 per cent which it was receiving (according to the calculation of the National Bureau of Economic Research, which very likely exaggerated labor's share.)

THE Atlantic City convention policy applied to industry means that the workers should not fight for a higher standard of life so long as there was no increase in the amount of wealth produced. It conceded to the capitalist employers all that they had grabbed in the past, for the capitalist employers in the United States have thru the exploitation of labor amassed great fortunes in the past fifty years, they have achieved there this exploitation the ownership of the great industrial machine which the workers have built in this country.

The A. F. of L. said, let them have it. The A. F. of L. said, let them draw interest, dividends and profits on their certificates of ownership, altho they may be absentee owners and contribute nothing to the production of wealth.

All that the A. F. of L. asked for labor was, that if the amount of wealth produced was increased, then the increase should also be divided 54% to labor and 46% to the capitalist employers.

This policy means that the worker cannot secure at any time a greater share of his product. He can only demand higher wages if thru the improvement in the machinery of production or thru intensified work on their part they can increase the amount of wealth produced.

Industry is Anarchy.

THIS wage policy of the Atlantic City convention should be reactionary enough to suit even the most hide-bound capitalist employer. The A. F. of L. convention, so far as it was within its power, that is so far as labor was concerned, simply gave the capitalist employers a guarantee that they need have no fear that their profits would be interfered with. Surely, no capitalist employers could ask more than that his workers should declare that they would never ask him to reduce the share of the product of industry which he gets in the form of profits, in order to increase the workers' wages.

While guaranteeing the capitalists their profits in the ratio in which they had been receiving them, this statement of wage policy did make one modest demand for the workers. It asked that if productivity increased the workers should share in the increase product. If the ratio was 54% to the workers and 46% to the capitalists, then the workers should get 54% of the increased productivity—that is, their wages should be increased in proportion to the increased amount of wealth they produced.

The department of Commerce in its year book for 1925, which has recently been published, throws some light upon the question of the productivity of the workers. Its figures on the productivity of labor should be of interest to the A. F. of L. leaders. The Year Book says:

"Even in the short period between 1919 and 1922 the output per wage earner in our factories increased about 30%, and there is no doubt that the census of 1925 will show a continuance of this basic progress.

A 30% increase in the productivity per worker from 1919 to 1922, a continued increase in productivity since that time! Here is something for the A. F. of L. leaders who adopted the reactionary wage policy at the Atlantic City convention to consider. According to even their wage policy labor should fight for an increase in wages when the productivity of the workers increased.

No one will dare to contend that the workers have shared in the 30% increase in productivity from 1919 to 1922 and in the increase in productivity of the workers since 1925 which the department of commerce Year Book establishes. No one will dare contend that the real wages of the workers have increased since 1919.

Such a contention would have to face the fact that the same department of labor Year Book which establishes the increase in productivity admits that the index of wages which in 1919 stood at 235, compared to 100 in 1914, was only 218 in 1925. In other words, labor suffered a decrease in wages of about 9% in a period in which productivity per worker increased 30%, from 1919 to 1922 with a continuance of productivity between 1923 and 1925 which made the percentage of increase in productivity still greater in 1925.

Will the A. F. of L. Leadership Fight?

THESE figures put up to the leadership of the A. F of L., which adopted the modest demand that labor should be satisfied with its proportionate share of the product of industry and let the capitalists have theirs, whether it will fight even to maintain that proportionate share.

Labor has not received its proportionate share of increased productivity from 1919 to 1925, to say nothing of increasing its share of the wealth produced and raising its standard of life at the expense of reducing the profits of the capitalist employers.

If the leaders of the A. F. of L. mean to make their declaration of wage policy to be taken seriously, if they really mean to maintain labor's share of the wealth produced, then it is the business of the Detroit convention, which opens Monday, to make the first and most important order of business of the convention the question of organizing and mobilizing the workers for a nation-wide drive, in every industry, for an increased in wages proportionate to increase in the productivity per worker as shown by the figures of the department of commerce.

That increased productivity is at least 25%, to put it moderately. The A. F. of L. leaders, if their resolution on wage policy is to be anything more than another scrap of paper, should take the initiative and leadership in a fight for a 25% increase in wages for every worker in the United States.

Will the A. F. of L. initiate such a fight? Will it support its statement of wage policy by action to enforce it?

Every worker knows the answers to these questions. Just as the A. F. of L. conceded to the capitalist employers everlastingly the right to exploit the workers, so they will concede to them to retain all of the increase in the productivity of the workers.

The A. F. of L. leaders are too cowardly, too tied up with the capitalists, to lead the workers into a fight for the little that these leaders declared labor should have and without which "social inequality, industrial instability and injustice must increase."

Last Words on Evolution

By ERNEST HAECKEL.

We find another series of strong arguments in favor of our Monistic psychology in the individual development of the soul in the child and the young animal. We know that the newborn child has as yet no consciousness, no intelligence, no independent judgment and thought. We follow the gradual development of these higher faculties step by step in the first years of life, in strict proportion to the anatomical development of the cortex with which they are bound up. The inquiries into the child-soul which Wilhelm Preyer began in Jena twenty-five years ago, his careful observations of the mental development of men in his early years," and the supplementary research of several more recent physiologists have shown, from the onto-genetic side, that the soul is not a special immaterial entity, but the sum-total of a number of connected functions of the brain. When the brain and the soul come to an end.

We have further proof in the stem-history of the soul, which we gather from the comparative psychology of the lower and higher mammals, and of savage and civilized races. Modern ethnography shows us in actual existence the various stages thru which the mind rose to its present height. The most primitive races, such as the Veddahs of Ceylon, or the Australian natives, are very little above the mental life of the anthropoid apes. From the higher savages we pass by a complete graduation of stages to the most civilized races. But what a gulf there is, even here, between the genius of a Goethe, a Darwin, or a Lamarck, and an ordinary philistine or third-rate official. All these facts point to one conclusion: the human soul has only reached its present height by a long period of gradual evolution; it differs in degree, not in kind, from the soul of the higher mammals: and thus it cannot in any case be immortal.

That a large number of educated people still cling to the dogma of personal immortality in spite of these luminous proofs, is owing to the great power of conservative tradition and the evil methods of instruction that stamp these untenable dogmas deep on the growing mind in early years. It is for that very reason that the churches strive to keep the schools under their power at any cost; they can control and exploit the adults at will, if independent thought and judgment have been stifled in the earlier years.

This brings us to the interesting question: What is the position of the "ecclesiastical evolution" of the Jesuits (the "latest course of Darwinism") as regards this great question of the soul? Man is, according to Wasmann, the image of God and a unique, immaterial being, differing from all other animals in the possession of an immortal soul, and therefore having a totally different origin from them. Man's immortal soul is, according to the Jesuit sophistry, "spiritual and sensitive," while the animal soul is sensitive only. God has implanted his own spirit in man, and associated it with an animal soul for the period of life. It is true that Wasmann believes even man's body to have been created directly by God; but, in view of the overwhelming proofs of our animal descent, he leaves open the possibility of a development from a series of other male, in which case the divine spirit would be breathed into him in the end: The christian fathers, who were much concerned with the introduction of the soul into the human embryo, tell us that the immortal soul enters the soulless embryo on the fortieth day after conception in the case of the boy, and on the eightieth day in the case of the girl. If Wasmann supposes that there was a similar introduction of the soul in the development of the race, he must postulate a moment in the history of the anthropoid apes when God sent his spirit into the hitherto unspiritual soul of the ape.

Germans Inspect U. S. Industry; Say Dawes Plan Too Rigorous

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — Thirty-one German business men, representing the publishing, manufacturing, and contracting phases of German industry, have arrived in the United States to study the methods of American industry. They will be entertained by the New York chamber of commerce.

Herr Bodo Ronnefeld, trade manager of the Leipsic Fair, under the auspices of which the party is touring, declared that the Dawes plan is working well.

"The Dawes plan is too rigorous," he said. "The organization will some day find too hard a burden being brought to bear."

The Labor Day Number of the Federation News

impossibly for the workers' interest, organization does not tend in that direction—the Green's leadership certainly does.

In regard to non-partisanship political action, Green declares that labor should be sure to vote and vote for candidates who will be loyal to the people! Mind you, not loyal to labor—that would be skirting too close to the edge of a labor party—but to the people. Can a more empty, and illusory and vicious Labor Day message be conceived of?

In the very next column to Green's message we have one from that guardian angel of the miners' union—John L. Lewis. Lewis devotes his space to lamentations over the tendency of the operators to "break their agreements and to shove the workers backwards and downwards—by wrecking and destroying their only real protectors, the union."

"What good has come of it all?" he plaintively asks. Then answers: "None whatever."

"Let us all hope that next year will see the end of this assault upon the integrity of industry and business. (What the hell does the faker mean by that?) Let us all strive for the attainment of harmony and good feeling in industry."

Lewis is unconsciously frank in this instance. This is precisely what he is striving for in his role as president of the miners' union, and as the betrayer of the miners' interests. Lewis is doing his utmost to stake the assault "upon the integrity of (the coal mining) industry and business," by wrecking the miners' union.

There are other "inspiring" messages from the "leaders of labor" contained in this notable Labor Day issue of the Federation News. There is also a summary of the A. F. of L. program, including the "advanced" position it takes on such issues as Communists in unions, recognition of Soviet Russia, the Labor Party, amalgamation, etc., all of which are "emphatically repudiated, rejected and condemned." Also, on the very last page, we are treated to the sight of Brother Green and a whole retinue of his fellow leaders, grouped around smiling Cal Coolidge and "cordially discussing the problems of labor."

It's a grand issue from cover to cover.

American Labor Wants Deeds, Not Words

PRESIDENT GREEN of the American Federation of Labor is in one respect, at least, different from the late Samuel Gompers. William Green is more talkative than the "old man" and resorts more often than his predecessor to the use of NICE WORDS to conceal his ugly purposes.

It is for this reason that the forty-sixth annual convention of the A. F. of L., which opens its sessions in Detroit on October 4th, may be expected to say words and pass resolutions which under Gompers would not have been possible. But the practical results will be the same. The bureaucracy in control of the convention is hopeless as far as progress is concerned in the American labor movement.

This fact should move the left wing and the progressives to greater activity and more strenuous efforts. Above all these elements must strive toward better organization and more unified action. The opportunities for a successful drive against the reactionaries in the trade unions are becoming more favorable very day.

Do not permit Green and company to get away with empty words and meaningless phrases. Demand action. Demand concret, practical deeds. And let the American trade unionists see where Green stands on that. There is one particular matter which the bureaucracy always handles and destroys "diplomatically." It is the question of organising the unorganized. The reactionaries do not dare to oppose it openly but their opposition and sabotage is just as real as if they had proclaimed it from the housetops.

Just now the organization of the masses of unorganized workers into unions on a large scale is becoming a practical possibility. The conditions in industry are favorable for it. The masses want it. What is needed is organized effort and leadership. The left and progressive elements must raise this issue in such a manner that would make it impossible for the reactionaries to forget about it on the morrow after the convention.

—ALEX BITTELMAN.

"THESE MUST BE HEARD." By Jarger

On the Organization of the Unorganized

By THURBER LEWIS.

THE comparative figures of the number of organized workers to the total number of workers employed in ten of the largest and most important industries in the country tell a graphic story that is of all the more interest because of the convention of the American Federation of Labor, now in session in Detroit. The delegates to this convention have it in their powers to apply the remedy that can go a long way towards changing the sorrowful story told by the figures below.

Iron and Steel.

IN 1920 there were 875,000 workers in the steel mills of the country, while 41,600 slaved in the blast furnaces. A total estimation in 1923 gives the number of workers in the steel industry as 497,836. In this keystone industry of American capitalism (a safe estimate now is a half million workers) there are 11,400 workers organized into the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin workers, a union composed almost exclusively of skilled men.

Automobile.

RECENT estimates for 1926 give the number of workers in automobile factories alone as 323,543, while 500,000 more are engaged in the manufacture of parts and accessories. There is no union in the A. F. of L. with jurisdiction over this industry. The theory is that each of the crafts engaged in the automobile plants are to organize on their own hook. The result is that an insignificant number of workers are so organized. The unaffiliated Auto and Aircraft Workers' Union now has no more than 1,500 members in its ranks. The industry can be looked upon as completely unorganized.

Textile.

FIGURES for 1923 credit industry with 1,021,564 workers. But of this vast number of workers in an industry in which positively the most degrading conditions of work prevail the United Textile Workers' Union has 30,000, to which must be added the recently acquired 2,000 from the Passaic strike, while the unaffiliated Federation of Textile Operatives has no more than 10,000 members. In 1926, when there were three times as many members in the U. T. W. as there are now, the percentage of organized workers to unorganized was placed at 10 per cent.

Metal Mining.

THE Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union, the unworthy successor to the militant Western Federation of Miners, has now a membership of some 2,500. Available figures for the metal mining industry, which includes all mines except coal and corresponds to the jurisdiction of the above union, are 151,792.

Rubber.

IN 1926 it was estimated that 116,000 workers were employed in the manufacture of rubber tires. It is estimated 161,550 was the number engaged in 1923 in the production of all rubber and composition goods. None are organized.

Maritime Trades.

THE marine workers were at one time well organized. The International Seamen's Union in 1921 had a membership of 103,200, while the 1926 membership of the International Longshoremen's Union was 74,000. Now, however, the longshoremen are down to 31,800, while the seamen have been almost annihilated, reporting 16,000 members to the 1925 convention. There is also a small union of masters, mates and pilots, with a membership of 2,500. There are, therefore, only 50,000 workers organized in this very important industry, once powerfully organized, in which there are almost 300,000 workers.

Lumber.

ASIDE from the short-lived and weak Timber Workers' Union that had at its peak 10,000 members, was affiliated to the A. F. of L. and died in 1923, the Industrial Workers of the World is the only organization that has made a consistent campaign to organize the loggers. But at the present time it is doubtful if the timber workers carrying I. W. W. cards number much over 1,000, the sole organization in the field. The industry is a huge one. In 1923 the number of lumbermen and wood-choppers employed thruout the country was 366,316.

Communication.

THE powerful telegraph and telephone companies employ 342,597 men and women. Of this number it has been estimated that not more than 15 per cent are members of the Electrical Workers' Union, the only one in its field and one of the largest in the building trades industry.

Food.

THE membership of all unions in the food industry total some 350,000. There are four, the International Union of Bakery and Confectionery Workers, 21,000; the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, 15,200; the International Union of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America, 15,000, and the unaffiliated Amalgamated Food Workers, not over 6,000. The industry is one of the largest in the land, employing almost a half million workers.

Leather.

THE leather industry is given credit for having in its employ 200,000 workers. Of this number the United Shoe Workers' Union, the only one organized. There is a small unaffiliated Shoe Workers' Protective Union as well as a glove workers' union, a pocketbook workers' union and a leather workers' union, all with a few thousand or less members. Another union is a crying need in the tanning and shoe section of the industry, the largest branch, in addition to the question of organization.

Such are the figures. They show that no serious attempt has been made by the American Federation of Labor to extend itself in these basic industries. A mere comparison would show that what organization there is in these industries is due rather than proven to the initiative of the workers themselves. The question of organizing the unorganized workers in these basic industries is a pressing one and should be the chief concern of the delegates of the Detroit convention.

$50,000 Raised This Week for the Keep The Daily Worker Fund

By a call issued by the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party, THE DAILY WORKER has received about $9,000 in response to its appeal for contributions to the KEEP THE DAILY WORKER fund.

This amount has been contributed thru individual subscription for the Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates.

Quick action is needed to raise $41,000 and to complete the first installment of $10,000 of the total of the $50,000 Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund.

The DAILY WORKER has obligations which are overdue amounting to $15,000. If these obligations are not met immediately our party will be in grave danger of losing one of its most important sources of strength in the class struggle and in building the revolutionary movement in this country.

To meet the situation and enable OUR DAILY to pay its paper bills and thus secure new supplies of paper so that it can continue to appear, The DAILY WORKER must receive at least $5,000 in contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund during the present week.

That means that $5,000 in cash and dollars must be sent to The DAILY WORKER this day of the week after this statement appears.

Thus far the party units have not gone into action in support of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund. The plan of campaign and the Keep The DAILY WORKER Certificates have now been in the hands of the party units for at least a week.

IT SHOULD BE POSSIBLE FOR THE TEN THOUSAND PARTY MEMBERS TO RAISE A THOUSAND DOLLARS A DAY THRU ENERGETIC WORK IN SELLING THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CERTIFICATES AND THRU THE CONTRIBUTIONS FROM THE PARTY MEMBERS.

If there ever was a crisis which required quick, united, energetic action that crisis exists now.

THE PARTY CAN KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

IT HAS SHOWN BEFORE THAT IN TIME OF NEED IT IS CAPABLE OF CARRYING THRU A BIG ACTION. IT MUST SHOW THAT NOW.

Every party unit must make its first remittance on the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund during this week. Mobilize the members for action. Collect all the funds possible. Send in $5, $10, or $25, and then go out to sell more Keep The DAILY WORKER Certificates and remit the money raised promptly.

WE MUST KEEP THE DAILY WORKER AT ALL COSTS.

WE WILL KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. WE WILL PUT IT ON A SOUND FINANCIAL BASIS AND BEYOND THE REACH OF ITS ENEMIES.

WE WILL RAISE THE $50,000 KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND DURING THE NEXT THREE MONTHS.

But to keep The DAILY WORKER we must do more than that. We must complete the first installment of $10,000 at once.

Help for The DAILY WORKER must come at the rate of $1,000 each day until the $10,000 is reached. Then we will have a breathing spell to remobilize our forces and complete the fund.

This is an appeal to impress upon every party member, upon every party unit, upon every sympathiser with the cause which The DAILY WORKER represents the need of quick action, of sending their contribution to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund at once.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

IT cost just $50,000 to learn nothing about the death of assistant states attorney William McSwiggin, except that he was killed in front of a saloon in Cicero with two men who were also killed, one of them being a defendant in a murder case the previous week and prosecuted by Mr. McSwiggin. There are all the elements of a first class sports thriller in this story but the solution must wait. Those who know the secret will not tell and those who committed the triple murder have no cause to worry because it is quite obvious that states attorney Crowe is not very anxious to punish those who murdered one of his star assistants.

IF a correspondent of an American capitalist paper in Moscow or Leningrad could cable such a story to his paper, what an outcry would be raised here! Our editors could easily prove to their own satisfaction that chaos prevailed in the Soviet Union and that murder was a luxury that anybody could afford, provided he had the taste for such a diversion. Fancy a Moscow reporter advocate getting murdered in the company of two well known smugglers without the Soviet authorities being able to do any better than spend 100,000 rubles and get nowhere.

NOW comes the son of the multi-millionaire mail order magnate, Julius Rosenwald and tells us that terrorism prevails in Russia but after reading his story, or the story that a Chicago Tribune reporter concocted at his expense, we find that Rosenwald, Jr., does not make much of a case against the Workers Republic. William Rosenwald accompanied Sherwood Eddy and an unofficial committee of Americans to Russia. Eddy was unsalted in praise of the Soviet program and testified to the great progress that was being made in making life more pleasant for the population. After all that is the test of any system, under favorable conditions.

THE American enemies of the Soviet Union were angry with Eddy so it was only to be expected that some member of the mission should be found willing to say the opposite. Rosenwald stayed in Russia after Eddy and the worst he could say about what he saw, was that terrorism prevailed under the labor government but that unlike the fascist governments of Poland, Italy and Spain, "which merely aim to perpetuate one reactionary party in power" the bolshevik have a complete program and are instilling this program into the minds of the masses, so that instead of having a dictatorship based on the sword we have in Russia the nearest thing to ideal democracy so far developed on this earth.

NOW it can be told that D. C. Stephenson, former Ku Klux Klan leader of Indiana, large coal dealer and political czar of the state, bribed juries, bought judges and frightened politicians into carrying out his decrees. Only a few years ago this man's word was law in the state of Indiana. His power was based on his ability to convince a large number of deluded workers and petty bourgeois men that their misfortunes were due to "bad government" and an influx of foreigners.

NOBODY was more patriotic than Mr. Stephenson. He was the chief champion of law and order in Indiana and the man in the gap to protect "pure womanhood." He issued instructions to some foolish members of the United Mine Workers of America, warning them against strikes and advising them to organize committees of each mine for the purpose of collaborating with the owners to increase production and make strikes impossible. The fact that Stephenson was a prisoner in the state prison at Michigan City when he issued his instructions to the miners did not prevent them from being followed to the letter.

CALLS FOR A STRUGGLE ON INJUNCTIONS

Garment Union Says Charges Framed Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 3.—"A denial of all the fundamental and elementary rights which the law has heretofore accorded to organized labor in its struggles for economic betterment." This was the characterization made by Louis Hyman, chairman of the Cleakmakers' General Strike Committee, of Supreme Court Justice Ingraham's decision to continue the injunction against striking cleakmakers picketing industrial council shops.

The union charged that the claims of violence against the union are founded on "unjustifiable arrests, wantonly and deliberately caused by the employers themselves." These charges of violence were the basis for the injunction order.

Will Continue Picketing.

Declaring that the strike cannot be settled by a court order, Hyman declared the workers will continue "their struggle for an opportunity to work and to live." An immediate appeal from Ingraham's decision will be made, it is announced. The statement follows:

"We are deeply disappointed by the decision of Judge Ingraham continuing the preliminary injunction by Judge Guy. The injunction is unusually sweeping and drastic. It prohibits all picketing of industrial council shops, even if such picketing be conducted in a perfectly orderly and law-abiding manner and goes so far as to enjoin peaceful appeals to would-be strikebreakers. As we see it the summary court order is a denial of all the fundamental and elementary rights which the law has heretofore accorded to organized labor in its struggles for economic betterment.

"The charge that our strike has been characterized by systematic acts of violence is entirely founded. There has hardly been a single instance of lawlessness committed by our members on the picket line. From the first day of the strike, our employers have made it a daily practice to cause arrests of hundreds of peaceful pickets and even disinterested bystanders, on the vague charge of 'disorderly conduct.' These men have often been discharged by police magistrates who have found no ground for their arrests; in other cases fines have been imposed on them unlawfully and indiscriminately. It was on these unjustifiable arrests, wantonly and deliberately caused by the employers themselves, that the charge of violence is mainly founded.

"The extraordinary injunction against our union will serve to arouse organized labor everywhere to the critical and dangerous situation in which it is being placed by the ever extending use of injunctions in labor disputes.

Will Appeal From Order.

"As far as the striking cloak makers are concerned, their vital differences with their employers cannot and will not be settled by a court order. They will continue their struggle for an opportunity to work and to live, with greater faith in their cause and greater determination to win than ever.

"Counsel for the union has been instructed to take an immediate appeal from the order of Justice Ingraham."

Efforts by counsel for the manufacturers' association to introduce the injunction against the union in these magistrate court cases were prevented by Magistrate Gordon, who insisted alleged violation of the injunction order came properly before the supreme court.

The out-of-town committee of the union announced yesterday the stoppage of a plant being operated at Scranton, Pa., by S. and S. Goldstein.

Did You Ever See a Boss Get Pinched During a Strike?

You did not. But here is a view of New York garment strike pickets being put into the "Black Maria" to be taken to jail by policemen who would never think of arresting the garment bosses for their abuses and thuggery against the workers.

100 NEGRO WOMEN STRIKE WHEN BOSS CUTS PIECE RATES

Ask Chicago Federation to Aid

One hundred colored women, piece workers in the stuffed date factory of Maras & Company, 214 West Kinzie street, walked out in a body Saturday.

On Friday these workers had received notice of a cut in wages of one-half cent per pound in all grades of work having to do with the stuffing and pinning of the refined dates, especially prepared for the candy and confectionary store trade.

The date stuffers of Maras and company have already endured two cuts in wages in the past year of one-half cent per pound, which has reduced their earnings to a bare living subsistence. These women were receiving six and one-half cents per pound stuffing dates, this means that they were forced to open and empty, and then refill, not less than 60 dates, pinning each one fast, to be able to make six and one-half cents, and this was the highest rate paid to any worker by the company. The Maras company has even lower rates for other grades of workers. At this rate, an extra fast worker might be able to make $2.60 in nine hours of continuous work.

Many of the workers have pointed out that it would be physically impossible for any human being to open, clean out, and then restuff every date in more than 40 pounds of dates in a day to make $16 per week.

It is rumored that the piece workers may be joined by the day workers who, altho their present scale of wages is not affected at this time, feel that the near future will mean a wage reduction for them. These day workers receive but $12 per week for 9 hours work a day.

It is understood that the striking date-workers intend to appeal to the Chicago Federation of Labor for aid toward unionizing. They too wish the C. F. of L. to not only direct their strike, but also to aid them to become permanently organized workers.

British Industry in Alarm at Continued Strike; Feeling Loss

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Leading capitalists in other industries than coal mining are alarmed at the continuance of the coal strike and are expressing their resentment at the mine owners, whom they charge are planning to make other industries pay high prices when the strike finally ends for coal needed to catch up with orders now held up.

Industrialists say this will have a fatal effect on foreign trade as it will tend to make production costly and trade will be lost to other countries. They are angry at Premier Baldwin for his open backing of the mine owners, who are heavy contributors to the tory party campaign fund.

$2,500 FOR SEAT WHILE MIAMIANS ARE DESTITUTE

Croissant Made Money on Florida Realty

The thousands of people whose homes were wrecked by the great storm in Miami, Florida, are on the verge of starvation, G. Frank Croissant, Florida real estate promoter purchased a box seat for the army-navy football game which will be played here on November 7th for a price of $2,500.

Among the crowd bidding for the seats which were auctioned off in the gold room of the Congress Hotel, were some of Chicago's socially elect.

Relief Work Hampered.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3.—A report received here from the vice-president of a relief organization that is raising funds for the victims of the Miami disaster declares that relief work has been seriously hampered by persistent reports that no need exists. He states that reports have been circulated to the effect that only wealthy people were affected by the disaster. Unless the relief fund now more than $6,000,000 is doubled thousands of families here no hope of recovery.

MINERS STRIKE WHEN FOUR MEN ARE DISCHARGED

Mining Boss Planted Cigarettes

PARSONS, Pa., Oct. 3.—Six hundred miners of the Paech Orch Colliery of the Glenn Alden Coal company went on strike today. They demand the discharge of the mine boss who has been trying his best to make life miserable for the miners.

Last Thursday this mine boss, Goldstown by name, on his inspection tour of the mine came to a group of miners. It was evident that he was looking for trouble. These miners are well known militant fighters.

Planted Cigarettes.

Goldstown searched the men for matches and cigarettes but he did not find any matches. He found some cigarettes in the pocket of one miner. He was immediately discharged. He found neither matches nor cigarettes in the pockets of Leo Domdzinski, vice-president of the local, but the boss stepped back and when he returned he "found" one cigarette. Domdzinski claims that the cigarette

JUNCTURE OF PEOPLES ARMY AND THE CANTON FORCES IS LIKELY; WILL CONSOLIDATE SOUTHWEST PROVINCES

By JOHN PEPPER.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 3.—Shan Li-tsi, a member of the Political Bureau of the Kuomintang, stated in an interview here today that the struggle of the Canton (revolutionary) army against Sun Chuan-fang was complicated by the assistance England was rendering him in arms and money.

"The future position of Chang Tso-lin," said Shan Li-si, "will depend upon the outcome of pending battles. Chang Tso-lin will support the stronger side. The Canton government does not seek a conflict with Chang but strives to consolidate the positions it has gained in its recent successful campaign against Wu Pei-fu.

"No intervention is possible except from Great Britain and in the next few days it is likely that the Canton forces will make a junction with the peoples army. This will make it possible for the Canton government to extend its power over all of southwestern China and engage in extensive economic and cultural work with which it has had such remarkable success in the provinces it controls."

METAL TRADES DEPARTMENT LEADS WAY TO AMSTERDAM

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 3.—That the American labor movement is planning to enter a new phase in its relations with the workers of other countries is seen in the action of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor paving the way for affiliation with the international Metal Workers' Federation.

The Metal Trades Department, made up of blacksmiths, boilermakers, technical engineers, electrical workers, steam engineers, stationary firemen, structural iron workers, machinists, metal polishers, moulders, pattern makers, plumbers, sheet metal workers and stove mounters, would not have taken this step without the consent of the parent body, the American Federation of Labor.

A. F. of L. Plans.

This action would therefore indicate that the A. F. of L. itself plans a new step, which may lead it in the International Federation of Trade Unions, the so-called Amsterdam International, from which it has heretofore held strictly aloof, even claiming that this social-democratic controlled organization, bitterly anti-Communist, was too radical.

Sam Gompers, while alive, led the A. F. of L. into support of the imperialist league of nations, and won its allegiance for the "labor section" of the league, but he always kept it out of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

Amsterdamers Anxious.

The delegation of the International Metal Workers' Federation came to the United States ready to offer almost anything, to make any concession demanded in order to win the American Metal Workers' Union. This was clearly apparent in the hearing before the committee that considered this matter. The American union officials were practically told that they could dictate their own terms, especially with regard to per capita tax and representation, if they would only come in. The European delegates claimed they got what they wanted.

J. T. Brownlie, president of the Amalgamated Engineers' Union of Great Britain (machinists), speaking for the delegation, declared to your correspondent:

Brownlie Satisfied.

"I am perfectly satisfied with the action taken by the convention of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor. The action taken registers all the progress possible at this time. This is not only the opinion of myself, but of all of my colleagues. We are going back home with that opinion. The action taken will undoubtedly result to the advantage of all sections of the movement."

Brownlie has left for Canada to visit relatives but he expects to be back in Detroit for the A. F. of L. convention on Tuesday. He is not one of the delegates to the A. F. of L. The two fraternal delegates from the Brit-

AUTO INDUSTRY UNIONIZATION IS 'HARDY ANNUAL'

Metal Trades Department Loses Steel Toilers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 3. — Organization of the automobile industry has become a football to be kicked back and forth by the various sections of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor. The latest kick administered by President James O'Connell, head of the Metal Trades Department, and his fellow officials, who are the presidents of the various metal trades unions, has sent this problem back into the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor that convenes here tomorrow.

The whole question insofar as the Metal Trades Department is concerned is set forth in the statement of President O'Connell as follows:

"At a meeting of our executive council the subject matter was given consideration. However, because of a large number of organizations not affiliated with our department being interested in and having jurisdiction over certain employes in this industry, and because there were other fields of labor which our affiliated organizations had more complete jurisdiction where the possibility of organizing the workmen was brighter, it was decided that for the present we should give our attention to those other lines of industry and urge the American Federation of Labor to launch a general organizing campaign in the automobile industry."

But the American Federation of Labor is even less equipped than its Metal Trades Department to carry on such an organization campaign.

No Outstanding Accomplishments.

President O'Connell began his lengthy report to the department convention here by declaring:

"No great, outstanding accomplishments can be reported," for the year that has just passed.

In fact, the steel workers' union, that should be the backbone of this Metal Trades Department has withdrawn from it during the year. The withdrawal is complacently accepted by President O'Connell in these words:

"We have not been in a position as a department to render any particular service to the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers and I have felt that we were accepting money from the organization really under false pretenses.

"The officers of the organization seldom made a request of any kind upon us for services and as we did not come in touch in any way with the industries in which the members of the organization were employed, over a minimum service could not be rendered by us. Therefore, the appeal

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF COLONIES

Great Imperialist Policy Suggested

MANILA, Oct. 2. — Filipinos are apparently stirred at the cable reports from Washington saying that Colonel Carmi A. Thompson, the personal representative of President Coolidge is considering a recommendation in his report to the president providing for placing the Philippines and all other "outlying possessions" of the United States into a new department of the government or Department of Colonies.

A Colonial Bureau.

A second alternative considered is placing the Islands under the control of a special Colonial Bureau in the Department of State. This is opposed by the Filipinos, who demand independence, as promised them by the United States.

At present the War Department rules the Islands, and Filipinos are very bitter against what is called the "Cavalry Cabinet" of General Wood. Even the few who modify their demands for independence detest the present barrack rule.

Firm for Independence.

The National Supreme Council has endorsed this resolution, submitted by Senator Quezon for action by the Legislature:

"The Filipino people are firm in their stand that the only solution of the Philippine problem consistent with their aspirations and the permanent interests of the country is to grant immediate, absolute and complete independence to the Philippines. In other words, any other measure will not satisfy the Filipino people.

"The Filipino people will oppose whatever legislative measure, administrative action or financial project which may in some way postpone, retard or make impossible the concession of immediate, absolute and complete independence to the Philippines."

ENOUGH NAMES TO PUT ENGDAHL ON THE BALLOT

The thousand names required in order to put J. Louis Engdahl, Workers Party candidate for United States senator from the state of Illinois on the ballot, have been filed in Springfield, with a substantial margin of names.

This is the opening of a vigorous campaign thruout the state of Illinois to place before the workers the program of the Workers Party in the present elections.

Shop Meetings Planned.

Factory meetings at the noon hour are being planned, to be addressed by Engdahl, Swabeck, Shachtman, and others, where the issues will be discussed and literature sold and distributed.

On Wednesday, Oct. 6, Benjamin Gitlow, well-known for his long and active record in the revolutionary labor movement, will talk on the elections at Emmett Memorial Hall, 3179 S. Ogden Ave., (corner of Ogden and Taylor).

Long Fighting Record.

Gitlow has been a leading left winger in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union for many years. He has spent years in Sing Sing for his revolutionary opinions and activities.

The other speakers at the meeting will be Mathilda Kalonesk and Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party, who will act as chairman of the meeting.

Every worker is invited to come to this meeting. The admission charge is 15 cents.

RELIEF FUNDS LOW; THE STRIKE CHILDREN FACE HUNGER; AID IS URGENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Four weeks have passed since we held the concert at the Coney Island Stadium for the benefit of the Passaic Strikers' children.", says a statement of the General Relief Committee for the Textile Strikers. School has started and the children go to school without shoes and warm clothing. Also the food stores are empty. These children must be fed by you and I. They cannot be neglected. We have cared for them until now and must provide for them until the strike is brought to a successful conclusion."

"Fellow-workers, the situation in Passaic and vicinity is the most critical. The committee appeals thru the press for all friends and sympathizers to send in their money for the tickets if they have not paid for them, already. You all enjoyed the concert. Send in your checks and the poor kiddies, the innocent victims of this terrible industrial struggle will derive the benefits from your kind generosity."

WILLSTEIN, A BAD LOSER, WANTED TWO WEEKS VACATION; GOT ROUGH WHEN UNION MADE IT PERMANENT

The Chicago Furriers' Union Local 45 has again had an example of Millstein tactics. The new business agent elected on the progressive slate to take Millstein's place, arranged with Millstein for a meeting of the old and new executives in order that the new officers take over the administration.

Hangs Like a Barnacle.

At this meeting, Millstein demanded that in this meeting he and his gang have all the say. Danielson and Finkelstein, the new president, informed Millstein that the old officers have no right to decide anything and their only duty and function was to turn over affairs to the new officials.

In spite of this warning, the Millstein group of used-to-be officers carried on some union business, authorizing payment of bills, but particularly granting Millstein two weeks vacation with pay.

A "Friend" from the International.

This was objected to by the new progressive executives, since the membership had voted already to give Millstein a permanent vacation without pay. In the argument it developed that Ida Weinstein, vice-president of the International, was a strong supporter of Millstein, insisting that he get his two weeks' vacation.

Faced with the prospect of a permanent vacation without pay Millstein was furious. Seeing a fur worker, Max Mendelson, reading the Freiheit was too much. Millstein for some reason doesn't like the Freiheit. Possibly because so many fur workers do like it. Filled with rage Millstein spit. He spit in the direction of Mendelson who resented it and said so.

Wields the Gavel.

Millstein then seized a gavel and struck Mendelson a vicious blow in the face. A big fight started in which cation, permanently.

Max Mendelson

Brother Millstein figured as the loser in physical combat. Police came, as they have before, but the progressives persuaded them that the fight was over and the union could settle its own affairs. Millstein is on his vacation, permanently.

METAL TRADES DEPARTMENT LEADS WAY TO AMSTERDAM

ish Trade Union Congress are John Bromley, of the Locomotive Engineers, and George Hicks of the Building Trades. Bromley, with whom Brownlie is often confused, was one of the members of the British Trade Union delegation that visited the Union of Soviet Republics in 1924.

Social Reformists Need Delegation.

Brownlie's fellow delegates to the Metal Trades department convention were Conrad Ilg, president of the Metal Federation of Switzerland and also secretary of the International Metal Workers' Federation, Robert Dudeman, president of the Metal Workers of Germany, and also a social-democratic member of the German reichstag; and Henry Lehr, general secretary-treasurer of the Metal Workers of France.

Ilg challenged the claim of the American trade union leaders that the workers in this country are much better off than those in Europe. He said:

U. S. Labor Not so Far Ahead.

"As far as working conditions are concerned we are willing to admit that wages are far better over here than they are over in Europe. However, relative to the working hours I don't think you have advanced much farther than the workers of Europe. I am of the opinion that the working hours in this country are pretty much the same as they are over in Europe."

Ilg declared that at one time the workers of Great Britain had the same idea as the American labor officialdom has now, that no benefit was derived from the international affiliation of the workers. The British workers have changed all this. He declared that the American labor movement must also change.

Danger in Dawes' Plan.

Dieckman sounded the alarm against inactivity in developing the international unity of the workers. He declared that without unity the 500,000 metal workers of the United States and Canada and the 2,000,000 metal workers of Europe would be forced into the bitterest kind of competition, thanks to the investment of American capital abroad, to the rationalization of the iron and steel industry in Europe, and to the adoption by the European metal masters of high speed production methods developed in the United States.

President James O'Connell was worried about the authority of the international Metal Workers' Federation in connection with the question of industrial disputes in the various countries.

Brownlie replied, "The International Metal Workers' Federation has no authority, nor does it attempt to exercise any authority over any industrial dispute that may take place in the United States, Great Britain or elsewhere."

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 2.— Victory over the open shop interests in both Chicago and San Francisco is claimed in the report of William J. Tracy, secretary-treasurer of the Building Trades department of the American Federation of Labor, to the department convention held here.

"Out on the Pacific Coast, particularly in San Francisco and Los Angeles," says Secretary-Treasurer Tracy, "the building trades under the urge of big business and the banks, attempted to inaugurate the so-called 'American' plan of 'company unions,' open shops and low wages, the building trade unions have successfully weathered the storm and are again writing regular wage contracts.

Claim Victory in Chicago.

"The same is true in Chicago, where it was sought to establish the 'open shop' under terms of the Landis award. Today the unions have contracts there calling for a higher wage scale than has ever hitherto prevailed. Of course, the reason in each instance is that the building craft unions held their ground and refuse to surrender what they have gained thru years of struggle."

Secretary-Treasurer Tracy declares that the international unions comprising the building trades departments have added more than 30,000 new members since the first of the year."

Tracy predicts that building permits indicate that the total for the United States this year will pass the six billion dollar point.

In the elections George F. Hedrick, painters; A. M. Huddell, steam engineers; John J. Hynes, sheet metal workers; James P. Noonan, electrical workers; and Edward J. McGivern, plasterers, were elected vice-presidents in the order named. The terms of the other officers held over.

NEW PLAN FOR CONSOLIDATION OF RAILROADS

Coolidge in Favor of Voluntary Unity

WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 1—President Coolidge today gave attention to proposed legislation designed to facilitate permissive consolidations of railroads.

Alfred P. Thom, general counsel of the Association of Railway Executives, called on the President and submitted a copy of the testimony heard by the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce last June on the voluntary consolidation bill introduced by Representative James S. Parker (Rep., N. Y.), chairman of the committee.

Voluntary Consolidations.

In his annual message to congress in December, the President is referring to railroads will renew his recommendation that congress amend the present consolidation provisions of the transportation act to the end that proper consolidations, subject to the approval of the interstate commerce commission voluntarily may be effected.

The principles of the Parker bill are approved by a majority of the railroads. The bill does not have the approval in its entirety of all the railroads, but the fact that it contains no element of compulsion is approved by all the carriers.

In the testimony left with the President, Mr. Thom said he was not authorised to appear as an advocate of the Parker bill, but that if there were going to be consolidations the majority of the railroads would want that kind of a bill passed.

Parker Bill Will Be Pushed.

Speedy passage of the Parker bill has been urged by the interstate commerce commission, which approves the general principles of the measure. The bill would repeal the provision of the existing law requiring the commission to prepare a plan grouping the railroads of the country into a limited number of systems.

Actual consolidations of railroads are now blocked by the provision of law requiring the preparation of a plan, because there is no plan, and consolidations cannot be approved until there is a plan. Under the Parker bill two or more railroads could propose a consolidation and the commission could approve or disapprove it.

"Two or more railroads under the bill could unify their properties by acquisition of control of one by another thru lease, stock control, or otherwise.

President Coolidge, it is believed, favors the general principles of the Parker bill.

ON THE EVE OF THE 46TH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE A. F. OF L. AT DETROIT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 3. — Not even a whisper has so far been heard among the delegates in opposition to the re-election of William Green as president of the American Federation of Labor.

All the big hotels here, instead of being placarded with "Welcome, A. F. of L." carry greetings as follows: "Welcome, A. F. A." The "A. F. # Morelli Gang Suspected, But Crime Was Charged Against Sacco, Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

THIS morning I picked up a copy of The Detroit Free Press. The first page displays the story of the arrest of Joseph Gomes, 26 years old, alias James Mills, after an unsuccessful holdup of a branch of the Jefferson Savings Bank. Cash, bonds and liquor, valued at $75,000 were found in his rooms.

The early edition of The Detroit News tells of a payroll bandit starting the day at nine o'clock by getting away with the $1,300 payroll of the Cameron & King Plumbing Co.

Thus the trail of crime, bank robberies, payroll holdups and what not goes daily thru the kept press. Sometimes the bandits and highwaymen are caught. More often not. Sometimes innocent victims of the police system are taken, framed-up and sent away to penitentiaries for long terms of years.

This last is exactly what happened in the case of the two Italian workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, arrested for, charged with and convicted of the murders grown out of the South Braintree, Mass., payroll holdup April 15, 1920.

One of the most damning admissions, that helps shatter the case of the United States government and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts against Sacco and Vanzetti, comes from the lips of none other than Ellsworth C. Jacobs, of the New Bedford, Mass., police, who declares:

"At the time of the South Braintree murder, I suspected the Morelli's, and discussed my suspicions with the then Police Inspector Pieracclni, who seemed to share them. I DROPPED THE MATTER AFTER THE ARREST OF SACCO AND VANZETTI."

Thus, from the very lips of the police itself, comes the admission that the Morelli gang of murderers and freight car thieves of Providence, R. I., was suspected of the South Braintree crime from the beginning. But it remained for one of the members of the gang, Celestino Madeiros, five years later, in prison, to hare the guilt of the Morelli gang white all the time the local prosecutors of Justice and the local prosecutors in Massachusetts were trying to use this crime as a means of snuffing out the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti in the electric chair of the law's executioner.

In an affidavit now in the hands of Judge Webster Thayer, who has the power to grant or refuse a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti, Ellsworth G. Jacobs says he was an inspector of police in 1920. He says that a short time before April 15 (1920) he saw Michael Morelli and two other men in a new Buick touring car in New Bedford; the car bore the number 154E, Rhode Island.

Morelli was then living in New Bedford, but came from Providence, and had a bad reputation, being connected with the white slave traffic. He was an Italian, and the chief knew him as one of five brothers.

Jacobs says he made a note of the car number and the date in his notebook. He saw that car again on the afternoon of April 15, 1920, the day of the South Braintree murder and again made a note of it. This time, he recalls, he was on his way to police headquarters, where he was due at 5:30 p. m. He saw the car as it passed him near the postoffice, and again noted the number.

On the afternoon of April 24, 1920, he found a Cole Eight touring car, standing at the curb in front of Flore's restaurant at Hampton and Purchase Streets, New Bedford. This car bore the number plate that had been on the Buick. . .

Jacobs claims that Flore's restaurant had the name of being visited by men of bad reputation. The policeman went in and found Mike Morelli's brother, Frank Morelli, at a table with three other men who appeared to be Italians. They were were extremely nervous at his approach. Jacobs says one was a short, heavyset man, with wide, square face, high cheek bones, smooth shaven, dark brown hair, 35 to 40 years old, weighting about 175 pounds and probably five feet, six or seven inches tall.

This man, as Jacobs approached the table, reached for his hip pocket and the policeman believed that he was going to draw a gun. Frank Morelli asked why Jacobs was picking on him all the time, and what he wanted. Jacobs asked him how it was that the Cole car had the same number as the Buick he had seen Mike driving. Frank replied that he was in the automobile business, and that the plate was a dealer's plate which he transferred from one car to another.

Jacobs says he never saw the Buick car again after April 15, nor Frank Morelli. Mike Morelli remained in New Bedford for some time, possibly a year. Then he too disappeared.

Thus the U. S. secret service and the local and county police, for the asking, had sufficient clues to lead them to the arrest of the real criminals in the South Braintree job. But the U. S. secret service decided it was not after ordinary criminals. They are no real danger to capitalists rule. They framed Sacco and Vanzetti, the organizers of the working class. So the police "laid off" the Morelli gang, in the words of the police inspector; Jacobs, when Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested.

Today the United States government is faced with these facts:

The actual criminals in the South Braintree affair are known.

Sacco and Vanzetti are proved absolutely innocent of any connection with this crime.

But the real criminals are not brought to trial for their part in the South Braintree holdup and killing.

Instead Sacco and Vanzetti remain in prison, facing the electric chair, for the crime they never committed.

These facts also face the workers of the United States and of the world with the challenging question, "What are you going to do about it?"

was planted. Four miners were discharged.

Cutting Wages.

A special meeting of the local was called and the miners related their grievances. Many miners complained of not receiving the wages they were entitled to. The boss is in the habit of cutting their wages and refusing to pay them for hours of work. After a discussion the members unanimously decided to strike and to demand the dismissal of the mine boss and the reinstatement of the discharged workers.

Threatens to Smash Union.

Boss Goldstown is known in this region as an arch enemy of the miners' union. "The Union is the only place where he is employed with the object of breaking the union in fact he openly admitted to Thomas Burke, the militant president of the local, that he was going to smash the organization, and make it hot for those who are fighting for the miners. Burke was already discharged by the company, but a two-day strike forced the bosses to take him back.

Miners in this colliery organized in Local No. 5076 era well known as fighters. They are sure of winning this strike. When they return to work they will go back with the discharged miners and without boss Goldstown who came looking for trouble, and found plenty of it.

Munsey's Papers Are Bought from Museum; This Is a Darned Pity

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The New York Sun and the Evening Telegram and the Mohican Merchandising, properties of the late Frank A. Munsey, have been bought from the Metropolitan Museum of Art, residing legatee in the will of Mr. Munsey, by William T. Dewart, who for many years was manager for and close friend of Munsey.

Mr. Dewart announced the transactions involved in the neighborhood of $13,000,000 and that the newspaper properties would be maintained, so that employes might acquire stock in them.

In preparing for the mutualization of the properties, Mr. Dewart said he was carrying out what he knew to be the last wishes of Mr. Munsey, who had contemplated taking such a step before he died on Dec. 22, 1925.

for withdrawal was accepted by our executive council."

No Organizing Campaigns.

President O'Connell says that, "No real active general organizing campaign was attempted during the year," altho there were campaigns conducted by local organizations, special efforts being made in Chicago.

O'Connell is not as enthusiastic about the workings of the Watson-Parker bill on the railroads as are some of the other officials of organized labor. He says:

"When the individual records of the members comprising the new railway Labor board (provided by the Watson-Parker bill), appointed by the president, are taken into account it cannot be said that they are overly sympathetic towards the hopes and aspirations of organised labor."

Women in the Metal Industries.

Officials of the metal trades are appalled at the increasing number of woman entering the industry. This has been held to be a man's industry, but it is now pointed out that, "There are hundreds of manufacturing plants turning out specialised articles in the manufacture of which female labor is successfully employed."

The department convention declares that, "we shall see to it that our organisations make it possible for female workers to join our unions under the most favorable considerations."

Efforts will be made to organize the flying machine industry in which it is pointed ont that large numbers of workers will be employed, especially as a result of the decision of the government to spend hundreds of millions of dollars in building 2,000 airships.

Employers' Schemes Exposed.

It is declared that, "Among the most important schemes devised by the employers of recent years solely for the purpose of reducing the ranks of the unions are the so-called open shop, the so-called American plan, company organizations, individual contracts, premiums, piece work, bonuses, welfare work, group insurance, accident insurance, stock selling, pensions and vacations with pay as a reward for special loyalty on the part of the workmen to their employers." These methods are all severely condemned.

President O'Connell condemns the delegation recently sent to this country by the London Daily Mail. When the delegation came to Washington, however, O'Connell complains that they spent only three minutes at the headquarters of the Metal Trades Department. He says, "Altho they spent several days in Washington no further visit was made to our headquarters."

It is pointed out that other, similar delegations will be selected to visit the United States in the near future.

A. J. Berres and John Coefield are the delegates of the Metal Trades Department for selection as fraternal delegates of the A. F. of L. to the next British Trade Union Congress.

NAPLES, Ill., Oct. 2. — With levees on both sides of this little town of 800 people threatening to give way momentarily, with the entire village under water, and the Illinois river rising steadily after an overnight rise of fifteen inches, workmen are feverishly busy striving to avert a catastrophe. # FEELING IN WESTERN CHINA

Wu Pei-fu Powerless; Baldwin Cautious

SHANGHAI, October 2. — Reports from the upper Yangtze show that as a result of the British massacre of Chinese at Wanhsien, the whole of western China is ablaze with anti-British feeling. As a result foreigners are hastening to evacuate the upper Yangtze.

Wu Pei Fu Powerless.

Signs of collapse of the Wu Pei Fu alliance with Chang Tso-lin are appearing. Wu's men in the Peking government are being replaced by politicos of Chang and Wu's power seems gone.

Imperialists now count on a possible combine of Chang's armies and Sun Chuan-fang, who rules Shanghai and the five provinces around the mouth of the Yangtze. But the Cantonese are preparing a drive against Sun, who is waiting their attack down the river from Hankow.

Baldwin Cautious.

About the government attitude toward the rising national revolution in China, Premier Baldwin in the house of commons said:

"So far as the military forces are concerned, the situation up to date has not warranted any military intervention." He admitted naval reinforcements had been sent to China.

When asked if the Cantonese occupation of Shanghai might menace British interests if the Cantonese win the city, Baldwin replied:

"None of Your Business."

"I do not think a situation has arisen in which it is necessary for me to make any announcement to the house."

Reports from China say that the interventionists are striving hard to bring the United States into line with Great Britain for intervention, even the Japan De unveiling to take the same action.

Machinery and Trade Slump Hits Unions of Germany a Hard Blow

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—(FP) —Wage [illegible] sharply in number in the two years ending Jan. 1, 1926. The reasons given are that production is being concentrated and that trade has slumped. At the end of the year 1923 there were reported 10,782 agreements covering 280,237 concerns, but on Jan. 1, 1926, there were only 7,009 agreements covering 735,945 concerns.

The number of wage workers protected by trade agreements also fell off to a dangerous degree. At the beginning of the period it was 14,206, 000, and at the end it was only [illegible]. Reason for this decline is [illegible] wage discharges of manual and other laborers because of the adoption of labor-saving machinery and because the inflation period in the industry was ended. A further factor in reduction was the technical reconstruction of factories.

One favorable development in these years was an increase in the proportion of agreements made by employers with entire unions, and a decrease in the proportion made with only local associations of workers. On Jan. 1, 1926, some 10,680,000 wage workers in Germany were officially registered as working under district or national wage agreements.

Building Concession Is Made by Soviets

MOSCOW—(FP)—House building is the latest field of activity covered by a concession from the Soviet government to a mixed company. The parties are a German construction firm and the Soviet Central Union of Housing Cooperation, says a Tass press service statement.

City population in the Soviet Union is demanding more housing than the existing agencies are able to supply. The new mixed company will apply modern production methods including the making of standard parts of houses by factory processes. A saving in cost of 25 to 30 percent is anticipated by the promoters.

GERMAN LABOR DELEGATION BACK FROM JOURNEY TO SOVIET UNION SAYS SOVIETS BUILD SOCIALISM

HAMBURG, Germany (By Mail)—The 19th of September, 1926, will stand out as a red letter day in the annals of the revolutionary movement of the German proletariat, when the second German workers' delegation to the Soviet Union arrived home on the good ship "Soviet."

The delegation had been very busy, but notwithstanding that, the workers of Hamburg turned out in their thousands, lining all the foreshores facing the harbor to welcome back the delegation and to hear the real truth about the first workers' and peasants' country in the world.

Well Mixed in Political Belief.

The delegation consisted of 67 men of different shades of political opinion. There were 47 social-democrats, 16 Communists, five christian-socialists, one from the central catholic party and four non-party men.

With the arrival of noon and the sun becoming warmer, the fog lifted and then broke one of the glorious last summer days with just a nice breeze blowing to make the sunshine pleasant and bearable. About two o'clock the Soviet ship the "Soviet" came along the pier, the massed bands of the various workers' organizations struck up the "Internationale" and the "g" landed among comrades and friends.

The "Red Guards" of the German proletariat formed a guard of honor and amidst revolutionary strains of music marched to the "Moorweide Garden," a beautiful place, covered with green foliage, where the "Hamburger bourgeoisie" habitates, and where usually is held the first of May demonstrations, and where a rostrum has been erected for speakers to give a formal welcome home to the delegation, and also hear what news there is from the worker republics.

There were present over 10,000 people anxiously awaiting for the opening speeches of the delegation. First spoke the chairman of the delegation, Comrade Koerber, a member of the social-democratic party and chairman of the Berlin Municipal Workers' Union, who brought regards from the workers of the Soviet republics to the German workers, and in a few inspiring sentences expressed the view of the delegation on the workings of the Soviet republics and general conditions prevailing there, expressing admiration for the practical economic condition of the worker republics, which they have traversed from the Urals to Caucasus.

Don't Believe Capitalist Lies.

Everywhere the workers with great enthusiasm are building the socialist state of the future.

Comrade Koerber emphasised the need of workers of other countries not to heed the capitalist press, in which the true state of the first worker republics is suppressed and false misstatements discrediting the efforts of the workers in building a socialist state is disseminated, just to delude the world's proletariat and make them believe of the failure of the Soviet system.

The other delegates expressed themselves in a similar strain and amidst great cheering the meeting broke up with the playing of the "International."

Primo de Rivera, the Spanish Dictator, in Precarious Position

MADRID, Oct. 2.—Captain General Barrera of Barcelona has forced an open letter to Primo de Rivera demanding that the persecution of artillery officers be ended. De Rivera has ordered two munition plants closed at Orviedo, in order to oust artillery officers in charge. He demoted 16 more.

The army discontent is seen in the fact that those officers who were declared innocent after court-martial and ordered reinstated have refused duty.

De Rivera's attempt to legalize his rule by calling a fake and handpicked assembly is meeting with opposition from many quarters, the political parties formerly powerful, having boycotted the plan, urging no leader to accept. It is reported a trade union leader is also urging a boycott, in an effort to block the socialist collaboration with the dictator, who has offered the labor federation 40 seats in the fake assembly

King Alfonso, while apparently ignoring the popular revolt against De Rivera, is said to be worried in view of the fact that the dictatorship has lost the support of the army.

Bank Bandits Clean.

PORTLAND, Ind., Oct. 2.— Three bandits swooped down on the First National Bank here just before noon today, held up three employes and a number of customers at points of guns, and escaped with cash estimated at $17,000 and securities valued at $1,000.

SOVIET [illegible] AND LITHUANIA SIGN TREATIES

Blow at League and the British War Aims

BERLIN, Oct. 2. — The Soviet-Lithuanian treaty of non-aggression, state dispatches from Moscow, was signed a few hours after the Lithuanian Prime Minister, M. Slesservicus, arrived in Moscow. This is a great blow to the diplomacy of British imperialism which sought to build an anti-Soviet bloc in the Baltic in preparation for a new war to overthrow the Soviet Republics.

Hits Poland and Britain.

The Soviet government exchanged notes with Lithuania, reacknowledging the right of Lithuania to Vilna, taken by force from Lithuania by Poland and kept sanctified by the league of nations.

Lithuania, as a league member, also handed the Soviet Union a note saying that the treaty "did not infringe on the loyalty of Lithuania to the league."

Two More Treaties Coming.

The league of nations, however, may be said to be seriously injured by the treaty, and even greater defeats may be suffered by it, since the Soviet Union is expected to make similar treaties with both Esthonia and Latvia, thus further isolating Poland and checking the British scheme of an anti-Soviet Baltic bloc. It is a challenge to the league.

The conflict with the league of nations may come over Article 16, which provides that league members' armies have the right of passage thru any member's territory. This was once given an exception in the case of Germany. The small Baltic nations are now demanding that they be made similar exceptions, as they do not want to be the battle ground for any war against the Soviet Union.

Germany no longer claims the exception and wants to avoid any discussion of Article 16.

NEWS AND COMMENT

Co-operative Production and Co-partnership

By JOHN HAMILTON.

THE Society for Promoting Working Men's Associations was founded in 1849, and its aim was thus described: "Theoretically, the idea was endeavored to spread was the conception of workers as brethren—of work as coming from a brotherhood of men associated for their common benefits—who therefore rejected any notion of competition with each other as inconsistent with the true form of brotherhood, without formally preaching Communism, sought to form industrial establishments Communistic in feeling, of which it should be the aim, while paying ordinary wages and interests at the rate I have mentioned (4 per cent) to apply the profits of the business in ways conductive to the common advantage of the body whose work produced them." (V. Neale).

Self-Governing Workshops.

All sorts of self-governing workshops came into existence, only in the majority of cases to die a speedy death. Many of these were formed as a result of strikes or lockouts. During the bakers' strike of 1857 the trades' delegates in Glasgow requested the bakers to submit a detailed plan for a co-operative bakery. During the Edinburgh strike (1861) a co-operative building society was formed by the Masons' Union, and a number of tenements were erected. £10,000 was raised by Alexander MacDonald, the miners' leader, for a co-operative coal mine. Out of the great strike in Newcastle in 1869 sprang the Onsenburn Engine Works, a most disastrous venture, the workers losing, it is said, £150,000.

In 1874, 50 co-operative societies were stated to be in existence. Joint stock cotton-spinning mills at Oldham and other places were being developed, and much co-operative money was invested in them. Capitalist firms began to adopt the industrial "partnership" principle. The trade unionists of the time expressed strong criticisms of the "Associations of Producers," as the A. S. E. executive in their 1852 Annual Report: "We found that when a few of our own members have commenced business hitherto they have abandoned the society, and conducted the workshops even worse than other employers."

But failure generally attended this type of co-operative effort. As previously noted, capitalist development and trustification makes the possibilities of success exceedingly small.

In 1882 the Labor Association for the Promotion of Co-operative Production was established, based on the theory of the co-partnership of the worker, now called the Labor Co-partnership Association. This is a propagandist body.

Co-operative Co-partnerships.

There are roughly three classes of "Co-partnership Societies"; (1) Societies composed of shareholders who work for it—or are living in hopes of doing so when the capital and trade sufficiently develop. (2) Societies consisting partly of individual shareholders and partly of Co-operative Stores, the latter providing part of the capital and a market for the manufactured goods. (3) Societies which are federations of other societies, as distributive stores, but which provide co-partnership provisions in their rules. Examples of these are: Class 11): Walsall Locks and Cart Gear, Ltd. (established 1873); Garden City Press Class (2): Kettering Clothing Manufacturers (established 1892), and some 15 co-partnership boot and shoe factories in the Midlands. Class (3)! Glasgow United Baking Society (established 1868).

The 110 such societies in 1911, were reduced to 106 in 1922. Membership, trade, number of employees, and wages all show a decline. Of course, many limited liability companies have what they term co-partnership schemes, where a bonus on wages is paid, or shares allotted to workers employed. These are outside the co-operative movement.

Capitalist Co-partnerships.

In 1889 the Gas Workers' and General Laborers' Union won a remarkable concession from the London Gas Companies, a reduction of the working day from 12 to 8 hours, without a strike, and accompanied by a small increase in wages. The men employed by two of the gas companies in London, and by most of those engaged by provincial municipalities, have retained this hour. But in Dec. 1889, the South Metropolitan Gas company insisted, after a serious strike, on a return to the 12-hour shift. A scheme of profit-sharing was used to break up their men's union, and induce them to accept individual engagments inconsistent with collective bargaining" (S. and B. Webb.)

On the other hand it is claimed "co-partnership drives the employer to increased interest in the economic efficiency of production, coupled with the feeling that he is being equitably dealt with in the division of the profits of industry, while the owning brings with it a greater sense of responsibility and a wider outlook." (H. Vivian).

Some Criticisms.

Our objections to capitalist [illegible] are that (1) efficiency of production means excessive speeding up; (2) working class solidarity is undermined and trade unionism weakened; (3) wages tend to keep [illegible] (4) a stumbling block is placed in the way of the ultimate goal of workers control of industry."

"I can understand why some [illegible] of industry have adopted the system. If I were an employer I would want labor to be pliable, diligent, economical. I should utilize the principle of co-partnership as a means of inducing the workers to sweat themselves by reducing the cost of unproductiveness. My reasoning would run: 'It saves me £5,000 a year. If by granting 5 per cent of the profits to the workers I can get the business yield £10,000 a year more that will be £5,500 for the employer and £4,500 for me. It is a sound business proposition. Also I shall earn a reputation as a model employer, and possibly Lloyd George will slip me a K. C. B. or even a knighthood when he [illegible] rates those who help to keep down [illegible] subjection.'" (J. Penny, Co-op. [illegible] 1923).

Co-operators of the U. S. Convene Nov.

Credentials already received at office of The Cooperative League of the U. S. A. indicate that more than twice as many delegates are going to the national congress in Minneapolis November 4 than have ever attended any previous co-operative congress in this country. Fully half of these delegates are going from Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin, but good delegations are also going from New England, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and a few of the Western states. The congress opens on Thursday, November 4th and closes Sunday night, November 7th. Additional fraternal delegates and visitors will probably fill a auditorium to overflowing at many of the sessions.

Two Papers—

1 "M. Tomsky, president of the All-Russian Council of Trades Unions, who was the leading figure at last year's congress, was this year conspicuous by his absence. To the general satisfaction of the delegates, the Home Secretary refused him admittance to England."

(From the N. Y. Times Annalist)

2 "While the delegates were arriving today for the 58th Trades Union Congress, the General Council was hard at work with the preliminaries.

"One important matter that came before them was the letter from the Home Secretary giving official notice of the ban on the Russian fraternal delegates.

"Mr. Citrine told me tonight that a resolution of protest against the action of Sir William Joynson-Hicks is to be drafted.

"'The Council,' he said, 'takes the view that in interfering with the legitimate international activities of the trade union movement, the Home Secretary has been actuated, not so much by consideration of his office, as by political prejudice.'"

Here We Have It

The DIFFERENCE in reports between the Annalist, organ of the American bankers and manufacturers, and the Daily Herald, organ of the British workers, is clear.

This is not an isolated incident.

Such unvarnished lies and misrepresentations are regular daily occurrences too many to be counted or even mentioned. Such frauds are the very foundation of the whole capitalist propaganda machinery. This is the way the press owned by the capitalist class misleads the workers to defeat.

The New York Times Annalist tries to make the American workers believe that their British brothers look upon Sir William Joynson-Hicks as their friend and savior and Comrade Tomsky as their arch enemy.

The Daily Herald tells the workers the truth about the infamous behavior of the strikebreaker "Jix". The Daily Herald gives the real stand of the Trade Union Congress towards Comrade Tomsky.

The Daily Worker, in the United States, is the organ of the working men and working women. It is The DAILY WORKER that gives the facts and tells the truth about the British Trade Union Congress and all other events and activities of the workingclass.

Those whom the Annalist and all the other bourgeois papers call friends of the workers, are our worst enemies. Page: Sir Joynson-Hicks.

Those whom the exploiters call our enemies, are our best friends. Meet: Comrade Tomsky.

Do you see the truth?

Don't you get the point?

A PRACTICING SHOP NUCLEUS!

By MARTIN ABERN.

SHOP Nucleus No. 61 (Chicago, ...) stated at a membership meeting ...engaging candidates in workers to ...functioning effectively. Two ...ndes are worth a paper full of future ...possibilities for work.

A Shop Bulletin is now being issued regularly; the third issue has just come off the press and was well received by the workers. Difficulty was at first experienced in getting the comrades and workers to send in shop material, but now the news comes in steadily. 5,000 copies are at present being printed. An editorial committee meets to outline each bulletin.

THE shop nucleus, at its meeting, had the usual difficulties, such as getting the comrades from many languages to come together and meeting regularly. There was a complete lack of English comrades. A couple of comrades were attached to aid in work. A comrade speaking the language of the largest language group in the nucleus was attached to help these comrades in translation, writing for the bulletin, etc., at meetings.

Active in Various Fields.

The nucleus now meets regularly with an average attendance of 75 to 80%. The nucleus is a fairly large one.

THE nucleus executive committee meets before each meeting and prepares the meeting. No communications are read at the meeting except where action is required by the nucleus on every point. Instead a brief report is made containing the gist of the communications. Actions are recommended and discussion takes place on them.

Meetings are alive. They are not cluttered up with an endless and needlessly long agenda. One or two points are handled primarily at each meeting. Other points are laid over for another meeting or assigned to individual comrades thru the executive for carrying out. In this manner, the major points are handled well and (this is important too), the meeting adjourns not later than 10:00 P. M.

A RECENT meeting for instance, ...the immediate campaigns in Illinois, particularly the miners, were discussed. Then $40.00 in pledges were made by the comrades present, and a third collected immediately. More has come in since. The other point dealt with was the Workers' School of Chicago and the Politbureau course. Seven comrades were gotten for the various classes.

Shop Bulletins Issued.

At another meeting, the entire evening, almost, was devoted to reports on shop conditions, writing of news and general preparation for the issue of the next number of the Shop Bulletin.

THE next meeting will deal mainly with the trade union question, both theoretically and practically; for the meeting will take up the matter of how and when the individual comrades are to join their respective unions. Four have definitely joined thru previous discussions.

This is a very brief report of a shop nucleus which has the same difficulties that are pointed out too often by elements not ready to put the necessary energy into the job of making a shop nucleus really function. There is no excuse for this. The job can be done. The publication of a Shop Bulletin, for instance, even if only 5000 copies are printed at present, is more than justifies the change to the new form. These pieces of literature, distributed regularly to the workers, mean genuine mass propaganda and agitation—and ultimately organization for the Workers (Communist) Party and for Communism.

...TO RICANS IN ARIZONA HELPED BY LABOR UNIONS

Wire A. F. of L. for Action

By LAURENCE TODD, Fed. Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. — Failure has crowned the efforts of the American Cotton Growers' Association to substitute Porto Rican cheap labor for Mexican labor in the cotton fields. The shipments of Porto Rican laborers are now appealing for help to the American labor organizations and to the American Federation of Labor because they cannot earn even 50 cents a day under the conditions prescribed to them by the growers.

Half Starved.

According to telegrams reaching Fred. Green and the office of Santiago Iglesias, secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, the half-starved Porto Ricans arrived in Arizona with their families under contract with the growers' association to pick cotton. Many of them were not farm workers but were skilled mechanics of various kinds. The climate of Arizona was unfavorable and they soon discovered that the rate they had agreed to work for was too low. They could not even feed themselves on their earnings.

The Mexican laborers who had been coming across the border for years to do this cotton-picking in the season had refused to accept the low wages any longer. The growers' labor agents who visited Porto Rico had misrepresented the situation. Their victims refused to work for less than the cost of food and threw themselves on the mercy of the labor unions in the vicinity. They also telegraphed to Green and Iglesias the request that they warn other Porto Ricans against leaving home.

Labor Unions Care For Them.

At Globeville in the central labor body is now caring for 100 of the Porto Ricans while others of the contract laborers are said to be under guard by local officers who pretend to have the legal right to prevent their "escape." The tradition of slave labor thus follows cotton into the newest of the states regardless of the fact, that the workers are free men and American citizens.

The Phoenix labor council asked Green to bring pressure on the federal government for prompt inquiry and remedial action. As a result the department of labor has ordered Francis I. Jones, director of its employment service, to proceed from Fort Worth to Phoenix to attempt an adjustment. The cotton growers are o he warned against using false statements in inducing other Porto Ricans to come to Arizona. It was reported in Phoenix that the growers were trying to secure 1,500 men from Porto Rico.

Labor Shortage.

The U. S. employment service has reports from the cotton belt indicating that this year's demand for cotton pickers has been about 178,000 as compared with a normal total of 300,000, and that only about 100,000 persons have answered the call for help. Nevertheless, the Arizona growers offer a starvation wage.

Engdahl Discusses the Issues Before A. F. of L. at Detroit Y. W. L. Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 3—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of THE DAILY WORKER, addressed the members and sympathizers of the Young Workers (Communist) League here in Finnish Hall on the issues to come before the 48th Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor starting Monday at Greystone Hall. Great local interest was shown in the attitude of the A. F. of L. toward the youth workers. Many workers in Detroit are under the impression that the sessions of the A. F. of L. are held in secret. All sessions are open to the public. There is never any crowding since the number of visitors in attendance is always small.

District 8 Activization Group.

District 8 party activization group, which has already during its short period of existence accomplished good work, will meet on Tuesday, October 5th at the Greek Hall, 788 W. Van Buren street.

It will take up the future work, particularly in connection with The DAILY WORKER campaign and general activization of Chicago party units. Every active member of the party is invited to participate. Please remember the date and place.

Boys and Girls Crowd Boston Youth Meeting

BOSTON, Mass.—The International Youth Day celebration held here was a big success.

The Paine Memorial Hall was crowded with rebellious, red-blooded young working boys and girls whose faces expressed the daring, demonstrating spirit of the International Youth Day and who came to celebrate the holiday of the working youth of the whole world.

The International marked the opening of the program after which a short address by the chairman Comrade Shohan followed. The first number on the program was solo singing by R. Lifland accompanied by L. Freedman who received a warm ovation from the audience.

Comrade Kay, the district organizer of the Y. W. L. of this district, then gave his address touching upon the vital problems before the American working youth. Comrade G. Garman accompanied by A. Fink then gave a violin solo which was very much liked by all, after which the floor was given to H. Newton, one of the young Negro rebels of this town, who in his address showed the great value of the international Youth Day to the Negroes and colonial people generally.

Then Mollie Blum, one of the Pioneer members of this district, spoke for the D. E. C. of the Pioneers and expressed the solidarity and readiness of the children of the workers to help the fight against capitalism that also enslaves the child for the sake of profits for the bosses.

Comrade Jack Stachel of New York then spoke. And wasn't he greeted! He, in a very able way showed the tasks of the working youth of this country in its fight for organization, for better treatment in industry, against militarism, child labor and capitalism in general. He was very enthusiastically cheered and applauded in concluding his speech.

The famous mass recitation "Strike," written by M. Gould was the last number on the program. The celebration has surely given to many comrades and friends more energy and enthusiasm to continue the building of a strong Y. W. L. in this district.

Red Stars Win Soccer Match; Score Close

The Red Star soccer team of Chicago battled all the way down the line in an exciting game with the J. P. I. (Jewish People's Institute) team last Sunday.

Good team work was demonstrated on both sides and the game ended with a score of 2 to 1 in favor of the Red Stars. The Red Star team is one of the many labor sports organizations springing up in all parts of the country.

EDUCATION COURSE FOR CHICAGO LEAGUE

All Young Workers' League members of Sections 1, 4 and 5, local Chicago, must be present at the first class of the politminimum course to be held Sunday morning from 10 to 12 e. m. in their respective section headquarters. All comrades not present will be checked up.

Many Local Unions Have Sport Groups

IT must be apparent that a mass workers' sports movement in this country cannot possibly pattern after the workers' sports movements in the European countries, where the class consciousness of the workers, their political level and their organizational experience is on a much higher level than here. The workers' sports organization in this country, if it is to escape the curse of sectarianism, must be based on the most elementary class program—that is, workers' controlled sports as against capitalist controlled sports.

It is true that the existing workers' sports organizations and clubs have a more advanced program than this, because they are composed of workers who are more politically developed. The Finnish, the Checho-Slovak, the Hungarian workers' sports clubs are of this kind. But if the workers' sports movement is to grow and attract masses it cannot at the present juncture base itself upon the program of this most advanced section since this program would repel the backward workers in the clubs that are of a semi-working class nature.

What are these clubs? Outside of the existing out-and-out working class sports clubs mentioned above in America a peculiar intermediary form has developed—the union sports clubs. Thousands of the local unions in this country have sports clubs and teams organized, to which only members of the union belong and participate. Altho the members who take part in the activities organized by these clubs do not consider themselves as work sportsmen—because they do not look at things from this class point of view—yet these clubs are workers' sports clubs in the sense that they are composed of workers who are advanced enough to be organized. The union sports clubs, along with some of the independent neighborhood sports clubs are composed of workers and are somewhat advanced, and some of the gymnastic and nature societies, these will compose the bulk of the mass sports organization when it comes into existence.

Young Farmers Are Forced to Work Out

BELDEN, N. D.—The Young Workers' League out here is composed of young farmers who are either working for their fathers or are hired by someone else. However, few of the farms over here are owned by the farmers. They are only renters for the bankers or other money corporations, as their own farms have had the mortgages foreclosed on them.

All the dreams of the early "home builders" have been crushed when they were driven from their homes in which they put many years of hard labor. This is the fate of hundreds of families in North Dakota. We feel the same dire exploitation of the workers. So, forward to the strengthening of the Y. W. L.

TWO FEDERATIONS OF LABOR ENTER PRIMARY BATTLE

Chicago and Ill. Bodies Join in Fight

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 2. — The Illinois and Chicago federations of Labor, thru their attorneys, today interested themselves into the battle being waged over the validity of the state primary act, filing petitions to file briefs and arguments amici curiae.

The cases involved also include the validity of the primary act for election of circuit, and superior court judges in Cook county. The two federations wish to submit arguments upholding the constitutionality of the act.

Cases Involved.

Cases involved are: decision of the Lee county circuit court holding the primary act invalid; the mandamus suit of A. J. Cermak against Secretary of State Emmerson to compel Emmerson to call a convention for nomination of judges in Cook county, which Emmerson refused to do; and the case of William H. Stewart vs. Patrick J. Carr, Cook county treasurer.

Reports Independent Shoe Workers' Union Progress; Has 16,000

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Two thousand new members have joined the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, national independent organization, Secretary Daniel F. Fitzgerald of Haverhill told the union convention. A new local had been gained during the year in Brooklyn, N. Y., and one in Newark, N. J. The union claims a total membership of 16,000. Increased appropriations for organization work were recommended by President John J. Nolan.

There is little rivalry between the Protective and the American Federation of Labor union—Boot and Shoe Workers—he said, since the Protective is chiefly of women's shoe workers and the A. F. of L. union of men's shoe workers.

Several complications of the constitution, due to the merger of the United Shoe Workers' Union in 1924 with the Protective, were straightened out by the convention. Over 50 delegates from eastern and western shoe centers attended.

B. of L. E. Division 473 Sends Money for British Mine Strike

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 3. — Although forbidden by union law to appropriate money from the treasury, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Division 473, at its recent meeting took up a collection of $23.60 in answer to the appeal of the grand office to help the British miners. This will be sent to the grand office.

New Hampshire Labor Federation Convenes

NASHUA, N. H., Oct. 2. — New Hampshire State Federation of Labor elected John L. Barry of Manchester president at its 25th annual convention. The program endorsed included: Continued study of the prison labor problem, introduction of an anti-injunction bill, continued fight for the 48-hour law, carrying forward the fight against child labor, and adequate compensation for workers injured or killed. Support of the striking British miners was urged on central labor unions.

CANADIAN LABOR'S CONVENTION SCENE OF HOT FIGHT OVER THE QUESTION OF STRIKE PICKETING

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 24—(By Mail)—The sessions of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress convention have proven it to be one of the most reactionary conventions held in recent years, particularly in the convention's surrender of the right to strike, which was involved in the question of the right to picket, which has been declared illegal by the Canadian highest court under Clause No. 509 of the Criminal Code.

On this vital issue the left wing, led by Tim Buck, battled hard to win approval of an amendment to the recommendations of the committee on picketing and injunctions, the chairman of which is Jimmie Simpson of the Canadian Labor Party.

The committee recommended that "pending enactment of legislation," to protect peaceful picketing, unions should follow the advice of J. G. O'Donoghue, K. C., as made in 1919.

Perfectly Legal—and Useless.

This gentleman's counsel was that no more than three pickets work together; that they move when ordered to by the police; that they speak to scabs, but if the scabs object they be left unmolested; that no threats be made nor violence either used or condoned; and that the law be respected in every way. By doing this, Mr. O'Donoghue had opined that the strikers might have a "legal right" to picket. Whether a strike could be won on that program was apparently not the issue.

Tim Buck's Amendment.

Tim Buck of the left wing introduced an amendment that: "Organized workers on no account forego the right to picket, regardless of injunctions and court decisions."

Delegate Buck, who comes from the Machinists' Union, in arguing for his amendment said that the very life and strength of the trade union movement was bound up in the right to strike, and without the right to picket the right to strike was useless.

Will Picket Anyhow.

"Whether or not the congress decides or not in favor of the amendment, they will not prevent workers from doing it. The scabs, according to King's councilor O'Donoghue, have a legal right to take our jobs. We are not going to forego the right to protect our jobs. We are going to go on picketing whatever the congress decides."

Tom Moore, reactionary president of the congress made a weak but vicious attack on the left wing, admitting that he did not want "to go to jail" and resigning leadership by saying that he would not advise others to break injunctions because he himself would not for fear of jail.

Derides Against Struggle.

Delegate John MacDonald of Montreal backed up the left wing amendment, but Jimmie Simpson of the committee and the C. L. P. opposed it, begging the question on the congress' jurisdiction.

On an "aye" and "nay" vote the amendment was declared lost and the Simpson report adopted. Tom Moore was re-elected president of the congress.

Ella Reeve Bloor spoke for the Passaic relief committee and the convention gave a collection of $154.00 and a good reception.

British Baker A. F. of L. Delegates.

George Roberts, fraternal delegate from England rebuked the A. F. of L. delegate, J. B. Connors of the Switchmen, for his criticism of British labor's "extremism." The British labor movement would not have had its present power if there had not been extremists in it from its earliest history," he said. He urged greater political power for labor.

The U. S. delegates, particularly Wharton, new president of the Machinists, made themselves conspicuous by ranting about "reds."

HEROIC WORKERS FIGHT DESPITE DREAD DISEASE

City of Consumptives and Scenic Beauty

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

DENVER, Colo., (By Mail)—Denver is one of these towns with a climate and scenery, and very conscious of it. It is a tourist town and well-to-do Americans come from all over the United States to see its wonders. Among these tourists, however, not all are well-to-do. Many of those who come for the "climate" are tragic victims of the capitalist system. I met scores of workers during my brief stay in Denver and most of them were consumptives. Three of the members of the executive committee of the Workers Party here are victims of the dreaded T. B., contracted in the unsanitary factories of the great industrial centers of our country. Some of the most active spirits in the union movement here are the same. It is a testimony to the unconquerable will of the working class and the awakened fighters that even that dread proletarian disease does not break their will and determination to struggle . . .

I visited a cemetery in the outskirts of the town and on a tombstone, I found, not a cross, but a hammer and sickle. "A consumptive," my companion explained, "a veteran fighter in the Jewish labor movement who died here a couple years back. Contracted T. B. in the sweatshops of the East."

Climate Suitable.

The labor movement is not strong here. A constant stream of broken down invalided workers come to Denver because they must live in such a climate, and they are willing to work for almost nothing in order to stay. The supply of available workers is greatly in excess of the demand. Yet the class conscious workers struggle with the double handicap of disease and an overstocked labor market and keep a labor movement alive here. At the present moment a labor lyceum is under construction in Denver to serve as a rallying center for a movement, absolutely without adequate headquarters. The $25,000 necessary to build the labor temple was raised mostly by the Workmen's Circle (one of the branches expelled by the right wing bureaucracy of the Workmen's Circle) and by the Workers Party. But the whole labor movement will benefit by having a rallying center.

Klan is Licked.

Until recently, the ku klux klan had control of the administration of Denver and the entire state. From Senator Means down to the local "dog catcher" they were all members of the night gown brigade. The word of the Grand Kleagle was law, and there were nightly burnings of a fiery cross on Table Mountain overlooking the city. But the klan split over the division of the booty and the former boss of the klan organized the Minute Men of America. Now the grip of the klan on local life and politics is broker, Senator Means was defeated in the primaries in his own party, the fiery cross burns no more on Table Mountain.

The state federation of labor has a weekly here of large circulation—the Colorado Labor Review. It is in many ways considerably more progressive than the average official organ of a state federation. But it and the leaders of the official labor movement here are supporting the democratic candidate, Mr. Sweet, for United States senator. Sweet is a one-time socialist, and his father is still the lone socialist of Denver, Colorado.

The Millionaire Sweet.

But Sweet is a millionaire as are the present incumbents, Means and Phipps. These days it is as easy for a rich man to get into the senate as into the kingdom of heaven and the Colorado labor leaders seem to be used to being represented by millionaires. Because of the split in the republican ranks on the klan issue, the election of Sweet is highly probable and he will probably line up with Reed and the progressive democrats in the next senate. But in spite of the sweep for Sweet, the Workers Party has succeeded in getting the necessary petition signatures among the workers to put a full ticket in the field with Ayres for senator and Dietrich for governor.

Two years ago "Governor" Dietrich got about 2,000 votes even the there was a LaFollette ticket in the field.

CAPITALISM HAS 'INSULL' CINCH ON OLD PARTIES

Competition Only Upon Reactionary Policies

By LAURENCE TODD, Fed. Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. — In Pullman staterooms whose cost lends dignity to their expense accounts and dividends to Frank Lowden's family the biggest political spellbinders in the republican and democratic parties are moving from Washington and New York and Chicago to the outlying battlefields of the 1926 campaign.

The big political show is on. National managers on both sides have claimed everything. They have also ridiculed the public records of the other crowd. Most of the indictments from both camps have been true.

Both Pro-Capitalist.

All of them understate the essential quality of federal administration by both parties—their indifference to all suggestions that the power of government be deliberately and systematically used to further industrial democracy or to reduce the economic disadvantage of the farmers and wage-workers as against the capitalists.

When the republican organization goes to the voters in frantic appeals in the coming weeks to give Calvin Coolidge one more congress it will make one claim: "Business is good." It will have its cabinet officers repeating one solemn quotation: "Don't you believe that President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon are able and honest?"

Disgusted or Bored?

If the democrats win, they will do so for two main reasons. The first is the general disgust or boredom of the voters toward the Coolidge-Mellon party. The second reason is the activity of organized labor and organized farmers to secure the defeat of reactionaries who have blocked even the most insignificant labor and farmer measures in the national legislature. But they will owe no accounting to any labor party or to any general program drawn up by the labor movement. Labor chiefs admit this weakness in the non-partisan or bi-partisan primary system of campaign.

Competitive Reaction.

On the other hand, the Overmens and Herrisons and Garners and Gerrets and the rest of the pro-corporation democratic leaders assure the business public that when they swing back to control of the White House there will be no radicalism, no socialism, no nonsense of old age pensions or federal child labor laws or public ownership of waterpower. And the progressive republicans have to admit that they stand mighty little chance of taking their own party away from the manufacturers and bankers' special control.

However, the speeches and posters of October will mention only the prosperity which the democrats claim the Overmens and Garners promise them.

Are Millionaires of Any Social Value? Ask Walter Ward, He Knows

NEW YORK, October 3. — Walter Ward, mysteriously missing for months, has returned to New York City, and is in hiding in Harlem, according to the latest report concerning his whereabouts.

The millionaire Ward, who is the son of the millionaire Baker, recently has been reported seen in several places. A few days ago he was reported to have been located on the Pacific coast, where he was said to have disguised himself by wearing shell-rimmed glasses and dyeing his hair.

Today, however, a policeman, Joseph Windham, reported that he saw Ward eating breakfast at three o'clock yesterday morning in a broadway restaurant.

The return of Ward has revived curiosity along broadway as to the reason for his mysterious disappearance early in May when his automobile was found abandoned in Trenton, N. J., with the glass windshield shattered by a large rock. Prior to that time, Ward was given considerable publicity when he was arrested charged with the slaying of Clarence Peters, a sailor.

Vessel Steams on with Fire in Hold

SAVANNAH, Ga. Oct. 3.—With the fire in her hold under control after a desperate battle at sea by her crew of 39, the freighter New Britain was proceeding to Savannah under her own steam today, according to a radio message received by the naval radio station here.

"Fire still burning but under control", the New Britain's message said. "Plates of vessel very hot. Making ten to twelve knots. No one seriously hurt."

NEW YORK STATE LABOR SEEKS MANY REFORMS IN STATE LAWS IN NEW LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 3. —(F)— Ratification of the federal child labor amendment is the first proposal of the New York State Federation of Labor program for the new legislative session. Twelve laws are being framed for labor to present. The bill drafted by the American Federation of Labor for the limitation of injunctions in industrial disputes is one.

Claims Labor "No Commodity."

An amendment to the state constitution to permit the limitation of injunctions for all state offices by an initiative and referendum system is another. An amendment to the state monopoly law will be introduced to declare that human labor is "not a commodity" or article of commerce under the meaning of the law.

State Insurance Sought.

An exclusive state insurance fund for covering all workmen's compensation except where compensation is provided from public funds for public employes will be advocated again this year as last. Increase of the maximum compensation wage rate to $30 a week and abolition of the $3,500 limit on temporary disability compensation will be asked, with compensation for all occupational diseases and other additional provisions.

An amendment to the state labor law is sought to overcome the adverse effect of a U. S. supreme court decision on the Oklahoma 8-hour and prevailing rate of wages law. The 48-hour law for women will again be demanded, as legislators have repeatedly gone back on their promises to push this legislation.

Oppose Seven Day Week.

Another law to be urged would correct the present law which permits continuous work seven days a week in many occupations. Increasing the number of inspectors as a means of reducing industrial accidents by having safety codes enforced is also urged.

State development of water power and supply of electric light and power to homes, farms and workshops at cost will be asked. Extending and improving educational opportunities for employed children and training of apprentices in classrooms under joint supervision of employers, unions and school authorities is asked.

Tricky Boss Fails to Live Up to Pledge at Waukegan Coat Factory

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Oct. 3. —(FP)— "I'll sign with the union when it has enrolled 60 of the strike workers in my shop," said boss Granert of the strikebound Granert & Rothschild coat factory to the pickets. But when the 60 names were presented to him duly signed on union applications he changed his mind and threatened to move his shop out of Waukegan.

The strike has tied up the plant. The chamber of commerce is trying to arrange a settlement but the owners refuse to arbitrate. Reinstatement of union workers and collective bargaining are demanded by the union.

Bunny took this letter to Dad, and it disturbed him very much, of course, but what could Dad do about it? He had three wells to bring in that week, and one of them broke loose and smeared up a couple of hundred acres of rocks. Also he and Mr. Roscoe had to deal with the amazing gyrations of the oil market. It seemed as if all the nations in the world had suddenly set themselves to buying up gasoline; perhaps they were making up for the shortage of the war, or perhaps they were getting ready—for another war—anyhow, the price was up sky-high, and Southern California was being drained. It was truly amazing, the gas-stations were refusing to sell to any but their regular customers, and then only five gallons at a time; other stations were clean empty, and cars were stalled for days. Dad and Mr. Roscoe were making a tremendous killing; they were getting real money too, Dad said with a laugh, none of these foreign bonds for them!

Bunny shipped a dozen cartons of cigarettes to Jeff Korbitty; and day and night he worried over the problem of Paul. Somehow the putting down of Bolshevism took on quite a different aspect when it meant keeping Paul in Siberia! Also, Bolshevik propaganda seemed a different thing when it came from the pen of an ex-cowpuncher from Salinas valley! Bunny simply had to do something, and finally in desperation he sat himself down and composed a letter to his Congressman, Mr. Leathers, telling what he had heard about conditions in Siberia and requesting that functionary to ascertain the War Department's reasons for censorship of soldiers' mail in peace time; also to urge an investigation by Congress of the reasons for keeping American troops in Siberia.

That letter was due to reach the Congressman five days later. Seven days after Bunny had posted it, a well-dressed and affable gentleman called at the Ross home in Angel City, stating that he was the owner of an oil concession in Siberia and wanted to interest Mr. Ross in it. Dad was up at Paradise, so Bunny talked with the gentleman, and finding him humane and catholic in his interests, told him all about Paul, and showed him Jeff Korbitty's letter. They discussed the situation in Siberia, and the gentleman said there had been no declaration of war against the Russians, so what right did we have fighting them? Bunny said it seemed the same way to him; and then the gentleman went away and no more was heard about the oil concession, but a couple of weeks later Bunny received a second letter from the ex-cowboy soldier, bitterly reproaching him for having "throwed me down," as he must have done, because Jeff hadn't wrote to nobody else, but the army had got onto him and they had throwed him into the can just like he had said, and he was smuggling out this letter to tell Bunny that he could go to hell and stay there. Which was one stage more in the education of a little idealist!

Bunny simply had to talk to somebody about this episode. Next day, as he was driving away from the university in his sporty new car, he noticed a young man walking with a slight limp, and it struck him as impolite for a student of the university to drive in a sporty new car, while an instructor of the university had to walk with a slight limp. Bunny slowed up, and inquired, "Will you ride with me, Mr. Irving?"

"If you're going my way," said the other.

"What ever way you wish," was Bunny's reply. "As a matter of fact, I've been hoping for a chance to talk with you, and it would be a favor to me."

The young man got in, and stated the address to which he wished to go; then he said, "What is on your mind?"

"I want to ask you why you think it is that we are keeping an army in Siberia."

Mr. Daniel Webster Irving was a peculiar-looking person; his head came up a long way out of his collar, and with its quick alert movements it made you think of a quail sitting in a tree and looking out for you and your gun. He had a brown moustache, rather bristly and rebellious, and a grey eye which he fixed upon you sharply when you said something stupid in class. He fixed them now upon Bunny, demanding, "What makes you interested in that?"

"I have a friend with the troops there, nearly a year, and I've had some news that worries me, I don't understand what's going on."

Said Mr. Irving: "Are you asking me as a student or as a friend?"

"Why," replied Bunny, a little puzzled, "I'd be glad to be a friend, if I might. What is the difference?"

"The difference," said the other, "might be the loss of my position in the university."

Bunny flushed, embarrassed. "I hadn't thought of anything like that, Mr. Irving."

"I'll put it to you bluntly, Ross. I spent all I had saved on relief work in Europe and came home broke. Now I am educating a young sister, and they are paying me the munificent salary of thirteen hundred a year. I am due to get a raise of two hundred next year, and the matter of contracts comes up this month. If it is reported that I am defending Bolshevism to my students, I won't get a contract, either here or anywhere else."

"Oh, but Mr. Irving, I wouldn't dream of reporting you!"

"You wouldn't-need to. You'd only need to tell your parents or your friends what I think is the reason our troops are in Siberia and they would consider it their moral duty to report me."

"Is it as bad as that?" said Bunny.

"It's so bad that I don't see how it could be worse," said Mr. Irving. "I will answer your question provided you agree that I am talking as a friend and that you won't mention the conversation to anyone else." And you can see how deeply Bunny had fallen into the toils of Bolshevism, when he was willing to agree to a proposition such as that!

President Green, the Five-Day Week and the Furriers' Union

President William Green hails the five-day week announcement of Henry Ford as a victory for organized labor.

We have already dealt with the real meaning of the Ford scheme and will deal with it again in a special issue of THE DAILY WORKER devoted to this one question.

But what interests us is the statement of President Green to the effect that the Printers' Union and the Furriers' Union are pioneers in the establishment of the five-day week.

Does President Green recall that he, in company with Hugh Frayne, A. F. of L. organizer, moved heaven and earth to get the Furriers' Union to abandon their struggle for a forty-hour, five-day week?

Has President Green forgotten that it was necessary for the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union to call a meeting of shop chairmen to combat the efforts of Hugh Frayne to end the strike on the bosses' terms?

Has President Green forgotten that he has ordered an investigation of the Furriers' Union and that in correspondence which has been published he makes serious charges without any basis in fact?

If the Furriers' Union has not only upheld the best traditions of the trade union movement but has shown the way to the rest of the labor movement in securing the five-day week, why is President Green making war on the Furriers' Union?

Why has he appointed an investigation committee one of whose members is Hugh Frayne, while at the same time refusing to give representation on the committee to the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union which led the strike and registered the achievement which President Green now characterises as one of the great victories of labor?

These are questions which demand an answer.

Either the latest statement of President Green is wholly insincere and made for public consumption only or the investigation of the Furriers' Union, without precedent in the A. F. of L. annals, is an attempt to discredit without reason a leadership whose ability and militancy afford a striking contrast to that of other international unions which subscribe to the "worker-employer co-operation" theory which the Furriers' Union correctly rejects.

Miami and Louisville

Two recent instances bring sharply to one attention the ever present danger the Negroes in America face.

In Miami great numbers of Negro workers have been conscripted at the point of the bayonet and altho news from there on this subject is very meager it is evident that the Florida capitalists and their hangers-on are trying to reduce wage costs in reconstruction work following the storm to a minimum, by establishing virtual slavery for the Negro population.

The Negroes have resisted and every worker in the United States should rejoice at the fact. Slavery for white workers as well as Negroes still prevails in the turpentine camps of the south and in Florida the enslavement of the Negro workers would mean the slave conditions for white workers as well.

In Louisville, Kentucky, two Negro editors have been jailed for protesting against racial discrimination in the courts which produces such results as a white ravisher of a Negro girl being declared insane and given a chance to "recover" his sanity in an asylum, while a Negro alleged to have attacked a white woman is sentenced to death.

The prosecuting attorney first charged the two editors with "creating race friction and hatred," but this was a little too obviously sinister so the grand jury has indicted them for criminal libel.

The Negroes need organization more than any other section of the population. Composed overwhelmingly of workers and working farmers the Negroes are easily victimized. An organization which can and will bring forward a practical program for consolidating the strength of the Negro race in the United States, uniting with the most conscious elements of the white working class for struggle in industry and on the political field will attain to leadership of the Negro masses.

Instances like these in Louisville and Miami must be used to arouse the whole American working class to action against the constant menace which 10,000,000 Negroes face daily.

Protest Forces State Department to Grant Vacirca U. S. Refuge

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Vincenzo Vacirca, former socialist deputy in the Italian parliament, whose Italian citizenship has been cancelled and property confiscated by royal decree at the order of Mussolini, has been granted refuge in the United States, after a nationwide protest. He will not be deported, altho he did not come here under the immigrant's quota law and altho his permit to come as a temporary visitor has thrice expired.

The board of review in the federal bureau of immigration notified Vicirca's counsel, Leo Russell, on Sept. 27 that the ex-deputy's appeal based on his being a victim of fascist persecution had been successful. The department of labor had decided that it could not cause the deportation of an alien who had committed no offense in this country and who could not safely return to his own country. Just what was the language of the formal decision was not disclosed, but it was known that Vacirca was free to remain in New York, where he is connected with the anti-fascist newspaper

Monroe Doctrine Hid Behind Welfare Work of U. S. and Latins

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. — Health directors of North and South America, in final session here today, laid the ground-work for making the Pan-American military conference in Lima, Peru, next year the most important health conference in many years. Committees were designated to work out various phases of public health work.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will receive the delegates at the White House late today and the final event of the gathering will be a reception tonight, tendered by Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg. This is an example of the penetration of U. S. imperialism by indirect means in Latin America.

FROM PORTLAND TO DETROIT

FIFTH ARTICLE

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THERE has also been developed by which the corporations have endeavoring to make unionization of their plants impossible in a long one but all of these have the same motive—to win the worker to the company by convincing him that no union is necessary to protect his interests, that his interest here are the same as those of the capitalist, and that American industry is run by "one big family." Actually the capitalists oppose the one big family idea to that of one big union.

RECENTLY the United States Steel company, on the occasion of its twenty-fifth anniversary, published a magnificent example of the art of the printer and engraver, whose cost must have been far up in the thousands, devoted to picturing the "welfare" activities of the company.

An examination of this work shows that these activities range from stock selling schemes to the workers to the organization of athletic associations and housing programs.

THE American Telegraph and Telephone company, enjoying what is practically exclusive control of the electric communication industry together with the Western Union, perpetuates the same fine title, it does not go in for housing due to obvious reasons.

The increase in group insurance—the policy of insuring blocs of workers by corporations—against loss or injury during illness and injury, and the extension of this to provide insurance for dependents, is another method of drawing the workers closer to the capitalists.

Old age pension systems show a rapid increase as well.

ABRAHAM EPSTEIN (from whose article on the industrial welfare movement I have quoted before) says in connection with corporation enterprises:

Only 18 years ago group life insurance (by corporations) . . . was hardly known. In 1912 the total amount of insurance written under these policies amounted to $15,172,186. In 1917 the total group insurance in force was $340,525,472 . . . At the end of 1924, 61 insurance companies had written $3,264,638 of group insurance, nearly DOUBLING, in TWO years the amount issued in the FIRST ELEVEN YEARS.

It is estimated that the total number of workers covered by this form of insurance amounted to 3,500,000 in 1925 and there has been a rapid increase since that time.

Old age pensions come in for a good deal of attention. They represent an appeal to that fear of poverty and dependence in old age which obsesses every worker. There can be no question but that the fear of losing old age pensions and the benefits of insurance for illness and accident acts at present as a strong brake in preventing the development of organization and strikes.

I QUOTE again:

In the establishment of old age pensions also, a study just completed by the writer of 310 formal pension schemes discloses the fact that, the before 1900 there were but FOUR such systems, and only 126 additional plans were started up to 1915, 180 NEW systems have been added since . . . Moreover, 200 noncarne reported that, the they had adopted no formal plans, they provide pensions. . .

It will be noticed that the period in which the decided upward tendency appears in both the health and life insurance and pension schemes coincides with the appearance of America as the dominant capitalist nation of the world after the world war.

That the capitalists regard cost of these schemes as a real investment which pays good dividends there can be no doubt.

EPSTEIN quotes from a survey made of a large number of employers:

The opinions of employers, with but few isolated exceptions, are solidly in favor of welfare plans . . . 'no doubt as to the benefit derived . . . thru having, healthier, better satisfied workmen and families' . . . Numerous establishments feel that our labor turnover is less and that the big family" feeling is much more evident . . . Most corporations which have adopted these activities find that they result in a decidedly different attitude on the part of employees and the workforce believed they received but very little consideration; that they 'point a way for real personal respect and understanding and as a beginning of industrial harmony, happiness and success both for the employee and the company.' They are convinced that welfare plans act as a check upon labor turnover, materially reduce industrial troubles and thus conspire to organize their workforce favorably fabric.

FROM the foregoing it is clear that "welfare" schemes are directed against the labor movement, that they are used consciously and deliberately by the capitalists to undermine the existing trade union movement, discourage anything smacking of "radicalism" and to produce a type of capitalist-minded workers whose first thought will be for industry rather than for himself and his class.

The American Federation of Labor has not answered this challenge in the only way it can be answered by stressing the complete difference in interest between the abstraction known as American industry, but which is in reality the capitalist class, and the American workingclass.

There are plenty of instances showing that the latter's failure plays into the hands of the capitalists with telling force. It will be necessary to give only one or two illustrations of the ingenious manner in which the capitalists, thru their employe journals, take advantage of this basic weakness of the labor leadership.

The Siemen-Halske-Schuckert Loan

By MAX SHACHTMAN

RESPECTABLE American newspapers are carrying large advertisements for the flotation of a $34,000,000 issue of the German electrical concerns of Siemens & Halske A. G. and Siemens-Schuckertwerke G. m. b. H., in the form of twenty-five year 6½ per cent sinking fund debentures, with warrants for contingent additional interest. Another 6,000,000 dollars of the issue are being offered in Europe and in Germany itself approximately another $6,000,000 in debentures are on the market. The total sum of the issue amounting to some 147 million Reichsmarks, is being mainly raised in the United States over the name of Dillon, Read & Co.

THE inducements for purchase are very attractive. The combined earnings of the two companies for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1926 "amounted to over 38,500,000, or more than three times estimated maximum annual payments under the Dawes plan and exactly twice interest requirements on the entire present issue of these debentures, on the Reichsmark debentures being offered in Germany, and on the unlimited funded debt to be outstanding after present financing."

In addition, warrants are given to each debenture for the contingent interest, additional to the 6½ per cent: from 1927 to 1936 inclusive, holders will be entitled to $3.25 1-3 for each 1 per cent additional dividend that is declared over the prospective minimum 7 per cent for the preceding fiscal year.

WHAT are these two concerns and why are they making this loan on their industry?

The Siemens-Schuckertwerke is controlled by the Siemens & Halske which owns more than 50 per cent of the stock of the former. Together with the powerful Allgemeine Elektrische Gesellschaft, with which it has had a working agreement for many years, it had control, before the war, of almost the entire European and Levantine field, by secret understanding with the General Electric company of the United States which took for itself the American continent under the commercial pirates' word of mutual non-competition.

THE fortunes of war dealt a heavy blow to all German industries. The electrical industry did not escape. But the turn of the wheel caused by the internal and international contradictions of world capitalism has now given German big industry a new lease of life. And the reincarnated baby is a very lusty one, for it has not only inherited the technico-commercial skill and rich resources of its prewar German parents, but it has adopted the industrial methods of its Dawes-godfather, America. So that today Siemens is again one of the greatest electrical manufacturing concerns of the world, swiftly approaching annual sales of almost a quarter of a billion dollars, exporting one-third of its manufactures, operating at 100 per cent capacity for one section (Halske) and 75 per cent for the other (Schuckertwerke). Its stocks currently quoted on the Berlin Boerse at 196 of par, and planning a huge expansion program with the aid of the million gold marks most of which is to be raised in the United States.

BEHIND the dazzling picture of this recovered and lewis-bedecked prince of industry is a murky background of desolation and misery for the slaves in the industry. The story of the establishment of the slave system in Germany which must be read by American workers now. Later, its implications will be read with consternation by the American industrial heroes who are buying up German debentures in millions of dollars.

FOR Germany to exist as an industrial power, especially after the war, it had to confront, more than ever before, a rather well-established monopoly of the field. It had not, like French, British or American industry, a state power which commanded respect and could open or close a market for its industrialists and financiers.

BEFORE the war German industry could exist and thrive even against such odds as this in 1910, for example, the American General Electric company with 32,000 employes made a clear profit of 45,600,000 marks on an annual turnover on products of 288,000,000 marks, while the German Allgemeine Elektrische Gesellschaft, with 60,600 workers made a clear profit of 14,600,000 marks on an annual turnover on products of 382,000,000 marks. With all the touted German efficiency, the American industry was able to extract more profit per worker than the German. Unlike the Americans, the German magnates' profits were held down by the existence of strong trade unions and the relative absence of a centrally organized speed-up system, or such a highly preferential tariff as existed in the United States.

THE desperation of post-war German capitalism has changed much of this. The heavy burden of taxation has been shifted from the shoulders of big industry onto those of the workers and the petty-bourgeoisie. Tariff levels are being adjusted to a nicety to suit the needs of the heavy industrialists. The strength of the trade unions was one of the chief capitalist wares; for, in "the interests of the Fatherland and its industries" (i.e. profits), the social-democratic trade union leaders, like Barkis, "are willing." And the industrial might of Germany is being reconstructed with the aid of the Dawes plan and of the "rationalisation of industry."

WHAT is meant by "rationalisation of industry," against which the social-democratic trade union leaders are doing precisely nothing? "Rationalism signifies nothing else than the securing, with fewer workers, of the same results as were previously achieved with many workers." Those are the words of Dr. Carl F. Von Siemens, chairman of the board of directors of Siemens & Halske at a meeting of his employes.

For the German workers this signifies the introduction of the most diabolical features of Fordism, the highly intensified speed-up system, the endless belt conveyer, the minutest development of the division of labor, the growth of the hungry army of unemployed, and, by the pressure of the very existence of the latter, lower wages for those who are at work and who wonder every day how they are to meet the constantly rising cost of living. A German, working in the Siemens-Schuckertwerke, writes in the Berlin Rote Fahne (May 1, 1926) of the inexorable demands of the endless belt system. The amount of apparatuses packed daily were then 300 pieces; the central office had ordered that in the future 400 pieces were to be packed every day. Neither thewaxes at Siemens nor the working force is to be doubled for this increased output; but the intensity of labor must be increased 100 per cent. And there are upward of 3,000,000 unemployed workers waiting to take your place if you quit!

THE debenture issue of 147 million gold marks now being floated in this country by Siemens will easily be subscribed to. With this in mind leading financial and industrial German journals are forecasting the final amalgamation of Siemens with the A. G. E. into a monopolistic Electrical Trust, which will take its place along the side of the other monopolist trusts which have been formed recently in Germany. The new stock issue will give new and stronger sinews to Siemens. With American financial aid on the one side and blessed by pliable "rationalisation" on the other, not all the tariff walls in the world will hold back the rise of a competitor of ability and strength to challenge the hegemony of the American General Electric company.

IN addition, there is a profound significance in American workers and the "rationalisation" of German industry. It does not take a very keen foresight to see that decisive attempts must soon be made to force American workers, in the electrical industries for example, to work at the same pace, under the same rotten conditions, and for the same wages as the German workers are being made to work today. That in this manner the whole American capitalism will meet the competition of a reconstructed German industry. In this respect the example of the textile industry is already well known.

In the meantime there are fine pickings in loans to Germany now and American capitalists are gobbling them up as quickly as they are floated. A guaranteed 6½ per cent, with warrants for even more, is a tempting morsel. When the American capitalist sees this prospect he leaps for it. What he may not be taking into account is still another prospect; a period of trial when he is helping to establish, and whom he will have to face on more equal terms of combat in the very near future.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

IT is to be observed that oppositional circles seem to like to daily with the idea of two parties. This same Osovsky prophesies that we shall have two parties in the immediate future, both which will call themselves Communist at first: One party which will be in favor of withdrawal from the Anglo-Russian committee and will stand for a very "international standpoint," and another party which imagines that socialism can be built up in our country alone, a sort of "national-Communist" party. The entertaining of the idea of two parties has already become extremely popular in oppositional circles. The standpoint taken by the opposition on the freedom to form groups and fractions is one step on the road to this idea, which in its actual essence is the idea of the justification of a split in the party.

This is in our opinion the fourth fundamental problem dealt with at the plenum of the C. C., and I believe that the opposition has here too wandered completely from the path of the ABC of Leninism with respect to the importance and the character of the party in our country, and from the ABC of Lenin's teaching on the organizatory character of our united and solo party.

Results and Conclusions.

COMRADES, I now come to the question which must have occurred to every one of you: In what direction is the ideology of the opposition developing, what is its ideological marching route, where it it going? I must refer once more to Medvedyev's standpoint, but shall not repeat its outlines, as these are already well known to you.

IT was not for nothing that the central organs of our party wielded by article against Medvedyev's standpoint. The Right Danger is an actuality. It is a fact that the Right elements in our party are growing. It is a fact that the Right elements are trying to find their way to the party leadership. It is a fact that the Right elements are trying to find their way to the party leadership. It is a fact that the Right elements are trying to find their way to the party leadership

The Daily Worker Must Have $5,000 This Week Or---

THIS is the most critical week that The DAILY WORKER has yet had to face.

Bills long overdue are now crowding us. There are business obligations which The DAILY WORKER must meet instantly. Otherwise we will be out of business altogether—close the shop for good—SUSPEND THE DAILY WORKER.

There are party members, sympathisers, and friends in the labor movement who have been gathering funds to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. There surely must be considerable money in the hands of The DAILY WORKER army. In many instances this money has been held back so as to enable our friends to make a better showing by forwarding larger sums later.

ALL MONEY THAT IS IN THE HANDS OF THE DAILY WORKER SUPPORTERS AND FRIENDS MUST BE TURNED IN INSTANTLY.

ALL MONEY THAT CAN BE POSSIBLY GOTTEN FOR THE DAILY WORKER MUST BE SECURED AND FORWARDED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST DELAY.

We must raise one thousand dollars daily for the next week at least if The DAILY WORKER is to continue. Only our getting ten thousand dollars before the middle of this month—the sooner before Octobr 15 the better—can save The DAILY WORKER.

IF YOU HAVE ANY FUNDS NOW THAT YOU INTENDED TO SEND TOMORROW—SEND IT TODAY—AT ONCE.

IF THERE IS A FRIEND YOU HAVE IN MIND WHOM YOU WERE GOING TO ASK TO HELP TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER, DO THE ASKING IMMEDIATELY. Rush his or her contribution. We have no time to lose. YOU HAVE YOUR DAILY PAPER TO LOSE IF YOU ARE SLOW.

IF YOU OWE THE DAILY WORKER MONEY—many of our friends owe us many thousands of dollars, long overdue—THEN PAY IT TODAY AND YOU WILL HAVE NO DEBTS TOMORROW.

IF YOUR SHOP O RSTREET NUCLEI WAS PLANNING TO HELP THE DAILY WORKER AT A LATER MEETING, GET THE MEMBERS TOGETHER IMMEDIATELY. THIS IS AN EMERGENCY. IT'S MORE THAN THAT—WE ARE IN A CRISIS. THIS IS THE ONE TIME TO ANSWER WHETHER YOU WANT THE DAILY WORKER OR NOT.

Just some more push, more energetic effort, is what is badly needed.

The DAILY WORKER army has shown its mettle before in situations less critical. We are confident that every party member, every worker, every progressive trade union, every forward-looking labor organization will answer our call and answer it quickly.

There is no need for panic. There is no panic now. But there will be panic if The DAILY WORKER goes down.

NOW IS THE TIME TO AVOID PANIC AND KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

SHALL THE DAILY WORKER LIVE OR NOT?

THE NEXT FEW DAYS WILL TELL. THIS MEANS THAT YOU WILL TELL.

THIS MEANS YOU MUST WORK AND GIVE TO THE LIMIT AND TELL THE DAILY WORKER TO LIVE.

YOUR PAPER IS WAITING. THE DAILY WORKER IS IN DIRE NEED. MAKE SURE NOW TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

A. F. OF L. CONVENTION OPENS AMID OPEN SHOPPERS' BLAST

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 4.—Challenging the open shoppers and American planners of Detroit to attend the sessions of the American Federation of Labor, President William Green replied to the threatening editorial of the Detroit Free Press warning the labor officials assembled here not to try to carry on their work of organization in this city of strongly entrenched anti-union employers. This incident coupled with Ford's inauguration of the five-day week, which labor declares the result of its own activities thru many years of struggle, gave color to the opening of the 46th annual American Federation of Labor convention here today.

The gathering got under way without a single word of mention of the late "Sam Gompers whose memory dominated the Atlantic City convention last year. Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, who heads the local arrangements committee, apologized for the absence of American flags in the hall. He said this was an oversight that would be remedied later. The convention is meeting in the Graystone Ballroom, far out on Woodward Ave.

Green Presides.

President Green presides with his executive council accompanied by the fraternal delegates sitting in one of the huge orchestra pits under a silk canopy of brilliant red and maroon. In fact red predominates in the hall's gorgeous decorations. Two clergymen episcopal and catholic, had opened the proceedings with prayer. William B. Fitzgerald of the Street Carmen's union made his introductory address as temporary chairman.

President Martel, Mayor John Smith and Frank Wade, president of the Michigan Federation of Labor, were given an opportunity to address the convention and then it came President Green's turn to officially take over the gavel.

Labor Built It.

"Labor erected this city," declared Green defiantly after reviewing what all the previous speakers has said about Detroit as "the wonder city of the world." "If it had depended on the capital that men possess," continued Green "the site on which this city is built would still remain a broad expanse of prairie. There are minority groups in this city that are alarmed at our presence here.

Invited to Attend.

"I invite them to come here to look and listen and to convince themselves that this representative group of men and women of labor compare well with any other group in society." Green then turned to the main part of his opening address which was a prepared attack against company unions.

Company Unions Deamed.

Green declared the company unions were merely experiments on the part of employers that would fail ultimately just as other experiments of a similar nature have failed. He said they would fail because the company union is local in character. Each employer he charged having his own company union drafted according to his own pet ideas. He said company unionism was also built on a transient basis and declared that it does not permit the worker to exercise his own will.

Insist on Freedom.

"The workers will not long permit themselves to be subordinated in this manner," he said. "They will insist on being economically and politically free. The necessary union will attain

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE democratic candidate for the United States senate from Illinois is nothing if not frank. He is also rather resourceful. We do not believe that he is nursing a sore wooden leg in the hospital because voters might feel somewhat embarrassed in asking Mrs. Brennan, what her husband meant by accepting $15,000 from Samuel Insull. In all probability the leg is suffering from rheumatic twinges around the hinges, but George's candidacy will not suffer because its owner is bedridden.

QUESTIONED about the Insull gift, Mr. Brennan was delightfully candid. Anything wrong about a capitalist giving money to opposing candidates and even to factions in both parties? Not a thing, he volunteered. And what of it? What would happen to a corporation that did not take a broad view of things when the political party that it spurned, got into power? Then suddenly George began to act like a politician and gave expression to the belief that the election of a United States senator is of little value to the organization that elects him, in the little matter of spoils. This is where George ruined a promising reputation.

IT is a pleasure to note that the rival statesmen of the European powers are pleased beyond the powers of expression over the bedding alliances that are supplanting the old understandings and misunderstandings that survived the war. Oh, no, England is not bowling to the Franco-Germen entente. Neither is France peeved because Italy and England got together. All those boys have souls as white as the snow on the top of Mount Blanc, as Briand said about the spiritual equipment of Stresemann and himself. We suggest that a good way to take a census of the moron element in America would be to take a referendum with the object of learning how many people believe this diplomatic twaddle.

THE United States government can not recognize the government of Chamorro in Nicaragua because he worked his way into office with a jimmy and a few stink bombs. Nevertheless, the U. Hence we have the spectacle of United States aviators navigating Chamorro's planes so that the revolutionists will not bounce him out of office. Washington will have to wait quite a while before recognizing a Nicaraguan government if it insists on con

2,000 LONDON DOCKERS QUIT JOB SUDDENLY

Protest Against Port Ruling

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oc. 4.—Two thousand workers on the famous Tilbury Docks suddenly quit today, leaving scores of ships tied to their piers heavy with cargo.

The strike, which was entirely unexpected, was reported to be the result of an alleged refusal on the part of the dock companies to permit union officials on the docks. The port of London authorities denied all knowledge of any such order.

There was no disorder, and none is anticipated, altho the dock police force has been augmented as a precautionary measure. Most of the strikers returned to their homes immediately.

POLICE JAIL TWO NEGRO WOMEN IN CHICAGO STRIKE

Passaic police tactics were used in Chicago Monday morning when a squad of coppers was used to disperse a crowd of Negro women strikers who were picketing the premises of the Maras & Company date factory, 214 West Kinzie street.

Summoned by the officials of the factory who Friday had given notice of a wage reduction, the third within a year, the police rushed the strikers. Two of the women were taken to jail. They were Elisebeth Griffin, 3638 Ellis Park, and Mrs. Laura Smith, 37 South State street.

Held in jail two hours, they were released only after intarcession by the American Negro Labor Congress.

Every one of the hundred workers who walked out in a body Saturday appeared at the factory Monday morning for picket duty, despite the heavy rain that fell, all morning.

TERRIFIC GAS EXPLOSION IN TENNESSEE MINE

No Hope Held for Sixty Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROCKWOOD, Tenn., Oct. 4.—Sixty miners were entombed in the Rogers entry of the open shop Rockwood iron company's coal mine today following a gas explosion.

Tons of rock and dirt were let go following the terrific blast and the miners are imprisoned three miles below the surface, according to company officials.

None of the workers were believed to have escaped.

A rescue train from Knoxville, bearing volunteer workers and digging equipment was rushed here and efforts to release the men were to start at once.

Meanwhile workers from surrounding mines were summoned to assist in the rescue operations.

Families and relatives of the imprisoned men crowded about the mouth of the mine immediately following the explosion.

Between 60 and 65 men were known to have been working in the Rogers entry at the time of the blast. None have been heard from after being entombed several hours.

The explosion was first reported by Eugene Tedder, a miner who was working several miles from the Rogers' entry. He said he felt the force of the explosion and was nearly overcome by the gas fumes.

"No Hope."

Deputy Mine Inspector Holden has arrived here to aid in rescue work.

An official of the iron company said that there was "practically no hope" of rescuing the imprisoned men.

"However," he said, "we plan to dynamite a part of the entrance in an attempt to rescue them."

WINDOW WASHERS STRIKE; BOSSES REFUSE DEMANDS

Chicago Local 34 Walks Out for Increase

Three hundred members of the Chicago Window Washers, Local 34, Building Service Employes International Union, went on strike Monday morning when their demand for an increase of 25 cents an hour was refused by the bosses.

Monday night the strike was reported as "air tight," with no scabs being employed and with the city well covered with pickets. The union demands a scale of $1.25 an hour, the present being $1.00 an hour. A minimum guarantee of 40 hours' work a week is also demanded by the union.

Talk Since Sept. 1.

Negotiations have been under way since September 1, when the working agreement expired. The union has had no contract since then, and every effort to arrive at an agreement has failed.

Most of the building trade unions are behind the window washers in their present struggle, it is reported.

GITLOW CHIEF SPEAKER AT CHICAGO CAMPAIGN RALLY WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Benjamin Gitlow, well-known for his long and active record in the revolutionary workers' movement and at present the candidate of the Workers' Party for governor of New York will speak in Chicago, Wednesday evening, Oct. 6 at Emmet Memorial Hall, 2179 S. Ogden Ave.

Other speakers at the meeting, a Workers Party rally for the coming state elections in which J. Louis Engdahl has been filed to run for United States senator, will be Mathilda Kolcusek and Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party.

PASSAIC COPS USE VIOLENCE ON STRIKERS

U. T. W. Officials Lead Protest to Chief

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 4.—James Starr, vice-president, United Textile Workers, in charge of the strike, has warned Chief of Police Zeber of Passaic that brutal attacks on strikers must cease. Starr led a group of strikers into police headquarters. Felix Pannieras, one of the witnesses of brutality, ha produced, exhibited on arm in a sling, broken on the picket line. Women told of being pushed about and called obscene names.

Net loss of $3,566,968 reported by the Botany Consolidated Mills in the American Wool and Cotton reporter for the six months ending June 30, interests the Passaic workers who have been striking the company since January.

Never A Better Cause.

"Never had workers a better case than the Passaic textile strikers, never a cause more just," says the monthly bulletin of the Women's Trade Union League of New York, which is aiding in the relief drive. "Even in the face of major outrages and abuses they will carry on, provided they can continue to receive the minimum ration of food they have been receiving from the Relief Committee (743 Main Ave., Passaic, N. J.) $16,000 a week is the price. Will you help?"

Eleven men are still held under $430,000 bail in the Hackensack and Paterson jails.

Brutal Third Degree.

Strikers testified to third degree methods, refuting Captain Turner who denied any brutality by his department. Teddy Tomochka told of being slammed about the police station and threatened with further violence till he signed a fake confession tending to implicate him in recent bomb explosions.

Wives of prisoners still in jail will tell of broken teeth, black and blue bodies, of wounds they have saw when they visited their husbands, when coming suits against the department are pressed.

Mrs. Jaker Kostamacha will tell of her husband's arm in a sling; Mrs. Joseph Belleme will describe the swollen face she saw when she was allowed to talk with her husband and expose his injury of a broken block and jaw and bruised mouth.

STRIKERS GIVE FURTHER PROOF OF BRUTAL POLICE TREATMENT; ELEVEN STILL HELD IN HIGH BA

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 4.—Passaic police who have become very excited over news reports charging them with brutality to ward union strikers held in jail in the textile mill area, called conference yesterday in the office of Benjamin F. Turner, chief tain of detectives, in an effort to have those accusations refuted. Representatives of the union and newspapermen were invited to attend the conference.

Early yesterday morning detectives appeared at union headquarters and took Teddy Timochka off with them to Captain Turner's office, saying that they wanted to question him regarding the truth of the news story. Young Timochka is the 17-year-old boy who was held for four days by the police authorities of Passaic and Clifton and forced to sign a false statement. He said he was roughly handled by the police who had him in custody.

Roughly Handled.

With the consent of Henry Hunt, counsel for the union, who was present at the conference, Teddy Timochka told of the treatment he had received when questioned by Captain Turner's men. He asserted that he had been roughly handled—that he had been pushed violently against the wall, pulled by the hair and grabbed by the neck. He said that he signed the statement prepared for him because of threats of what would happen to him if he refused.

Women Testify.

Two women strikers testified to the fact that the Passaic police habitually called them rough and obscene names. Theresa Standinger claimed that she was made to walk five blocks out of her way every day because certain police would not let her pass where they were stationed. Mrs. Mary Plank said she was pushed and called names repeatedly by the police. Felix Pannieras exhibited a broken arm in a sling which he said had been given to him on the picket line.

Exorbitant Bail.

The important thing to the union is that men have been beaten up and brutally beaten, in the textile strike area. It is not concerned with any factional or political enmity there may be between the different brands of police concerned. Certain atrocious and illegal proceedings have been taken against members of the union now in jail in Hackensack and Paterson and the union wants to get these eleven men held under $430,000 collectiva bail, released.

Evidence of Torture.

The union has evidence all too true that these men have been tortured in efforts to extract false confessions from them. Wives of the prisoners who have been given the third degree have testified to broken teeth, black and blue bodies and swollen faces which they saw when they visited the men in jail. The wife of Tony Pecaro will swear to the fact that her husband told her he was beaten with a lead pipe. Mrs. Alex Kostamacha will tell that her husband's arm is in a sling. Mrs. Joseph Belleme will describe the swollen face she saw when she was allowed to talk with her husband and repeat how he told her that he was beaten black and blue and knocked unconscious.

The union does not have to give out false information. There are too many undeniably brutal facts that are ready to

I. L. D. WARNS OF DANGER IN NEW FRAME-UP

May Attempt Repetition of Mooney Case

The following statement on the police terror and frame-up in the Passaic textile area by the police in an attempt to break the Passaic strike has been issued by the national office of International Labor Defense:

Another Mooney case, on a larger scale, is being prepared in Passaic. Twenty-one of the active strike leaders have been arrested on the obviously spurious charge of having participated in alleged bombing outrages.

The arrested strike leaders are being held under the most prohibitive bail, running as high as one hundred thousand dollars for an individual, in an attempt to keep them in jail and continued torture and to tie up the funds of the union which is conducting the fight.

Last Stand of Bosses.

The most recent frame-up is the last stand of the bosses in the Passaic strike. It is a serious challenge to the entire labor movement, for the heroic struggle of the Passaic workers is a fight for the union which affects all workers in this country. The textile barons are determined to railroad the arrested workers to the penitentiary—and perhaps to death. The kept newspapers of the mill owners are already demanding the courts that they "Give them the limit." The bussards are shrieking for the blood of their victims.

Familier System.

This is the same frame-up that has been attempted in most of the big struggles of the American workers for better condition of life and labor. It is the frame-up system which has kept Tom Mooney and Warren Billings in prison for ten years, which the world knows their innocence, is the system which is even now threatening Sacco and Vanzetti with legal assassination. The fight against this frame-up system is the fight of the working class, regardless of individuals involved.

The International Labor Defense will defend the arrested workers in Passaic on the basis of the class struggle, and calls for co-operation and support in the organization of widespread protest movement in their behalf.

Remember the lessons of the Mooney-Billings and Sacco-Vanzetti case—Organize the protest before the trial.

Support the victims of the Passaic frame-up.

LESS THAN 60,000 A YEAR, REPORT TO DETROIT CONVENTION REVEALS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 4.—The American Federation of Labor meeting in its 46th annual convention here today was faced with a crumbling membership according to figures contained in the report of Secretary Frank Morrison, showing a total membership of 2,813,910 for the year ending August 31, 1926, as compared with 2,877,297 for last year, a drop of more than 60,000.

Secretary Morrison seeks to cover up this drop by declaring that "the membership reported does not include all the members involved in strikes or lockouts, or those who were unemployed during the fiscal year, for whom per capita tax was not received."

Secretary Morrison further declares:

"A survey of the membership of the national and international organizations and the unions directly affiliated with the American Federation of Labor indicates that because of strikes and unemployment there were at least 500,000 members for whom per capita tax was not paid to the American Federation of Labor."

Mine Strikes in Other Years.

Therefore, Morrison confidently points out, "adding this number to the 2,813,910 paid-up members will give a total of 3,313,910 members."

Under the same conditions held true all previous years, especially for the years of industrial depression and of many strikes, for which the same appears in the report on the textile bank, and without any paid-up.

If Secretary Morrison argues correctly, then he would have to add 1,000 to the total figures for each year, which would then inevitably show the drop of more than 60,000 for 1926 just the same.

The Figures Don't Lie.

As a matter of fact, the unions that have conducted the big strikes during the past years have paid their usual per capita tax.

The United Mine Workers of America, that conducted the anthracite coal strike last winter involving 158,000 workers, and that has had numerous strikes on its hands in the bituminous fields, paid per capita on 400,000 members as in 1925. This figure is far above the actual membership of the miners' union, now estimated at not more than a quarter million.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that has had several big strikes during the past year and is even now in a big struggle in New York City, paid per capita for 90,000 members, the same as last year.

Many of the building trades' unions that have been engaged in struggles for higher wages during the past year, like the carpenters, the bricklayers, electrical workers, laborers, machinists, painters, plumbers and others, paid a 1926 per capita equal to or greater than in 1925. In fact, the building trades as a whole showed an increased membership.

Suspend 91,200 Members.

Secretary Morrison might find better reason for the drop in the fact that this year sees the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, with the 91,200 members on original, to pay per capita tax, suspended from the A. F. of L. as a result of the jurisdiction fight of this organization with the Teamsters' Union. The decision of the 1925 convention at Atlantic City went against the clerks in favor of the teamsters, headed by Daniel J. Tobin, who is treasurer of the A. F. of L. The clerks appealed to accept the decision and were thrown out.

The railway clerks belonged to the group of railroad unions that secured a big membership during the war and then lost most of it during the strike of 1922. Most of the unions reporting losses, according to per capita paid to the A. F. of L., are railroad unions such as the boilermakers, railway carmen, maintenance of waymen, stationary firemen, switchmen and railroad telegraphers, none of which has conducted any considerable strikes during the past year.

These railroad organizations, belonging to the railway employes' department of the A. F. of L., showed a membership of 237,500 in 1926, compared to 184,000 for this year, a drop of more than 50,000 members. The drop of members for all the unions affiliated with the railway department is 19,700 from 1924 to 1925. The affiliation of the membership of the American federation for the last 30 years appears in an adjoining column. The American Federation of Labor at the present time is made up of 27 departments, 107 national and international unions, 49 state federations, 823 city central bodies, 769 local department councils, 29,417 local unions and 280 local trade and federal labor unions.

Some "Ideals" and Not Numbers.

The A. F. of L. officialdom is not worried about this dwindling membership.

It worries more about the "ideals" of its reactionary regime, claiming that the record of the past year "reveals with gratifying definiteness that improvement in maintaining successful those ideals and practices that have made it distinctively American and successful in meeting the demands of American industry."

It is claimed that the A. F. of L. "constructive principles" and therefore its policies, "deserve support by a majority of the wage earners of America."

HERE ARE MEMBERSHIP FIGURES OF A. F. OF L. FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS

"public accounting" rather than an accounting to the working class.

$31,438.32 for British Strike.

While the A. F. of L. raised $200,710.67 for the anthracite coal miners' strike, it gathered only $31,438.32 in relief for the British coal miners' strike from July 6 to August 31. The Woodrow Wilson Memorial Building fund ran to $34,574.

Farrington on the Jeb.

Frank Farrington, the suspended president of the Illinois coal miners, having signed a contract to work for the Peabody Coal Co., is also, officially, carried the check of the A. F. of L., totaling $1,800.62 to Geneva, Switzerland, where it will be used to decorate one of the rooms in the International Labor office building, where the official labor wing of the imperialist league of nations is housed. It is stated that Farrington is bringing back the receipt. Since then Farrington failed to appear as a delegate to the British Trade Union Congress, which was the job given him by the last A. F. of L. convention.

A. F. of L.'s Road to Power.

The executive council recommends that efforts be directed toward making the grant of corporate power of capital dependent upon freedom of like power of organization upon the part both of the workers as well as the consuming public, "thus re-establishing a fair degree of freedom of play to all economic, industrial and social factors and elements in industry."

It calls for further investigation of the "provision in employment contracts against joining a trade union as being contrary to public policy and therefore unenforceable at law."

It claims that attempts to establish compulsory arbitration have practically ceased and hails the Watson-Parker bill as a victory for collective agreements. Its optimistic declaration over the passage of the Watson-Parker bill is as follows:

Hail Watson-Parker Bill.

"Thus to all practical intents and purposes the long, trying, as well as bitter campaign of the trade union organizations and the American Federation of Labor for the right to collective bargaining and freedom from domination of the state in the form of compulsory arbitration or thru industrial courts has come to a successful ending. Again organized labor in America has vindicated its course and demonstrated the wisdom of its judgment. In addition, it has rendered a great public service and has blazoned the way for more constructive policies and helpful procedures both to industry as well as the general public good."

It was practically the same executive council that wrote the above paragraph that years ago hailed, in similar terms, the Clayton act that was to wipe out the Sherman anti-trust law in its application to labor. Of a matter of fact, the Watson-Parker bill

PORTERS URGED TO FIGHT FOR THEIR RIGHTS

Nothing Can Be Won by Crawling Policy

A meeting of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters was held at Pilgrim Baptist Church, 32nd Street and Indiana Ave., at three p. m. Sunday afternoon.

Obligation to Porters.

Miss Mary McDowell, welfare and social worker, stated as her experience traveling for many years in Pullman cars that she felt under obligation to Pullman car porters who have been in charge of the cars where one has been to get rest when he goes on a long journey. She emphasized the necessity of organization, and stated that in view of the fact that the Negroes as a whole had made progress in all lines of endeavor, it is assured that with the proper leadership they could succeed in organizing for their economic welfare, by far the most important work of life.

A. Philip Randolph, general organizer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, was introduced by Chairman Webster as a new type of Negro leadership with efficiency, intelligence, loyalty and honesty in which the Negro race was sadly in need.

Early Struggles of Porters.

He opened up by analyzing a recent statement in Baron's Weekly, under the title of "Pullmen Porter, the Benefits of His Racial Monopoly." His logical analysis literally tore this article to pieces and it was made the laughing stock of the whole meeting. He also talked briefly on the early struggles of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, stating that the labor organizations generally passed thru three stages, the stage that they are ignored, the stage that they are opposed and the stage that they are accepted and recognized, and that the brotherhood had passed thru the first stage and was now leaving the second stage and about to get to the point where they would force the Pullman Company to recognize them.

He also stated that the organization had been able to secure the endorsement of the N. A. A. C. P., the National Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, a number of baptist churches, and the leaders of the Urban League in fact, they had reached the stage now where they receive the support of almost the entire Negro race and one-half cents per pound stuffing dates. At this rate, an extra speed's work might be able to make $2.50 a day by working nine hours without a let-up.

The average amount earned by the workers was $14 a week. But the Marsa company desired to cut their earnings even still more and issued Friday's notice. Other workers at the factory have even lower scales.

Hold Meeting.

From the factory premises the workers went to 20 North Wells St., where a strikers' demonstration meeting was held. The trade union committee of the American Negro Labor Congress offered its assistance and helped organize a relief committee that will work with the I. W. A.

A delegation was sent to headquarters of the Chicago Federation of Labor to ask for unionization. No action had been taken by the federation up to Monday night. A temporary union organization, however, has been begun. Headquarters are at 30 North Wells street.

SCAB TAXI DRIVER IN HARD LUCK; MUST PAY BAUER FOR LOST GAS

It is reported that Henry Bruening, a taxi driver working on the Bauer taxi company's cabs, whose chauffeurs are on strike against a new rule of the company compelling them to pay five cents a gallon for gasoline used while on duty, had fallen upon bad luck while operating on the south side.

Bruening appeared in a police station with an Almes Semple McPherson story of being "kidnapped." His cab, or rather the company cab he was driving was found in ashes at 56th and Normal avenue. The renter was saved. It showed 80 cents. The scab will be expected to pay for the 10 gallons of gas which, like the "kidnapper," had escaped.

DETROIT OPEN SHOPPERS ISSUE CHALLENGE TO AMERICAN LABOR FEDERATION; NO UNIONS WANTED

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 4.—One of the most violent blasts ever let loose by the "open shop" press against the American labor movement was delivered full force this afternoon by the Detroit Free Press against the 46th Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that assembled here today.

The A. F. of L. delegates were told that Detroit is second only to Los Angeles, "The Unfair," in the general use of the so-called "American Plan" or non-union plan in industry.

"Friends Of Auto Industry!"

The A. F. of L. delegates are told not to attempt to tamper with this "American Plan" thru efforts to organize any workers in Detroit during the stay of the convention here. They are especially warned to keep their hands off the auto industry.

In the whole history of the American Federation of Labor, it is doubtful if any convention has ever received such a hostile greeting from the local employers' press. The labor delegates are told that to organize Detroit's workers is a "destructive" proceeding. They are told to "preserve their strength for employment in places where there is real constructive work for them to do."

A Flat Challenge.

The editorial greeting under the heading "As the A. F. of L. Convenes Detroit" does not say where this place is to be found.

On the eve of the publication of this editorial the delegates to the Building Trades Department had pledged themselves to do all in their power to strengthen various crafts during their stay in the city. The delegates met with the local building trades council, and even Robert Dissman, the fraternal delegate from Germany to the Metal Trades Department, met with and spoke before a mass meeting of German-speaking machinists in an effort to strengthen their organization.

The question of the organization of the auto industry has also been referred by the Metal Trades Department to the A. F. of L. convention and will no doubt receive some consideration.

Evidently no matter how slight the consideration may be, it will not be pleasing to the local open shop interests and their subsidized press.

Boosts of Open Shops.

The Detroit Free Press editorial, after pointing out what it claims to be "the modern character of the factories, the liberality of the wage scales and the general condition of prosperity among both employes and employers and the harmony of their relationships," declares to the A. F of L. delegates that "the remarkable situation which awaits their examination has developed under the American open shop plan which, except for Los Angeles, perhaps, is nowhere more generally in use than it is in this city."

The Detroit Free Press then issues its challenge to the convention in these words:

Challenges Convention.

"Nothing that can possibly benefit anybody will be accomplished by any tampering upon the American plan in Detroit. We say this because there is a prevalent rumor that the heads of the American Federation are considering such an attack in the form of an organizing drive in this town.

"If those officials undertake to feature the convention of their organization in this city by attempting to tamper with industrial arrangements that are satisfactory and beneficial to all concerned and are a basis for the present state of general comfort among the people of Detroit, they will be starting a destructive movement which will be an assault upon the community in which they are guests. If it is even partly successful, it will bring to Detroit, as well as its business, particularly the automobile business," it will seriously injure labor. It will be an act of general unfriendliness to the city.

Hope A. F. of L. Heads Understand.

"It is to be hoped that the heads of the A. F. of L., generally level-headed men, have abroad enough vision to realize this, and will withstand any temptation to attempt a move for the mere advancement of the size of their organization, and will reserve their strength for employment in places where there is real constructive work for them to do."

The so-called "American plan" is attacked in practically every report made to the delegates here, whether in the reports submitted by the heads of the various departments and especially in the annual report of the A. F. of L.'s executive council. Labor's open hostility to the "American plan" seems to have gotten under the skins of the local "open shop" interests. They do not relish labor leaders coming among them, even when they camouflage themselves as bankers, insurance and real estate men, which are in the main duties assumed by the officialdom of labor, in the words of President James, O'Connell of the Metal Trades Department.

Upon his arrival in the city for the opening of the convention, President William Green, of the A. F. of L., discussed by going length his views on the so-called five-day week instituted at the plant of the Ford Motor company. He said:

"The Ford plan should not be regarded as a distinct innovation. The short work-week has for some time been in certain branches of the printing trades, the building trades and metropolitan department stores in the summer season.

Says Policy Elastic.

"It inevitably will be adopted by virtually all industries, because the high-pressure grind of modern industry is such as to induce physical degeneration of the workers if they do not have some hour-shortening relief.

"Let me put it this way. The policy of the American Federation of Labor is sufficiently elastic to meet any and all developments in American industry. We believe our record proves this especially as it covers wages and working hours.

But Steel Trust is Open Shop, Too

"Our policy has been a progressive one, adequate to the needs of progressive developments. These developments have been gradual, in support of this statement, I need only cite the action, about a year ago, of the United States Steel corporation in granting the eight-hour day. This acquiescence on the part of the steel company marked the culmination of a movement the A. F. of L. had had under way for 25 years.

"Call it foresight, if you like—we have seen this thing coming and our policy has been accurately in line with what we felt must come to pass. We have consistently maintained that hours must be reduced in direct proportion to increased productivity in industry.

Increased Productivity.

"Productivity has increased in unbelievable bounds. In the past 15 years, production in the automobile industry, with which, of course, Detroit is chiefly concerned, has increased from 25 to 40 per cent. Some estimates are as high as 100 per cent.

"We do not, of course, want shorter hours at the expense of wages. But we know that this need not be, that production increases with the shorter week.

Five-Day Week.

"The five-day week seems inevitable because of the strain under which workers are placed in modern industry. There is the incessant roar that wears men out and causes physical degeneration. If men are to work under such nerve-racking conditions their hours must conform to the tax put upon them. This is to the direct advantage of the employers. If men are driven from the job, it means large labor turnover and labor turnover costs the employer big money.

Industries Ready.

"I believe that several industries are now ready for the five-day week, especially the automobile industry as a whole, the mining industry, the garment making industry and the building trades.

"The short week is one of the demands of the striking garment workers at Passaic, N. J."

FLOOD WATERS IN OKLAHOMA NOW RECEDING

1,500 Driven from Their Homes

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 4.— The flood waters, which swirled into northern Oklahoma, sending hundreds of families and reading frantically to the highlands, and threatening Bartlesville and nearby cities with immeasurable damage, were beginning to abate in their intensity this afternoon.

Latest reports reaching here from the cities in the path of the swollen streams, indicated that in many places the crests of the rivers and creeks had been reached and the refugees were beginning to breathe easier.

1,500 Homeless.

The rampaging Caney river has driven 1,500 residents of Bartlesville from their homes by climbing to the highest stage it has reached in 18 years.

Western Oklahoma streams were rising today. Blackwell, and other towns in northwestern Oklahoma, feared heavy damage from rising creeks and small rivers. At Oklahoma City it was feared a recurrence of several recent years would send the Canadian river rampaging tomorrow, when flood waters from the northwest reach the main meander.

mainly fall because it cannot serve the needs of the workers."

Green then declared that the organized labor movement thru many years had fought for child and woman workers and for remedial legislation for all labor. "The organizations that cannot protect the economic welfare of the workers cannot live in America," said Green, claiming that the company union could not do this.

Five-Day Week.

"The American Federation of Labor is committed to a program and organized for a purpose, the economic, social, political, and cultural welfare of the working class."

Green then turned to Ford's five-day week, declaring that organized labor had always fought for the short or work-day and the shorter workweek.

"We welcome the efforts of any employer who accepts the shorter workweek," he declared.

403 Delegates.

On the first report of the credentials committee 403 delegates were seated. They represented 31 national and international unions, four departments, 28 state federations, 72 central labor bodies, 16 local and federal labor organizations and seven fraternal delegates. Fraternal delegates are here only from Great Britain, Canada and Mexico.

The local labor officials on the day's program all stressed the declaration voiced by Martel that the delegates weld hear "the complain and howl of those who oppose the labor movement." They claimed, however that this was not an expression of opinion by the people of Detroit, but in spite of the small minority that believed that the labor movement can be broken up.

President Wade was the only speaker mentioning the Detroit Free Press by name calling forth the laughter of the delegates. "Detroit is a wonderful city," said Wade, "not because of the open shop movement, but in spite of it." The convention heard the report of the executive council and then went for an automobile sight-seeing tour of the city.

MR. H. L. MENCKEN is getting funnier every week and, in his weekly epistle to the Chicago Tribune, he strikes at many objects and subjects and does his hitting strikingly. Hank is easy to read, tho when he dabbles in politics he is as much at home as Calvin Coolidge discussing organic evolution. Mencken's latest discovery is that Bolshevism is a colossal failure and that democracy is as rare in America as grand dukes in Russia. He holds up the Soviet Union as a horrible example of the failure of socialism and he does it in a manner to bring joy to the hearts of the babbitry which he swats so delightfully on occasion.

THE Russian workers and peasants that Hank thinks are much worse off under the Soviet regime than they were under the czar would undoubtedly be interested in the information. There is all the difference in the world between the enslaved subjects of the czar and the free citizens of a workers' and peasants' government. In material things their condition is also better and improving yearly. If the Soviet government had done nothing else but wage war on illiteracy it should deserve the gratitude of such a literary shark as Mencken. It is tough on a smart fellow like Mencken when he has nothing left in his intellectual armor to exchange for a few except cheap jeery slang and jibes at the working class. We suppose he must give the babbitry a rest occasionally.

...EAL WILL WAR EXPENSE TO FIGHT RUSSIES

Soup Kitchens, Bolster South Wales Trenches

By BILL ROSS, Federated Press.

MERTHYR, Wales.—(FP)—"Soup kitchens help us hold the battle lines in Merthyr district," the miners' local secretary explained in casual fashion with the owners' fight against the United Front. "We operate 16 kitchens, feeding an average of 1,500 men a day, at about 4c per meal. Maybe the vessel with me and taste one of our meals," he suggested.

There was much to remind one of wartime rationing. World war veterans are using their army experience in rationing food from a central depot and cooking the food on improvised field stoves outside the mess halls. Everyone entitled to the meal presents a ticket and brings his own plate and fork. Boiled beef, potatoes and bread was the fare for the day, all well prepared.

Fear Dwindling Collections

"We can hold out as long as we can keep the kitchens going," the secretary said. "Collections are getting smaller because of the widespread unemployment. A lot depends on how your people in America respond."

The man in charge of kitchens testified that those who were top proud to come for meals before a plate was given to them. Asked how long the miners can stick it out, a miner's wife replied: "I can say for the woman around here that we are ready to stick it out forever. When the men were voting on the strike proposals I told my husband to vote against them. I told him to vote against anything which means worse conditions than before. If we are to submit to starvation we might as well do it without working for the coal owners."

Merthyr Is Militant Center

Talking about the solidarity of the workers in the district, the president of the central labor body referred with pride to the history of the local movement. "Merthyr was one of the centers of Chartist agitation and was in the forefront of trade union organization," he said. "Back in the 70's we ran a parliamentary candidate on a labor ticket. Keir Hardie, the father of the Independent Labor party, made his great fights here.

"Our enemies accuse us of being irreligious. For a long time our people worried too much about the hereafter and hardly enough about the present. It is the reverse now and we are the better for it. Men we never dreamt would come out joined in the general strike. And we will do it again."

Speaking about the prospects of American dollars, he said: "Don't think that we are only interested in American dollars. We are also interested in the American movement. Come down to our meeting tomorrow and tell us about it. You will get a hearty welcome."

Monroe Doctrine for Canada Gets Retort from British Noble

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 4.—Lord Darling of Langham, British privy councilor at a luncheon here, took a shot at the Chicago Tribune's baldly imperialist urge to Canada that it look to the United States for protection under the Monroe Doctrine. British imperialism has ideas of its own on this matter.

"The Tribune evidently thinks Canada is in a parlous condition," said the lord. "England might not be able to defend you—I don't know from whom. Some time ago there was a disarmament conference at Washington. A motion was carried unanimously that ships of the British navy should henceforth be built smaller. They call those ships the 'cherry tree type.' I asked a sailor why, and he said, 'They were cut down by Washington.'

"The Tribune said that Canada could defend its territorial integrity under the Monroe Doctrine.

"I was not aware that the Monroe Doctrine covered Canada. So I would advise you Canadians to protect yourselves and not to say when we are in trouble, that you will invoke the Monroe Doctrine."

CANADA WANTS FREEDOM FROM BRITISH FOR ITS MINISTER TO THE U. S.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 4. — When Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King and British government officials meet at the London imperial conference, it is announced that one of the important subjects for discussion will be "the relationship of Canada's minister at Washington to the British ambassador, Canada intends to retain for itself freedom of action on Canadian affairs.

Vincent Massey, who will be Canada's first minister to the United States capital, will go to the London conference, in which the subject pertaining to their dealings with representatives at Washington will be discussed and Canada's diplomatic status within the empire clarified.

General Condylis, the new dictator of Greece who got there by ousting another dictator, Pangalos, is now having more trouble with another set of capitalist politicians and officers, moving partly as a result of the influence of several western powers, who want to get rid of him. Above is shown the headquarters of the first army corps in Athens at a moment when troops were expecting trouble from the new "revolutionary" party.

HANDS OFF CHINA! NO WAR UPON SOVIET UNION! APPEAL TO LABOR

APPEAL OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

To the Workers of All Countries:

THE development of the struggle of the Chinese people against its imperialist oppressors and against their Chinese agents is proceeding with giant strides. The advance of the army of the Canton government which represents the democratic anti-imperialist interests of the workers, peasants, intellectuals and merchants of the southern provinces, has dealt the Chinese militarists and their supporters, the imperialist powers, a heavy blow.

The enemies of the freedom of the Chinese people are well aware of the far-reaching significance of the defeat with which they are threatened and they are therefore preparing a great counter-attack.

THE danger of a new armed intervention on the part of the imperialist powers is very acute. The British press is already conducting an energetic campaign to this end. Negotiations are already taking place in Tokyo between British agents and the Japanese government with a view to unifying the intervention action.

The other great powers will attempt to secure their share of the spoils in good time. The British armed forces have already been in action on the Yangste and in Canton. Reinforcements are on the way. The complete intervention is perhaps only a question of days.

IN Manchuria, Tchang Tso Lin, whose military power has not yet been weakened, has violated all agreements and has undertaken a hostile act against the Soviet Union by confiscating a part of the North Chinese railway which belongs, after the Soviet Union had surrendered all privileges, jointly to the Soviet Union and to the East Chinese government.

This act is a direct provocation. It is only aim can be to involve the Soviet Union in hostilities. Without a doubt, British imperialism is behind this action of Tchang.

THE plan of intervention which has been worked out under the leadership of Great Britain is directed therefore not only against the Chinese people, but also against the Soviet Union.

The intrigues of Great Britain in the far east are in a line with her measures to surround the Soviet Union from the west and from the south.

THE Communist International draws the attention of the revolutionary workers and peasants of all countries to the great danger which is threatening the cause of the emancipation of the world from capitalism thru the latest machinations of the great powers.

An armed intervention against the Chinese people and a new war against the Soviet Union would bring immeasurable suffering upon the whole world.

THE workers and peasants of the capitalist countries have shown more than once that they are not willing to permit the imperialist powers to attack the Chinese people fighting for its freedom, nor the Soviet Union of the workers and peasants.

The Communist International appeals to the workers and peasants and the sympathizing elements of all countries who are interested in the struggle for freedom of the Chinese people and in the work of socialist reconstruction in the Soviet Union, to prevent the imperialist bandits carrying out their plans for intervention.

Long live the struggle of the Chinese people for freedom!

Long live the free and peaceful work of socialist reconstruction in the workers' and peasants' state!

Hands off China! Hands off the Soviet Union!

Move for Republic in Spain to Oust Rivera Dictatorship and King

MADRID, Oct. 4. — Within half a mile of the office of the secretary of war of the Spanish monarchy, leaders of the Liberal and Conservative parties, together with leaders of the extinct parliament outlawed by dictator Primo de Rivera, have met and planned a republican movement as a last resort measure against the dictator's plan to call a fake assembly of hand-picked members.

The opposition has called on all de Rivera's selected members to boycott the assembly. They now plan to send a strong delegation to Geneva to inform the League of Nations that the assembly is a fake and is unconstitutional.

Should the league pay no heed (and the league has never shown any disinate for dictatorships so long as they are reactionary), the opposition intends to declare a republic. This is hearty certain to end in civil war between the two forces and the ousting of Primo de Rivera from dictatorship and King Alfonso from the throne.

Rumors of New Spanish Outbreak Continue to Come

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, France, Oct. 4.—Conflicting reports of peace and quite have reached here in regard to conditions in Spain.

The Spanish border has been placed under close guard, it is reported, in anticipation of new outbreaks against Premier de Rivera, but passengers arriving in France from Spain report that all is quite.

Rumors of a new revolt, however, continue to pour in.

RUSSIAN WHITES TURN BANDITS; DRAG SOVIET WORKERS OFF TRAINS

PEKING.—(FP)—White Russian soldiers employed by the Shantung reactionary forces have dragged from a train at Tsinan two Russian notables whom they hold under horrible conditions and refuse to release, says a Tass news agency dispatch. Prof. Pozdneyay of the Lanjngred university is one victim. He formerly was manager in Peking for Russo-Asiatic Bank and went through the Boxer siege. Marakuyev, commercial agent of the Soviet trade mission at Tientsin, is the other.

The white Russian mercenaries employed by Chang Tso-lin are paid in cash, in drink and in the loot of towns. The demands of the Peking foreign-office that they give up the two Russian prisoners are ignored.

Stresemann Bids for Help from United States

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—Foreign Minister Stresemann's speech at the Cologne convention of the People's Party, in which he pleaded with the United States for aid in making the Franco-German accord, reached between Briand and himself at Thoiry a success, is construed here as an attempt to line the United States up on the side of the Franco-German continental bloc against the British-Italian bloc.

A complete new line-up has now taken place on the continent. The fact that all the leading statesmen of the various countries are giving tongue to their alleged joy over the developments only proves that both combinations are watching each other closely and with suspicion.

Portuguese Labor in Bad Way; Unions Weak

LISBON, Oct. 4.—(FP)— Military dictatorship following the latest revolutions in Portugal has left the organized labor movement in a bad way. Wages are very low, even where the labor syndicates are competitively strong. The syndicalist movement numbers only 30,000 members as compared with 700,000 unorganized workers. The working day is 10 to 12 hours. Sixty to 70 percent of the wage-earners are illiterate. Strikes have been successful only among small groups. The standard wage of 40 to 60 cents a day is not generally protested, and indifference to economic action is equalled by political apathy.

The report declares the church to be a large factor in the attitude of the masses which has made industrial progress difficult.

Mussolini Charged with Robbery of German Embassy

BERLIN, Oct. 4. — Mussolini ordered the sensational robbery of the German embassy at Rome several months ago, according to a dispatch to the Vorwaerts, which gives Ambassador von Neurath as authority.

The robbery was committed, it is alleged, to obtain important documents in the embassy safe which were wanted by "Il Duce."

Von Neurath obtained confessions from the thieves, it is alleged, who claimed they were acting on orders from the Italian foreign department.

...ISTAN RISES FOR ... THREAT AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

MEXICO CITY, October 4.—The catholic church has again assumed a threatening attitude towards the government in an open letter the episcopate body at Guadalajara unless their demands are acceded to.

The church is bitterly disappointed over its failure to secure any assistance from congress and it is believed the ousting of finance minister Pani from Calles' cabinet has increased clerical chagrin.

NICARAGUAN GOVERNMENT VIOLATES TRUCE; BREAK IN PEACE PARLEY LOOMS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 4. — Peace negotiations between the Nicaraguan government and revolutionists aboard the United States cruiser Tulsa are on the point of breaking up, according to revolutionist sympathizers here.

The revolutionary delegates are understood to have accused the Nicaraguan government of violating the truce regarding the importation of arms and war materials, clearly expecting an unfavorable result from the conferences, and preparing for a resumption of the conflict.

Italian Public Has No Confidence in Fascist Finances

ROME—(FP)—The commercial attache at the American embassy has cabled Washington that there is considerable anxiety in business circles due to the decline in security prices which began when Mussolini's government announced its measures to strengthen the lira. Further uneasiness has been caused by the curtailment of credit by the Bank of Italy. He reports that "public confidence in the situation is impaired, despite the reassurances of the finance minister and the continuance of activity in the major industries."

ALASKA AS ENTRY FOR ASIATICS TO AMERICA IS SETTLED QUESTION

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka.

Reporting on his researches of the summer in Alaska, Dr. Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, says there can no longer be any doubt that Asiatics migrated to the American continent by way of the Alaskan Peninsula and formed the basis for the American Indian tribes.

Here We Have It

The DIFFERENCE in reports between the Annalist, organ of the American bankers and manufacturers, and the Daily Herald, organ of the British workers, is clear.

This is not an isolated incident.

Such unvarnished lies and misrepresentations are regular daily occurrences too many to be counted or even mentioned. Such frauds are the very foundation of the whole capitalist propaganda machinery. This is the way the press owned by the capitalist class misleads the workers to defeat.

The New York Times Annalist tries to make the American workers believe that their British brothers look upon Sir William Joynson-Hicks as their friend and savior and Comrade Tomsky as their arch enemy.

The Daily Herald tells the workers the truth about the infamous behavior of the strikebreaker "Jix". The Daily Herald gives the real stand of the Trade Union Congress towards Comrade Tomsky.

The Daily Worker, in the United States, is the organ of the working men and working women. It is The DAILY WORKER that gives the facts and tells the truth about the British Trade Union Congress and all other events and activities of the workingclass.

Those whom the Annalist and all the other bourgeois papers call friends of the workers, are our worst enemies. Page: Sir Joynson-Hicks.

Those whom the exploiters call our enemies, are our best friends. Meet: Comrade Tomsky.

SUNDAY WORKER

Make it a weekly habit.
ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

ONE MILLION COPIES OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY PROGRAMS.

These few weeks before the elections are just the time when the large masses of the American workers and poor farmers become interested in public questions. They are always talked about and form opinions on matters of "politics." The more politically conscious workers eagerly discuss the "issues" presented to them in the press and get quite excited over the "elections" while even the most backward sections of the working class are somewhat affected by the general atmosphere of "politics."

This is one of the main reasons why the Workers (Communist) Party engages in election campaigns and approaches the workers on the basis of the elections. The general interest of the masses allows an easier approach for our political ideas and our program. It therefore becomes very important for us to make the most of every opportunity that election time offers us.

How do we lay our program and our ideas before the workers? First, of course, we arrange mass meetings in every city and town where we possibly can and this we have already done in scores of places in this country. Secondly, we place our entire press at the disposal of the campaign and in this way reach thousands of workers who do not come to our meetings.

But both of these methods have their limitations, obviously. The workers who know nothing about us, who have never heard of the Communists, do not, generally, attend our meetings or read our press. Yet if we could get our program into the hands of these workers, especially around election times, they would be interested in it and in many cases read it attentively.

In order to reach the widest possible circles of workers the party has published its in leaflet form—four pages. This gives in simple and easily understood, terms the party's stand on the most important national issues of the day—on taxation and the tariff, on farm relief, on anti-labor and foreign-born legislation, on Negro equality, on child labor, on the condition of the working women, on militarism, unemployment, prohibition and a number of others.

This leaflet should be distributed far and wide.

One Million Copies Must Be Distributed!

This CAN be done and it MUST be done. Every party member can do his bit. Comrades in the shops and factories can distribute the leaflet among their fellow workers, individually or thru their shop nucleus. Trade union fractions and fractions in other workers' organizations must see that their fellow members get a copy of our election program. Street nuclei can arrange street and house-to-house distributions. And EVERY COMRADE can see that his fellow workers, his friends, his acquaintances get our leaflet.

WHY I AM A COMMUNIST

By ANNA LEVE

I am a member of the Workers (Communist) Party because this is the only political party that represents the interests of the workers. The Workers (Communist) Party is the only political party that demands its members to belong and actively participate in the daily struggles of the labor unions; it helps organize the unorganized, to bring about a change in the form of the existing union, so that workers will be in a better position to fight for their needs. In the political field, the W. P. works for a united front with all workers and farmers thru their different organizations against the capitalist parties.

Thru its activities on the political and economic fields the Workers Party aims to gain power for those who toil and produce all wealth instead of the present system whereby a greedy few own and control not only all wealth but the very lives of the workers.

Under capitalism the workers are exploited in mines, mills and factories. When they try to improve their conditions by organizing or striking, the capitalist courts are there to issue injunctions against the workers; the capitalist militia is always ready to serve its masters by shooting down defenseless strikers; the capitalist press and church mould public opinion against organized labor.

With all these facts in view, it is the duty of every worker to join the Workers (Communist) Party and a trade union. Then we will be in a position to lead the workers in their fight for a better standard of living and for the abolition of the enslaving capitalist system.

DECREE BRANDS TEAPOT DOME DEAL CROOKED

Fall Received Graft from Sinclair

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 4.—The Teapot Dome controversy again has steamed into view, with the government to-day holding the latest victory in a long career of court procedure.

Declaring "the entire transaction is tainted with favoritism, collusion and corruption, defeating the proper and lawful functions of the government," the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here yesterday ordered cancelled the lease on naval oil reserve lands in Wyoming, held by the Mammoth Oil company. The decision was based on the grounds that the lease was fraudulently obtained by Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, from Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior.

The decision, which reversed and remanded a decision of Judge T. Blake Kennady in the District court at Cheyenne, Wyo., in June, 1925, further instructs the lower court to enjoin the Mammoth company from trespassing on government lands and to ask the company for an accounting of all oil and petroleum products taken from the reserve during the tenure of the lease.

The opinion, received here from Presiding Judge William S. Kenyon of Fort Dodge, Iowa, says that "a trail of deceit, falsehood, subterfuge, bad faith and corruption, at times indistinct, but nevertheless discernible, runs through the transactions incident to and surrounding the making of this lease," the opinion of the federal Appeals court takes up in detail the steps leading to the setting aside of the Wyoming land for naval oil reserve and the transactions connected with its leasing by Fall to Sinclair.

"It has been the theory of the government that Former Secretary Fall received from Harry F. Sinclair, organizer and owner of the Mammoth company, a pecuniary consideration which influenced him to grant the company a lease for Teapot Dome."

"That Secretary Fall, as to this matter, dominated Secretary Denby, Admiral Robison and other government officials and practically controlled the action of the navy department as to the leasing of Teapot Dome is a conclusion difficult to escape under this record."

The latter part of the document is devoted to a consideration of the transfer of $25,000 in Liberty bonds from Sinclair to Fall soon after Fall had retired from office in May, 1923, and contains the statement that the transaction "reveals an intimate relationship between Secretary Fall and Sinclair."

Former Jersey Trooper Claims He Got Money to Drop Murder Quiz

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Oct. 4.—Sensational revelations appeared imminent in the Hall-Mills case today as the result of statements made by Henry L. Dickman, former New Jersey state trooper and one of the investigators of the murder mystery in 1923.

Signed Affidavit.

Dickman, according to special prosecutor, Alexander Simpson, has signed an affidavit for the state in which he admits he was paid a large amount of money and told to leave New Jersey.

Dickman brought several new names into the case, some of them involved in the alleged bribe. Simpson revealed, and named two others as eyewitnesses of the murder of the Rev. Edward Hill and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

Feared Going Crazy.

Dickmen is reported to have said he feared becoming insane if he did not "come across" and aid the prosecution.

Immunity from prosecution has been promised Dickman by Senator Simpson. Dickman was reported as greatly relieved at having unburdened himself.

Revolvers Included in Scab's Clothing at Pontiac Factory

PONTIAC, Mich., Oct. 4.—(FP)—Openshop principles are enforced at the point of a pistol in Pontiac, a growing automobile center in Michigan. Over 100 nonunion pattersmakers have guns strapped to their belts as they go to their work in a strike-bound plant.

Barbers and printers are over 85% organized in Pontiac but the other trades are weak. Building trades have little organization, the auto trades have almost none and the streetcar men are also unorganized.

WITH THE WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKER LEAGUE

Russian Youth Has Rosenwald Scared

Mr. William Rosenwald, son of Julius Rosenwald, who is known as "the maker of prostitutes" because of the low wages paid his young girl employes in his Chicago mail order house, reports from Berlin that terrorism still exists in the Soviet Union. Being part of the Sherwood Eddy mission there, he states that he remained behind to get the real goods.

After sniffing high and low he finally made his brilliant discoveries. First that the Soviet Union has political police (something that was never known before). Second that there is very little individual freedom for capitalist-exploiters like himself and family—holy horrors!—a new generation is growing up in Russia which is thoroughly Bolshevized.

This last fact was mainly responsible for the terrorized condition of Mr. Rosenwald. The fact that a new type of humanity, which is consciously ushering in a better system in society, is growing up in the Soviet Union thoroughly scared this youth exploiter, or in his own words—"if Bolshevism remains firm another few years this generation will come into power and nothing will shake the dictatorship."

A. A. U. Behind Deportation of Norway Athlete

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—From indications here it seems that the Amateur Athletic Union is lining up with the other haters of the foreign-born in this country. A suit for $100,000 damages has been filed here against the athletic body by Charles Hoff, Norwegian pole vaulter. He charges that the Amateur Athletic Union has influenced immigration authorities to ship him from this country. The large sum involved in the suit also throws light on the commercialized character of capitalist amateur sports.

MORE THAN ONE ANGLE TO RAISE IN EFFICIENCY OF PRODUCTION, SAYS ANALYST OF U. S. INDUSTRY

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

How soon will the excess capital produced in America today swamp the worker? Labor might ask the capitalists who are boasting about the enormous increase in the productivity of industry. Or the answer hangs the future of employment.

U. S. department of commerce figures show factory production in 1925 about 75 per cent above 1914. But the number of factory workers in the same period increased only 13.5 per cent. This means that in 1925 the average factory worker produced 54 per cent more in quantity than the average factory worker produced in 1914. Average Productivity Up 49 Per Cent.

The greater part of this extraordinary increase in productivity is due to labor-saving machinery and speeding up methods since the war. 1926 factory production exceeded 1919 by 26 per cent. But the number of wage earners responsible for 1925 production was 16 per cent below 1919. Here is an increase of 49 per cent in the productivity of the average worker.

"The great saving in the amount of human energy necessary to turn out a given quantity of manufacturing products which has made itself felt particularly during the last few years" says the National Industrial Conference board, leading employer statistical body, "bids fair to be the most significant industrial-economic development of the 20th century. So pronounced has been the change in the relationship between labor and production that it heralds far-reaching betterment not only in our economic affairs, but affords a foundation for wide social and cultural advance as well."

This assumes that there has been a parallel increase in the purchasing power of wages to absorb the increased supply of goods. But an analysis of the same phenomene by Editor Benjamin Baker of The Annalist suggests that this increasing productivity is interfering with overdevelopment in industry. He says:

Efficiency Lowers Cost.

"The new situation into which business has apparently progressed is the product of abundance of capital and of a new and almost phenomenal efficiency in most parts of our manufacturing plants. This combination, involving even the operation of machinery at much higher speeds than was customary even a few years ago, has resulted in decreasing unit costs of production and hence of making possible the sharp price competition, which has been a matter of comment."

Result Over-Equipment.

"To express the situation in a slightly different way," Baker continues, "this country has an exceedingly ample equipment of manufacturing plant even when that plant is rated at the efficiency of three or four years ago. Its efficiency level, in rising decidedly since that time, has for practical purposes increased the proportions of our over-equipment; and it is enabled to continue for the present by the superabundance of capital. This is the general mechanism by which manufacturing competition has now been sharpened to an unprecedented pitch of severity. The competition must go on, for failure to compete will mean a rapid destruction of capital; necessarily failure to succeed in the competition will also mean loss of capital, and loss of this character is certain to occur on a pretty considerable scale because our production is obviously greater than our power to absorb it.

Reduced The Limit.

"It seems probable that in many lines of consumers' goods, as well as in building, the forcing of credit facilities into the hands of consumers and buyers may have reached pretty nearly its maximum effect in stimulating consumption. The reckoning in terms of competition elimination may well progress rather moderately. It seems certain to progress at an increasing speed and to mark generally the character of business in the next year or so."

Such loss of capital as Baker forecasts will mean at least temporary loss of employment and pressure to force the losses on labor thru wage cuts.

Nothing will be simply, graphically and vividly explain the big strike and its lessons to the working class as will this gripping motion picture of strike events snapped as they occurred.

Strikers Shown in Action.

In this picture, the Passaic textile strikers are shown in action, facing with magnificent courage and superb fortitude the brutal attacks of the mill-barons, braving police clubs and shot guns, fire hose in zero weather, gas bombs, and withstanding the starvation offensives and strike-breaking attempts of the bosses and their tools. The huge mass meetings of strikers are shown, with the strike leaders and outside speakers addressing the strikers. Relief activities are depicted, such as food stores, the picket line lunch counters, the Victory Playground for the strikers' children.

Prologue.

The picture has an interesting prologue, acted by the strikers themselves, dramatizing the life of every worker who, hoping to secure by the sweat of his brow some of the good things of life, finds that the exploiting bosses are more than willing to extract even the last drop of blood in order that their 76 per cent profits be maintained.

The proceeds raised by the showing of this picture will go to strike relief. All labor bodies are asked to co-operate in making the showing in Chicago successful.

CATHOLICS GET PHILADELPHIA BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL TO ATTACK MEXICAN LABOR UNIONS

ARTICLE IV.

(By a Special Correspondent)

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 4.—That Peter Collins, who, according to prominent figures in the American Federation of Labor, is directing the fight for the catholic church within the A. F. of L. is making headway in bringing about a rupture of the amicable relations existing between the A. F. of L. and the Mexican Federation of Labor (C. R. O.-M.), is given additional proof in the resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the Associated Building Trades Councils of Philadelphia.

A Philadelphia news dispatch, published in various catholic papers, reads in part:

• • • • •

Building Trades Council Acts.

"PHILADELPHIA — Organized workers to the number of 150,000, members of the Associated Building Trades Councils of Philadelphia at a meeting denounced in smashing terms the support given by the Mexican Federation of Labor to President Calles in his campaign against religion and human rights.

"These workers, in a resolution adopted, said that they spoke 'as American citizens and members of the great Federation of Labor.'

Demands C. R. O. M. Break with Calles.

"The resolution further urges President Green of the American Federation, 'to use the power of his office and the facilities for publicity at his disposal' to expose and denounce the brutal, un-American and tyrannical character of the Mexican government' and to appeal to the Mexican federation's membership to 'assert their manhood' by withdrawing their support from Calles.

"As American citizens and members of, that great body of organized workers, the American Federation of Labor, believing in the principles of political, industrial and religious liberty, and steadfastly opposed to all forms of Sovietism, Communism and other 'isms' destructive of human liberty, we cannot help but view with deep concern the ferocious attacks that are now being made on the rights, liberties and conscience of the citizens of our sister Republic of Mexico, by the governing power of that nation.

Attacks Mexican Labor.

"The resolution then reviews the part that Mexican labor has already taken in the inflicting of these injustices. It continues:

"An astounding feature of their disgraceful and un-American proceedings is the well-authenticated fact that in their campaign of pillage, spoliation and thievery, Calles and his band are, to all appearances, encouraged and actively supported by the Federation of Labor of Mexico, an organization which claims to represent the sentiment of Mexican labor; propaganda has been assiduously disseminated by Mexican agents in an effort to convince the uninformed that the trade unionists of America have no quarrel with the Mexican Federation because of its support of the Calles policies.

Condemns The C. R. O. M.

"Now, if it is true that the Federation of Labor of Mexico is composed of men who work for a living, and are members of the trades unions; if it is true that as such they are aiding and abetting Calles in the monstrous assault he is making on the God-given rights of the Mexican people, then the time has arrived for the trades unionists of America to declare in the strongest language possible that we denounce, repudiate and condemn the support rendered to Calles and his government by the Federation of Labor of Mexico, as inhuman and reprehensible, and contrary in every particular to the true principles of trade unionism the world over.

A. F. of L. Militantly Reactionary.

"The American labor movement, in its local, state and national conventions, has unsparingly and rightfully denounced and excoriated the policies of Lenin and Trotsky, the enforced in a nation thousands of miles distant from our shores, and in justice to the high ideals and humanitarian principles of the American labor movement, and mindful of the fundamental principle of freedom on which our great republic is founded and whose 150th birthday and fiftieth anniversary we are at this moment celebrating, we cannot and will not remain silent while, at the point of the bayonet and by the firing of bullets, liberty dear to the hearts of freemen, is ruthlessly throttled at our very doorstep."

COMPULSORY OLD-AGE PENSIONS IN U. S. AIM OF ORGANIZED LABOR

By LAURENCE TODD, Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Has the industrial prosperity of America reached the point where the nation will consider the granting of old age pensions?

That question is being considered by chiefs of the organized labor movement in Washington. It is timely because congress, in the recent session, revised the federal employes' old-age pension system, raising the maximum pension from $720 to $1,000 a year, after a fight on the part of the American Federation of Labor such as it has not waged at the capitol in years. It is of tactical importance because old-age pensions are among the choicest baits with which the anti-labor purposes of company unions and "yellow dog" contracts of employment are concealed. When the federal government gives old-age pensions to all who have been unable to save, half the appeal of industrial feudalism is lost by the big corporations who now make war on trade unionism.

Pass But Two Labor Bills.

The American Federationist sums up the last session of congress by saying that the federal employes' old-age pension bill and the railway labor act were the two measures enacted that directly affect labor. The 757 other bills made law at that session had only an indirect influence on the workers. More than 10,000 bills that were introduced failed of passage.

Mothers' Pensions.

Another measure favored by labor, but confined to the District of Columbia was the mothers' pension bill, appropriating $100,000 a year for the maintenance in their own households of the children of mothers left without support. While not a labor measure, it had the support of the American Federation of Labor and is regarded as making easier the education of congress to the need for a federal old-age pension system.

Amend Constitution.

Progressives in congress believe that the only possible road to a general federal system of pensioning the men and women worn out in industry is thru a constitutional amendment. Hence the progressives, if they take up the matter in co-operation with organized labor in the coming session or in the next congress, will introduce a resolution proposing such an amendment. Hearings will be held on the resolution. The legislation to be sought would probably differ from the federal employes' pension scheme by dropping the requirement for defraying the cost of the pensions regularly from the pay envelope of the worker. American workers are employed too irregularly and with too little bookkeeping to make it possible to collect insurance or pension charges from the very class that will need pensions most.

N. Y. Window Cleaners Striking for Better Working Conditions

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. —(FP)—Window-cleaners belonging to the Window Cleaners' Protective Union are striking for a 44-hour week, $44 minimum wage and no discharges or lay-offs without consideration by the union grievance committee.

The union workers are striking chiefly against the Amalgamated Window Cleaning Employers Association following unsuccessful efforts to negotiate an agreement.

The workers demand that employers carry compensation insurance. Many window cleaners are hurt or killed in falls from unprotected high ledges on New York skyscrapers.

Many buildings are not equipped with hooks for the cleaners' safety belts. Small employers have been evading the workmen's compensation law by failing to take out insurance.

The employers have frequently tried to smash the union but have always had to come back to sign up when demands for work became urgent.

Company Union Gets Weak Knees, 'Decides' to Keep Same Scale

MANCHESTER, N. H. Oct. 4. (FP). —Amoskeag Mills —"Workers' Congress"—company union—voted to continue under the old, wage scale for another six months after demanding 10% increases.

The company had asked cuts. The big mills make cotton and worsted goods as well as rayon mixtures.

Plumbers Knock Hole in Landis Open Shop with Union Contract

The Journeymen Plumbers' union of Chicago registered a blow against the Landis open shop "citizens' committee" when a union shop agreement was signed between the plumbers and the Citizens' Sanitary Engineering association, created by the Landis award committee and hitherto one of its strongest sections.

This is understood to be only one of the union shop contracts soon to be signed by the employers' associations and unions of sheet metal workers, painters and roofers. Negotiations on these trades have been going on for some time.

The present Plumbers' agreement was negotiated by Charles Mulcahy, and is being sent to the Pacific coast to obtain the signature of Dan McCarthy.

It is reported that about 250 non-union plumbers who have been working open shop under the award, will be admitted to the union if they pass the state examination.

It is expected that the Builders' building on Wacker drive and the Pittsfield building at Washington and Wabash will be built under the union agreement.

Miserably Low Wages for Pottery Workers, Shown by Statistics

WASHINGTON—(FP) — Wages of men and women employed in the American pottery industry are decidely low. This is shown by a study which the U. S. department of labor has just completed, based on statistics for 46 potteries, most of which were in the region centering about East Liverpool, O. For 4,466 men and boys the average earnings per week in 1925 were $26.23, and for 3,657 women and girls they were $13.37 in the semi-vitreous plants, producing common tableware.

Even these wages were double the amount earned by the average worker in each group in the year 1913, according to the report. Piecework is the basis of payment, due in part to an English tradition of contract work coming to this country from the English potteries with the fathers and mothers of these American pottery workers. Much of the production is handled by crews of 5 persons each, speeding up in order to make a maximum weekly earning.

In the average pottery the workers lost 3.9 days every two weeks.

'LABOR' PARTY OF PA. BEHIND WM. B. WILSON

Democrat Gets Backing for U. S. Senator

HARRISBURG, Pa. Oct. 4. (FP)—William B. Wilson, once president District 2 United Mine Workers of America and former international union secretary, has the endorsement of Pennsylvania's Labor party in his candidacy as democratic nominee for United States senator.

Charles Kutz, chairman of the Labor party, made the announcement, adding that Eugene Bonniwell, democratic gubernatorial candidate, likewise had been endorsed. The spring primary of the Labor party nominated Gifford Pinchot for senate and E. E. Beidleman for governor. Governor Pinchot and Beidleman later withdrew from the race.

Denies Scab Mine Deal.

Wilson is denying to questioners that he leased a mine in non-union Chesterfield county, Virginia, as Coal Age stated. Wilson declares that he went with his brother-in-law, Daniel Wilson of Allport, Pa., to look over the Richmond coal basin property of 90 acres but Wilson denies that he is involved in the lease his relative took.

Wilson says his brother-in-law operated a small mine in central Pennsylvania for a number of years on a union basis. Wilson states that the Richmond coal basin development has been so small that the United Mine Workers has not attempted to set a wage agreement there. Wilson's property had not been put into operation when Wilson wrote his answer to queries on their relation to the union.

GRAND JURORS CARRY THE WAR INTO CICERO

Almost Whole Town Is Under Indictment

Wholesale indictments, naming known gangsters, bootleggers, town officials, and others, were returned by the federal grand jury here today as the climax of a campaign to free Cicero, Chicago suburb, from the rule of gangland.

Among those named in the indictments are "Scar-face Al" Capone, underworld king; William ("Klondike") O'Connell, and his brother, Myles; Joseph L. Klenka, president of the Cicero town board; Chief of Police Svoboda, Edward C. Konvalinka, secretary to Klenka, and 72 other persons.

The indictments charge conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws and specifically, possession, transportation and sale of liquor.

Among the others named were: Charles Fischetto, Capone's chauffeur.

Three Ciceronians Surrender; Obtain Decrease in Bond

Three alleged leaders of the 79 Ciceronians indicted by the federal grand jury Friday in Cicero booze case surrendered to the district court Saturday and were released on bonds.

They were, Joseph Z. Klenka, president of Cicero, Edward Konvalinga, his secretary, and Ted L. Svoboda, chief of police.

Their bonds were first set at $10,000 each by Federal Judge Cliffe, but were later reduced to $2,500 by Judge Evan A. Evans.

Transportation Heads Vie with Each Other in Accompodating Queen

VIENNA, Oct. 4. — There is a possibility that Marie of Roumania may make her home permanently in the United States. Family troubles are the cause it is said. There is a gentleman, playing a role similar to that played by Rasputin in Csarist Russia, who is raising cain with the royal household.

The steamship companies put up a brisk competition for the queen's passage, the honors going to the Leviathan. The giant ship practically gave the queen a free ticket.

American hotels are offering their choicest suites to the queen for as little as $1 a day and American railroad presidents are cabling offers of their private cars to this royal parasite.

Judge Sides with Landlord Against Workers and Poor

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. (FP)—Rent laws put in largely to protect workers and poor tenants were dealt a blow by the decision of Judge Charles J. Carroll in Brooklyn that a landlord need give no reasons for evicting a tenant when he hasn't yet started

A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1927, by Upton Sinclair)

VI

What Mr Irving said was that our troops were in Siberia because American bankers and big business men had loaned enormous sums of money to the government of the Tsar, both before the war and during it; the Bolshevik government had repudiated these debts and therefore our bankers and business men were determined to destroy it. It was not merely the amount of the money, but the precedent involved; if the government of any country could repudiate the obligations of a previous government, what would become of international loans! The creditor nations—that is to say America, Britain and France—maintained that a government debt was a sin, not against the government, but against the country and its resources. The amount at stake was one or two hundred billions of dollars, and the creditor nations meant to make an example of Soviet Russia, and establish the rule that a government which repudiated its debts would be put out of business.

Bunny found this a novel point of view, and asked many questions. Mr. Irving said that in Washington was a Russian who had been the war-time ambassador to our country, and in that capacity had had the handling of the money loaned by our government, and used for buying guns and shells for Russia. At the time of the Bolshevik revolution, this ambassador had just got something like a hundred million dollars, and our government was allowing him to use it to set up a propaganda machine against the Soviet government, with a spy system as elaborate as the Tsar had ever known. Newspapers and newspaper men, government officials and legislators, all were on this ambassador's payroll. Moreover, there were in our state department officials who had married Russian wives of the old nobility and these wives had lost everything in the revolution and it was natural they should hate the new regime. One official was a member of the banking house which had handled the loans and stood to lose a fortune; others were tied up with banks and business concerns which had vast sums at stake. So it came about that America was at war with Soviet Russia, on the entire circumference of that vast republic; and so it came about that an instructor in an American university could not discuss the matter with one of his students, even outside the class room, without fear of losing his position.

Mr. Daniel Webster Irving denied that he had any sympathy with Bolshevism, or wished to teach such doctrines in America; and Bunny, in his innocence of soul, accepted this statement—not knowing that all Bolshevik agents say that, until they have got the minds of their victims thoroughly poisoned. Mr. Irving expressed the view that what was happening in Russia was a great social experiment. Could a government of the working class succeed? Was democracy in industry a possibility, or only a fanatic's dream? We ought to send disinterested people, experts of all sorts into Russia, to watch what was happening and report it. Instead of that, we were helping France and Britain to starve the Russians out; we were compelling them to spend all their energies resisting our armies, and those which we subsidized; we were making it impossible for the experiment to succeed, and so, of course, its failure would prove nothing.

Bunny, poor little propaganda victim, said that he was beginning to change his mind about these matters. Yes, the Russians ought to have a right to work out their own problem in their own way; and certainly we ought to know the truth about what was happening—he wished there was some way to get it. Thereupon, Mr. Irving gave him the names of two weekly magazines, which, as it happened, had just been excluded from the library of the university, and from all the high schools of Angel City, for "dangerous thoughts."

You may imagine what happened then. When you tell a high-spirited lad that he must not read certain publications, he becomes immediately filled with curiosity to know what they contain. Bunny went home and sent in his subscription to these papers, quite openly, in his own name. So there was another entry in the card-indexes of the Military Intelligence Department and the Naval Intelligence Department and the Secret Service Department; to say nothing of many organizations which were using these card-indexes, as their own—several patriotic societies and several militant newspapers, and several big private detective agencies, including, of course, the information service of the once-upon a-time ambassador from a no-longer-existing Russian government.

Bunny, groping about for some way to help Paul, was next moved to write a letter to the Southern Pacific "Stude," telling what he had come to think about the Siberian situation, being careful, of course, not to refer to Mr. Irving, not to name either Paul of Jeff Korbitty. His letter was returned to him by the student editor, with a note protesting against a man of his prominence in the university giving such aid to the enemies of his country. The news of this incident spread, and the wildest rumors took wing; Bunny was besieged by friends and others who wanted to read the letter and then to argue with him.

One member of the senior class declared that he agreed with Bunny—certainly the Russians had a right to run their own country. Billy George was this man's name, and his father was a wealthy manufacturer of iron pipe. Needless to say, Bunny was glad to have a little sympathy and let his new friend read his letter to the "Stude," and Jeff Korbitty's letter to him, and told all his ideas and troubles; and thus the card-indexes in Angel City, New York and Washington were further enriched. Inasmuch as so many other people were allowed to inspect these indexes, it will surely not be unpatriotic for us to take a glimpse into the file. The cards were six by eight in size, neatly typed on both sides; and when one was full, another was started. Our young idealist's now stood as follows:

"Ross, James Arnold, junior, alias Bunny: 679 S. Mendecino Ave., Angel City, Calif., also Paradise, San Elido Co., Calif., Age 20, height 5 feet, 9½ inches, hair brown, eyes brown, features regular; photo attached. Son of J. Arnold Ross, v-pres. ## The Merger Period

"Ask and ye shall receive," is the slogan of the Coolidge administration issued for the benefit of the great industrialists and bankers.

Merger after merger has not only been authorised but encouraged and the departments of the government have been placed at the disposal of corporations to assist them in avoiding any legal complications. Copper, oil, electric light and power, and coal are a few of the industries in which huge new concentrations have taken place.

The railroads, hitherto prevented from making rapid steps towards amalgamating into still larger system groups are now in motion. Their efforts are to be facilitated by the Parker bill prepared by Alfred P. Thom, counsel for the Association of Railway Executives, which Thom has informed President Coolidge is favored by a majority of the roads and which, it is stated, President Coolidge will recommend for passage.

Now comes the news of a new consolidation bringing the Chesapeake and Ohio and Hocking Valley roads under one head and authorization for 62 miles of new connecting roadbed to be owned by the new combination.

The days when railroads had to fight for concentrations of control which gave them monopolies of the transportation field in their territories have passed. Bigger combinations is the keynote.

But combinations of workers in unions large and powerful enough to fight such huge combinations of capital effectively are outlawed, if not by legislation as yet, at least by injunctions which are as effective inasmuch as they abrogate the right of jury trial for workers accused of violating them.

American capitalism is on the march toward a greater empire than the world has ever seen. Coolidge is its puppet for the present and it is his task to aid, not to hamper anything which increases the power of the ruling class.

If Al Smith or McAdoo is elected by reason of a switch to the democrat party the process will continue.

The machinery of government is the machinery of the strongest section of American capitalism and industrial and finance capitalists, tho they may differ on such questions as the world court, are of one mind in desiring the most complete centralisation possible of their power at home.

The huge combinations of capital which have taken place in the last three years are only one indication that this is a government of, for and by capitalists.

Mencken—American Capitalism's Literary Clown

In the old days, the feudal days, the fat barons of the land were amused by fools who combined malformed physical features with sharp, albeit perverted wit. These days of capitalism have seen the end of the court entertainer with cap and bells—but in his place has come a species of clown, who, tho lacking the anatomical abnormalities of his predecessor, has seemed to inherit the perverted wit necessary to amuse the baronage of this day.

Such a clown is H. L. Mencken. Pretending to be critical of the more superficial inconsistencies of capitalism, Mencken is one of its staunchest defenders. Only the most stupid of exploiters is unaware that Mencken fulfills the two-fold duty of amuser to the bourgeoisie and confuser of the exploited. V. F. Calverton, the editor of the Modern Quarterly, put it mildly when he said Mencken is a vaudevillian. He is more than that. Despite his smart gestures of criticism directed at methodists, babbits, Cal Coolidge and the United States senate, H. L. Mencken is one of the starkest reactionaries writing in the English language. He is all the more so because, at first glance, he gives the impression of being otherwise.

All these remarks are apropos of a syndicated article appearing in the Sunday press entitled, "Remarks On Rede." Mencken, in this article, is at his best. This means that, without knowing what he is talking about, he manages to write a thousand very interesting words. In addition to this he tells many lies and many more platitudes.

In this article Mencken discloses as much ignorance of the so-called "reds" as the veriest babbit. This man has performed the astounding feat of writing of the revolutionary movement in this country without once mentioning the only revolutionary party in the country, the Workers (Communist) Party. His knowledge of the working class movement is encircled by a mild acquaintance with "parlor socialists." Hence, to Mencken the revolutionary movement is largely composed of this species. Mencken does not hesitate to echo the time-worn lies of the capitalist press about Russia and adds a few malignancies of his own. He sings loudly the praises of capitalism and predicts its existence for another hundred years. His discussion of social changes hinges upon the individual. The trouble with capitalism is that there are some bad individuals in it, under socialism the same trouble would exist, is a sample of Mencken's sociology. All of these stupidities come from the pen of "America's foremost critic."

ARTICLE XII.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

IT is true that the American labor leaders smile and smile at the company unions and "welfare" schemes of the capitalists and that the official journals of the trade unions of course denounce the stanly. But neither in speeches or articles by these officials has an appeal ever been made to the class interests of the workers for it is understood that the trade union movement should be a combat unit of the working class struggling ever for more absolute control of industry and government or that it has any other function than that of securing concessions for workers strictly within the framework of American capitalist society.

I HAVE mentioned the failure of the trade union leadership to make clear to the masses the difference between trade unions and company unions. This is a fact in spite of the declarations relative to the outright company control of company unions at present. It follows that if workers accept the theory that American industry—capitalist, executives and workers—is composed of one big family that the question of worker control of unions becomes of minor importance to them and may even be considered contrary to the altruistic spirit with which company union—and for that matter official trade union—literature is saturated.

CONTROL of the unions by the rank and file is a doctrine just as obnoxious to the present trade union leadership as it is to the capitalists. They argue only for the UNION, scope for the CLASS of which it is composed.

An example of this type of argument (it is even a little more determined in tone than the average) is to be found in The Railroad Trainmen's Journal of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, for October, 1923, says:

"... As railways and their employees go, there is no present danger of interrupted service. The public will not fight to hold cars his own; he will fight if he has to; there's his right; we stand for the same thing, but most earnestly hope we will not have to exercise it.

We are facing a new proposition; many of the 'social' problems of the organizations have been partly solved by the employers; there are organizations of all kinds, insurance and welfare schemes that are advantageous as long as the man remains in the service; there are stock buying and building and loan associations, co-operative buying associations and in fact everything attractive is offered in some form or another, each requiring dues payments, so many in fact that MANY OF THE EMPLOYES BELIEVE A LABOR ORGANIZATION IS ABOUT THE LAST THING NECESSARY. . . . Each welfare scheme is a development of the millions injected. IT MAKES THE UNION THAT MUCH LESS NECESSARY IN THESE MATTERS, BUT THE EMPLOYE CANNOT AFFORD TO FORGET THAT TO THIS UNION ALONE HE OWES HIS WAGES AND WORKING RULES. (Emphasis mine.)

IT will be seen from the above that the appeal is to the glories of the past without any statement as to the present and future struggles of the union.

Nor should such utterances as the above be taken to indicate even a faint desire on the part of officialdom to stress the difference in interests between worker and capitalist. Such an interpretation must be rejected when we recall that the heads of every railway labor organization without exception aided in the passage of the Watson-Parker bill based on the theory of identity of interests of railway worker and railway capitalists.

THE International Association of Machinists, formerly, at least, the most advanced of the railway organizations, is no clearer on the company union question, so far as its official organ is concerned, than is The Railroad Trainmen. Speaking of company unions, it says:

Just how to overcome this obstacle to legitimate organization is a problem yet to be solved . . . . An appeal will, of course, be made to all mechanics employed on company union roads to assert their freedom of the press and the political rights of the whole of the non-proletarian strata of the population, etc. Those who do not grasp this do not understand anything whatever of the whole situation. It is our attitude towards the peasantry which is involved. . . . To refuse to permit a schism in the party, for we should thereby permit a split in the state.

The slightest disorder in the party takes immediate effect upon the whole apparatus of state . . . This is being discussed by both the specialists and the other categories of employes. Schism in the party inevitably engenders schism in the whole state apparatus. Thus the question of fractions is a question of "life and death" to the party."

THUS Comrade Zinoviev spoke against Trotsky. But today it is he who is contending for fractions and groups; he has forgotten everything, and opposes to comrade Lenin that he said so recently, on Dec. 1, 1924, as empty chatter.

"Trotskyism is and remains at bottom to a great extent a left manoeuvre in the state, an opportunist pseudo-Marxist anti-Communistic spirit."

This is what Comrade Zinoviev wrote on Trotskyism." In another place he writes:

"It has often been said that all the misfortunes of the party started from the Tenth Party Congress."

Why this? It was precisely the X. Party Congress which declared such a discussion within the party to be superfluous.

"The policy of the Tenth Party Congress is the policy of Leninism. The attack made by Comrade Trotsky against the fundamentals of Leninism, on the basis of the balance drawn by the Tenth Party Congress with respect to the freedom of fractions and groups, cannot be acknowledged as right." And so forth.

THUS Comrade Zinoviev wrote at one time. And now all this has been thrown upon the dustheap. Now all this is forgotten. It was spoken with the greatest enthusiasm, but it none the less forgotten. Trotsky remains as victor in the block established on the basis of withdrawal to a distance from Lenin's ideological principles, tho it was Zinoviev who designated Trotsky's standpoint as nothing more nor less than a variety of Menshevism, containing nuances fundamentally hostile to bolshevism, etc., etc.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Buchurin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

Why Does Medvedyev Write on The Peasantry Question?

By N. BUCHARIN.

IT is foolish"—he writes,—"to suppose that the economic position of the small peasant can now be saved; it is inevitably doomed to decay and to complete extermination. It is mere petty bourgeois Utopianism to believe that there can be any uplift in peasant economics."

This is what we all said under the capitalist regime. But to speak like this under the conditions furnished by the proletarian dictatorship is to accept a standpoint widely differing from the Leninist. Comrade Medvedyev comes to the conclusion that there is no use in troubling about the "dreary" village. For him the peasantry is represented by this peasantry and the "dreary village." Why should we, real proletarians, trouble ourselves about the "dreary villages" (or with the "stupid rabble" in the Comintern)? Let us rather give our industry to the concession capitalist, in order that we may earn a few more pence. Such is the weak, flaccid, standpoint of the comrades of the new opposition maintain that the differentiation in the peasantry has not made strides that the middle peasant comes scarcely in question, or when Comrade Preposrzhensky fails to observe the difference between capitalist and petty peasant economics, then we have here an undoubted ideological relationship to Medvedyev. These two standpoints are not identical, but they are ideologically related.

IF our opposition throws doubts on the socialist character of our state industry, and Comrade Medvedyev attaches so little importance to this social character of our industry that he is prepared to abandon this industry to the concession capitalists, this is the second bridge connecting the ideology of the two groups.

If Comrade Medvedyev does not believe that we have a proletarian dictatorship, and is of the opinion that it is the task of the proletarian organisation to exercise pressure upon the state, and at the same time we find other comrades of the opposition letting slip such sentences as that on the "extremely non-proletarian character" of our state, then we have here the third ideological bridge between the group of oppositional comrades and the group around Comrade Medvedyev, which latter group may be said to be leading the way as "vanguard" of the whole opposition block.

IF Medvedyev believes that our party is rotten, that it has run off the rails of proletarian policy, and Comrade Kamenev asserts that our policy deviates from the interests of the broad masses of the workers, again this ideological similarity forms a bridge, the fourth uniting these two groups with one another. All deviations begin in this manner and lead in their later development to entirely anti-Bolshevist conclusions. This is where the collective opposition, and the Medvedyev group, are ideologically related.

WE shall be told that the most far-reaching, revolting, and evil-smelling "proposals" are made by Medvedyev in that for the liquidation of the Comintern, whilst there is nothing similar to be found in either Zinoviev's or Trotsky's declarations. This is true, for the present. We should be the first to thank destiny were it to remain true forever. But if the opposition continues on its present path, it may still lead to such a crisis. Osorsky so often mentioned—an adherent of Comrade Trotsky—has already hinted at this conclusion. He writes approximately as follows: Our party, the C. P. S. U., is engaged in the pressure of various forms of economics, etc. (Here we must recollect what has already been said above on the representation of capitalist elements). Consequently it must renounce its role as leader of the Communist International.

LET us think this thought to its logical conclusion: If the C. P. S. U. does not renounce its role, this means that in no case will it lead the Comintern further on the path of revolution. This means that its "degeneration" will involve the degeneration of the Comintern. The ultra-left in Germany are already saying this to-day. Their conclusion is the necessity of creating a IV. International. What will our opposition say when it maintains that our party has fallen away from the line of revolution, and yet it still remains the leader of the Comintern? In this case the opposition will begin to declare loudly that the Comintern has fallen away from the proletarian path with the Russian party. The further development of the views of the opposition will then be along the line of a false, neglected and declusory attitude towards the Comintern.

I REPEAT: We shall be the first to thank destiny if this does not come to pass. We shall be the first to be pleased. But if it is not to happen, then the opposition must leave the path of destruction which it is now treading. It must pause and think whither its ideology is leading it.

The Opposition at an Intermediate Station—the Platform of Trotskyism.

WHAT the is the ideological current thus developing in the opposition? The current is leading in the direction of Shlyapnikov and Medvedyev, it is becoming a completely liquidatory tendency on the basis of disbelief in the building up of socialism in our country. At the present moment, the opposition is resting at an intermediary station, called Trotskyism. The chief ideology of the whole opposition in its totality—including Comrades Zinoviev, Kamenev, Krupskaya, etc.—is obviously that of open Trotskyism.

AT the time when we prophesied that the matter would end in Trotskyism, we were not believed by many comrades, members of the opposition. They said: That will never be the case. You will remember how Zinoviev rose up against Trotsky, what thunders he called down upon him, both at home and in the foreign party press. How many pamphlets were written by Zinoviev, Safarov, Kasnalchikov, and a large number of other comrades, many of them somewhat evil-smelling pamphlets, which aggravated the question to a point which it should never have been brought. But now Comrade Trotsky has become the ideological leader of this whole oppositional group, whilst neither Comrade Zinoviev nor Comrade Kamenev has a single independent idea. They come forward with common declarations, with common standpoint, with common signatures; and the main point is that all the ideas contained in these utterances are the ideas of Comrade Trotsky.

THIS is in accordance with the facts. I have already described these ideas. Whose opinion is the present opinion held by the opposition in the party question? It is Comrade Trotsky's opinion. I have detailed our differences in questions of economic policy; I have described Comrade Preobrashensky's standpoint. Whose standpoint is this? It is Trotsky's standpoint, which he borne away the victory in the opposition, whilst Zinoviev and Kamenev have capitulated before it.

AND in the question of organisation, in the question of granting the freedom to form groups and fractions—whose are the views defended here by the opposition? It need not be said that these are Trotsky's views, for he has stood for them for decades. These are views which Trotsky expounded in 1923-4, at the same time as his demand for freedom of groups and fractions.

Comrade Zinoviev, at a Moscow functionaries' meeting held on Dec. 11, 1924, spoke as follows:

"We therefore beg you, the Moscow organisation, to give us a clear and unequivocal answer (the subject dealt with was the discussion with Trotsky). If you believe the time to have come for legalising the fractions and groups, say so plainly (Thus spoke Comrade Zinoviev in 1923 and 1924.) We do not believe that this time has come yet, or that it will come at all during the period of the dictatorship of the proletariat. It cannot come, for this is a question bound up with the freedom of the press and the political rights of the whole of the non-proletarian strata of the population, etc. Those who do not grasp this do not understand anything whatever of the whole situation. It is our attitude towards the peasantry which is involved. . . . To refuse to permit a schism in the party, for we should thereby permit a split in the state.

The slightest disorder in the party takes immediate effect upon the whole apparatus of state . . . This is being discussed by both the specialists and the other categories of employes. Schism in the party inevitably engenders schism in the whole state apparatus. Thus the question of fractions is a question of "life and death" to the party."

THUS Comrade Zinoviev spoke against Trotsky. But today it is he who is contending for fractions and groups; he has forgotten everything, and opposes to comrade Lenin that he said so recently, on Dec. 1, 1924, as empty chatter.

"Trotskyism is and remains at bottom to a great extent a left manoeuvre in the state, an opportunist pseudo-Marxist anti-Communistic spirit."

This is what Comrade Zinoviev wrote on Trotskyism." In another place he writes:

"It has often been said that all the misfortunes of the party started from the Tenth Party Congress."

Why this? It was precisely the X. Party Congress which declared such a discussion within the party to be superfluous.

"The policy of the Tenth Party Congress is the policy of Leninism. The attack made by Comrade Trotsky against the fundamentals of Leninism, on the basis of the balance drawn by the Tenth Party Congress with respect to the freedom of fractions and groups, cannot be acknowledged as right." And so forth.

THUS Comrade Zinoviev wrote at one time. And now all this has been thrown upon the dustheap. Now all this is forgotten. It was spoken with the greatest enthusiasm, but it none the less forgotten. ## Where Thousands Have Been Roped in by Aimee's Game

T. P. Barnum had nothing on Aimee Semple McPherson. With a few capabilities as a speaker and several more as an actress, the lady has hooked twenty-five thousand suckers in Los Angeles to the tune of many thousands of dollars. Above is shown the revival temple that the faithful presented to their good-looking pastor. Aimee rigged up a new fangled gospel that she calls "four square" and has the petit-bourgeoisie of the Angel City swallowing her bunk hook, line and sinker. But, unlike Barnum, she didn't know where to stop. When she disappeared in a green bathing suit at a beach and then reappeared in the wilds of the Mexican desert with her victimization (home on the dresser when she departed), her story of "kidnapping" rather took on a doubtful hue, to say the least. Nevertheless, the suckers are sticking by their Aimee.

DENY BAIL REDUCTION IN PASSAIC

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

We hate to mention it but business is business and our business is to tell as much of what happens as is conducive to the welfare of the labor movement, therefore when we learn that there is a deficit of $305,000,000 in British revenue collections as compared with $160,000,000 last year, the horrible fact must be chronicled. Any reader who ever experienced the pangs of financial stringency will realize what this means, and it is only a question of time when the New Zealander on London Bridge may be asked to drop a penny into King George's hat or in the feodora of the Prince of Wales.

All Pilsudski's horses and all his men could not make the Polish parliament vote for him. So it didn't, with the result that chaos is now king and Pilsudski's army is all dressed up with no place in particular to go the marshal is taking no chances, but Lithuania, evidently thinking it safer to attack a little potato republic than the Soviet Union. But the marshal will find Vilna a hard pill to swallow tho he got it into his mouth a few years and the league of nations gave him a sip of water to dissolve it.

Pilsudski's diet voted against him, the count being 360 against and 92 for. That's not so good considering the report that the marshal is a genius and can solve every problem by waving his shining sword. Things must be pretty bad when so many deputies failed to be influenced by a battalion of armed men. Politicians are usually susceptible to outside influence. Either the prick of a sword or the clink of the coin.

South Africa is holding a referendum on a suitable flag for the dominion. General Smuts, the old traitor who participated in the raid of the two republics in the empire, wants the Union Jack included in the color scheme. But General Hertzog who represents the nationalist Boer elements does not particularly care about the emblem of British imperialism. In all probability a compromise will be reached, and the crown will find its way into the hunting.

British propaganda agencies in Lithuania are trying to develop sentiment against the recently signed Soviet-Lithuanian treaty. The British propagandists wish to make it appear that the pact is directed against England. Whether it is or not is up to England. The Soviet Union does not want war and Lithuania has more to gain from an accord with Russia than thru hostility. England is gradually being isolated on the continent. Even the little Baltic republics are leaning to their east that they will be better off by declining to any longer act as buffer states between England and Soviet Russia.

Chu-chao-hsin, head of the Chinese mission to Italy and head of the Chinese delegation to the league of nations, continues to hurl broadsides at British imperialism from his point of vantage at Geneva. The British don't know what to do about it, the Chu in the fullness of his heart suggests that they stop bombarding Chinese towns and pull out their armed forces. In which event says Chu, the Chinese might be inclined to resume treaty relations with them. The British are now asking: "What's the matter with Chu?" And without waiting for an answer they assert that he is either a tool of the Kuomintang or else he is playing politics. And what about it?

A. F. of L. HAS NOT YET SENT FUNDS FOR BRITISH STRIKE AID

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 5.—Why the American Federation of Labor has not yet sent the money, small in amount the it may be, collected for the relief of the British miners, is puzzling to the Detroit workers observing the A. F. of L. convention.

Daniel J. Tobin, treasurer of the A. F. of L., it is revealed, has made a secret report to the executive council stating that about $100,000 will be sent in the near future and that this represents the total of relief funds gathered from the various

INDIANA G. O. P. A CREATURE OF KLAN IS CHARGE

Kluxer's Head Made Senate Choice

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Oct. 5.—The head and robe of the ku klux klan was figuratively nailed to the very door of Indiana's state capitol today.

Thru Court Asher, "dear pal and partner" of D. C. Stephenson, who, before his imprisonment here for the death of Madge Oberholtzer, spoke the law of the invisible empire in Indiana, the accusing shroud was given the breath of life and made to tell its story of the alleged manipulations which it directed in Hoosier politics.

A senatorial appointment juggled at the instance of the klan, or rather of Stephenson, with a promise of immunity for him in the Oberholtzer case—this was the charge to which the wrath-like emblem of "hidden power" gave voice thru Asher. And as a result, the probe which is threatening to rock the very foundations of Indiana politics today threatened to reach a federal investigating committee.

Stephenson himself is still incommunicado in the state penitentiary here, Warden Walter L. Daly having flatly refused all requests to interview him. However, thru the grapevine route to Asher came portions of his story and from Asher, the alleged facts were made public.

Ralston's Death.

His revelations today dealt principally with the appointment of Arthur R. Robinson to fill the place made vacant last year by the death of Senator Samuel Ralston.

According to Asher's statement, Gov. Ed Jackson decided to appoint himself to the vacancy and had gone so far as to communicate with Lieut. Gov. Van Orman, advising him to make preparations to move to Indianapolis to take Jackson's place.

At this stage, according to Asher, and before public announcement of the plans had been made, Senator James E. Watson communicated with Jackson and other republican leaders in Indiana and demanded that Frank Ball, a millionaire republican, of Muncie, Ind., be named to Ralston's place.

Stephenson's Man.

Senator Watson's selection, Asher said, received the support of the majority of the leading party members and it was virtually agreed that Ball should be given the place when Stephenson, then being held here without bail pending trial on the Oberholtzer case, sent word to the

TWO MORE WOMEN JAILED BY COPS IN DATE STRIKE

25 Other Workers Join the Ranks

Two more women were arrested by police here Tuesday morning in an effort to break the strike of the Negro women, employed as data stuffers at the Marsa & company date factory, 214 West Kinzie street.

Tuesday's arrests were made without the slightest provocation on the part of the workers, who were peacefully picketing the factory premises.

The women, Mrs. Robert Jones, 509 East Thirty-fifth street, and Mrs. Ella Smith, 17 S. State street, were taken to the Chicago avenue police station and held there charged with disorderly conduct until intervention was made by the International Labor Defense. They were handled roughly by the officers, and it is possible that charges will be filed against the police.

Strike Spreading.

The strike, which has been in progress since Oct. 2, is growing stronger every day. Twenty-five more women workers joined the ranks of the strikers Tuesday morning, swelling the total to more than 136.

The strike was called when the Marsa company posted a notice of a wage reduction.

A temporary union organization has been formed by the women, and headquarters established at 30 North Ada street.

INDEPENDENT ENTERS ILLINOIS CONTEST FOR SENATE SEAT

A certain set of republican politicians in Illinois, sensing that the slush fund graft exposures at the primaries are too obvious for even the most disinterested voter, have split the party and entered an independent candidate to run against Frank L. Smith, the traction magnates' choice. Hugh Magill is the independent republican candidate. One of his chief backers is Julius Rosenwald, Chicago millionaire.

ANOTHER BLAST IS FEARED IN MINE TRAGEDY

Thirty-One Men are Reported Trapped

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROCKWOOD, Tenn., Oct. 5. — The danger of another gas explosion leemed today as rescue workers slowly penetrated their way into the workings of the Roane Iron company's mine here, seeking to recover the bodies of 23 miners.

All hope for recovery alive of the men, trapped by a gas explosion yesterday has been abandoned. The gas fumes issued forth in great waves and leaders of rescue operations expressed fear that the coal has caught fire and that there was a possibility of another explosion at any moment.

Recovered Bodies.

Four bodies have been recovered, while the body of another miner was located, but could not be brought to the surface because of the deadly fumes. The bodies recovered are Harry Lingo, head blown off; George Riddle, Hector Smith and Will Elliott, Jr., the body of the fifth miner was believed to be B. C. Stevens.

The number of men trapped by the blast has been definitely established at 31.

Four Rescued.

Four were rescued last night, and four bodies were recovered, leaving a total of 23 still in the mine, all of whom are believed dead.

All operations in the mine have been abandoned owing to the danger of another explosion. The mine itself is a small one, and its output is used exclusively in the smelting of iron by the Roane Iron company.

Battery of Ovens.

Near the mouth of the mine stands a battery of coke ovens, which belch forth smoke and cause a heavy pall to settle over this town of 5,000 which for the second time in less than two years has been visited by a mine disaster. Last year tan men were killed in the gas explosion.

Tilbury Dockers Return.

LONDON, Oct. 5. — The Tilbury dock strike which began unexpectedly yesterday was called off today, the Dockworkers' Union ordering the men back to work.

A. F. OF L. VOTES FULL SUPPORT TO STRIKING NEW YORK CLOAK MAKERS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 5.—Unanimous support of the 14 weeks strike of 40,000 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in New York City was voted here enthusiastically by the delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention. It was promised by President William Green that the executive council would immediately send out an appeal to all affiliated organizations urging quick financial aid.

The resolution endorsing the strike was brought in as a special order by Secretary Matthew Woll of the resolutions committee. It was signed by the I. L. G. W. U. delegation and received the endorsement of the committee.

A Strike Against Lower Standards.

The resolution points out that the New York strike is being waged to prevent a lowering of the standards of life sed work "secured thru many years of organized effort and sacrifice and to save the industry itself from becoming demoralized and leading the workers back to sweatshop conditions such as existed before the firm establishment of the Cloakmakers' Union."

The employers are denounced as resorting to every available and conceivable method of warfare including the injunction process in their attempt to resist the rightful and justified demands of the organized cloakmakers. It is pointed out that the cloakmakers are conducting their struggle courageously in the face of great suffering and privation.

Extends Full Support.

The resolution then declares that: The American Federation of Labor extends its full support to the striking cloakmakers of New York City, authorizes the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to call immediately on all affiliated unions for financial assistance urging them to respond speedily and generously so as to assure complete victory to the striking cloakmakers and their present struggle and contest."

Delegate Isidore Nagler of the I. L. G. W. U. spoke on the resolution reviewing the former intolerable conditions prevailing under sweatshop rule in the industry. Secretary Woll for the committee declared that labor was confronted with a serious situation in this strike.

President Green also spoke, narrating the courageous activity of the strikers on the picket lines, pointing out the brutal treatment they were receiving at the hands of the police and declaring they were "suffering and sacrificing in the cause." The resolution were then adopted unanimously.

The fraternal delegation of the international Metal Trades Federation to the A. F. of L. metal trades department was presented to the convention by President James O'Connell, J. T. Brownlie of the British Machinists addressed the convention on behalf of the delegation pleading for the international solidarity of the world's workers.

Our delegation came to the United States to visit and confer with the Metal Trades Workers affiliated with the A. F. of L. with a distinct purpose in mind," said Brownlie. "That purpose was to get these organizations to join with us to make common cause with the workers of the world."

Brownlie declared the Metal Trades international to be the oldest trade union international in the world and said that "all British metal workers are affiliated with it."

"Capitalism is organized on a world-wide basis, he said. "It knows no frontiers. Labor must be similarly organized."

A Poor Example.

Instead of searching for some working class example for American labor to follow, however, Brownlie dragged in the memory of President Woodrow Wilson claiming it was Wilson who had come to Europe to help settle the war breaking away from American parochial traditions.

"I went you to come in the same way" said Brownlie to the delegates "Break away from your traditions or isolation." There was a ripple of applause among the delegates at the mention of the name of Woodrow Wilson.

Not Like Last Year.

In reply President Green merely declared: "We are glad to have Mr.

ANOTHER LINK IN RAILROAD MERGER FORGED

Billion-Dollar Merger Moves Forward

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 — Another move in the Van Sweringen billion dollar railroad merger was made today when the Chesapeake and Hocking road, a recently incorporated subsidiary of the Chesapeake and Ohio, applied to the interstate commerce commission for authority to construct 63 miles of new road between Gregg and Valley Crossing, Ohio.

The Chesapeake and Hocking was incorporated in Ohio on September 24, 1926, with an authorized capital of $70,000, all of which will be acquired by the Chesapeake and Ohio, which will also furnish the money necessary to construct the new road. The road is designed to be a connecting link between the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Hocking Valley and will constitute approximately 25 per cent of the total tonnage.

WORKERS PARTY CANDIDATE ONLY FOR THE MASSES

Smith Got Much And Brennan Got Less

The three humble servants of Illinois capitalism, and any other capitalism for that matter, to wit: Messers Smith, Brennan and Magill, candidates for the United States senate, are quite sure that their respective candidates will be smiled upon by the voters when the ballots are cast next November.

Angling For Vote.

Needless to say those three gentlemen are angling for the popular vote so that they shall be able to serve the fellows who live on the populace.

Magill is the candidate of the pure and holy republicans, who are somewhat disgusted with the way brother Frank L. Smith has conducted himself. Frank took Insull's money in such a way that most people heard about it. Magill is taking Rosenwald's money without giving any recelpee.

George Brennan may be defeated on the ground that he is a piker. His share of the Insull coin was a paltry $18,000. George is neither fish, flesh, nor good red herring. What could a live wire do with only $15,000?

Farley Parker Christenson has not been heard of since he appeared at the Streator convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor wearing plus fours, or in other words, knickers. What could a man in knickers do for the American farmer? It is to laugh.

But a discordant note is sounded

ENGLAND AND ITALY PLAN WAR ON CHINA

Peking Envoy Speaks; Sun Demoralized

ROME, Oct. 5.—It is learned that Italy is considering joining with Great Britain in military intervention in China to crush the national liberation movement. While officials are reticent and will neither affirm or deny it a report, it is looked upon as a result of the conversation recently held between Mussolini and Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister.

Other Nations Concerned.

The new alliance between Britain and Italy has alarmed other nations who have declined to aid Great Britain in China, having rival interests of their own and are in no hurry to burn their fingers to protect British interests. France also is threatened by the alliance in European and African affairs.

Plans for intervention by Italy and England jointly have gone so far that foreign diplomats in Rome have reported the matter to their governments.

Chinese Envoy Gives Hot Reply.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Concerning the recent speech of Chao Hsin-chu, representative of the Peking government to the league of nations, attacking the British at the Geneva assembly of the league, the Daily Mail asked Chao what he presumed to speak for China as a whole when the Peking government which sent him to the league controlled only a small part of China.

Chao has replied with a scorching letter, practically stating that when he speaks of Chinese desire to oust foreign dominion of China's affairs, he speaks for all China. While China has internal political differences, he said, all Chinese are united in demanding an end of foreign domination.

Dead and Demoralized.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 5.— Dispatches from Hankow state that the northern troops of Wu Pei-fu isolated and besieged in the walled city of Wucheng by the Cantonese attempted a sortie to drive back the southerners, but the whole 500 who entered out of the city gates were mown down by machine guns.

The troops within the city are demoralized and when the 500 tried to return the gates were closed against them by their famine stricken fellows on the inside. There is no food or fuel left in the city.

Further demoralization is noted in reports from Nanchang, where the troops of Sun Chuan-fang, supposed ruler of the five provinces on the lower Yangtze, are in control. Sun's soldiery are murdering and looting and thousands of natives have been killed and wounded by Sun's marauders. This is regarded as a sign of Sun's weakness and approaching defeat by the Cantonese.

JUDGE HOLDING MILL STRIKERS FOR $350,000

Assign Case to Vicious Anti-Labor Judge

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 5.—Supreme Court Justice Charles C. Black refused to lower the excessive amount of the $350,000 bail on which five men are held in the textile strike area. At the hearing held this morning in Paterson for argument on the writ of habeas corpus obtained by John Larkin Hughes, counsel for the strikers, Justice Black said that it was his opinion and the opinion of Prosecutor J. Vincent Barnatt, that the $350,000 bail as set by Judge John C. Barbour in Clifton police court was reasonable in view of the seriousness of the charges against the men.

At the time the hearing in Paterson was going on, two charges against Gustave Deak, president of Local No. 1603, United Textile Workers of America, were being dismissed in Passaic police court by Judge William B. Davidson. Deak was arrested several months ago charged with assaulting a foreman of the Botany mills and with having a gun in his possession, when arrested later at union headquarters.

Think Indictments Made.

The grand jury, according to statements made at the hearing in Paterson before Justice Black, has indicted the strikers held in the Passaic county jail on counts numbering from four to ten. The charges include using explosives with intent to kill, using explosives with intent to destroy property, and being in possession of explosives.

Anti-Labor Judge.

After refusing Mr. Hughes' motion to fix bail, Justice Black said he would refer the matter to Joseph A. Delaney, judge of the Passaic county court of common pleas. Judge Delaney, a democrat, is the man who gave a six-months' sentence to Roger Baldwin, head of the American Civil Liberties Union, when he was arrested in 1924 for making a speech on the steps of a government building after all the halls of Paterson had been closed to the strikers.

Mormon Mine Operator, Democrat, to Get Utah Votes from Smoot, Rep.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Despite the long service of Reed Smoot to the financial department of the Mormon church, it is likely that the church will keep its hands off his fight for re-election to the senate this year, according to hulletins to the capital from impartial sources.

Normally Utah goes republican by about 20,000 to 25,000. Four years ago a Mormon democrat, King, was elected senator over Bamberger, the non-Mormon republican candidate. A large part of the church machinery was thrown to King's support. Smoot was alleged to have favored King's election.

This year the democrats have nominated Ashby Snow, son of one of the church apostles, who was closest to Brigham Young, and brother-in-law of the first associate of Heber Grant, the incumbent head of the church. Grant is a democrat. Ashby Snow is not only a very wealthy mining operator but he has been counsel for the church for many years. Between himself and Smoot the church influence is evenly balanced.

Borah Says He Doesn't Want to Be President

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 5.—Arriving in the Twin Cities today where he is to be the principal speaker at a Lief Ericson day celebration, United States Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, said that he did not care to be president of the United States; that he would prefer to continue serving the public in his present capacity than to hold the highest office that the people could elect him to.

"Eighty percent of the American people are opposed to the world court," believing it is a child of the league of nations, but I have not started on a trip to exploit my opinions on the matter," Borah said.

Stephenson Has Pot of Beans to Spill

Governor that Robinson was to be his senator.

Robinson was an Indianapolis attorney, a klockard of the klan, Asher declares, and, among other things, was personal attorney for Stephenson. "For the appointment, Asher said, Robinson promised that he would protect Stephenson's interests in the forthcoming trial.

When the demand for Robinson's appointment was first made upon Gov. Jackson, he is said to have refused and, according to Asher, it was not until Stephenson threatened to receive a statement of newspapermen and "scar: talking" that the governor promised to go thru with the appointment.

Stephenson Needed Money.

The newly appointed senator said that Stephenson needed some money. Asher says he gave Robinson the message and that Robinson told him he would "canvas his boys" and would have the cash the following day.

Asher said he called the next day and was handed $5,000, in $50 and $100 bills by Robinson and in return gave Robinson a receipt for the money signed by Stephenson.

This, with sums collected from other sources and totalling $12,000, was taken to Stephenson in the penitentiary here by Asher, he claims. Ralph Rigden, who later appeared as a witness for Stephenson in the Oberholtzer trial, was present when the money was handed to Stephenson, according to Asher. He says Attorney Remy of Marion County, Ind., also has affidavits from prisoners who witnessed the transaction.

Pressure on Warden.

Stephenson's message to Asher, he says, mentions the recent resignation of Edward J. Fogarty as warden of the Indiana penitentiary and indicates that he may reveal that this was brought about by pressure.

Meanwhile, thruout the state, bitterly divided camps have sprung up. Demands have been made upon Thomas Adams, Vincennes, Ind., publisher, to appear here and tell the story of his charges.

Jackson in Dilemma.

"I have made no answer yet. I do not know whether I will make an answer. I haven't given the matter any thought as I have only this minute received the telegram. I don't know whether my answer will be made public."

These were the words of Gov. Ed Jackson here today a moment after he reached his office at the state house when asked whether he would grant the appeal of Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, for an order on Warden Walter Daly that he and his probe committee be permitted to interview D. C. Stephenson, ex-grand dragon of the Indiana ku klux klan, now serving a life sentence at the Michigan City prison.

Adams Talks.

"I will make my own arrangements about appearing before the Indianapolis city council but I will be only too glad to present plain facts and figures to them provided they will hear me at a time when I can conveniently be in Indianapolis."

This was the answer of Thomas Adams, Vincennes publisher today to the action of the Indianapolis city council last night in which that body indicated it would summon Adams before it for further information concerning his charges of corruption in Indiana politics.

* * * *

Klan Gets Busy.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 5.—A committee of the city council here was expected to get in touch with Thomas Adams, Vincennes publisher today to invite him to appear before them tomorrow and explain charges that the council is "controlled by unsavory influences," following the passage of a resolution at the regular session last night, demanding that the charges be made more specific.

Ready to Talk.

The resolution follows charges of corruption in Indiana politics, made by Adams, in which he asserted that D. C. Stephenson, former kleagle of the Indiana ku klux klan, now serving a life sentence for the slaying of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, was now ready to talk, but that high state officials refused to allow the prisoner to be interviewed.

46th ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR MEETS WITH NO FLAG IN SIGHT

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GRAYSTONE BALL ROOM, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 5.—The 46th Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor is now in session.

* * * *

It opened with the delegates standing while a dance orchestra played the Star Spangled Banner.

* * * *

But the American flag was missing from the decorations. Frank X. Mertel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, apologized to the delegates. He stated this oversight would be remedied immediately. Sure enough! While President William Green was making his opening speech a great horde of "The Stars and Stripes" began arriving.

* * * *

"Peace" is supposed to have been ratched between the recently warring "labor" elements in the republican party when Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit, appeared before the A. F. of L. convention and delivered his address of welcome. Smith who claims that labor votes elected him and who says he is a member of the Letter Carriers' Association, was on the side of the Governor-Elect Green crowd in the recent internecine strife in the Wayne County (Detroit) convention of the republican party. Frank X. Mertel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, was with the Governor Groesbeck outfit that failed to capture the convention against their Green opponents. The local kept press, thru the appearance of both Meyer Smith and Martel on the platform at the opening of the convention, declare that "peace and harmony" has again been re-established within the Wayne County republican party, the republican party that is dominated by the Coolidge-Mellon crowd that speaks thru the Detroit Free Press that threatens the delegates to the convention not to temper with the "satisfactory" workings of the American Plan alias "Open Shop" Plan in the city of Detroit. It is sufficient to quote the old saying, "Politics makes strouge bedfellows".

* * * *

Morris Hillquit, the New York socialist, was one of the early arrivals on the first day, Monday. He was in Detroit, Sunday, for a lecture and stayed over for the start of the convention. Hillquit was busy publicizing Tony Sender, the socialist woman member of the German reichstag now touring this country, to the various delegates.

* * * *

Christian M. Madsen, former socialist state legislator in Illinois, is in the delegation of the painters' union. He promises to remain quiet.

* * * *

William Brandt, St. Louis socialist, is here as a delegate of the St. Louis central labor union. Frank J. Weber and Henry J. Ohl, Jr., both Wisconsin socialists, are here for the Milwaukee central labor union and the Wisconsin state federation of labor.

* * * *

Frank Duffy, of the carpenters' union, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, and not First Vice-President James Duncan, of the Granite Cutters,' who has for years performed this ceremony, presented the report of the Executive Council. He gave merely a summary, however. The 60-page report, in printed form, was turned over to the delegates. Statistics as to the number of delegates who actually read the report would no doubt furnish interesting revelations.

* * * *

John Bromley, one of the fraternal delegates from Great Britain, got the floor on the first day to present President William Green with an inkstand. He said it was the gift of the workers in the British railway industry who have just been celebrating the 101st anniversary of the running of the first steem train in the British Isles. This is the Bromley who received rough treatment at the hands of coal miner delegates to the recent British Trade Union Congress, who charged he had aided the employers' attack on the strike. It was only after an adjournment and a reconvening of the congress that Bromley was able to get the floor and make his address.

* * * *

Rabbi Stephen L. Wise, of New York City, is coming to Detroit to address the delegates on the Passaic textile workers' strike. He has taken an active part in this struggle. Ellen Lawson, one of the Passaic strikers, will also address the convention.

Brownlie and his colleagues with us this morning."

It was for different last year at Atlantic City when Fraternal Delegate Purcell threw down the gauntlet to the A. F. of L. when he said in the language of the day, "We are a healthy and bitter speech by Green in reply.

Will Smother Mexican Issue.

The regular fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. from Great Britain, Canada and Mexico will make their speeches tomorrow. Efforts are being made to smother any controversial issues that the Mexicans might raise.

Jackson in Dilemma.

Joseph Siemens of the German Shoe Workers Union who is in this country studying conditions for his organization also addressed the convention urging greater unity between the workers of the world. "We must unite together internationally to get better wages and conditions," he said.

Vernon E. Ziegler, a law student from the University of Chicago, announced as representing the federal council of the churches of Christ, pleaded for a better understanding between American student elements and the working class.

Students Interested.

He said there is a growing number of students in the colleges and universities of the country who are showing a genuine interest in the problems of labor and industry. His said special efforts were being made to persuade students not to allow themselves to be used as strikebreakers.

The first big fight for next year's A. F. of L. convention has come from St. Petersburg. When the invitation was read off by Secretary Frank Morrison no mention was made of the state. "Is that St. Petersburg, Russia?" called out Delegate Max Hayes of the printers' delegation.

Ask Andy, He Knows.

"Oh, you're behind the times, Max," chimed in Andrews Furuseth, the head of the seamen's delegation. "Don't you know that St. Petersburg, Russia, has been changed to Leningrad?"

This voluntary information from Furuseth put the convention in an uproar of laughter. The invitation was from the Rotary Club of St. Petersburg, Florida.

Porto Rico Labor Has Strike.

Greetings were received from the organized workers of Porto Rico calling attention to the two months' strike of 6,000 tobacco workers on the island.

Many Resolutions.

Resolutions have been introduced calling for aid to the Passaic textile workers, also for assistance to the cattle workers fighting the wage reduction inaugurated by the American Wood Company of Williamette, Ore., urging the establishment of a labor cheutsuque to assist organizing work in the south; denouncing the company union menace; reaffirming protest against modification of federal law excluding aliens ineligible to citizenship; request to appointment of American members of joint commission to consider problem of Mexican immigration to this country; covering the jurisdictional dispute between the painters and electrical workers; pledging support to the bakers' union in its war against the bread trust.

May Help Porto Rico.

Others proposing creation of a commission by congress to investigate conditions in Porto Rico; to favor the transfer of government administration of Porto Rico from the bureau of insular affairs to a civil government, and to continue assistance to organized labor in Porto Rico.

Further resolutions are proposing that women shall longer have equal representation with trade unions in central bodies; proposing amendment of existing laws to require that contracts for work done for the United States shall provide that American citizens he given preference to employing labor at the scale of wages, hours and working conditions prevailing in the community within which the work is performed, this being an attempted blow at the employment of non-union alien labor.

Ask O. K. for Smith.

Delegate J. M. Orlando of the New York State Federation of Labor introduced a resolution urging endorsement of Tammany Hall Governor Al Smith for election to the presidency of the United States. Other resolutions oppose any further increase in postage rates on printed matter, continued effort to secure enactment of longshoremen's and harbor workers' compensation act, reaffirming adherence to the principle of an inheritance tax and opposing legislation for the registration and finger printing of aliens.

is not content with making life miserable for the girl but insists that she must grab off everything in her immediate vicinity that is not nailed down. This is what a London correspondent has to say about this remarkable girl: "When Eleonore is present, it is said, money disappears mysteriously from peoples' pockets and rings from their fingers. Sometimes they do not return. The girl herself however is the principal sufferer. Needles from near-by workbaskets are reported to stick themselves in her arms and hands and even in her face and her cheeks are sometimes smeared with color from red or blue pencils."

* * * *

THERE is a lot more to this but enough for the present. Eleonore got a trip to London out of it and a corps of bewhiskered scientists are analysing the phenomena. Let us hope she is good-looking. Again we say that the opportunity to make good in this world is no more rare today that one hundred years ago. In fact it is quite the other way. In all probability if Eleonore lived a few hundred years ago the evil spirits would be saved the trouble of sticking needles in her anatomy. Some quite earthly person would jab a red hot poker into her on the ground that she was in open and remunerative competition with the state god.

Convict Rejects Offer of U. S. to Aid Betrayal of Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE frame-up of Nick Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti at its present stage is like a sinking ship. It has been shot thru and thru with broadsides of repeated disclosures that have revealed to the world the rotten hulk of the case manufactured against these two Italian workers by the United States government, thru its department of justice, in collaboration with the local prosecutors in the "Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

This frame-up of the capitalist government was again raked fore and aft by the terrific attack of 63 truth-telling affidavits presented in one court by Attorney William G. Thompson and supported in arguments by him before Judge Webster Thayer at Dedham, Mass.

The truth is so overwhelming that even a six-year-old child could confidently declare for the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti, not knowing one word of the law. But not so the court and the lawyers for the prosecution; bolstering the rule of the electric chair against the working class.

The prosecution has not run up the white flag of surrender. It does not admit the very evident nakedness of its frame-up. It is still struggling to put Sacco and Vanzetti to death. It is carefully and deliberately proceeding with the task of plugging up all the leaks in its frame-up, fighting off the scuttling of its case as best it may. It clings to its charge of "guilty!" against Sacco and Vanzetti. It still seeks their lives.

These tactics of the prosecution were well revealed in the insidious efforts made by the prosecution to get James H. Weeks, the pal of Celestino Madeiros in the Wrentham National Bank robbery, to repudiate his admissions made to the Sacco-Vanzetti lawyers, in which he corroborated many points brought up in the confession by Madeiros that the South Braintree job was the work of the Morelli gang of Providence, Rhode Island.

It was on May 27th, this year, that Attorney Thompson visited Weeks in prison, where he is serving a life sentence. Weeks told Thompson that after making an affidavit for Sacco and Vanzetti on May 25th, and before signing it, he was visited by Michael Fleming of the state police and Assistant District Attorney Kelley, of Norfolk county, with a stenographer. This was the frame-up supporting trio.

Mr. Fleming, Weeks said, first talked with him alone, saying he understood that Mr. Thompson had obtained from Weeks a full confession in regard to the South Braintree hold-up. Weeks told Fleming that he had made a statement but had not yet signed it. Fleming, the cunning, asked if any inducement had been offered and Weeks told him "NO!" Fleming and Weeks were then joined by the others.

Mr. Kelley, the assistant prosecutor, part of the staff organized to put the frame-up over, asked about the statement and finally said, "Mr. Thompson will be out shortly with an affidavit and will ask you to place your signature on it."

Then the spokesmen for the hangmen of the working class in Massachusetts used the familiar lure of frame-up agents—the BRIBE! Here was Kelley's threat and offer:

"Now, if you do this (sign the affidavit), you know what it will mean to you," declared Kelley. "As I understand you, you have never been mixed-up in any serious crimes, only hauling whiskey or bootlegging. YOU HAVE EVERY CHANCE FOR COMMUTATION OF YOUR SENTENCE."

It will be remembered that Weeks was sentenced to life imprisonment. Here was a chance to join the frame-up gang and win his liberty. But Weeks showed that there is more honesty and decency among convicted criminals that among the frame-up agents of the department of justice of the United States government, and its allies and lackeys.

Weeks showed this when Kelley, the prosecutor, seeking to win his favor and weaken his opposition, gave him (Weeks) a cigarette, and then asked whether anything had been offered Weeks for making a statement. Weeks defiantly replied:

"No, not as much as this cigaretts has been offered to me by anyone concerned in the Sacco-Vanzetti case."

Even that didn't floor the frame-up agents. Weeks said that Mr. Kelly and Mr. Fleming threatened him that if he signed a statement, it would put the state and the police to plenty of trouble, and that he himself would be in a fine fix if they were to indict him for being on the South Braintree job in 1920, and also indict him as an accessory to the shooting of the woman in the North End of Boston, of which Madeiros had told Weeks.

It has not been shown anywhere that Weeks had anything to do with the South Braintree affair. Weeks retorted to the government officers that he could easily prove where he was on both of these occasions. He said Fleming then remarked that he, Weeks, was inside and that Fleming was outside; that Fleming could look up plenty of things and that Weeks would have a fine time trying to prove where he was.

In other words, the police threatened to use the frame-up against Weeks, the convict, as they had used it against Sacco and Vanzetti, to advance the interests of the capitalism that they served.

In a further attempt to puncture the affidavit of Weeks, the police officers asked Weeks if Madeiros had ever told he and he had told Weeks in the presence of others, and Weeks replied that Madeiros had told about different parts of the affair to the widow of Steve Benkosky at Lime Rock Inn, six miles outside of Providence. Weeks said Joe Morelli owned various cars, including a large Cole. It was a Cole car that carried the license plate of New Bedford, a few days after the same plate had been attached to a Buick car in South Braintree, a Buick car having been used in the South Braintree crime.

Thus the visit of the frame-up agents with the convict, Weeks, in the Massachusetts' state prison came to nought. Will they succeed elsewhere?

Tomorrow:—Other attempts by the prosecutors of Sacco and Vanzetti to keep the frame-up ship afloat.

AIMEE SWITCHES HER RADIO ONTO 'GOD'S ENEMIES'

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—After a recess over the week end, during which time Aimee Semple McPherson, woman evangelist, with the aid of her followers at Angelus Temple, portrayed the "March of the Martyrs," a tableaux of religious persecution, which she claims is a parallel to her own case, the preliminary hearing of the evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Beiiaff, all charged with conspiracy, was scheduled to get under way again today.

An overflow crowd was on hand last night at Angelus Temple to watch and applaud Mrs. McPherson as the principal character in the various episodes depicting "religious persecution."

HOOSIER SCRIBES PUT ISSUE UP TO THE GOVERNOR

VINCENNES, Ind., Oct. 5.—Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher and chairman of the probe committee of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association investigating the political control alleged to have been exercised of the republican party in Indiana by D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of Indiana ku klux klan, now serving a life sentence in the Michigan City prison, today appealed to Governor Ed Jackson for special permission to interview Stephenson at the state prison.

"Demand on Governor.

Adams sent the following telegram to the governor:

"As chairman of the probe committee I appeal to you for a sweeping order on Warden Walter Daly of the Michigan City prison for the privilege of a confidential and public conference with D. C. Stephenson. I desire to take with me six senators whom I had before me Saturday and the six members of the probe committee. Mr. Stephenson has indicated to me that he desired to meet the newspaper men I represent. It is no attack on justice for a penalized prisoner to be allowed to tell the truth."

INVITE A. F. OF L. TO MEET I. F. T. U. AT MEXICO CITY

Amsterdam Uses 'Crom' as Intermediary

By LAURENCE TODD, Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. — (FP)—Through the Mexican Regional Confederation of Labor (the Crom), the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has been invited to meet the representatives of the International Federation of Trade Unions, in Mexico City late this month. Negotiations for the re-affiliation of the A. F. of L. with the I. F. T. U., whose headquarters are in Amsterdam, have been carried on with varying prospect of success for the past sixty years.

Pan-American Federation Announcement.

Announcing the Mexican invitation, the Pan-American Federation of Labor says that President Green is asked to send a full delegation "to greet the representatives of the National Federation of Labor from Holland, England, Belgium, Sweden, France, Denmark, Austria, Poland, Germany, Italy and Spain who are going to meet in Mexico City the latter part of October. The Mexican Federation of Labor is very anxious to have the American delegation in said gathering, which is not in any sense a labor convention or congress.

Various Unions Re-Affiliate.

Three years ago John Brown of the headquarters staff at Amsterdam visited the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. and then went to Mexico. He made a report urging that efforts be made to get the Mexican labor movement to affiliate with the I. F. T. U. Later, when Ramsey MacDonald took a hostile attitude toward the Obregon government in Mexico, Brown stood by the Mexicans.

In recent months the Brotherhood of Carpenters have affiliated with the Wood Workers section of the I. F. T. U., and the machinists have renewed their affiliation with the Metal Workers' Federation of that international. The United Mine Workers are affiliated with the Mine Workers' Federation and various other bodies in the A. F. of L. have begun or resumed relations with other sections of the Amsterdam group.

A. F. of L. Reservations.

The two main points on which direct negotiations between Amsterdam and the A. F. of L. have failed are the matter of per capita tax and national autonomy. The A. F. of L. has refused to pay as large a per capita tax as the Europeans demand. And it refuses to agree to obey any orders—such as those for a general strike or the circulation of an appeal to which it may be opposed—that the majority may favor.

If on A. F. of L. delegation goes to Mexico to meet the leaders of the I. F. T. U. it will be to thresh out these differences

NOTHING LESS THAN FREEDOM

Demand No. Compromise from U. S.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANILA, Oct. 5.—Just as Colonel Carmi A. Thompson, personal representative of President Coolidge "investigating" the Philippine Islands and the Filipino demand for independence as promised by the U. S., is about to depart from the islands to make his report to Coolidge, Manuel Quezon, leader of the Independence forces, has made an announcement that the Filipinos want full and immediate freedom or nothing.

Independence or Nothing.

Quezon's speech will be published in the Philippine Herald, and the declaration of the supreme national council, demanding immediate, absolute independence, will be passed thru a joint session of both houses of legislature and presented to Colonel Thompson as a memorial embodying Filipino demands.

Hitherto, Thompson has had to consider compromise measures, such as pleas for a native governor, to take the place of General Wood, of election of legislators now appointed by General Wood and abolition of his veto power.

Imperialist Joker.

Thompson is definitely opposed to any independence—at least now. He is considering proposing a policy which means postponing it indefinitely. It is explained in the following typically imperialist manner, appearing to grant something while granting nothing at all:

"It is suggested that congress amend the Jones act so that the possession of the islands shall be handed over in a given period, such as forty years, but that ten years before the expiration of that period, definite action shall be taken to determine whether freedom is to be granted at the end of the time fixed."

Brazil Revolt.

Literature Boom in Ukraine of the Soviet Union

KHARKOV, Oct. 5.—One-half of all books published in the Ukraine are in the Ukrainian language, says a Tass news agency dispatch of the book business. During the 7½ years of the Soviet regime more volumes have been issued in the Ukrainian language than in 100 years preceding. In the past 3½ years 7,216 books have come from the presses in the Ukraine.

SOVIET UNION RELATIONS STIR U. S. CAPITOL

Borah to Renew His Agitation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 5.—The interview published in the Washington Herald last Sunday which purported to be a statement of the policy of the Soviet government on foreign relations from the lips of Joseph Stalin, secretary of the All-Union Communist Party, created quite a lot of excitement in government circles here.

Enemies of Soviet recognition immediately rushed to their files and dug up everything they could lay their hands on that would be liable to make the politicians waver. The most available arsenal of anti-Soviet lies is in the headquarters of the A. F. of L. and in the absence of Charles Wright, there is always a flunkey who turns over the information to any D. of J. or private detective agent that comes along.

Senator Borah was interviewed on the latest publicity on Soviet recognition, and announced that he was ready to renew his activities. Important New York business interests are using all their influence now to bring about a change in government policy.

Town in India Wiped Out by Heavy Flood

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The town of Mandla in the central provinces of India has been practically wiped out by terrific rain storms, it was reported today in a Central News dispatch from Calcutta. Two hundred persons already are reported drowned. The population of Mandla is 5,400.

CROWNS GRAVITATE TOWARDS AMERICAN DOLLARS

A few of the more or less crowned heads of Europe who contemplate trips to America.

The extension of the power of American dollar imperialism and the rise of the revolutionary movements have caused moribund European royalty to curry favor in the land of the dollar sign. New York and Washington are becoming like Versailles at the time when Nepoleon was the power in the world—his court was the center of all courts. But now that courts are getting a little out of fashion with the advance of hereditated and materialistic capitalism, the menalone of America's plunderbund will serve to entertain the royal guests—and that with a certain amount of paternalism. For what is the measly income of, say, a Spanish princess, compared with the millions at the disposal of any American steel magnate's daughter?

Tortures of Political Prisoners in Poland Once More Exposed

THE bestial treatment of the political prisoners in Poland is known to the world. This practice of the "democratic government" became so severe that even capitalist institutions have been aroused by it. The International Committee of Red Cross under the pressure of public opinion sent a delegation to Poland for investigating the situation in prisons. The chairman of the committee was well known Robert Brunel. When the delegation came to Poland the authorities did all they could to hide the truth. No wonder that the delegation gave out a very mild report altho admitting that the prisoners are mistreated and beaten. As answer to this, one of the prisoners is writing a letter to Mr. Brunel pointing out that he is ready to submit more facts which have been hidden from the delegation. As the letter is of great interest we publish it in full:

OPEN LETTER TO MR. ROBERT BRUNEL, DELEGATE OF THE RED CROSS TO INVESTIGATE THE STATE OF POLISH PRISONS:

SIR:

In your report on the state of the prisons in Poland, you write that only in two cases did you ascertain the fact that the police had beaten the political prisoners at Lodz and Warsaw. Then one of the political prisoners beaten and covered with bruises whom you saw while visiting the prison in Targowa Street at Lodz on August 12, 1924, is precisely myself. The marks of the blows were so distinct, so glaring, that in your report you expressed the hope that the perpetrators would be punished.

AND just as, Mr. Robert Brunel, your idyllic report of the state of the prisons in Poland is far from the reality, so is this hope: the perpetrators were not only NOT punished, they were not even brought to trial; and what is more, one of them, the candidate of the political police, Zakrsewski, got the rank of subcommissioner, and the other, the provocateur Leon Pusiak, was received into the service of the political police and also got the rank of file leader.

Further than that: Pusiak found himself at Baranowicze on the prisoner's bench charged with having beaten and mistreated the prisoners of provocators' activities. The court, however, released him, and while Pusiak was quietly going on with his business of provocator—the judicial authority at Lods two years later sent warrants of arrest in pursuit of Pusiak for provocation in my trial. And in a very short time indeed, in another part of Poland, the arrests and massacres will begin again, and Pusiak will appear in the role of commissioner. Yes, Mr. Brunel. And I—at the end of two years (and I still have two years to serve in prison)—am seriously ill and shall probably never leave prison again.

FOR, Mr. Brunel, those blows and bruised wounds, which you saw two years ago, are not all. During these tortures they hurt my ear, and at the end of an illness of a year and a half that hurt took such a dangerous turn that, in danger of losing my life, I was forced to submit (at my own expense and cost, a mere bagatelle, isn't it) to an operation for cutting the membrance of the drum and of the ossicle of hearing and for the trepanning of the skull. And five months have passed since this operation, but thanks to the insufficient medical attention in the prison the wound of the operation did not heal, as a result of which the general state of my health is growing steadily worse.

THIS above facts are so shameful that perhaps they will appear improbable. But I can assure you that in there occur among us a large number of events similar to mine, 2: at any time I can furnish suitable documents confirming the truth of my statements 3) of those officials of the government or of the press of the country I demand what I know in advance they will deny that they quote me in reference to their calumnious insinuations.

MR. BRUNEL, the motive of this letter is the fact that every time a stranger raises his voice to protest against the white terror in Poland, the press of my country takes refuge in you. This is happening at this very moment. Are you inclined, in the light of the above facts, to which I can add many others, even more eloquent, to accept the role of a screen for all sorts of cruelties? Will you not consider your report once more? I await your answer . . . .

B. Rabinowicz, Warsaw,
Pawiak (Prison).

KOMINTERN TO CAPTURE TRADE

Many Industries Have Formed Combines

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—The organization of the giant steel combine on the continent between various nations' metal firms is regarded as only one of a number of such combines already made or in the making. By this policy Germany hopes to dominate continental industry and give England and the United States sharp competition.

Rapid Process of Trustification.

Thruout Germany the process of trustification has been going on at a rapid rate. The dye trust has $1,100,000,000 capital and is Germany's leading trust. The steel trust, which has just become the largest factor in the new European combine, is capitalized at $800,000,000. Then there is the Silesian coal and coke trust, the petroleum trust, the linoleum trust, the optical goods trust, the airplane trust and several other great but lesser trusts.

The banks of Germany are organized in the system of "chain" establishments. The shipping companies are working under mutual agreements and every line of industry except the textile industry has an approach to trustification. The textile firms are only now beginning negotiations looking to trustification.

The optical trust of Germany has an agreement with the Eastman Kodak Company of the United States for "cooperation."

Disrupts Government Policy.

All these trusts are, as in the United States, controlling the policy of the government in foreign affairs as well as in domestic policy. The German chemical and dye trust is very powerful, having control of products used on a world scale. The airplane trust divides the German airways and dictates policies on foreign and domestic orders.

Shanghai Mill Strike to Force Gen. Sun to Make Mill Labor Safe

SHANGHAI, Oct. 5.—Workers in the Nagai Wata Cotton mills started a strike on Aug. 20, which has been endorsed by numerous civic bodies. In a petition to Gen. Sun Chuan-fang, military leader of that part of China, the strikers declare that they have walked out because the Japanese bosses have recently killed another workman, just as was done last year before the massacre of strike-sympathizers by British police. The Japanese consul-general has failed to bring the accused murderer into court.

Meanwhile a labor union leader has suddenly disappeared and his associates believe he has been killed. They called the strike in protest. They ask Gen. Sun to compel the Japanese officials to make the mills safe for Chinese workers.

IMPERIALISTS IN CHINA PLOT SEIZURE OF RAILWAY JOINTLY OWNED BY CHINA AND SOVIETS

MOSCOW, Sept. 15—(By Mail)—A telegram from Peking published in the Pravda declares that according to information from Mukden, the recent visit of the French ambassador de Mariel to Mukden was to come to an agreement with Chang Tso-lin concerning the protection of French interests in the East China Railway thru the Russo-Asiatic Bank. At the same time de Mariel aimed to strengthen the influence of France in the air force in Mukden.

White Guards Control.

The white guardist Sarja, which appears in Harbin, publishes an inspired report according to which the negotiations between the Russo-Asiatic Bank which is in the hands of white emigrants, and the authorities in Mukden, concerning the fate of the East China Railway is being continued.

The paper points out that the French government is supporting the Russo-Asiatic Bank in its intentions with regard to the railway. The French government, it declares, is interested in the redemption of the loans which France granted to the czarist government and for this reason it is taking up a friendly attitude towards the representatives of the Russo-Asiatic Bank who point out that the best guarantee for the French creditors of Russia would be the East China Railway, which was built from the French loans.

Imperialists' Schems.

The French government has already discussed this question with other powers and has received the approval of Great Britain and the United States. The Japanese government has not yet decided upon its attitude in the matter as it wishes the standpoint of the Chinese government to be cleared up.

Tries to Seize Line for French.

The administration of the East China Railway has received a letter from the chairman of the administration board, who is a Chinese, that the chief of staff of the Mukden troops has received an order from Tchang to take over the business of the East Chian Railway. As chairman, therefore, he instructs the administrative board to obey the order of the marshal.

In this connection it must be observed that upon the basis of the Mukden treaty the chairman of the administrative board has not the power to issue orders to the administrative board without the agreement of the second chairman who is a representative of the Soviet Union.

Oil Lease Fight to U. S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The government's long fight to cancel naval oil reserve leases which, it is contended, were fraudulently made by former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall will enter its final phase in the United States supreme court here today or Tuesday.

The Elk Hills, California, case was set for oral argument and a battery of lawyers awaited the word of Chief Justice Taft to begin. As the court assembled for the first session since the summer recess, three cases preceded the oil case on the calendar.

Decision in the Elk Hills case is expected to have an important bearing on the famous Teapot Dome lease to the Harry F. Sinclair Mammoth Oil company.

The registration of the party membership thru the payment of the United Labor Ticket Assessment Stamp will not be completed until 4,694 additional members pay the assessment and thus register their membership in the reorganized party.

10,000 members registered thru payment of the United Labor Ticket Assessment—that is the goal which must be reached. There are more than that number of members on the party rolls—even after the reorganization. The party has given six months in which to pay the assessment. During that time every member can afford to pay an additional fifty cents in dues to the party.

It has taken four months to secure the payment of the assessment by 5,306 members. Does the party move so slowly that another four months must elapse before the 4,694 additional payments are collected?

Our party can do better than that. It should be possible to examine the dues books of the membership during the months of October and collect the assessment from those members who have not yet paid. Those nuclei which take pride in their effectiveness and efficiency as party units will take up the work systematically and see to it that their registration is completed during the month of October.

REGISTER EVERY MEMBER THRU COLLECTION OF THE ASSESSMENT.

MAKE THE REGISTRATION THE MEANS OF DRAWING EVERY MEMBER ACTIVELY INTO THE PARTY WORK.

THE NUCLEUS CAN IN EXAMINING THE DUES BOOKS AND COLLECTING THE REGISTRATION ASSESSMENT AT THE SAME TIME ASSIGN WORK FOR THE PARTY TO EACH MEMBER.

MAKE THE REGISTRATION A PARTY MOBILIZATION!

Red Nights Begin in New York City Campaign

On Friday night, Oct. 8, the Workers Party in New York City will hold a "Red Night" in Brownsville. Meetings on this night will be held at ten corners in the section and all meetings will end at 10:30 p. m. sharp when they will adjourn to the main grand wind up rally to be held at the corners of Stone and Pitkin Aves., Brownsville.

Former Red Nights were successful and it is expected that there will be at least 3,000 people at the main rally. The speakers for the main rally will be Bertram D. Wolfe, Fannie Warshafsky, Morris Rosen, Sam Nesin, George Primoff, William W. Weinstone and others. All meetings in the section will be addressed by a total of 78 speakers. All comrades are urged to come to the meeting and the grand rally to make them a success. No other meetings will be held anywhere in the city on this night.

Red Night for the East Side.

On Saturday night, Oct. 9, we will hold a monster Red Night on the East Side. Eleven meetings will be held with over 78 speakers participating. The main rally will be held on Rutgers Square and all meetings will adjourn at 10:30 p. m. sharp to meet at the rally at Rutgers Square. The speakers at the rally will be Charles Krumbein, Elmer T. Allison, Alexander Trachtenberg, William W. Weinstone, B. Lifshitz, Harry Winitsky, Jack Stachel and others. All comrades are urged to come early to the meetings as we must have sufficient committees to make these meetings a success.

COMMUNISTS IN BOSTON HOLD ROUSING MEET

Candidates of W. P. Present Issues

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—Lewis Marks, candidate for governor on the Workers (Communist) Party ticket, and Max Lerner, candidate for attorney-general, were the two principal speakers at the ratification meeting held in Paine Memorial Hall on Friday evening, Oct. 1.

Brother Weissman, a member of the Capmakers' Union, declared that he and many members of the union would support the Workers Party ticket because it was first in the fight for their interests.

Marks pointed out that the average wage in Massachusetts was only $24.50 a week even amid a period of prosperity and that Governor Fuller is himself a millionaire and a representative of big business.

Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for governor of New York, aroused great enthusiasm by a stirring speech. Bert Miller presided.

BOSTON PARTY HOLDS NOON FACTORY MEETING

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The Boston Workers Party held its first noon-hour campaign meeting outside the Mason & Hamlin piano factory a few days ago. When Comrade Whittier got up on the stand, the workers soon gathered on the sidewalk and at the windows, showing a very great interest in the issues brought out by the speaker.

Some of the workers expressed great dissatisfaction with conditions in the Mason & Hamlin factory. There is no union, and the inevitable results, low wages, speed-up and spying are constantly crushing these unorganized workers who produce one of the most expensive pianos in the world.

Comrade Whittier compared the advantages to the workers of an organized shop, to the disadvantages of employes who work in an unorganized factory.

Cleveland District Gets Behind Drive for Daily Worker

CLEVELAND, Oct. 5.—There is no more important campaign before the Workers (Communist) Party at the present time than the campaign to Keep the Daily Worker.

In order to cope with the situation the District Executive Committee is calling three section meetings in Cleveland.

Section 1 will meet on Wednesday, Oct. 13, at the Hungarian Hall; Section 2 at the South Slavic Hall, Friday, Oct. 8; and Section 3 at the Freiheit Gesangvereln Hall, Thursday, Oct. 7.

All comrades take notice, and be at your respective meetings. Comrade F. Bolch is chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign.

In addition there will be a meeting of the District "Keep the Daily Worker" Committee" with representatives of the District Language Fractions at the District Office, Sunday, Oct. 10, at 10:30 a. m. The meeting will begin on time, and every comrade must be present, as the work before us must be carried on by all party members.

Workers of Harlem to Show Solidarity

All preparations have been made for a rousing mass meeting Thursday evening, Oct. 7, at the Harlem headquarters of the Workers Party, 81 E. 110th St. Circulars calling upon the workers to build their party which defends their interests have been distributed very carefully at union meetings, in proletarian neighborhoods, to former Daily Worker subscribers, to registered socialist voters, at open air meetings.

The mass meeting this Thursday evening, October 7, will be a get-together for the neighborhood, where Workers Party members will meet outsiders, sympathizers and talk things over.

Special interest is shown in the Harlem mass meeting this coming Thursday evening because the speakers are all Workers Party candidates in the coming elections, three of them local Harlem candidates. The speakers will be William W. Weinstone, candidate for Congress in the 20th Congressional District, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, candidate for State Comptroller, Ben Lifshitz and Julius Codkind, candidates for Assembly. The date is Thursday evening, October 7; the place is the Harlem Workers' Center, 81 E. 110th Street.

We will send sample copies of the DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

MOSCOW ROCKED BY REVELATIONS OF KLUXER GRAFT

"Hundred Percenters" Stopped at Nothing

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 5.—"Idealistic" operations of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, involving fraud, corruption and bribery were laid bare here by the investigation committee of the Indiana republican editorial association at a meeting of the association and members of the state senate.

A legislative probe of the operations of the "hundred per cent American" organization, under the control of D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon, looms possible, as the senators who heard the charges against the kluxers declared themselves "astounded" that such corruption could have existed in the fair state of Indiana.

The charges are backed up by pictures and photostatic copies of documents, receipts for fortunes in money which changed hands, and other documents.

"Dragon" Confesses.

Stephenson, who is now in jail, threatens to expose the entire mass of corruption, which prevailed under his rule.

In a letter to one of his former lieutenants, Stephenson declares that he can give information showing how certain public utilities were allowed to gouge the public with exorbitant rates, how court decisions were "fixed," how huge sums were used in the 1924 campaign to buy votes and stuff the ballot boxes, how certain individuals pocketed many thousands of dollars directly from the public's funds, how liquor interests were allowed to operate under protection of law officials, and how bank deposits were shifted so that certain persons could obtain high interest on the taxpayers' money.

Fears Death.

In stating this, Stephenson declared, "This may mean that I will return to Indiana in a box, as I have been warned that this would happen."

The senators who declared they would bring the matter before the legislature included leaders from both parties. They were: Senator Joseph Cravens of Madison, senate minority leader, and Walter Chambers, New Castle, and George Saunders, Bington, democrats; Senators Thomas Daily, Indianapolis, Leonard Barker, Thornton, and Finch, Muncie, republicans.

The elder Ross had another source of information as to world affairs, besides his morning and afternoon newspapers, and his idealist son. His associates in the oil game were thinking vigorously on the subject and they held long conferences and studied elaborate reports. They also were dissatisfied with the diplomacy of President Wilson—not because he wasn't making the world safe for democracy, but because he wasn't making it safe for oil operators. In the territories being taken from the enemies were petroleum regions of wealth untold; and here, in the imbecile name of idealism, we were permitting France and Britain to grab this treasure, while all we got was the job of keeping the Turks off the Armenians!

So far as Dad personally was concerned, his interests were at home. It was Excelsior Pete and Victor Oil and the rest of the "Big Five" which were reaching out for foreign concessions and if they got the prizes, the price of oil at home might drop, and cost Dad a good chunk of money. Nevertheless, he took the patriotic attitude; the country needed oil, and it was our business to get it. So you see, Dad also was an idealist; and it vexed him that his kind of idealism was so little appreciated by his son.

He was becoming convinced that the university was to blame. No matter what Bunny might say, it was this "education business" that was unsettling his mind, and spoiling him to deal with practical affairs. Several times Bunny realized that the aged old man was probing his mind; there must be some older person influencing Bunny's thought, and the most suspicious fact was Bunny's failure to mention such a person. Bunny realized that sooner or later the name of Daniel Webster Irving, alias Daniel Washington Irving, was bound to come into the open; so he hit on a shrewd idea—he would get Dad to meet his instructor-friend; it would never be possible for Dad to report a man whom he had received in his home!

"Dad, I want to bring one of my teachers up to see the field." And of course Dad was delighted: it would bring a bit of culture into his world and give him a share in his boy's mental life. One fear which haunted Dad was that this "education business" might cause Bunny to become ashamed of his ignorant old father. Yes, Dad knew it, there were high-brow fellows crazy enough to look down upon twenty-five million dollars—or at any rate to pretend to!

Mr. Irving was to teach in summer school, but he had ten days in between and Bunny suggested that he might like to motor up to Paradise for a week-end, and the young instructor accepted with pleased surprise. So they set out, one morning in June, in that sunshiny weather which is so common in Southern California that you forget all about it. On the way they talked about events in Russia and Siberia; the progress being made by General Denikin and Admiral Kolchak, the desperate efforts of the Bolsheviks to organize a "red army," and the hope of the German ruling class to win back to respectability by serving the allies against the Russian revolution. Also Bunny told Mr. Irving his idea about this visit; Dad must be allowed to do most of the talking, and Mr. Irving should voice only such opinions as were proper for an elderly oil man to hear.

VIII

They arrived at Paradise, and the instructor was duly installed in the fine new Spanish "ranch-house" which Dad had erected on the tract for the use of himself and his guests. It was built around the four sides of a court, with a fountain splashing in the center, and date palms and banana plants and big shoots from the bougainvillea vine starting to climb the stucco walls. There was a Japanese who served the double function of butler and cook, and a boy who combined gardening with dish washing, while Ruth had been promoted to be house-keeper and general boss. There were six guest-rooms, and when the executives and directors and geologists and engineers of Ross Consolidated came up to the tract, they were always filling the guests, and it was one big, happy family. They would settle around a green baize table in the living-room right after supper and start playing poker; they would pull off their coats and unhitch their suspenders, and ring for the Jap to bring more cigars and whiskey and soda, and they would fill the room with blue smoke and never move from their seats until the small hours of the morning. It was an amusing illustration of the double standard of morals, that Dad was glad his son preferred to stay in his own room and read, and not hear the stories which the oil men would tell when they broke loose.

But there was no gambling this time—this was to be a high-brow week-end, in honor of "the professor," as Dad persisted in referring to his guest. The elder Ross was naively proud to have a "professor" visiting him, and to show off the refinery and the well that was spudding in, and the one that was boiling, and the score that were drilling. And Mr. Irving behaved beautifully; they talked till midnight and he answered a hundred of Dad's questions about world affairs and told what he had seen of relief work in Greece and of diplomacy in France.

The young instructor had some relatives in high positions, so he knew things on the inside; they fitted in with what Dad knew—yes, it was awful, the way things were being bungled. My God, here were we jist telling the Japs to help themselves to Saghalien, that had more oil perhaps than all the rest of the world; and the British of course were getting to work to repair the pipe-lines at Baku, and at Mosul they had the whole field, and the French were getting into Persia with the British and the same in Syria, and where was your Uncle Sam? Vernon Roscoe was jist raising hell, because he had had some contracts at Baku, and what was the use of kicking out the Bolsheviks and putting in the Anglo-Dutch? Roscoe said this country needed a practical man for president and not a college professor—

Dad stopped, afraid that he had made a "break"; but Mr. Irving laughed and said, "Don't worry, Mr. Ross, I am not entitled to that high honor and don't expect ever to make it." So Dad went on with Roscoe's tirade; the oil men by golly had had their lesson, and were going to get together and have something to say about the next election. And Bunny and his Bolshevik instructor exchanged the faintest trace of a glance, and afterwards when Dad was alone with Bunny, he remarked, "Son, that's a bright young fellow. It's a pleasure to talk with a man that understands affairs like him."

READING SHOP OF N. Y. FIRM JOINS STRIKE

Garment Union Finds Cops and Courts

READING, Pa., Oct. 5.—When striking members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union came down from New York to look into the scab shop of the Loraine company at 11th and Marion streets, they found the Reading police as active for the garment capitalists as those in Manhattan. They even met an injunction.

The company moved to Reading with a few professional scabs about July 1 and offered Reading workers $14 for a 54 hour week's work. This was lovely, as in New York before the strike wages were far above the sweat shop rate the company offered in Reading.

Form Union From Strikers.

Together with seven Reading labor officials, connected with the Federated Trades Council, led by J. Henry Stump, president, the strikers began picket the shop and pulled out 45, or about half of the workers, mostly women, of which a local I. L. G. W. U. was formed.

While so engaged, some of the gangsters kept on hand by the company rushed out of the shop and assaulted the pickets, and the police conveniently complained, arrested them, labor leaders and all, for "disorderly conduct."

A Little Matter of Politics.

Police Magistrate William T. Snyder, who admits he didn't know the law, obligingly fined the batch $6.25 each on the charge. But stump, who is a perennial socialist candidate for mayor figured that the whole thing was unconstitutional and told the Mayor W. E. Sherman, his democratic opposer in the last election about it. Sherman naturally didn't want any ammunition like this for the next campaign in the hands of his opposition so he let the strikers go free and returned their fines.

Injunction Appears.

But the story didn't end there. In the name of Hyman Goldberg, who appears as the owner of the shop, an injunction was issued restraining both the local labor officials and the strikers who came from New York, from picketing the shop.

The usual charges of "threatening" employes and circulating handbills were the basis for the petition. "There is no strike," says the petition, and argues that the pickets used "violence."

Stump of the Trades Council denies this, and goes very far indeed to prove that he advocated only humility as a strike weapon.

Christ has Nothing on Stump

"I warned our pickets that there would be violence attempted by this firm. I told them to have no account to return a blow, but to let their hands hang at their sides if blows were struck."

Pending decision on the injunction, no pickets will be posted although allowed by the state law.

WASHINGTON FARMER-LABOR PARTY LAUNCHES AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN

By AARON FIELERMAN.

SEATTLE, Washington, Oct. 5.—The farmer-labor party convention held here unanimously decided to carry on an aggressive campaign throughout the state. It is intended to make the farmer labor party the second political party in strength in this state. If this can be accomplished the farmer-labor party may by 1936 become the dominant political party in the state of Washington. The farmer-labor party ticket this year will be headed by J. L. Frazier, a farmer of Okanogan county, who has been chosen candidate for the U. S. senate.

Two years ago, the farmer-labor party in this state polled more than 40,000 votes out of a total vote of 290,078 cast. That is more than 10 per cent. This in spite of the fact that most all of the leaders and the entire state machinery of the F.-L. P. flopped over to the progressive (La-Follette) party.

Parties.

This year there will be only three political parties in the field. The farmer-labor party, the republican party and democratic party. The Workers Party is supporting the farmer-labor party in this state and will devote its entire energy and apparatus in the campaign in behalf of the F.-L.P. and its candidates.

Resignations in Advance.

By unanimous vote the convention adopted a resolution requiring every candidate elected to pledge 10 per cent of the salary to the party, annually.

The convention went on record in favor of the legislative program of the Washington State Federation of Labor and all candidates elected on the F.-L. P. will support the labor legislative program.

This is the third convention held this summer by the farmer-labor party in this state. The first convention having been held on July 4, in Seattle, the second at Yakima, Wash., on Aug. 1.

The constitution provides for the organization of the unorganized farmers and workers, in the form of farmer-labor Party clubs, twenty-five members being allowed for each club. The dues being 25 cents a month, 50 per cent of which goes to the state organization. Clubs are springing up all over the state. County committees are being organized in many parts.

The Platform.

The platform provides that the government "resume the function" of issuing and regulating money and grant the use of same to its citizens on credit, the elimination of londlordism and tenantry and the turning over the land to the users thereof. It calls for the nationalization of all natural resources, industrial monopolies and trust, means of transportation and communication and their management by the workers organised in industry. It demands the abolishing of the use of the police, militia and army in labor disputes and strikes; the abolishing of injunctions; no military training in public or private schools, colleges and universities.

It favors the reification of the child labor amendment, the immediate release of all political prisoners, the immediate granting of political freedom to the Filipinos, favors the recognition of Soviet Russia and provides for occupational representation in legislative bodies and public offices.

Workmen's Circle Empties Treasury for I. L. G. Strike

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The following Workmen's Circle, at a meeting at 257 East Houston street, decided to empty its treasury for the benefit of cloakmakers, in the 12th week of the strike, who are members of the branch. The decision was made unanimously upon a motion by L. Beshler, a branch member and a business agent of the Cloakmakers' Joint Board.

Fifty striking cloakmakers will be the beneficiaries of this move, it was stated. Not only the funds in the treasury which amount to $1,200, but also contributions from the 400 branch members, their willingness to tax themselves further in order to maintain the cloakmaker members for the duration of the strike.

Philip Oringer presided at the meeting which adopted Beshler's resolution with great enthusiasm. M. Ehrlich is secretary of the branch.

SERF LAWS OF FEUDAL ENGLAND HAD NOTHING ON NEW ORLEANS CODE!

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 5.—(FP)—The first prosecution under the law enacted by the legislature at the session, recently closed, immediately enticing labor from one plantation to another has been invoked with the arrest at Alexandria of Georgs and Robert Bessier.

They are charged with enticing two laborers and moving their household effects from the plantation of L. Wemple near Chenoyville without the consent of Wemple.

Under the law now in force it is a crime punishable with fine or imprisonment, or both, to engage a Negro or any other plantation laborer on a promise of higher wages and better living conditions from one land owner to another without the consent of his employer.

PHOENIX LABOR BODY DESERTS PORTO RICANS

Reactionaries Win by One Vote

By WILLIAM O'BRIEN.
(Worker Correspondent)

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 5.—The Central Trades Council of Phoenix by a majority of one vote, decided to select a committee of three members to meet with the Cotton Growers' Association here and attempt a settlement of the strike of several hundred Porto Rican workers shipped here to work in the cotton fields.

This means that the reactionary element in the central council won out in a long debate which actually hinged upon whether the council was going to continue to support the Porto Ricans financially and otherwise, as it had been doing, or whether it would abandon the fight by trying to reach a compromise with the bosses.

Worried Over Finances.

The reactionaries won for several reasons. First, the striking Porto Rican workers and their families had been financially supported by the unions and many of the delegates were worried about the financial strain. Second, many of the Porto Ricans are skilled workers and representatives of the skilled trades were afraid of labor competition. Notable among these latter was the delegate from the building union, who made no secret of his fears.

The progressive delegates to the council had been making a fight to persuade the body to stand by the Porto Rican workers and to force the state to undertake their care. The immigrants have been in an improvised camp at the fair grounds. Many of the wives and children are ill. Until now the only source of livelihood they have received has been from donations from the unions.

"Mediator" for Company.

A Mr. Jones, mediator of the United States department of labor, is here trying to get the strikers to go back to work. He is hand in glove with the Cotton Growers' Association. The latter are anxious to get the men to work so they can collect the cost of transportation laid out to get them from Porto Rico. The company claims there is another boatload of Porto Rican workers on the way and that they will bring them to Phoenix because their fare is already paid.

The Porto Rican workers are standing firm, however, in their refusal to work for anything less than the $3 a day average paid in these parts for common labor.

Association a Tool.

There is some misconception among even trade unionists hereabout concerning the identity of the Cotton Growers' Association. Even many delegates to the Central Council are under the impression that the association is an organization of cotton farmers. There is no doubt influenced their judgment in some degree in voting on the question of supporting the Porto Ricans. The fact is that the association is the creature of several big cotton growing companies.

The Cotton Growers' Association said they would care for the sick workers, but this has not been done. The state relief board waives jurisdiction over the affair on the ground it has nothing to do with agricultural matters.

In the meantime the price of cotton is going down and it is possible that by the time the present dispute is settled it will not be worth while to pick the remaining portion of the cotton crop. What will happen to the ill and impoverished Porto Ricans in that event is problematical, but they are in any case faced with a very gloomy prospect.

Lithuanian Local No Place for Opposition to Strike Solidarity

By J. STOCKWELL,
(Worker Correspondent)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 5.—At the last meeting of Lithuanian Local 54 of the A. C. W., at Arion Place Hall, the proposal of the New York Joint Board for assessment of eight fours work to aid the Finkelstein strikers was brought up.

Here we could see who were really union men. Those who were not could also be seen, and their names are given below, because they opposed the help to the strikers and alan talked and urged others to leave the Joint Board because of this.

The names are W. Pashkevich, J. Yonaitis, A. Buhnis, W. M. Michelsona and Tischkus, who works for White Brothers in New York City.

Surely any sensible worker would say that these are no friends of the strikers but rather friends of Finkelstein. A lot was said about leaving the Joint Board, but they did not get the best of the local and the eight hours assessment matter was put off to a special meeting.

Allentown Local 52 of Upholsterers on Strike in Two Shops

(By Arnald, Worker Correspondent.)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Oct. 5.—Local 52 of the Upholsterer's union of this city is on strike since Saturday from the Jordan Furniture company. The strike affects about 30 men in all. Every man is out of this shop and the local expects to pull out other men from the Yeager Furniture company to about the same number.

The Allentown local union is striking jointly with local 76 of New York City. Their demands are for a 30 per cent increase of wages and the 44 hour week.

Strikers, watch for more particulars in this paper and write to the DAILY WORKER the news of your strike and the bosses' tactics. Also distribute this paper to other strikers.

COURSE IN LABOR JOURNALISM IS BEGUN IN N. Y.

Workers' School Starts New Class

By a Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The Workers' School of New York is indeed fortunate in being able to announce the addition of Harvey O'Connor to its faculty for the coming year. Harvey O'Connor, who, in addition to editing other labor papers, was city editor, news editor and labor editor successively of the Seattle Union Record in 1917-18 when it was the only trade union daily in America and who has been the assistant editor of the Locomotive Engineers Journal for the past two years, will give the course in "Workers' Correspondence" (Labor Journalism) in the Workers' School.

This course trains workers in shop, mill and factory to report the news of the industrial struggle in its everyday phases. The technique of simple, direct news writing, of organizing, editing and managing shop papers and of preparing material for use in the labor press is its main object. Labor and shop papers will be studied closely and students will prepare copy for actual publication. Noted labor editors are scheduled to speak on various phases of the labor press.

The course in Workers' Correspondence starts on Monday, November 1, at 8 p. m. Registrations are now open at the Workers' School, 108 East 14 Street, New York City and the School Bulletin can also be obtained at the same address, by writing to Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the school.

Letter From a Prize Winner

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30, 1926.
Editor DAILY WORKER.
Dear Sir:

I wish to acknowledge receipt of the copy of Red Cartoons which was awarded me as a worker correspondent. Needless to say, I am very happy to own such a splendid book, altho the fact that I have at least succeeded in registering a feeble protest against one of the many evils of the present system affords me no little satisfaction, I can assure you.

My interest in the Workers (Communist) Party is of comparatively recent date and is due, aside from leftwing tendencies from early childhood, to the influence of the editorial staff of The DAILY WORKER in the presentation of their aims and policies in the class struggle. I hope thru more intense study and thought to become sufficiently informed on political and social issues to render such aid to the Workers' Party movement as may fall within the scope of my capabilities. It is my regret that I have not been so situated economically as to support this cause, which holds so much of promise for the future.

Tired from long days of unintersting work, I find my evenings much too short and fleeting for heading to the tasks which hold my attention. However, I intend to "carry on," and you will certainly hear more from me as time goes on.

Your for success (not the Ford-Gary-Schwab standard),

Fred T. Douglas.

STEEL TRUST AND ERIE R. R. TAKE 2 LIVES

Workers Die as Result of Company Neglect

(By N. L., Worker Correspondent)

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Oct. 5.—Negligence of the lives of the workers has resulted in the death of two workers of Youngstown on Tuesday.

Thomas Wylan was instantly killed at the open hearth furnace plant of the Republic Iron and Steel company. He was working on the railroad in the yards when he was struck by an engine. He met death because no guards were put on the rails in order to let the engine pass without killing anybody. Another victim of the Steel Trust.

The other worker, Andrea Casoria, 55, was an employe of the Erie railroad. He was killed instantly when caught in the bucket of a steam shovel loading coal near the Erie roundhouse.

Casoria, a laborer, was working near a train of coal cars, when the shovel operator, hearing his cries, discovered that he had caught Casoria in the bucket. His chest was entirely crushed and he died before he reached the hospital.

Captain: You know anything about that Sacco—v — any special friend of these two ——?

I: Never saw them in my life.

Captain: Then whatta hell d'ya wanna open ya yap for those birds then? Don't you know they was convicted by law — and they oughtta hang Goddam ed.

I: They were framed-up, and even if they had all the witnesses in the world they'll still get framed-up unless the workers all over the countries can get up at such street meetings as these and create the sentiment for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Captain: Whatta hell ya wanna do that here for? Go to Connecticut where they are.

I: Pardon Captain, they're in Massachusetts.

Captain: Massachusetts, (glowering.)

I: That's why we want to raise sentiment——

Captain: This country ain't ruled by sentiment—its ruled by law!

I: That's why we are asking your legal sanction to our meeting.

Captain: Well, you lousey Bolshevik, you ain't gonna hold no street meeting for those greasy guinnys, if you do I treat you as disorderly people.

Los Angeles Meeting Helps Mine Strikers; Mine Lamps "Jewelry"

By L. P. RINDAL.
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., (By Mail)— A group of class conscious workers arranged a social dance at the Paint ers hall for the benefit of the struggling British miners, their wives and children.

Spidarity Applauded

After the address by Mortimer Downing at the Open Forum, Sunday evening, Sept. 19th, on the subject of "The British General Strike," a worker asked the speaker "How do the miners manage to live over there?"

"Mostly on funds coming from the workers of Soviet Russia", Downing—a former editor of the Industrial Worker—admitted. A storm of applause followed which increased after a few remarks by Comrade Fisher, leader of the local Workers' Correspondents' School.

A number of miniature miners' lamps, sent from England, were sold in help the fighting strikers. Figuratively speaking, the willingness to buy throwe some more light on the subject. These lamps were "jewelry" in the eyes of U. S. custom officers. Therefore heavy duty had to be paid.

Amsterdam to Enter the A. F. of L.

The American Federation of Labor leadership is preparing to take over the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam) just as Wall Street has taken over European industry and finance.

So much is indicated by the agreement of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L. to affiliate with Amsterdam and the recent affiliations to their respective international federations of the Carpenters, Miners and Machinists.

In addition there is the conference called by the Mexican Confederation of Labor at which the question of affiliation is to be discussed with representatives of the A. F. of L. and Amsterdam.

Perhaps before this conference takes place there will be a public announcement by the A. F. of L. officials of their intentions.

We say that the Federation "is preparing to take over" Amsterdam rather than "joining" Amsterdam because this is what is happening. The A. F. of L. will, with certain limitations, make its own terms of affiliation. As the labor agents of American imperialism the A. F. of L. leadership follows the flag.

Look at the invasion of western, central and eastern Europe by the American metal trust, represented by the Anaconda Copper Mining company—a Standard Oil subsidiary—which has entered into the Giesche combination producing metals and chemicals in Germany and Poland. Then there is the new electrical trust, with the American General Electric the leading group, of which the Allgemeine Elektrische Gesellschaft is part. The role played by the United States Steel corporation in the new Franco-German-Belgian-Luxemburg iron and steel trust is not yet clear, but the recent complacent statement of Elbert H. Gary leaves little doubt that it has encouraged this grouping.

German industrial and official trade union delegations are here studying American efficiency methods and hardly an issue of the metropolitan press appears without an advertisement of some new industrial loan for European capitalists.

With such huge interests in Europe the pacification of European labor becomes paramount for American capitalism and what better agency is there for this than the A. F. of L. leadership with its worker-employer theory which news dispatches state is being adopted by various European labor movements, German in particular, and to which the Amsterdam leadership will subscribe will ingly if, as they will undoubtedly, the A. F. of L. leaders insist on recognition of this as a principle and as one of their conditions for moral and financial support of the I. F. T. U. which, like its capitalist friends, needs money very badly.

Following the El Paso convention where a delegation from the German trade unions was welcomed warmly, we predicted the rapprochement between Amsterdam and the A. F. of L. We said like wise that the A. F. of L. leadership would lean more to the socialpatriot labor leadership of Germany than to the British trade union leadership which, following also the lead of its imperialist masters, would show more hostility to American domination.

This still remains the truth and while the leftward pressure of the British masses will bring words of sympathy for the "safe and sane" official Trades Union Congress leadership it will not be welcomed as warmly to the bosom of American labor officialdom as will the German social-democrats.

The development of the process by which American labor officialdom carves for itself a similar niche in the labor movement of Europe as is occupied in industry and finance by the American imperialists has been slower than we expected, and is not yet completed, but after all two years is not a long time for the official foreign policy of the American trade union movement to change from one of isolation to that of dominant participation in line with that of American imperialism.

Had the world conrt met with less opposition in America it is probable that the policy would have changed more rapidly.

The left wing in the American labor movement will make a grave mistake if it regards this as a progressive step on the part of labor officialdom. Potentially, it is true, it will tend to give the American trade union movement a broader international outlook and familiarize it with the struggles of the European workers, but from the official standpoint it is nothing more or less than a strengthening of the bloc against the trade unions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and a guarantee that the A. F. of L. leadership will have a powerful voice on all vital questions such as world trade union unity. Its influence will be used also to tone down the rising antagonism toward American capitalism among the European masses.

Already the affiliation of the Carpenters, Miners and Machinists to the Amsterdam federations puts the question of world trade union unity and the recognition of Soviet Union as issues of primary importance on the order of business of the left wing in America. With the end of isolation of the A. F. of L. which is indicated by recent developments, these questions assume the same importance for American labor, particularly in view of the new era of competition in the world markets which is opening with the formation of European trusts, as they do for the European labor movements.

SPECIAL FORD NUMBER TOMORROW

Henry Ford's sensational announcement of the introduction of the five-day week into all his plants caused a stir in the country. The DAILY WORKER, however, has reason to believe that Ford is giving away absolutely nothing. The eleven in his plant by his own admission are required to do as much work in 5 days as they formerly did in five and a half. Wherefore there is nothing remarkable in their getting five and a half days' pay. In the Thursday DAILY WORKER a list of working-class writers will tell the truth about Ford and his industry. The DAILY WORKER thinks the Ford myth should be exploded. Get this number and get enlightened about one of America's foremost slave drivers.

FROM PORTLAND TO DETROIT

ARTICLE SEVEN.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

A COMPILATION of all the stupidities and fallacies which the trade union leadership of the United States has promulgated in the labor press for the last three years, or even for the last three months, would take up several issues of this paper. We have neither time or space for such an exhaustive effort. Nor is it necessary for the work in hand.

Typical utterances of responsible leaders are enough. We have seen the viewpoint of the leadership of a powerful union unaffiliated with the A. F. of L.—the Railroad Trainmen—and that of the leadership of the most progressive A. F. of L. railway union—the Machinists. We will take now a leading editorial from a typical "employes' journal"—the "Hawthorne Microphone," published by the Western Electric Company for distribution to the factory personnel of its Hawthorne plant in Chicago, which employs 40,000 workers when operating to capacity, and compare it with the statements of the head of the American Federation of Labor, President William Green, writing in the "Forum" magazine for September on "Lessons from the British Strike."

APOLOGY must be made for the length of those extracts but lengthy quotation is necessary to dovelop fully the striking similarity in these statements by a company union organ and the head of the American trade union movement. Besides we do not wish either the Western Electric or President Green to be able to say that they have been quoted unfairly by my having jerked sentences entirely from the general context.

Here is the patriotic pabulum purveyed to the underpaid Western Electric workers (mostly boys and girls). It is entitled: "The Golden Rule for Prosperity Proves to Be Merely the Golden Rule."

"One of the main questions puzzling thoughtful Europeans today is why the United States enjoys such amazing prosperity.

"Some of it they attribute to our natural wealth, but that, they realize, is only a partial explanation and a very unsatisfactory one, since it does not account for the fact that our industries are able to undersell those of all other nations, even when using the same kind and amount of machinery, the same number of men and, in general, the same factory methods.

"These points of similarity leave only one advantage in our favor, superior personnel—perhaps the most important factor of all.

"That statement, however, still does not solve anything. It involves a further question that really contains the essence of the whole discussion: Why does our country alone possess workers of this superior type?

"THE ANSWER IS AS OLD AS THE GOLDEN RULE. IT IS SIMPLY FAIR DISTRIBUTION OF PROFITS AND EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY.

"The American worker is different because he knows that his ambition can get him something besides disdain. Red longings. He, too, can rise from ordinary labor to head of a gigantic corporation. All he needs is ability and industry. The opportunity is there.

"The American worker is well educated because our schools are for the benefit of all the people. Even the handicap forced by these circumstances is seen a living at an early age need not forego an education. Numerous evening schools and the correspondence courses of the country's best universities open wide to anyone who can secure as much education as his brain power and his will-power permit him to assimilate.

"Finally, the American worker is intelligent because his social and financial position allow him to develop that breadth of interest which leads to breadth of view. He is a broad minded thinker. WHERE SOME OF THE WORKERS OF OTHER LANDS HAVE FOLLOWED SELF-STYLED MESSIAHS TOWARD A MIRAGE PARADISE HE HAS KEPT IN SANE TOUCH WITH ECONOMIC PRINCIPLES AND ACHIEVED A PROSPERITY THAT IS TODAY A WORLD MARVEL.

"This industrial supremacy based merely on superior natural wealth, we should have cause for misgivings of the future with its inevitable competition from newly developed resources elsewhere, BUT LONG AS OUR PROSPERITY DEPENDS UPON THE CHARACTER OF OUR PEOPLE AND OUR INSTITUTIONS WE NEED NEVER FEAR FOR ITS CONTINUANCE. (Emphasis mine.)

THE above example of company union propaganda begins with the "one big happy family" motif and ends on the high note of "our institutions."

"Fair distribution of profits and equality of opportunity" are thrown in for good measure. They are the shibboleths of all good 100 per cent Americans who go to a rotard, white and blue heaven when they die.

Let us turn now to the pronouncement of President Green:

The tradition that the interests of management conflict with the interests of employes HAS BEEN THE CAUSE OF MUCH WASTE IN INDUSTRY. IF MANAGEMENT WILL ONLY CONSIDER THEIR LOSSES FROM FIGHTING THEIR EMPLOYES AND SPEND EQUAL TIME, THOUGHT AND ENERGY IN EARNING THEIR GOOD WILL, THEY WILL FIND THEIR INVESTMENT PROFITABLE . . . . The union enables the work group as individuals to undertake real co-operation on an equal basis. . . . The co-operative agreement . . . engenders the confidence that paves the way for co-operation. . . . Labor unions are a medium for facilitating the co-operation of the workers of the management. They may be the organizing agency of co-operation, BUT THEY LACK THE AGGRESSIVENESS AND VITALITY NECESSARY FOR INDEPENDENT THINKING AND INITIATIVE. THE ESSENCE OF CO-OPERATION . . . . The general strike is quite at variance with the principles and practices of the American trade union movement. It is essential to remember that our labor movement functions under the social conditions and is developed in an environment in which democratic ideals prevail. THERE ARE NO "CLASSES." PEOPLE MAY PASS from one group to another as opportunity and ability may direct. There are right groups and industrial groups WITH COMMON INTERESTS AND COMMON PROBLEMS. . . . Growing CUT HORIZONTALLY ACROSS THE POPULATION. . . . The organization covering the groups is in response to COMMON NEEDS AND POSSIBILITIES.

IS there any essential difference between the statement of Green and that of the company union propagandist of the Western Electric.

There is none. Everything in the company union editorial is in Green's statements—identity of interest, opportunity, co-operation, common goods, in a word "the Golden Rule" and the "one big happy family" motif.

But President Green's statements go further even than those of the company union editorial FOR HE ARGUES FOR "BONA FIDE UNIONS" SOLELY ON THE GROUND THAT THEY ARE "ESSENTIAL TO EFFECTIVE CO-OPERATION," which in Green's way of saying that they can and will produce more profits for the capitalists than company unions can.

IN order to be fair to President Green, and to still any doubts which may arise as the result of the categorical statement I have just made I quote in full the next to the last paragraph from the "Forum" article:

Scattered thruout our industry we find developments that hold within them the possibilities of the full development. (Worker-Employer Co-operation—W. F. D.) A few of these developments are: the production engineers of the printing pressmen who help the workers TO RAISE STANDARDS OF WORKMANSHIP; THE TECHNICAL EDUCATION SERVICE DEVELOPED BY THE INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION; the co-operative dairy of the milk drivers of Minneota; 'DEVELOPMENT OF PRODUCTION STANDARDS OF WOMEN'S GARMENT WORKERS of Cleveland; THE INSISTENCE OF THE PHOTO-ENGRAVERS UPON RESEARCH IN THE INDUSTRY AND THE TECHNICAL EQUIPMENT OF ITS MEMBERSHIP; RAILWAY SHOPMEN'S DEVELOPMENTS IN CO-OPERATION ON THE SAKTIMORE & OHIO, the Chicago & Northwestern and the Canadian National Railways.

I THINK I have not overstated the case against President Green. When he wants to measure the achievements of American workers he does not mention the brilliant struggle of the Fur Workers for the forty-hour week, the courageous attempt of the Interborough Rapid Transit switchmen and motormen to break from the company union, the long, stern struggle of the 16,000 Passaic textile workers or the heroic battles of their own union and the unorganized miners of West Virginia.

NO, President Green, speaking in the name of the American trade union movement cites as instances of progress (with the single possible exception of the milk drivers) ONLY those instances where the union membership has been coerced and cajoled into adopting a non-strike policy, in nowise different in this respect from the company unions, and has organized to work harder for the capitalists.

The surrender is complete.

There is no real quarrel between the American industrial lords and the American trade union leaders as to principles. There is a difference of opinion, however, as to whether the trade union leader is necessary in this scheme of things.

MOST of the big capitalists do not think so. The trade union officialdom try to convince them that they are by promising, by pleading in fact, to be allowed to use their prestige to make more efficient slaves of the American masses.

This attitude of the trade union leadership coupled with the "welfare" schemes puts the following question sharply to every intelligent worker:

"What is the future of the American trade union movement in the present period and what are the tasks of the left wing?"

British Trade Union Leaders That Failed In Test Must Be Replaced, Says Communist Organ

The complete betrayal by the right wing leadership of the Bournemouth British Trade Union Congress of the interests of the striking miners, and the united front of the former center group, represented by Purcell, Hicks, Swales and the vacillating Cook with the right wing, led by J. H. Thomas, J. C. Clynes and Co., confronts the British working class with the necessity of selecting a leadership that will fight the employers and the employers' government, a leadership that will help lead them to victory and not to the shambles of defeat.

The Workers' Weekly official organ of the British Communist Party sets forth point by point the lessons of the Bournemouth conference and the conclusions to be drawn from them. As the present situation in Britain is not only a historic drama which gives a picture of a mighty power slipping into the abyss, but is also an object lesson for the workers of all lands who may be faced any day with problems as serious as those that confront the British working class today. The DAILY WORKER reprints the following statement from the Workers' Weekly for information of the American workers.

What are the results of last week's Congress at Bournemouth? First: That the old leadership represents a united front of treachery to the workers.

On every important question there was no division in their ranks. They prevented discussion of the general strike, nominally because it would hurt the miners, but really to conceal the fact that they had been saving to hurt the miners ever since May 1. They prevented any practical step to help the miners, such as a fight against the 8-hours act, the levy on wages or the embargo, being ridiculed, instead introducing an empty resolution which was an insult to the miners' intelligence, and appointing Ramsay MacDonald to move it. In order to emphasize their hatred of the miners They attacked the Russian trade unionists and virtually smashed the Anglo-Russian committee, after a series of sabotage of any steps to unity. They allowed insulting suggestions with reference to Caution to go by in their report. At a time when British imperialism is threatening to crush the victorious People's Republic, From Push downwards, they openly preached "new methods" of co-operating with the bosses instead of fighting them.

Second: That the former "Lefts" on the General Council have completely shed every object and shameful surrender to the right.

On not a single issue, amongst those mentioned above, did they fight with their colleagues lefts. They put solidarity with their colleagues higher than loyalty to the workers.

Altho the right wing leaders interfered effectively on several important resolutions—the one demanding greater power to the general council, the one favoring protection instead of trade union unity as a means of fighting a vested labor, the one committing British labor to support the tragic farce known as the International Labor Office—the former "left" wing kept silent. When the Communists and minority delegates opposed the treacherous part played by the general council against the Russian workers, it was they who got up to defend the general council.

Third: That A. J. Cook has taken the second step towards a united front with the general council—a step on the road which leads to deserting the workers.

The first step was after the general strike, when he agreed that the conference should refuse to discuss the general council's leadership should not be held, "in order not to prejudice the miners." He gained nothing for the miners thereby, because John Bromley published the council's report attacking the miners.

But he lost the chance of exposing the council's treachery to the workers, and thereby allowed them to go on betraying the miners with impunity.

At Bournemouth, Cook did worse. When the mass of the delegates were supporting the Minority Movement's call for a discussion, Cook—for the first time—moved a compromise calling for financial aid—throw his weight on the side of the General Council, and helped them to stifle a discussion.

Cook showed that he not only is losing faith in the workers, but is allying himself with their enemies.

Fourth: That even this Congress, composed as it was more than half of officials, showed the steady move to the left of the workers.

In spite of Pugh's open appeals to abandon the strike weapon and resort to class collaboration, the Congress failed to respond in the slightest to the American delegate's statement that the aims of the trade unionists were merely "to better the condition of the workers," and that "capitalists are necessary."

In spite of the opposition of the right wing leaders, and the passivity of the former "left" leaders, the Congress defeated the reactionary "One Big Union" proposal, and the Minority Industrial Union Program, giving definite instructions to the General Council.

The Congress listened with approval to every militant lead put forward by the small Communist Minority group or by individual left wingers—approval which only union discipline and block vote succeeded temporarily in suppressing.

Fifth: That there is no hope for a new leadership in the trade union movement, ready and willing to fight the bosses, outside the ranks of the Communist Party and the Minority Movement.

A few individuals made a left wing stand here and there, notably Hallsworth and Ellen Wilkinson. But their efforts were isolated, and therefore made no mark. All the other former "lefts" were hamstrung.

The only group which on every issue put up a consistent, systematic fight for the workers and against the treachery of the General Council, and which therefore justified its claim to the future leadership of the movement, was the group of Communists and other supporters of the Minority Movement.

On the question of responsibility for the general strike, of the powers of the General Council, of Russia, they forced a definite parting of the ways between the reactionary right and "left" leaders, on one side, and the workers on the other. Their fight as a small minority at the T. U. C. revealed as great a cleavage between workers and leaders as the proceedings of the Minority Conference did, compared with these of the T. U. C. The only way for honest left wingers in the trade union movement to help the workers in practice is to join the Minority Movement, to work in its organization, and under its direction. The only way to ensure a consistent militant leadership for the trade unions, which will lead the workers to the overthrow of capitalism instead of towards collaboration with it, is to build a powerful Communist Party.

Finally: The leaders who surrendered to the capitalist government on May 12 talked a good deal at the T. U. C. about its refusal to apply the 48-hour week, its adoption of the eight hours' act, its action against the miners, etc., but avoided any suggestion of how it is to be attained.

This the Minority Conference attempted to do, in its call to the workers to force the labor M. P.'s to refuse further participation in the forged parliament, and to concentrate on the embargo campaign until a new general election. The T. U. C. failed to give any alternative lead, or even to issue an appeal to the workers. That duty now falls on the national left wing conference at Poplar this week-end, as the mobilization of all the revolutionary opposition within the labor party. Whatever can be done to put before the labor party conference a clear challenging lead on how to overthrow the government must be done by the left wing conference, if it is to win the leadership of the workers in the labor party.

The Situation in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union

Statement by the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

THE Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party is in receipt of the following cablegrams in regard to the action of the opposition in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union by carrying the authority of the Central Committee of the party:

Moscow, October 4.

Trotsky, Zinoviev, Radek, Piatakov, Smilga and Sapronov went to the Moscow works "Aviopriher" and made an attempt to begin discussion and speak against the adopted party decisions. Notwithstanding presence and activity in proceedings of all the leaders of the opposition, the latter were completely defeated by the worker members of the Communist Party, who discovered the factional actions of the opposition and adopted resolutions condemning the proceedings and leaders. The Moscow committee of the Communist Party proposed to the Central Committee that it take measures against the members of the Central Committee who violated the party decisions. Meetings of numerous nuclei of the Moscow party organizations have adopted resolutions unanimously condemning the proceedings of the opposition.

PEPPER,
Chief of the Agitprop Dept. of the Comunnist International.

A SECOND cablegram reads:

Moscow, October 4.

Mass meetings of mill workers of Moscow and Leningrad provinces have adopted strong resolutions protesting against factional activities of the opposition headed by Zinoviev and Trotsky. All the resolutions propose that the Central Committee and whole party drastically resist factional activities of the opposition.

PEPPER,
Chief of the Agitprop Dept. of the Comunnist International.

THE Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, after the plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, at which the factional activities of the opposition were considered and disciplinary measures taken against those who had violated party discipline, expressed its solidarity with and wholehearted support of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and condemned activities of the opposition in violation of the discipline of the party.

The proletarian revolution in the Soviet Union, altho it has successfully overcome the attacks of capitalist imperialism during the past nine years and made great achievements in creating a socialist economic system for the benefit of the workers and peasants, which year by year is raising their standard of life, still finds itself surrounded by enemies eager and anxious to destroy it.

The Communist Party of the Soviet Union is the proletarian advance guard which is fighting not only for the proletarian revolution in the Soviet Union, but its extension to the rest of the world still ruled by the capitalist class. Factional violations of party discipline, such as is established in the above cablegrams, givas aid and comfort to every capitalist enemy of the proletarian revolution.

THE Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party hails with joy the repudiation of the opposition and their factional activities by the membership of the Communist Party. With them it condemns these activities and again expresses its wholehearted support of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union in its struggle to compel the opposition to discontinue their factional activities and return to their duty as members of the party. It calls upon every member of the Workers (Communist) Party to take his stand with the units of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, which are repudiating and condemning Comrades Trotsky, Zinoviev and the other leaders of the opposition, for their attack upon the unity of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

Central Committee,
Workers (Communist) Party of America.
E. Ruthenberg,
General Secretary.

Mellon Aid May Quit Treasury for Chicago Law Office Practice

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Gerrard Winston, undersecretary of the treasury and chief lieutenant to Andrew Mellon, is considering retirement from public life and resumption of his law practice in Chicago. His partner, Silas Strawn, is now returning from China, where he was one of the American commissioners in the attempted agreement on increasing the Chinese customs tariff rate.

Three-Cornered Race for U. S. Senate Takes in Idaho Progressive

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. Information reaching labor circles in the capital is that the senatorial race in Idaho between Gooding, incumbent regular republican, Nugent, democrat and former senator, and H. F. Samuels, progressive, have taken a new turn.

Hundreds of progressive democrats are said to have written to Nugent urging him to withdraw in favor of Samuels. The latter has the backing of most of the labor movement and the old non-partisan league farmer element.

Illinois Floods Threaten Hundreds; U. S. Aid Is Asked

Flooding of the Illinois and Mississippi rivers drove hundreds of families from their homes in the Illinois river valley Saturday.

Levees were reported near the breaking point.

Nearly 2? families were forced to seek safety points in Liverpool, Chantaha, and East Liverpool.

The southern quarters of Naplet was flooded and South Beardstown was vacated. Train service at Naplas was interrupted as the river rose fifteen inches.

Appeals for aid have been sent to the government chiefly at Peoria.

'MUST HAVE UNION' SAY FORD WORKERS

FIVE-DAY WEEK IN FORD PLANT ONLY FLIM FLAM

Practically a Wage Cut, Say Workers

By CARL HAESSLER.
Federated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—(FP)— Wage juggling is as vicious an element in the Detroit automobile labor situation as is "direct wage cutting, labor men in the motor capital of the world declare. When an employer like Henry Ford makes his exhausted workers produce in five days what they were hitherto putting out in five and one-half, and pays them for five days instead of five and one-half, it is pretty tough to have half-baked nitwits all over the country hail this latest sweating device as another step to the social millenium. At least that is what Ford's sweatshop victims think. Of course there is a "merit bonus." Unfortunately the meritorious worker is a rare animal.

Demand Below Supply.

"The trouble in the trade at the present time," says Arthur Rohan, planning executive secretary of the United Automobile Workers, "is that the demand is falling below the supply and considerably below the normal productive capacity of the plants."

Favors Industriel Unionism.

Rohan's organization, which used to be in the American Federation of Labor but was suspended in 1917 for enrolling within its industrial hospitality workers claimed by other internationals, has received a friendly letter from Pres. Wm. Green, promising to take up the question of how the union can rejoin the mother body. Industrial unionism has become a more favored solution for organizing auto workers in recent years than when the 1917 Buffalo convention ousted the United.

Other Plants Doing It.

Other shops are doing the same or similar things. Packard recently fired 26 men covering docks or roofs on closed cars who were getting 70 cents an hour—not a princely wage for speeded work. Packard then took on 56 new men and is paying them 56 cents an hour for the same work. This maker of high-class, high-price cars pays his men partly in bunk, giving them a merit button after five years of service and a watch after 15 years.

The Chrysler people promise a bonus, but in reality their inspectors make so many deductions for alleged imperfect work that the bonus is scarcer in the Chrysler plant than a millionaire in Russia.

The Budd Wheel company juggles its piece and day rates so frequently that few workers know whether they have money coming or going with the company at the end of the week.

Fisher Body Cuts Wages.

The Fisher Body concern, which makes bodies for over 80 per cent of the autos outside of Ford, is paying its Detroit workers far below the 1920 rate. Woodworkers getting $1 to $1.10 an hour in 1920 are getting 70 cents to 85 cents now. Woodworkers on specialties, earning $1.35 an hour at piecework then can't make more than $1 now. The same is true of trimmers.

Federal Judge Aided Open Shop in Strike; Forced to Fine Firm

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—(FP) — Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, bitter enemy of organized labor, has been compelled by the United States Supreme court to recognize wholesale fraud committed by the John F. Koenig Coal company in the coal miners' and railway shop employes' strike in 1922.

The interstate commerce commission charged Koenig, president of the company, with hilling coal from Kentucky and West Virginia to Detroit hospitals and receiving it himself. Under the Elkin act hospital shipments had priority over industrial shipments. Koenig pleaded not guilty and Judge Tuttle exonerated him.

In the course of the shop strike Judge Tuttle outlawed Pere Marquette railroad shop strikers and said they deserved no standing in court. He later imposed a four months' sentence for contempt of court on the editor of a labor paper who criticised him. The federal court of appeals at Cincinnati reversed this decision also.

AUBURN AUTOMOBILE COMPANY TAKES OVER DUESENBERG MOTORS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 6.— Automobile circles buzzed with interest today over the announcement of E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile company, that they had purchased the entire plant, equipment and assets of the Duesenberg Motors company for a consideration said to involve $600,000.

Cord, acting as the head of a syndicate, said that the incorporation of a new company capitalized at $1,000,000 and which will be known as the Duesenberg, Incorporated.

FORD KEARNEY WORKERS FEEL RETRENCHMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JERSEY CITY, N. J. Oct. 6.—In the Ford Kearney branch we are beginning to feel the effect of retrenchment and reduction in wages. Five days pay for six days work is now an established fact according to the bulletin board. Yes—some increases are to be given out, but only on merit!

One department had its force cut down one-third and the best were told to keep up production in anticipation of a raise. This information filtered down from plant manager Mr. Hussey and Supt. Gartha to all foremen. This department got its reward with only a few pacesetters receiving five cents increase per hour. Thus the average man was paid at $30.00 a week, and the star performers got $32.00.

To sum up, Henry Ford's profits taking into consideration the number of men discharged, the scale of production kept at the same level and similar methods applied to thirty-three branches, he does save a pretty penny.

According to an article covering a personal interview, he now intends to drop the policy of a minimum wage and pay according to one's merit. The final blow is when he harate with generosity and hands us five days a week. Ford forgets he exceeded that record. We in "Kearney" worked three and four days a week in the past year—why keep his "improvement" in the hours of labor under his hat so long?

There is a general discontent throughout the plant. No amount of publicity in the Hearst sheets will change the fact of a shrinking pay envelope.

Date Factory Workers Spurn Compromise of Employers on Strike

Begged by the bosses of the Maras and company date factory to return to work at the present scale of wages, the 125 Negro women who went on strike Saturday after a reduction notice was posted, voted Wednesday morning unanimously to refuse the offer of the bosses and to remain on strike.

The virtual submission of the bosses spurred the women to proceed with their plans to form a union organization. They are determined to do this before the strike is settled.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, was scheduled to address a meeting of the strikers Wednesday afternoon. They have asked the federation for aid in forming a union.

HERE IS A VIEW OF ONE OF THE BIG SLAVE PENS

Above is an airplane panorama of the Highland Park of the Ford Motor Company. This was the first big Ford factory. In the meantime another much larger works has been built called the Fordson, on the River Rouge, near Detroit. In such plants as this above, 115,000 or so slaves are engaged directly in the work of turning out Lizzies at 2,000,000 a year. There is hardly a large center in the country that has not its big Ford assembling plant with automatone working just as in Detroit. In addition to this there are other helots working in coal mines, lumber forests, glass works and on the Ford railroad—all under the crushing Ford speed-up system.

Fifteen Minutes for Lunch

THE ASSEMBLY LINE SPEED-UP—CALL A NUMBER TO GET TO THE LAVATORY—FALL ASLEEP ON CAR STRAPS—PRY INTO PRIVATE LIFE OF WORKERS

By J. M., a Ford Worker.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 6.—Working on the assembly line in the Highland Park plant of the Ford Motor Co., one finds working men from all parts of the United States. Most of these men just came to Detroit to work for Ford because they heard that he was a good guy to work for. So they threw up their jobs in their home towns and came to work for the "best boss in the United States."

Lots of these fellows from farms, heard of Ford's eight hour day. It had a special appeal to them, but it didn't last long. For they learned soon that in eight hours, Ford can take more out of you than farm work would, even in 24 hours. Also the work is all-day work, the speed these men have to work at is amazing. And when they find that the men take things a little easier, they immediately speed up the line. Working on these assembly lines is the closest thing to what hell is described to be by a baptist preacher.

Can't Stand Gaff.

On this line, when there is no let up the whole day through, where you are forced to work at full speed for the whole eight hours under those damnable blue lights, where to go even to a lavatory you have to call out a number and wait until you can be replaced, where only fifteen minutes is allowed for dinner, and where one out of every seven men is a straw boss—makes all those fellows that come to Detroit to work for the "best boss in the United States" last not so long. They cannot stand the gaff. Hence the big labor turn over. The foreman expressed himself by saying that he has three gates working for him, one coming, one going and one working.

Can't Wash Hands.

As I said, only fifteen minutes are allowed to eat lunch in. Fifteen minutes does not allow time enough for washing the grease off one's hands. So we have to eat grease and oil along with our meals. And still Henry Ford writes about keeping your health by chewing food slowly.

And how hard is the eight hours on a person? Well—I get home from work and the only thing I feel like doing is to lay down and go to sleep.

Get on any of the cars that carry Ford workers home from work and you will find men who work only eight hours a day, hanging on to the straps sleeping—all fagged out.

Pry Into Private Affairs.

But one of the most objectionable things about Ford is that he is always prying into the private life of his employes. Every employe is made to report to the educational office as to what he is doing with his pay. Is he saving any money? Does he buy

WHY DOES HENRY FORD FEAR TRADE UNIONS?

His Fake Argument About Management – Thinks He Has Established Industrial Monarchy – Workers Have A Right To Organize – Ford Workers Will Have Union Too – When They Fight For It.

By THURBER LEWIS.

HENRY FORD is against trade unions. The reason he is against them is, as he puts it, that they are "limitations" upon a business. He claims that he pays his men higher wages than trade unions could ever get for them. Trade unions would be a hindrance to him. Such are Ford's main arguments against the organization of his industry. He would not permit it. He would fight hard to prevent unionization even to the smallest degree.

Trade Union Leaders' Praise.

NOW that he thinks he has started the world with the announcement of the "five-day week," he presumes that he has added one more blow to the possibility of unionizing his plants. To a certain extent this is true, because the first ones to sing his praises were trade union leaders whose business it is to organize just such open shop plants as Ford runs. But the five-day week is not going down so well with the worker in the plant. He knows that he is producing as much and will later be called upon to produce more in five days than he formerly did in five and a half. There is just as much, if not more, reason for the Ford plants to be organized from roof to cellar as any other open shop industry in the land.

FORD doesn't want unions because he wants to maintain his status as an industrial monarch. Ford personally rules the destiny of some million persons who are directly or indirectly dependent upon his industry in all parts of the world. At least two hundred thousand strong and able men are directly in the employ of the Ford Motor company or auxiliary institutions. These men are automatons. More so in the Ford industry than in any other in the world. Ford claims that he thinks of his men always as human beings. In all of his publicity works, books, pamphlets, magazine articles, etc. (written by skilled press agents), Ford delivers himself of a great deal of humanitarism, trying to create the impression that his first thought is for the men in his plants.

FORD'S plants prove just the opposite. They demonstrate that Ford thinks ever so much more of a penny or a minute saved here and

Ford Shop Nuclei Show Workers the Way

The shop nuclei of the Workers (Communist) Party in the Ford factories of Detroit are showing a splendid example in rallying to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

If every other unit of the party and if every friend of The DAILY WORKER will follow up the good results gotten by these workers in the Ford factories, The DAILY WORKER will wind up its campaign in a few weeks.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 4, 1926.

THE DAILY WORKER,
1113 W. WASHINGTON BLVD.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Dear Comrades:

Enclosed find money order for $69.00 and check for $100.00, totelling $169.00. $69.00 is donated by comrades of Shop Nucleus No. 1, and $100.00 by the central bureau of the Ford Nuclei, which prints The Ford Worker. This is our response towards KEEPING THE DAILY WORKER.

At the last meeting of the Shop Nucleus No. 1, we took up the question of KEEPING THE DAILY WORKER very seriously. Only twenty members were present, but we came across strong, collected $69.00 and $45.00 in pledges which will be paid at the next meeting. One comrade nearing the age of 70 has pledged $25.00. The comrades in taking the floor have shown the necessity of supporting this drive more then ever before. In the past, we have always gone over the top with our quota, and this time we will double the amount. Yes! If necessary, we will triple it. We know what it means to lose our only English Daily, the revolutionery expression of the working class in its bitter class struggle. We are in the front ranks to fight to the last men before we will let the banner of The DAILY WORKER fall.

Comrades, fall into ranks and rally to our forces to break the chains which bind The DAILY WORKER. Let's free it once and for all, so as to enable it to do its work properly. Comrades, we challenge you to outbid us in this drive!

Yours in KEEPING THE DAILY WORKER,
ORGANIZER, FORD NUCLEI OF DETROIT.

Keep up the splendid pace set by the Communists and the other workers in the Ford factories. Accept the Ford workers' challenge. Join with them today, and we will KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

FORD FIVE-DAY WEEK MANEUVER IS DIRECTLY CONNECTED WITH FIGHT OF WORKERS AND A. F. OF L. MEET

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—The Ford Motor company's five-day week maneuver is the outstanding act of strategy on the part of a capitalist organization in the class struggle thus far in 1926.

To realize the nature and significance of this maneuver we must consider other events. One is the successful strike of the New York furriers for a 40-hour or five-day week. Another event is the annual convention here of the American Federation of Labor. The furriers' victory preceded by a few weeks the Ford Motor company's five-day week proclamation. And the proclamation immediately preceded the A. F. of L. convention. It is not a coincidence that these three events are in this order of this summer and fall—this summer and fall that have brought also the Passaic strike, the British miners' strike and the "Ford Worker." The "Ford Worker" is a shop bulletin issued by class conscious workers in the Ford shops.

Industriel Army.

When the Ford Motor Co. first entered the major quantity production several years ago it was a newcomer in the automotive field. To carry out the Ford idea of popularizing the automobile meant building more automobiles than had ever been imagined up to that time. It meant employing more men than had ever before been employed in one factory in the automobile industry. Henry Ford and his circle had the engine, chassis and body. They had capital and confidence. What they needed was a suitable organization, that is, an industrial army corps for mass production, built around a mere nucleus of skilled men.

In those days the automotive industry was a boom industry. It was a field of high adventure for a new kind of "captain of industry." And, as in all boom industries, the labor turnover, or replacement, was excessive and costly. The Ford circle believed that to succeed with their plan they must reduce in their own shops the high labor turnover. And they believed they must and could do another thing. They believed they must and could avoid the penetration of their shops by union organizers. They solved both problems by a method never before or since so daringly or shrewdly attempted. To use an auctioneer's phrase, they out-bid both their competitors and the established trade unions.

Trade Unions.

They offered wages and hours not only far in advance of the prevailing trade union scale of wages and hours unions in other places were demanding or striking for. Pavement and sidewalk outside the Ford Motor Co. employment office became a parade ground for automobile workers from other automobile factories, who were looking for work at the Ford scale. The Ford Motor Co. took its pick. In a short time men asking for jobs found themselves on a waiting list thousands of names long. To get a Ford job inside of two weeks meant adroit politics. If a man was in the good graces of a woman who was intimate with a Ford executive or a Ford physician he could "arrange" to have his application card advanced on the list. These arrangements were usually made over beer or whisky. It was supposed to be worth it.

Men didn't get $5 a day for the first six months on the payroll. Unestablished workers usually left in a few weeks. The expense of the labor turnover to the Ford Motor Co. was thus at a much lower rate than $5 a day. The Ford Motor Co. eventually stabilized the automobile worker. Men married and contracted to buy homes to have preference over single men when a layoff came. Those were the days of Ford's "sociological investigators."

And the Ford Motor Co. was not troubled by union organizers. By outbidding the established unions and all competitors in wages and conditions the Ford Motor Co., unmolested, recruited a picked force for mass production, feared no shortage of any class of labor and made money at it, at $5 a day, minimum.

Ford Policy.

Those tactics in general were permanently incorporated in the Ford Motor Co. policy. When railroad shopmen struck in 1922 the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad, owned and operated by the Ford Motor Co., was immune. The strike demands fell far short of the wages and conditions prevailing on the D. T. & I.

And now, to return to October 7, 1926, what are the new facts? What are the events of the present and recent past that explain further the five-

Churches Obeys Capital and Shut Labor Out

(BULLETIN)
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—The issue of unionization of Detroit labor reached the floor of the A. F. of L. convention today with the introduction of a resolution proposing the inauguration of a general organization campaign in the automobile industry, 80 per cent of which is centered around Detroit. It was offered by James O'Connell of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L.

It would authorize the federation officers to launch this drive "at the earliest possible date," calling a conference of all national and international unions to work out the plan of campaign. It was referred to the resolution committee for report.

Churches Support Open Shop.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—With the Protestant churches and the Y. M. C. A. as the storm center, capital and labor were at grips today in their fight to determine whether this great industrial city shall continue as an open shop or become a unionized labor center.

This, the first storm to break the tranquility of the forty-sixth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor which convened here Monday, broke in its full fury last night when President William Green of the A. F. of L., openly charged that the churches of Detroit were dominated to the manufacturing interests of the community.

Close Door to Labor.

The storm has been brewing for three months. Today it came to a head with the sudden closing of the church doors to spokesmen for organized labor, after they had been formally invited to occupy pulpits here next Sunday, and the calling of a "progressive mess meeting for men" at which President Green was to speak under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon.

This action came close on the heels of President Green's opening convention address.

Greed's attack was inspired by published reports in Detroit earlier in the day that the invitations for the Sunday meetings had been recalled overnight. There had been no formal notification to labor leaders of this action.

The invitation to Green to address the Y. M. C. A. meeting was extended last July by L. M. Terrill, executive secretary of the local "Y" and reiterated within the last ten days. The assignments of speakers for the churches were made by the Federation of churches through the Detroit ministerial association.

"Peaceful" Open Shoppers.

But through the summer and early fall the Detroit board of commerce, thru its official organ, "The Detroiter," has carried on a persistent campaign of publicity deprecating the coming of the labor convention to Detroit as a "disturber" of the "peaceful relations" prevailing here between employers and employes and charging that its real objective was

ETS MAY FILL JAILS OF NEW YORK

Zimmerman Refuses to Pay Fine; 10 Days

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 6.—Setting the example for scores of striking cloakmakers arrested Monday on the picket line in the garment zone, Harry S. Zimmerman, vice chairman of the General Strike Committee, and leading left winger, took a ten day sentence to the work-house rather than pay a $50 fine for picketing unless sentenced by Magistrate Silbermann in Jefferson Market Court.

With Zimmerman were Samuel Seidlin, manager of the Brownsville district of the cloakmakers' joint board, and Jack Goldstein of 9929 62nd avenue, Corona, a dress cutter, who also took the jail sentence.

May Plead the Fifth.

Last night, counsel for the joint board, Cloak, Suit and Dressmakers union, 130 East 25th street, were busy getting papers ready to appeal the conviction of Zimmerman, Seidlin, Goldstein and others who received sentences varying from three to ten days.

In practically every case where pickets were given the choice of paying a fine or going to jail, they chose the latter. It is estimated that 200 striking cloakmakers faced Magistrate Silberman in a session that dragged all day yesterday.

Rochester A. C. W. Donates $6,000

The union announced last night that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Rochester, N. Y., voted $5,000 towards the strike. This is in addition to the $35,000 already voted by the national office of that organization.

BRIBERY RATHER THAN HUNGER IS SMITH'S ALIBI

One Crook is as Good as Another

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 6.—Frank L. Smith, recently chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission and now recently beneficiary of a $200,000 gift from Samuel Insull, spoke here on the issues of the campaign for the U. S. senatorship from Illinois.

If the democrats win, declared Smith, there will be bread lines in the cities and still worse in the country. This is an insult to bribery compared to starvation? A men may be bribed, but he is never out so long as the voters remain dumb! This was the substance of the slim-chined Smith's speech.

In the meantime George E. Brennan was nursing a wooden leg and all was well on the banks of the Chicago river.

General Von Seeckt Resignation Heralds New German Crisis

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—General von Seeckt, creator of Germany's post-war army, today tendered his resignation as a result of the reichswehr service of the oldest son of the ex-crown prince, which he considered as the first indication of former Kaiser Wilhelm's return to politics.

The action is expected to cause a military and political crisis. President Hindenburg, it is believed, will accept General von Seekt's resignation.

PASSAIC LOCAL TO ASK FLOOR AT CONVENTION

Woman Tells of Fight for Organization

By CARL HAESSLER, Fed. Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—It's a different story in the British textile mills, says Ellen Dawson of Local 1603, United Textile Workers of America, the newest local in the veteran organization. She hopes to address the American Federation of Labor convention in behalf of the 16,000 woolen mill strikers in Passaic.

Speaking to the Federated Press, Dawson told of entering a Scottish textile mill at 14, later working in Rochdale, the birthplace of the cooperative movement, and then coming to the textile hellholes of New Jersey.

Some Difference.

"As soon as I got into a Passaic mill, after landing in America," she told, "I asked the girls when we pay our union dues. They immediately looked frightened and whispered that I must not talk about unions if I wanted to hold my job in the mill. That struck me as queer, because in England everybody belongs to the union and you pay your dues just as you pay your rent and other necessary bills.

Will Hold to Union.

"But we have our union now in Passaic and we don't intend to let go of it. We could have settled our 9-month strike long ago if we had not insisted on union recognition. We have to put out against police clubs, tear gas, wild-riding motorcycles, slugrings in police cells, frameups by private detectives and above all, against starvation. And it not been for the splendid response of the labor movement of America to our needs, the millionaire bosses might here forced us to surrender.

Still Need Aid in Battle.

"Now we were able, with careful economy, to manage our resources so that the babies won't starve, and we can still keep on fighting. But we must still beg our brother and sister unionists to stand by us a little longer. When our battle is won we shall prove our gratitude by the strongest locals of the labor movement need assistance."

President Thomas McMahon of the textile workers is at the convention and will assist Ellen Dawson in getting the floor.

Here is Henry the Great Himself

The old man is examining one of the new air lizzies that he is thinking about making when the "Leaping Lenes" go out of style. Ford has become a very famous man, known thruout the world. But in spite of this he has been narrow enough to waga a bitter campaign against the Jews and foolish enough to say "History is bunk." The fact is that, outside of the narrow circle of his technical and business knowledge, Ford is what the workers in his plant wou'd term e "dumb-bell." What books and publications appear under his name are written for him by clever press-agents whom Ford pays. The technical achievements for which he has become famous, for that matter are the work of his highly trained engineers. Ford's "greatness" and "philanthropy" are myths, both of which will be exploded as soon as his workers organize and demend e word or two in his industry—as they justly deserve

HIGH WATER TAKES HUGE TOLL FROM 3 MIDWEST STATES

Three Lives Lost; Big Property Loss

(Special to The Daily Worker)

While flood waters continued to menace cities and towns and exact their toll of property and crop damage in central Illinois, other sections of the midwest were counting the cost today as the high water which for days has inundated sections of three states receded.

Three lives were claimed by the high waters.

In Oklahoma and Kansas early estimates placed the damage at over $2,000,000.

No accurate estimate of the damage in Illinois is possible, altho farm humans say it will run into millions.

Beardstown, center of the Illinois flood area, raced possible annihilation as the waters, led by swollen up-state streams, continued to rise.

GAMALIEL COMES LIKE PRODIGAL TO DAUGHERTY

Dead Men's Tales Mean Nothing

NEW YORK, October 6.—Warren Gamaliel Harding, he of the roseate literary style, was wished out of his grave yesterday by the hired attorneys of Harry M. Daugherty, in order that the shades of a departed president might be invoked in influencing a jury to deal kindly with the aforesaid Daugherty in the matter of a $7,000,000 claim allowed to a Teuton claimant by Daugherty and Col. Miller, whether with malice aforethought or with profits in view.

The gentle reader will remember that the United States government under the regime of Woodrow Wilson became quite displeased with the party of the first part in the "Me Und Gott" section, on or about April 1917, and thet henceforth America maintained diplomatic relations with Gott, only spelled in the English way.

Cost 100,000 Lives.

Therefore the United States blew 100,000 perfectly good Americans into smithereens in order to show its displeasure with the Teuton alphabet.

However, all that blew over and so did the war, but the capitalists on both sides of the big pond continued to exist outside of Soviet Russia, and in the course of time the Tentons began to be welcome in our land so that our politicians could speak to them without losing their consaitiencies.

And it came to pass that Harry M. Daugherty and divers other patriotic politicians looked with favor on German capitalists in return for a transfer of divers marks to Daugherty and divers patriots.

And in the course of time other patriotic politicians, expecting to make hay out of the troubles of Daugherty and other lovers of their country did sue said defendents, with the result that Daugherty and his confederates may go to jail or may live happily ever afterwards even as it was in the days of Hans Anderson's fairy tales.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. — George E. Williams, managing director of the alien property custodian's office under Col. Thomas W. Miller, today took the stand at the opening of the fifth week of the conspiracy trial of Miller and Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general.

The charges against the two defendants are in connection with the approval of the $7,000,000 claim for war seized assets of the American Metals company.

A memorandum was introduced, giving the evidence of Miller, Williams and Adnah Johnson, former assistant attorney general, in the Brookhart-Wheeler investigation in 1924 when the American Metals case first came up.

The memorandum showed that the claims in question were presented on July 24, 1925, and that conferences were held meeting them on Aug. 3, 5 and 6.

WALL STREET BORING FROM WITHIN AGAINST HENRY FORD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The plan of Henry Ford to consolidate the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad with the Detroit and Ironton was attacked by minority stockholders of the former road in a brief filed with the interstate commerce commission. Examiners of the commission have already recommended that the plan be disapproved.

ANDREW MELLON APPROVES FORD'S 5-DAY WEEK IDEA

O. K. If You Speed Up Workers, Treasurer Says

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Andy Mellon, reactionary secretary of treasury of the United States, Wall Street flunkey, and aluminum trust magnate, has placed his stamp of approval on Henry Ford's 5-day week plan. This was the word passed around in financial circles here and which startled industrialists, who, failing to 'see thru' Ford's plan, expected disapproval from such a quarter.

ANDREW W. MELLON

But Andy Mellon, who has much experience in exploiting both the workers and the people in general, is shrewd enough to know what the "5-day week" means.

Why Not?

Mellon is quoted as saying that if the workers can be made to produce as much in five days as they do now in six, he can see no reason for not "giving" them the extra holiday.

Mellon said, also, that he has come to realize that shortening of the workers' hours is more necessary now than in former years because of the mechanical "speed-up" production methods.

Must Be "Developed."

Success of the plan, Mellon was careful to point out, depends apon how it is "developed," meaning that industries should be certain they could speed up their workers enough in five days before they establish the five-day week.

Even "Non-Partisan" Politics Passed Up by Detroit Meeting

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 6.—There isn't much discussion of the congressional campaign among the delegates to the 46th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor now in session here.

It was ignored completely in the pre-convention department gatherings except for brief mention in the report of J. W. Hayes, president of the Union Label Trades Department. Hayes is also secretary of the International Typographical Union.

Good Polley—But Won't Work.

The brief mention of the subject by Hayes is pretty much a gesture of despair. He says he has not yet turned traitor to the non-partisan policy of the A. F. of L., but he frankly admits that it doesn't work. Of course, he blames the workers, as is the custom with all officials. He says:

"The political weakness of the labor movement is proverbial; the worker is a republican or a democrat for some silly reason that has nothing whatever to do with the welfare of his class.

Worker Needs Arousing.

"The banker and the manufacturer are much wiser. They cast their votes and their influence for those who serve them and against those who have injured them.

"I am not advocating any departure from our traditional non-partisan policy but em only citing evidence that the worker has never been sufficiently aroused to the importance of supporting his own interests."

Oppose "The Inevitable."

In the discussion of the labor party at the Atlantic City convention a year ago, Jim Lynch, president of the Typographical Union, confessed the organization of the labor party was an inevitable development in the United States, but he joined with Hayes in voting against it.

There are now 46 national and international labor unions, out of the 107 chartered by the American Federation of Labor, affiliated with the Union Label Trades Department.

PLUTE JOURNAL TELLS TRUTH AND THEN EATS CROW

Some Humble Scribe Will Lose Meal Ticket

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(FP)—Art the anguish and agony of a frenzied editorial mind is poured into the apology publicly offered by the Chicago Journal of Commerce to the clothing firm of Hart Schaffner & Marx in its issue of Sept. 30.

On the preceding day, in a column headed, ironically enough "What's Behind Chicago Stocks," the Journal had detailed the strong financial condition of that clothing corporation. It wound up a paragraph on net profits with the words, "but of course this is all a lot of bunk, although the crooked officials say different."

Journal Ate Crow.

The explanation came the following day when, under the same heading, "What's Behind Chicago Stocks," the Journal published the following notice:

"Presumably those who read the article will recognize in the words a wanton act of sahotage. Obviously the words have no context with the rest of the article and should have been inserted by an illiterate person, and presumably by one whose mind is warped."

Whether the wanton saboteur's mind had been warped by shattering personal experiences with what's behind Chicago stocks, the Journal of Commerce was too frantic to specify.

Main Anti-Daugherty Witness' Testimony Ruled From Record

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The defense closed its case at noon today in the trial of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, and Colonel Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, charged with conspiracy in connection with the return to foreign interests of the $7,000,000 assets of the American Metals company which had been seized during the war.

Motions were promptly made to dismiss the indictments against the defendants. Two motions were made, one by Max Steuer, counsel for Daugherty, the other by Colonel William Ran, attorney for Miller.

The motions were denied by Federal Judge Julian Mack.

Judge Mack overruled Steuer's motion to have the testimony of the late John T. King, Connecticut republican politician, before the grand jury, read into the record.

King was paid $441,000 by Richard Merton, German industrialist, for getting thru the $7,000,000 American Metals company claim, according to sworn statements made [illegible]

AIMEE'S TALE CONTINUES TO EXCITE PEOPLE

Is Ryan Agent of Devil or the Pope?

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6.—After relating how he traveled into Mexico in search of the shack in which Aimee Semple McPherson, woman evangelist, said she had been held captive by her kidnappers, how he sought to check up her story step by step, Joe Ryan, deputy district attorney, today resumed his place on the witness stand, a place he occupied all day yesterday as the state's witness against the exponent of the "four-square" gospel, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Wiseman-Seilaff, all charged with having conspired to manufacture false evidence in connection with the alleged kidnapping episode.

Ryan unfolded his story from the time he went to Mexico until he went to Carmel, where the state holds that Mrs. McPherson occupied a cottage with Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at Angelus Temple, and again related how written grocery slips, which he claims were written in Mrs. McPherson's handwriting, were given to the grand jury only to have them subsequently destroyed by a member of that body.

Who Killed McSwiggin? Ask Cicero and the Echo Will Answer: "Who"?

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—There will be no indictments for the slaying of William H. McSwiggin, assistant state's attorney.

This announcement was made here today by Charles A. MacDonald who was appointed special prosecutor in the triple machine gun murder which took the life of the young attorney.

Of the three special grand juries which were impanelled in an effort to solve the crime, MacDonald's report says:

"While the report of this work does not name the slayers of McSwiggin, it might indicate who they are. We had no positive evidence, however, so we could return no indictments."

USE POLICE AND SLUGGERS ON CHI WINDOW WASHERS

Police were in league with police sluggers Wednesday in an unsuccessful effort to intimidate members of the Chicago Window Washers Union, Local 40, in order to break their strike.

Business Agent Held.

Steve Zarachuk, business agent of the local, was placed under arrest by police officers at union headquarters, 673 West Madison, Wednesday afternoon.

Armed with a trumped up warrant, the coppers invaded the union headquarters and forced the business agent to go with them to headquarters. He was released later, however, when the police realized they could not place any charges against Zarachuk.

Sylvester Washkareles, a member of local 40, was also arrested by the coppers, and charged with disorderly conduct, because he was picketing. Efforts were being made late Wednesday to have him released.

Bosses Have Armed Sluggers.

Strikers reported that armed sluggers had been stationed in many parts of the city by some of the window cleaning companies. No clashes between the strikers and the sluggers were reported, altho one was narrowly averted on the north side, it is reported.

Union officials declare it is their determination to carry on the strike peacefully, but will be ready to meet any hoodlum tactics of the bosses.

The window washers went on strike Monday when their demands for $1.25 on hour and $40 a week guarantee were denied.

There was no letup Tuesday in the strike of Chicago Window Washers' Union, Local 40, which was called Monday when the bosses refused to grant the union demand for $1.25 an hour and a guarantee of 40 hours a week.

Every window cleaning company in the city is affected except the Model Window Cleaning Company, 8000 Wells street, which signed with the workers on the new scale without protest. Twenty-two companies refused to grant the increase.

No member of the union is allowed to work without obtaining a special permit from the business agent, it is announced.

A special strike meeting was held Monday night, and every member voted to "stick" until their demands are met.

Picketing is being continued thru out the city.

Scab Metal Workers Find Auto Transport Unsafe; in Hospital

Two policemen stopped a truck belonging to the Rindsberger Lamp Company of 18 West 24th street at Jackson and Laval when they found that two of the five scab metal workers who were riding in it had collided with bullets, one being wounded in the foot and the other in the leg. They said the truck was fired on from an automobile.

It has long been the habit of employers to take scabs home in autos. With two out of five in the hospital it is seen that this form of transportation is beginning to have its drawbacks. The scabs at St. Luke's hospital are Theodore Stemer, 1823 West Van Buren street, and Anton Moneuszko or 3121 Augusta street.

School Board Head Denies Charges of Treasury Surplus

Edward B. Elliott, president of the Chicago board of education, denies that the treasury of the school board will show a surplus of four million dollars on December 31, as it was charged by Margaret A. Haley, business representative of the Chicago Teachers' Federation.

Elliott made the denial in a letter Tuesday to Mayor Dever.

He claims there will be a deficit, and for that reason the school board must slash its expenditures, with salaries coming under that head.

SOVIET WORKERS SPURN PLEAS OF OPPOSITION TO CENTRAL COMMITTEE

The Moscow correspondent of The DAILY WORKER cabled the following story on the controversy that is now taking place in the ranks of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union:

The the revolutionary workers of the Soviet Union do not forget the services rendered to the revolution by Trotsky and others in the past, they feel that the present attempt to break the unity of the party, under the leadership of Trotsky cannot fail to be inimical to the best interests of the Soviet Union and the world revolution:

By JOHN PEPPER.

All the largest organizations of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union after hearing of the attempts of the opposition leaders to force a new discussion upon the party, adopted resolutions of protest emphasizing the fact that the opposition has overstepped all limits of permissible methods of inner party controversy. These resolutions demand unanimously of the Central Committee to take drastic measures against the opposition leaders who are striving to break the unity of the party.

FAMILIES MUST WAIT WEEKS FOR MINERS' BODIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROCKWOOD, Tenn., Oct. 6.—Thwarted by fire and the danger of another explosion, rescue workers today admitted it may be days and even weeks before the bodies of 21 miners still remaining in the wrecked workings of the Roane Iron company's mine here can be recovered.

Owing to the danger of the fire said to be ranging in the mine, the rescue crews were obliged to work slowly and cautiously. The fumes emanating from the interior of working were still heavy, further hampering the work of recovering the bodies.

The families of the missing men, now given up for dead, have resigned themselves to patient waiting at the mouth of the mine for the bodies to be returned to them.

CALVIN CONFUSED BY QUEER LINGO; DITCHES LEAGUE

Court Document Worse Than Cross Puzzle

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—An alleged copy of the new world court protocol recently devised by the league of nations in connection with the reservations of the United States as a condition of entrance to the world court gave secretary of state Kellogg a terrible headache according to information secured from the usually reliable quarters.

Kellogg's head was not built either for speed of punishment but reporters who are accustomed to grab off the high spots in obtuse documents confessed after a half hour's labor that the job of making head or tail of what the league assembly meant was still on the other side of the mental dead line.

One article said that such and such a thing could be done provided it did not conflict with another article. And when the reporters acurried to the articles whose name was taken in vain they found a similar story.

Reporters Want Wild.

Reporters with solvent papers wired the whole document to their managing editors, leading off with a prediction that the Yankees would win the world's series or that Jack Dempsay's boils would not burst before Susanne Langlen married Red Grange.

Kellogg was never so glad of anything in his life as of Coolidge's decision to pigeon hole the world court issue. Now it can be told! Neither one of them knew what Sir Eric Drummond was talking about so they fell back on Washington's farewell address.

CHINESE STRIKE IN BOYCOTT TO OUST BRITISH

All Classes to Fight British Business

Peking, Sept. 17.—(By Mail)— The Peking government has addressed a note of protest to the British ambassador in connection with the attack of the British forces on the Tangtse. The professors of the National University of Peking have sent a letter of protest to the British parliament in connection with the blood bath of Wanshein.

Unite Against British.

The newspapers in Washington call upon the Chinese people to unite to fight against the British imperialists. To this end it is proposed: To create a national union hostile to Great Britain, to establish a complete boycott of all British goods, to buy no foodstuffs from Britishers, to break off all economic relations with Great Britain, to prohibit British ships from entering Chinese waters, to abolish the unequal agreements and to demand compensation for the families of the dead and wounded in Wanshein, and compensation for the damage done to property.

Merchants Join Protest.

The foreign ministry has approved of the petition of the Chinese Merchants' Federation which contains the following demands: No extension of the unequal treaties after they have expired, the signing of new treaties upon the basis of equality, a note to the foreign powers to the effect that after 1929 customs autonomy will be once again introduced, the representatives of the Chamber of Commerce shall be permitted to take part in the economic work of the customs commission of Shanghai.

British Bring Troops.

British mercantile troops which in consequence of the boycott have avoided Canton harbor for over a year have now appeared there once again with military forces on board. The Chinese regard this as a proof that Great Britain intends to break the blockade by force. The press expects complications.

"FRENCH FORD" ECHOES IDEAS OF U. S. HENRY

Talks Just Like Our Own Shave Driver

PARIS, Oct. 6.—A similar philanthropist with a greatly insulted system of exploitation a la Ford is the owner of the greatest French automobile factory, who is known as the French Ford: Citroen-Paris.

Two years ago the Citroen plant was reorganised completely on the Ford model. Labor is carried on mostly on moving tables. Concerning the great advantage of continuous work Mr. Citroen writes:

"The machines must all be so arranged that they lie one behind the other and form a continuous chain similar to the chain of buckets used in putting out a fire. The people employed in this chain are mechanically compelled to perform all the operations with corresponding speed. It is to be noticed very frequently that by the speed of operations increases in one place then there is a speeding up of all the rest of the operations."

Same as at Ford's.

Several examples to show the methods of Citroen's system:

"The toilets must be very near to the workshop in which the work is being done so that the workers are not compelled to be absent a long time and to run around in the factory yard in order to get to the toilet and thus lose time."

And what doesn't the benevolent boss do for his dear workers:

"The workers must have the opportunity in summer to refresh themselves without trouble. Therefore there must be set up in the workshops little water-fountains (naturally again for the sake of saving time!) with continually running fresh water."

In another place he explains:

"It must be made easy for the worker to receive his pay so that no unnecessary time is lost at pay-time."

Is there any wonder the gentleman is called the "Ford" of France!

Fordism Descends On Germany

By MAX BEDACHT.

THE economic system of Henry Ford has become in Germany a much more than merely an expression to be taken seriously. In Germany, Ford is being taken more seriously than in America. "Fordism" there has become what Ford wants it to be: a "Weltanschauung."

What is Ford's fundamental idea? Ford is a capitalist. For him the capitalist system is the last and final word in social development. The problem, as he sees it, is not: what form of society will replace capitalism. Oh, no! There can be none better! But it is possible, according to Ford, to improve capitalism!

The improvement has two general objects. First: To increase the possibilities for making profit, and, second: To lessen the possibilities of dissatisfaction and thus of rebellion by the workers.

All of Ford's measures must be considered in the light of these two objectives. And it is just in the light of these two objectives that Fordism attains special significance in Germany. But it is also a Germany in which the inner contradiction of Ford's objectives is clearly brought to light.

Reparations Burden.

THE reparations heve put a tremendous burden upon German economy. The German capitalists were never avan for one moment in doubt about whether they themselves should shoulder part of that burden.

AKRON'S RUBBER CLOSE RACE WITH FORD IN EXPLOITING MEN TO SUPPLY TIRES FOR FLIVVERS

By I. AMTER.

The situation in the rubber tire industry of Akron is beginning to develop, and the rubber manufacturers and the rubbers workers realise that the race is getting more intense day by day.

Perhaps the best evidence of this is the fact that a member of the Rubber Workers' organization who ran for election as member of the Good-year Industrial Assembly was im-peached when his success in the elections was announced. Why did they resort to this act of ter-rorism in this "parliament of the rubbers"? The reason is that Good-year realises that the workers know what is going on in the industry and are beginning to sense the need of organization in order to put an end to the efforts of the bosses.

43,000 Workers in Akron.

WHAT is the situation in Akron? There are 43,000 workers in the rubber tire industry of Akron, rep-resenting the vast majority of the rubber workers of Ohio—the biggest rubber state in the country—and pro-ducing 83 per cent of the rubber tires of the country. More than half—24,000—of these workers are employed in two plants—the Goodyear Rubber & Tire company and the Goodrich Rubber and Tire company, the re-mainder being in the Selberling, Firestone, Mohawk, General, etc.

These rubber workers are among the worst exploited in the country, that is, regarding exploitation from the point of view of production and profit-making. In 1923 the average pay of the workers was $1,556. From 1923 on, the profits of the rubber bar-ons increased, until in 1925 they earn-ed the highest profits in the history of the rubber industry. At the same time, the production increased from 71,000,000 to $556,000,000 or 42 per cent, while the wages declined from $1,644 to $1,519 or a decrease of 4.1 per cent.

The Workers Know.

The workers in the shops know what the exploitation is. Thus, in one department, they used to employ a mold turning out one tire, the hand-ling of the tire requiring three work-ers. Now they employ six molds turn-ing out six tires, and only four men are required.

Speed-up is the curse of the rubber industry. The foreman and supervis-ors stand behind the men, driving them on. But there is something more coercive than the foreman's warnings: the fact that if the work-ers do not work at maximum speed, they will not earn enuf to live on.

"Base" Rate Scale Used.

THE work is based on the "base rate"—a scale established arbitrarily. That rate, however, has no meaning whatever. A worker knows that he makes out products for that scale, but the amount changes from day to day. Thus by speeding up the workers, and demanding an ever greater production, the rate will remain the same, but the worker is exploited to an ever higher degree. The experiment is tried out on one worker, and when it is discovered that he can produce a larger quan-tity than hitherto, all the workers are compelled to equal that production.

Scale Also Reduced.

THERE are instances, however, in which the base rate itself is low-ered. Thus a year ago a worker re-ceived $1 for an operation, three months ago it was reduced to 82 cents, and now amounts only to 66 cents. Production has increased, for the rubber barons use this stimulus, in addition to the one mentioned above, to force the men to work harder in order to earn the money that they did before.

THE rubber industry is working at a fast pace, owing to the fact that the spring season was slow and now the demand must be met. In spite of the fact that local men are being discharged, more men are being put on. The companies prefer southern-ers—men who know little about or-ganization, and who will "appreciate" the "fine" conditions in the Akron rubber industry. These men are em-ployed in order to put an end to the efforts of the bosses.

Ford Takes It Out of Their Bones

By THURBER LEWIS.

WHEN Henry Ford dramatically made the announcement that his two hundred thousand employes would work five instead of five and a half days a week, thousands of people who don't know anything about the Ford system thot Henry made a monumental contribution to human progress. In doing this, Ford did make one contribution: he placed the question of the five-day week out in the open and got millions of workers to thinking about it. But the five-day week that they are thinking about is not the five-day week that Ford is "giving" his workers.

The workers in the Ford plants work as much, if not more, than any group of workers in the country. The difference is that they work in a more concentrated form. It is true that they have remarkable and effi-cient machinery and tools. The co-ordination of the function of every worker with that of another could not be more perfect. Production goes forward smoothly, methodically, and with certainty. But it also goes for-ward rapidly. The big cost in pro-duction is the labor cost. To cut this down, labor has to be speeded-up and improved machinery introduced. Ford is the world's greatest master at this art. He can squeeze more effort out of the marrow of his workers' bones in a shorter time than any other boss.

Work Harder.

WHEN Ford decides to give his workers two days rest a week it is a sure sign that he is preparing to work them harder for the other five. A worker in the Ford plant, despite the eight-hour work day, needs at least two days a week to recover from the terrific drain on his vitality that the steady and exhaustive labor in the Ford factory takes. There is no such thing as a standard system in the Ford plant. Methods and ma-chinery are changed as rapidly as newer methods and machinery are found that will cut down labor costs. This means speed-up for the men. The five-day week is the direct rehult of this Ford policy. It means simply that every man working for Ford will hereafter do the same work in five days that he formerly did in five and one half. This being true, there is not much benevolence to be found in the fact that the pay of the meo will remain the same.

Ford is Survivor.

HOWEVER, despite these facts which prove that Ford has given his workers nothing that they are not paying for in full, there are certain additional and informative facts about Ford's five-day week. First, there are very few other manufactur-ers in the country who could do what Ford has done in this regard. There are certain characteristics about the Ford industry not common to most. For instance, Ford and his immediate family control the entire Ford indus-try and all its subsidiaries. He con-trols every share in the Ford in-stitution. He has no board of direc-tors clamoring for dividends. He is the sole boss. This gives Ford a lot of leeway in management not en-joyed by many bosses.

Ford is the king of free-lance cap-italists. The huge personal profits of the industry and the fact that it is of a vertical nature has placed Ford less at the mercy of the banks than any other independent producer. Ford is one of the few big survivors in the war between the industrialist and the financier. He is still free to take ex-perimental steps that but few other large producers could afford or would be permitted to make.

WHEN there is this to be considered: Ford is now engaged in a trade war. His opponent is the General Motors Co. which has started a pro-gram of cheap production calculated to take some of his business away from him. Ford has gotten home the first blow. He has hit the General Motors Co. in their weakest spot—production, precisely where Ford is strongest. This will immediately give Ford the pick of the labor market and assure him o less expensive labor turo-over. At the same time he will maintain his production level and when it has become sufficiently sta-bilized under the new system he will go about increasing production. There is also the huge advertising value of this "philanthropic" concession to the workers. It is hard for most people to understand that every time Ford GIVES his workers something he takes it out of their hides.

THERE is an angle on the five-day week that outside of fairly sound conjecture can only be definitely known by Ford's engineers them selves. But here it is:

When you work seven five and a half days a week you use five and a half days worth of equipment. Ford is now working his men five days a week. In that time they are produc-ing as much as they did in five and a half. There is thus a half day saved on plant and equipment outlay. The maintenance is cut down, the overhead is reduced. It is a distinct saving to the owner. Thus Ford is saving money by GIVING his men the five-day week. But what are the workers saving?

All this helps Ford in his battle with General Motors. It also in-creases his personal prestige and adds to his already very large personal vanity—at the expense, mind you, of his workers.

Five Days Work.

THE five-day week is good. Sooner or later all workers will have the five-day week and maybe less. But not Ford's kind. Ford gets the extra day or half day right back out of your bones. The kind of a five-day week that militant unionists want is a five-day week with FIVE DAYS WORK and when later the workers go after a four-day week they will want that many days work. You can expand as finch cnergy RUNNING a city block as you can WALKING a mile. That is the reason that Ford's workers are yearning.

The only way the slavbs in the great Ford industry will get a REAL five-day week is by organising and fighting for it. That was the way the organised American workers won re-cognition for the eight-hour day. They had many long and bit-ter struggles to get it.

Workers Powerless.

NOTHING suits the bosses better than to have a willing lot of un-organized human material with which they can do as they please. That is what Ford likes and that is what he has. His two hundred thousand work-ers, collectively, haven't a single word to say about the Ford plant for which they are mainly responsible. Ford pays his meo six dollars a day be cause he can get more work out of them. They haven't got anything to say about it. It is entirely up to the management. Ford has found it more profitable to give them six dollars a day, an eight-hour day and a five-day week. But he gets it back and then some. His annual profits are astound-ing. A big portion of them he puts back into the business, which grows and reaps in ever more profit each succeeding year. All this on the sweat and blood of the workers in his plant. And they haven't got any-thing to say about it.

Workers Have Rights.

THE point is that they have a right to a say in the plant that their muscles and work and time make possible. It is true that management is necessary. It is true that the work-ers can benefit by improved methods, labor saving-machinery and efficient production. But when that production has as its main purpose profits and when these profits come from the labor of the workers—they have every right to have something to say about the conditions of their work.

NO until the workers in the Ford plant assert this right they will continue to be automatons, entirely at the mercy of "efficiency experts" and speed up methods, instead of MEN with responsibility, labor power, in the boss on the highest terms that the power of organization can extract. This is the right of all workers. Until the workers in the Ford plant, and in the entire automobile industry fer that matter, make this plain to their bosses they shall have to be satisfied with GIFTS, such as Ford has given him and for which they pay double in return.

Ford's Competitor

J. P MORGAN

For the first time in its industrial career the Ford Motor Co. is faced with the most powerful combination of capital in the world, backed by Wall Street, which is competing with Ford in cheap mass production. Here is the king of Wall Street.

FORD FIVE-DAY WEEK MANEUVER DIRECTLY CONNECTED WITH FIGHT OF WORKERS AND A. F. OF L. MEET

day week at the Ford Motor Co.? Re-member, first it was $6 a day, and now it is five days a week.

In the first place, continuous strug-gle on the part of organised labor in all industries has brought the skilled worker in a few instances within reaching distance of the Ford stand-ard and in some instances has carried him beyond it. The five-day week is new demanded as labor's next ad-vance in the slogans of the vanguard of the American labor movement.

No Longer Safe.

The militant union furriers of New York have already won a 40-hour or five day week, and even before the Ford $5-a-day wage has been advanced to $6 a day. But the $6-a-day wage alone would no longer safeguard the Ford Motor Co. from dangerously sug-gestive comments on the basis to the workers of trade unions.

The annual convention of the Amer-ican Federation of Labor is meeting this year in Detroit, the center of the automotive industry. For two years it has been mildly suggested in the councils of the A. F. of L. that the automobile industry is open-shop and should be looked into from an organi-zation point of view. In the report this year to the metal trades depart-ment of the A. F. of L. President O'Connell recommends that the exten-tion of the A. F. of L. convention be called not to the desirability but the "necessity" of organising the automo-bile industry. In announcing a five-day week the Ford Motor Co. is meet-ing union labor's newest threat.

The Ford Motor Co., moreover, found it fortunately convenient at this time to shut down to five days a week because of a reduction in its orders, continuous since last spring. The company was forced either to adopt a five-day week or to lay off perma-nently a large number of men. The organization experts of the Ford Mo-tor Co. thus killed two birds with one stone.

Experimentation with the five-day week began several months ago, and the schedule has been gradually ex-tended thruout all departments, so that it is now in the Ford industry in an old story as far as actual practice is concerned. But the permanent adoption of a five-day week as a com-pany policy is obviously strategic.

Other Factors.

Consider other factors. The strike of the Passaic textile workers taught the Ford Motor Co. (and also taught the automobile workers) that "official" strikes are not the only possible strikes. The company concluded also from the Passaic strike that the Amer-ican Federation of Labor is capable of recognising and adopting a found-ling "illegitimate" strike, placed on its doorstep by Necessity's forlorn ontcast daughter, the Black Ewe of Desperation.

And the British miners' strike fol-lowed by the general strike stimulated the imagination and potential class consciousness of 100,000 Ford work-ers as nothing else has ever done.

Workers Feel History.

Race to face in their own lives with what we call history, officers of the British Trades Union Congress were afraid. They found history was some-thing they could not shut between the covers of a book, not excepting the book of the minutes of their de-liberations. Afraid of the general strike and of history, they capitu-lated, calling all of Great Britain's proletariat except the miners back to the machines—officers begging the king and the powerful Industrialists and Punch, M. P., and the Earl of Judy to wash the incriminating soot of the coal mines from their faces. But the Ford workers understood this kind of history and felt it had some-thing fundamental to do with them. The sale of The Daily WORKER at the Ford gates doubled in a day. The "physicians" in the "examining" and "first aid" rooms of the Ford Motor Co. always have their fingers on the pulse of the workers. And the stetho-scope showed a quickened heart beat.

The "Ford Worker."

The news of the Passaic strike and the British strike were world news, that could be read in a prejudiced light in the capitalist press from day to day. But this kind of news has been communicated to the Ford work-ers this summer and fall in a light that is new to the Ford shops, the clear light of class struggle, class awareness. The paper that has been communicated not only by The DAILY WORKER, but by the Ford Worker, to which many of the rank and file workers have contributed. It is pub-lished by the Ford Branch of the Work-ers (Communist Party). In spite of interference by the police of Highland Park and Fordson and by Ford Motor Co. guards, nearly 20,000 of the 1st issue of the Ford Worker were sold at the factory gates for a cent apiece.

Thus are there now only five days in a week

WHY DOES FORD FEAR UNIONS?

there than he does of the physical capacity of the men he employs. It does not require many testimonials of workers in the Ford plant as they are in plants that take their pro-fits of the workers in another way—low wages and long hours. What is more, Ford's highly efficient tech-nical methods of production, the per-fect synchronisation of the entire in-dustry, is directed, not for the benefit of the thousands of men who slave at the tasks, but wreats a cheaper and more markatable commodity to make profits greater. Ford is as much a cap-italist as the next industrialist. He is not in business for his health. He is not in business for his workers' health. He is not in business, despite all his noble claims to it, for the pub-lic. Ford is in business to make that business larger, to extend his power and to increase his yearly profits. As proof of this we need only to relate that Ford's personel fortune is growing at the rate of $100,000,000 per year.

WHEN Ford says that trade unions have no place in his industry, he is saying that the-thousands of men who slave in his many plants have no part in the industry except as mere machine cogs in a great, co-ordinated system. Now we have no quarrel with Ford's technical achievements, his time-saving processes of production or his labor-saving machinery. These are all to the good. From the point of view of industrial engineering Ford and his engineers have made a great contribution to world progress. But this does not give Ford the rights of a feudal baron. This does not make it necessary for the workers in Ford's plants to be dumb and disfranchised tools of a great machine.

Workers' Right to Union.

NO. Every worker in the Ford plant contributes his share towards the organization. The humblest worker gives there the best that is in him, his youth, his brawn and his brain, just as in every other plant. This man should have something to say about the plant, about the wages, about the working conditions that he must un-dergo.

It is a fake argument when Ford says that trade unions would interfere with good management. On the contrary, they might help good man-agement—by protecting the worker from being the victim of bad manage-ment whose chief motive is profit and cheap producing and speed-up. The best management is that management under which the workers in the plant has the first consideration and his well being the first charge. The only way that such management can be assured is by the worker himself having the power to dictate these questions affect-ing his well-being.

TO do this he must organize. He has a right to organize. It is all he has. Against the ownership and the right to hire and fire of the boss his only strength lies in joining with his fellows for his own protection. Some day the Ford plants will be so organ-ized. Henry doesn't like it. But did you ever hear of the boss that did like it?

clothes or furniture on the "installment plan"? Is he going to buy a house? How is his little family—the "com-pany"? What kind of a car has he, etc., etc.

And although he makes it appear that he does all this in the interest of the employes, needless to say it is bunk.

All Attention on Job

I asked the guy that was question-ing me why was the idea of wanting to know all about my private affairs.

"Well," he said, "when you are working here, we want all your mind on the work 100 per cent—and how can a worker do that if he has other things on his mind?"

Anyway, those workers that come to work at Ford's soon find out that instead of being the best boss in the U. S., Henry Ford is the worst kind of a slave-driver possible and the world's champion hunk shooter.

Commerce Commission Denies Indiana Cut

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. The inter-state commission has denied the petition of the Indiana state chamber of commerce for a reduction in freight rates on bituminous coal, for periods, from certain points in Ohio and from the so-called Inner-Crescent region, embracing portions of Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee, Virginia and Kentucky, to all points in the state of Indiana.

Why not a small bundle of The DAILY WORKER sent to you regular-ly, to take to your trade union meeting?

The Future for Workers in the Automobile Industry

Head of the Automobile and Aircraft Workers' Union

Most Recent Bunk.

THE most recent bunk is about the five days' work with six days' pay. Men are speeded up, less time allow-ed for their tasks. The conveyor moves faster, for when Ford wants a little more speed, more production, he speeds up the conveyors and the men must move faster. The worker works five days and he gets paid for just five days at his old rate per day.

More could be said about Ford and his system, it would fill a good big book, but of other automobile firms a little must be said too.

Most Efficient.

THE automobile industry grew very rapidly, and when it came at a time when other industries had paved the way to modern efficiency it took ad-vantage of the opportunity. So it be-came the most efficient and can get more work out of a man then any other industry. It needed men and it paid more than other industries. That is, a man could earn more money by having the opportunity to work harder.

There was little opposition to the will of the employers because the in-dustry grew faster than a labor or-ganization could, and many workers felt they needed no organization be cause they earned as much or more then they did at their old trade or line of work. Many of them were from farms or small towns and they not only felt they could stand as in-dividuals, but the town conditions seemed wonderful to them. The movie and the dance hall made life worth living and they were young and strong and could work hard.

48-Hour Week

PIECE-WORK prices are cut every so often, more work demanded for the same money under a task system, and it will not be long before, regard-less of the amount of his labor, the auto worker will be a poorly paid worker. While many other workers are gaining a 40 or a 44-hour week the auto worker still works 48 and 54 hours o week as a rule.

A few figures will prove some in-teresting facts. In 1924 the General Motors Co. had 51 millions and in 1925 they made over 116 millions of dollors. The first half of 1926 was more then fifty per cedt better the first half of 1925.

The Chrysler made in 1924 over 4 millions and in 1925 over 17 millions with prospects for a much better profit in 1926.

On all cars with the excepiion of Fords, 43 dollors more on each car was made in 1925 then in 1924. This regardless of the fact that every com-pany was reducing the price of the car.

THIS will continue as long as the auto worker thinks he does not need an organization. Wages in the trimming department of one of Fisher's plants was $1.25 an-hour in 1920. Now by working a great deal harder they make a dollar an hour at a pace that kills. In the Packard plant 26 men putting on deck who were paid 70 cents an hour were fired and 26 men at 84 cents an hour replaced them. The ten men doing the work is only a small fraction of what can be heard of every day in the city of Detroit.

The day for the auto worker to unite with other workers must be near at hand, he has been a bear for hard work and punishment. How much more he will stand is hard to say, but with the competition in the automobile business getting keener and keener he will surely get badly handled for he pays the bills of the employers' battles.

Speed-Up Kills Three Workers Every Hour in Industry, Says Expert

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 6.—Three workers are killed on an aver-age every hour by industry in the United States, according to a report submitted by E. H. Lewinski Corwin, director of Hospital Information Bu-reau of New York.

Corwin in his statistics to the 28th annual convention of the Amer-ican Hospital Association. Every year 700,000 workers are disabled for at least four weeks, he said. Industrial accidents are increasing, despite em-ployers' so-called safety campaigns, Corwin showed.

The reasons he gave: general speed-ing up of workers; increased number of new men taken on after the last depression; safety work ratarted since war and safety engineers taken off company payrolls to allow welfare departments without expert technical knowledge to handle safety.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Charg-ing that the Armour Grain Company attempted to manipulate the price of grain on the Chicago Board of Trade, Secretary of Agriculture Jardina has issued a citation under the grain fu-tures act calling upon the company to show cause why an order should not be issued directing all contracts markets to refuse it trading privi-leges.

The Ford Motor Co. 14 Years Ago and Today

By CYRIL LANSKIN.

In the life of an industry 14 years constitute a brief span. But in the automobile industry the last 14 years cover the whole period of growth of a baby industry not only to maturity, but to first place on the list of manufactures by value in the United States.

Well-do I remember the Ford plant 14 years ago. In the fall of 1912 I came to Detroit and immediately secured a job in the Highland Park plant. This plant was the only Ford plant then. The output of cars for the fiscal year then ended was 78,150 compared with 1,890,935 in 1925. The number of workers employed at that time was about 9,000 as against about 118,000 in the three plants this year.

The Big Boom Year.

IT was the year 1913-1912 which was the great boom year of the Ford business. So fast were the orders coming in that production could not keep up despite every effort. Workers did not come in sufficient numbers to the shop employment office, and so, it is told, Ford employment agents stood on street corners soliciting workers at higher pay than they were receiving elsewhere.

Those were the days before the conveyor and the speed-up system were in use. The work day was one of nine hours and the wages of the great majority of the workers ran from 22 to 24 cents an hour. The work of moving the assembled parts from one part of the factory to the other was certainly crude and inefficient compared with the methods of today. All over the place men could be seen pushing trucks from one department to another. Even the bodies were brought on auto trucks, lowered on small trucks operated by manpower, wheeled to an elevator which took body and man up to the fourth floor where was located the body room. From there after the trimmings were attached the bodies were again moved by truckers to the final assembly where it was attached to the chassis. It is altogether different today when the body moves on an automatic conveyor, which brings it directly over the chassis just as it is completely assembled, and it is lowered onto the chassis without the loss of a minute.

New Methods Come.

HOWEVER, already the steps were taken by the company which were destined to make it the model of standardization and efficiency. For long periods at a time things were moved from one place to another to the consternation of many workers. But gradually it began to be noticed that things were so placed that they moved to the next step in a regular order which eliminated unnecessary movement.

It was also at that time that the first beginning of a general speed-up system was introduced. And this too was crude at the start. Many foremen and sub-foreman were used to drive the workers. But how much better a moving conveyor serves such a purpose against which the wrath of the driven worker cannot find expression so readily.

$5.00 a Day.

IT is about the end of 1913 or the beginning of 1914 that the Ford Motor company announced its radical policy of the 8-hour day and $5.00 wage per day for all men in the employ of the company at least six months. Curiously enough the new scale did not apply to the woman workers of whom there were several hundred.

Along with the $5.00 day was introduced the so-called sociological department. The work of this department was the most outrageous interference with the rights of the individual. The "sociologists" put you thru a refined third degree. They visited your home, looked into your bank account, looked over your insurance policies, your purchases of lots or homes and even the necessities of life. It was a hard ordeal to submit to, but most of the workers considered the 8-hour day and the $5 a day wage a fair price to pay for it. When the Ford company after a few years thought that the expanse of the army of "sociologists" was no longer warranted the department was discontinued, altho there is still some nosing into private affairs.

Since then great wealth was amassed at a rate almost unknown in the annals of industry. Railroads, boat lines, coal and iron mines, lumber tracts all came into the control of Ford. And recently one of the leading aeroplane factories of America also. But the workers received an average increase of only a dollar a day, which makes the general daily wage one of $6.00.

Speed-Up Grows.

YEAR by year the mounting production meant not only great new wealth for the Fords, but it meant also a speed-up system the strain of which could be endured with difficulty. It was then this summer that the thought of a 5-day week was born. Two days a week rest meant a little more relaxation for the workers so they could better endure the strain, and incidentally it meant quite a saving for Ford. There was some talk among the workers of 6 days' pay for 5 days' work. But, altho increased production fully warrants this, the raise did not materialize, except to a small portion of the workers who received a raise of only $2.00 a week instead of the $6.00 expected.

THERE is disappointment in the hearts and minds of the Ford workers. But it is a disappointment that leads not to despair. Rather it is the kind that will generate the idea of organization. It will not be long before they realize that Ford with all his wealth is no match for the organized power of the more than hundred thousand workers he employs. When they fully realize this they will not only help themselves materially, but at the same time they will contribute enormously to the accumulating strength of the whole American working class girding its loins for a final conflict with capitalism.

WORKERS SHOULD SEND IN STORIES ABOUT THEIR SHOPS; ESPECIALLY WORKERS IN AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

By ROBERT W. DUNN.

I have looked in vain among the contributions of the various worker correspondents for descriptive articles on such employers' devices as the company union. Certainly there must be a number of workers, with a flare for writing, who find themselves caught in the meshes of some sort of company association to mislead and betray the workers and keep them out of trade unions.

There are more than a million workers toiling under the yellow flag of the company union in America today. Most of them may appear to be passive, indifferent souls sweating to make that second payment on house, flivver, or victrola and helpless before the tyranny of the boss. But among them are certainly many independent and vigorous types who have an opinion on the refined forms of paternalism that bind them to their jobs and develop that precious "loyalty" the bosses are so prideful of when they show visiting delegations of business men and Y. M. C. A. secretaries thru their plants. These independent-spirited workers should be encouraged to write out their experience with the bosses' schemes to dope the workers.

"Group Insurance."

I ran into one of these fellows the other night. He had been working more than a year in the Studebaker plant in Detroit. He told me how the management introduced the group insurance plan. First it announced in the employe magazine—company edited—that the scheme was voluntary. Only those who really cared to sign up for the frill would be given the "opportunity."

In practice it didn't work out this way. Twenty out of eighty of the men in one department refused the insurance. They were called into the office by the boss and the assistant superintendent. All but one were weakened by the intimidation which took the form of a lecture on how they expected everybody to "go along." It was a good thing for them. The man-

Wages, hours and general conditions are important and should be reported on first. But let us have detailed reports on all the various phases of the "welfare efficiency" of the employers. Let us have careful descriptions of all sorts of labor-handling plans and systems and just how they work. Don't report like the A. F. of L. organizers, who fill our speechmentators, or who send in reports to the Federation-ist as follows: "There is a house subscriber in the plant in this town and a company union. Everything is fine." Give the whole story. Give details. They can be cut out if the editor thinks they are not essential. But usually it's details that make the story of real interest and worth.

A clever European wrote a play in which the characters, workingmen, were made of machinary. This is very reminiscent of a Ford worker. It is high time for not only the slaves in the Ford works but all other automobile "robots" to assert themselves as men instead of continuing merely as little cogs in huge machines that grind out profits for Ford, Durant, Dillon, Read & Co., etc.

FIVE-DAY WEEK ANNOUNCEMENT COMES AT TIME WHEN LAY-OFFS ARE DUE IN DETROIT INDUSTRY

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Auto workers in Detroit, where the American Federation of Labor convention opened Oct. 4, are at the mercy of giant concerns competing for a market which is far too narrow for the full productive power of the industry. It is even chances that unemployment will be handed out as a christmas present. At least that is the story told by employment figures of the Employers Association of Detroit.

The association figures, covering about two-thirds of the working population of Detroit, show in the last 12 months a fluctuation in the number employed from 129,104 at the end of the christmas month to 270,395 in February and down again to 224,837 in June. More than half the workers employed at the peak were unemployed in the last week of December while a sixth of them were again out of a job in June.

Figures Talk.

These figures mean that taking Detroit as a whole about 200,000 workers necessary to peak production were not on the payrolls in the last week of the year and that nearly 70,000 of those employed in February had been laid off by June.

Employment in Detroit has been on the upgrade since June, the advance to August adding somewhat over 20,000 to the payrolls. But the level is still 3% under August 1925. U. S. department of labor figures for employment in auto plants thruout the country show a gain of slightly more than ½% over August 1925. The department's index of employment in the auto industry does not show quite such violent changes as in Detroit.

Fluctuations in employment in Detroit and thruout the automobile industry are shown for last 12 months in the following figures based on August 1925 as 100%. Department of labor figures showing average weekly wages in the industry are shown in the 3rd column:

| Automobile Employment and Wages | Employment Detroit | Employment U. S. | Ave. Wages |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aug. 1925 | 100.0% | 100.0% | $31.60 |
| Sept. 1925 | 105.6 | 104.2 | 32.37 |
| Oct. 1925 | 109.3 | 110.8 | 34.86 |
| Nov. 1925 | 104.2 | 109.7 | 35.37 |
| Dec. 1925 | 52.9 | 104.4 | 34.05 |
| Jan. 1926 | 107.1 | 104.8 | 28.42 |
| Feb. 1926 | 110.8 | 107.1 | 33.82 |
| March 1926 | 110.6 | 109.8 | 33.87 |
| April 1926 | 102.9 | 106.3 | 33.84 |
| May 1926 | 100.6 | 102.4 | 33.50 |
| June 1926 | 92.2 | 100.3 | 34.96 |
| July 1926 | 95.4 | 99.2 | 30.36 |
| Aug. 1926 | 98.0 | 100.7 | 32.68 |

Fluctuation.

There is considerable fluctuation in the average earnings of workers in the auto industry. Wages for January are about 20% less than those paid in November. This means that employes of the big automobile plants suffer occasional part-time as well as periodic idleness.

The latest word from Detroit explains that Henry Ford has found the 5-day week a howling success. Small wonder he likes it. Following the rules of mass production which he has made a feature of American industry, he simply speeded up the conveyers and other machinery by which raw material go in at one end and a finished machine comes out at the other. The working force had to keep the pace. They turned out as much production in 5 days as in 6, but for 5 days' pay except where paid on a piecework basis. Henry got the difference in added profits.

Al Smith to Be Jackass Jockey in National Race If He Wins in New York

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Al Smith's nomination for the presidency on the democratic ticket hinges on his victory in the coming gubernatorial election in New York.

He is running against Ogden L. Mills, republican. Mills is a millionaire and Al, the Wall-Street servant, is going to pull off all his Fulton fish market tricks to prove to the voters that the terms is the poor man versus the rich. A good horse almost anywhere in New York City outside of a certain section of Fifth avenue and Riverside Drive.

Wagner to Run for Senate.

The democrats have nominated Judge Robert R. Wagner to run for the United States senate against James W. Wadsworth, Jr., another millionaire, and of course Wagner is a poor German boy who rose up to "where he is today."

The four leading candidates are all wet on the liquor question, the their platforms are only damp.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Representative Ogden L. Mills, the wealthy scion of an old New York family, was nominated by the republican state convention today to oppose Governor Al. Smith in November.

Mill's name was the only one to go before the convention in accordance with the pre-arranged plans of the leaders.

Dead World Court Only Good One Says William (Senat.) Borah

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 5.—The United States may be down on the world court but it is never out until the one or the other is dead, according to Senator Borah, the wild man of the Idaho Rockies, who seems to be against everything but the republican party in a pinch.

William E. Borah happened to be in Washington when rumors were spread that Calvin Coolidge had turned a jaundiced eye on the anteroom of the league of nations as the world court is known to the faithful.

The senator likes Cal—at a long distance, so he was not willing to give credit where a debt was due. Hence his cynical spiel.

Despite the worthy Borah's pessimism the opinion here is that it would take a hardy political wight to spook the league of nation's miscarriage now-a-days. In fact only wealthy liberals and reactionaries in their second childhood care to be seen walking on Pennsylvania ave more with the league's unbaptised progeny.

A NEW NOVEL by Upton Sinclair

(Copyrighted, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

IX

Bunny spent that summer "playing about," as the phrase ran; he read a few books on the international situation, he studied some of the confidential reports of Vernon Roscoe's foreign agents and watched the derricks climb over a couple more hills of the Ross Junior tract. Bertie telephoned, insisting that he should make his debut into society at the camp of the ultra-fashionable Woodbridge Rileys, located high in the mountains in a "club" to which only the elect might attain. Here people boated and swam but otherwise lived as complicated lives as in the city, tangled in the same web of social duties and engagements, and dressing several times a day. They drank a great deal at dinner, and danced to the music of a Negro jazz orchestra until day-break, after which the young people would go horseback riding and have a late breakfast and sleep a couple of hours before keeping a luncheon engagement.

Here Bunny got to know Eldon Burdick, who had been his sister's favored suitor for a couple of years. Just what was their relationship Bunny was not sure; Dad had ventured a jest about an approaching wedding, but Bertie froze him; she would attend to her own engagements, with no parental meddling. Now Bunny discovered that the pair were quarreling; he could not help overhearing them, and seeing tears in his sister's eyes. She was angry because Eldon would only spend a week-end at the camp, and he was angry because she punished him by dancing too often with some other man. But neither of the pair offered any confidences to Bunny and he did not seek them.

Eldon Burdick was the youngest son a family of old California land-owners. Their holdings lay in the outskirts of Angel City, and every ten years or so they would sell off a chunk for "subdivisions," and this development would so increase the value of the remainder that the family grew richer all the time, despite the fact that forty people, young and old, spent money for everything they could think of. Eldon was a handsome, dashing sportsman with a tiny black moustache, after the fashion of a British army officer; he held himself erect and stiff and Bunny discovered that he had a military mind. Bertie must have mentioned her brother's dangerous ideas, for Eldon invited the younger man for a horse-back ride, and proceeded to sound him out. Eldon himself was an amateur patriot. In the proper sense of the abused word amateur; he was letting his string of polo-ponies stay idle all summer, while he did his part to save society.

It did not take long for him to uncover the deeps of Bunny's peril. The boy had got by heart every one of the Bolshevik formulas; that the people of Russia had a right to run their own country in their own way; that our troops had no business shooting and killing them without a declaration of war by congress; that people in this country had a right to express the above convictions without being beaten or tarred and feathered or sent to prison or deported. Eldon pointed out that all this was merely camouflage, the convenient formulas whereby criminal conspirators sought to cover themselves with a mantle of legality, "free speech" and "civil rights" and all the rest. The Soviet savages had repudiated all these principles and it was our business to fight them with their own weapons.

Bunny listened politely while his companion explained the ramifications of the Bolshevik plot. Not merely had these traitors sought to give the victory to Germany, they were now organizing a propaganda machine to overthrow civilized government all over the world; they were stirring up Negroes, Hindoos, Chinese and Mohammedans to rise and exterminate the white race. They had secret organizations with hundreds of thousands of followers in this country, they published or subsidized some eight hundred papers, all preaching class hatred. How could any man of decent instincts make a truce with this monstrosity?

It was indeed terrifying and difficult to answer; nevertheless, Bunny stuck it out, we had no right in Russia or Siberia, and if we would let the Bolsheviks alone, they couldn't hurt us. When we suppressed people's ideas, we made it seem that we couldn't answer them; when we smashed up meetings and threw hundreds of people into jail for trying to attend meetings, we simply advertised the ideas we were trying to suppress, we made lots of other people sympathize with the victims. Look at those Russian Jewish boys and girls that had been arrested in New York, all of them under twenty; they had done nothing but distribute a leaflet appealing to the American people not to make war on Russia, yet they had been tortured in jail until one of them died, and the rest had got sentences of twenty years! When Eldon Burdick discovered that Bunny was defending vermin such as these, his first became hot, and then he became cold; and soon Bunny noticed that others of the guests were cold and his sister came to him with flashing eyes, declaring that he had ruined her social career.

X

So Bunny went to visit Henrietta Ashleigh, at the beach-home of her family; located on a beautiful blue lagoon, with little white sand-bars over it, and yellow and grey cliffs covered with Spanish bungalows of many tinted plaster. Here, gliding about in a canoe, Bunny tried to justify his ideas, but met no better success. Henrietta had an invincible prejudice against Bolsheviks and Bunny suspected the reason—she had heard about the nationalization of women. He would have liked to hint to her that, if she thought any of these stories true, but if it had been possible to mention such a subject to Henrietta, she would not have been his ideal of feminine purity.

So Bunny had to motor up to Angel City and take Mr. Irving out to lunch, in order to have some one to tell his troubles to. But Mr. Irving made matters worse by giving him an article from a Socialist paper, written by an English journalist who had just come out of Russia, telling of the desperate efforts the Communists were making to defend their cause. The party had conscripted fifty per cent of its members to go to the front and die—that was what it amounted to, for even a slight wound was often fatal, when there were no antiseptics anywhere in a country of more than a hundred million people. On twenty-six fronts the Russian workers were waging battles against a host of enemies, in Finland alone the counter-revolutionary general, Mannerheim, had slaughtered a hundred thousand people suspected of sympathy with Bolshevism; he had done it with American guns and American ammunition and his troops many of them wearing American uniforms. In cases where the troops had been beaten by the Bolsheviks and forced to retreat, the American Red Cross had burned millions of dollars worth of medical supplies, for fear they might fall into the hands of the Bolshevik soldiers and Bolshevik women in child-birth. Somehow, when you knew what things like this were happening in the world, you did not enjoy drifting about in a canoe on a beautiful lagoon!

Bunny went back to Paradise, and studied and thought and waited. There came another post-card from Paul—just like the former one, cold and matter of fact; Paul was well and busy, and was being taken good care of; he had had another letter from Ruth; he hoped that the family was well, and also the Rosens. Bunny now knew the world-situation sufficiently to understand why Paul wrote such a card, and even to imagine the bitterness that Paul must feel to be compelled to write it.

Henry Ford's Retainers and the A. F. of L.

Ford, the five-day week factory owner, hailed by liberals and labor leaders alike as "a good employer," is backed by the most vicious labor-hating elements in Detroit.

The opening of the sessions of the forty-sixth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, following the welcome extended to Ford's five-day week announcement by President Green and other prominent union officials, has been the scene of a well-planned and energetic attack on the American labor movement.

The open shop capitalists of Detroit, whose leader is Henry Ford, have denounced the conservative trade union movement of America in unmeasured terms and dared it to attempt the organization of the workers in the auto industry—the basis of Detroit capitalists, the expansion of which has created a huge army of hangers-on ranging from real estate sharks to proprietors of brothels.

Probably no one is more surprised at this attack than the leadership of the American Federation of Labor. These labor officials exerted every effort to make themselves and the trade union movement respectable. They have denied all belief in the class struggle, they have pleaded for worker-employer co-operation and they have stressed the yellow theory of the identity of interest of worker and capitalist. They have tried and they are still trying to companyize the trade unions with the hope and belief that if unions are castrated they will be accepted by the bosses in place of company unions.

But Henry Ford and his retainers will have none of this. They are against any form of labor organization which they do not control as directly as they do their factories.

The consequence has been that the lamb-like labor leaders have had to try to roar like lions.

They have been forced to make militant-sounding speeches. But corresponding action will come only thru pressure of the left wing when loss of power begins to loom as the result of rank and file discontent with worker-employer co-operation.

The reason why the American Federation of Labor officialdom generally picks such places as El Paso and Atlantic City for their conventions is now plain. It is to avoid such disturbing occurrences as that which the mistake they made of holding a convention in an industrial center has confronted them with.

We are glad that such resolutions as that introduced by President O'Connell of the metal trades department, calling for a conference of all unions involved to lay out a plan for organization of the auto industry, have found their way to the convention floor.

Quite evidently this resolution is a reply to the attack of the Detroit open shoppers. It is a good reply, its effect on the labor movement will be good and it is now up to the left wing in the trade unions to see that the resolution does not remain on paper.

Organize the unorganized workers, put the whole strength of the labor movement into the campaign and the trade unions will take on new life.

The open shoppers of Detroit have rendered the labor movement a great service.

FREIHEIT CHICAGO EDITION TO BE CELEBRATED AT BIG RALLY

Saturday, October 9, there will be held a great revolutionary demonstration of the Chicago workers in Ashland Auditorium, corner Ashland Ave. and Van Buren St., to celebrate the first Chicago edition of the Jewish Communist paper, Freiheit. The first edition will be sold at the meeting.

The Freiheit is well known among the great masses of Jewish, as well as non-Jewish workers, for its participation in the everyday struggles of the working class.

The appearance of the Chicago edition will mark a new chapter in the history of the Jewish workers of this city.

The daily Freiheit edition will reflect the struggles of the Jewish workers here and will help to mobilize them against the bosses. The celebration will create interest in the working class of Chicago.

The speakers will incindo: C. E. Ruthanberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, who will speak in English; B. Gold, manager of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union of New York, who comes especially for the celebration, who will also speak in English; and Melech Epstein, editor of the Freiheit, will speak in Jewish.

A musical program, with the assistance of the Freiheit Singing Society, Freiheit Mandolin Orchestra, and a play by the Freiheit, will be made a part of the celebration.

Chicago Labor's Air Program to Include Music and Education

By JOE CARROLL, Federated Press.

Tune in on WCFL and hear the Barton $25,000 pipe organ which has been placed at the free disposal of organized labor's broadcasting station. Announcing this latest achievement in the Chicago Federation of Labor regular meeting Oct. 3, Secretary Ed Nockels also said that WCFL is now operating on 500 watt power instead of only 250 watt, as heretofore, and that this will be gradually increased up to possibly 3,000 watts.

The most important function of WCFL is the broadcast of talks of direct and educational interest to labor union members and incidentally the general public. These speeches are put on the air between 6 and 7 o'clock every evening except Sunday and Monday. WCFL also broadcasts musical entertainment, both classical and popular, every evening except Monday from 7 o'clock until midnight.

Delegate Herstein, reporting for the women's high school teachers' organization, announced that the fall term education courses of the Trade Union College will begin on Tuesday, Oct. 5, and continue for 10 weeks.

Former Scabs Taken in By Sioux City Machinist Local

By a Worker Correspondent.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Oct. 6.—On Sept. 27 the Machinists' Local 444 of Sioux City demonstrated its "class consciousness" by electing two foremen to reanme membership who had acted as strikebreakers in the 1922 railroad strike.

This action, which is urged and enforced by the grand lodge, is supposed to benefit the rank and file by lining up every former "outlaw," got him back in the fold, collect his dues, and as the editor of the March journal quaintly remarks, "get him to assert his manhood."

Charlie Chaplin To Retire.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Charlie Chaplin, whose antics on the flickering film have made millions all over the world laugh, is planning to retire from pictures shortly, according to Arthur Kelly, vice president of the United Artists corporation, who is now visiting in London.

According to Kelly, Chaplin's appearance in "Napoleon," which is now being filmed, will be his final appearance on the silver screen.

How Ford Works His Workers

By T. J. O'Flaherty

HENRY Ford did not build Rivers. Neither did he write books. Both jobs were done for him. And done so well that he made profit out of the one and built a reputation for wisdom out of the other.

A man who can collect one hundred million dollars a year from the sale of shaky pieces of gasoline-animated junk is a man to be reckoned with even tho he believes history is bunk. A man who employs over two hundred thousand workers, without ever having a strike on his hands, is a manipulator of human beings. Think of a man who smells the breath of his employes for garlic and onions and gets away with it!

IN his book "My Life and Work," written for him by Samuel Crowther, Ford's introduction deals with the philosophy of his business and he takes the position that he is engaged in service. This is good rotarianism. But Crowther avoids the hail-mark of rotarianism. He uses the English language.

THE economic fundamental is labor. Labor is the human element which makes the fruitful seasons of the earth useful to men."

This is an excerpt from Ford's introdoction to his: "My Life and Work."

But down thru the ages those who applied their labor to the raw material that mother nature provided, have been robbed of their product by those who had the most effective artillery, expert, talkapbie or stone clubs. Today those who have succeeded in commanding the heaviest dough bags need not carry a jack knife to keep their slaves in submission. The government, city, state and nation will do the trick.

We are grateful to Henry for his appreciation of labor's invaluableness but we would be still more grateful if he took his hands out of labor's pocket.

High Spots.

OTHER high spots in Ford's book are:

"There is no reason why a man who is willing to work should not be able to work and receive the full value of his work."

"There is equally no reason why a man who can but will not work should not receive the full value of his services to the community . . . . If he contributes nothing he should take away nothing. He should have the freedom of starvation."

This sounds like St. Paul speaking. But it is not. Ford, like the devil, can quote scriptures to confound the angels.

Hired for Profit Only.

NO one knows better than Ford that a worker applying for his job at any of his plants will not be hired because he is entitled to a job, thru the very fact that he is a human being and willing to labor. Ford knows that his employment is determined by the consideration of that man's ability to put more money in Ford's pocket. Ford has the machine. The potential worker has nothing but his labor power which he offers for sale. If Ford does not hire him, or if the Packards, or other concerns do not hire him, that willing worker returns home jobless to his wife and family.

What value is Ford's philosophy in face of a situation like this?

And what about the fellow who renders no useful service? Ford says he should starve.

His War on the Jews.

THERE are hundreds of thousands of people thruout the United States who are not rendering any useful service to society, yet they live on the fat of the land. In fact Ford employed many of those useless people to make war on the Jews. And Ford supports the Coolidge administration which is par excellence the protector of the parasite class. If Ford gave his employes the full value of their labor, he would not be today the richest man in the world and if Ford employes could not be picked out of a crowd because of his abnormally drawn features and lustreless eyes.

His "Philanthropy."

A FEW paragraphs from Ford's book will help throw light on his "philanthropy." In the early part of 1920 there were indications that the wartime inflation bubble was going to be punctured by industrial depression. Ford saw the storm coming and got ready.

He raised the price of his cars and kept up his sales. He made arrangements for another out. He was planning to close down his plant for a time and he worked to turn every bit of raw material in his possession into finished product.

When he was ready he shut shop and send his employes about their business.

Henry Has Floor.

NOW Henry has the floor:

"During the latter part of January (1921) we called in a skeleton organization of about ten thousand men, mostly foremen, sub-foremen, and straw bosses, and we started Highland Park into production. We collected our foreign accounts and sold our by-products.

"Then we were ready for production. And gradually into full production which is par excellence the basis . . . .Before we had employed fifteen man par car per day. Afterward we employed nine par car per day. This did not include that the out of men lost their jobs. They ceased being unproductive. We were that out by applying the rule that everything and everybody must produce or get out.

"We took out 60 per cent of our telephone extensions. Only a comparatively few men in any organization need telephones. We formerly had a foreman for every five men; now we have a foreman for every twenty men."

Men Like Machines.

THIS is the benevolent Ford in action. He uses men as he uses his machines. They produce a certain profit or out they go. This policy for the humans. If the machines don't work they are scrapped. You see, there is no law against killing machines. The scrapped employes are a little luckier perhaps.

What a beautiful world it will be when industry is completely Fordized? An eight-hour day and a five-day week sounds good but what about a fatigue-poisoned wage slave with leisure?

Henry might add to his income by building an hospital where his slaves could recuperate over the weekend—for a consideration.

Beware of Gifts.

FORD WORKERS! Beware of a master who comes bearing gifts. What about organizing politically and industrially to take over this industry you have created? You are running it now. Why should Ford run you?

Mr. Ford Hunts Reds, Aliens and Trade Unions

By ROBERT DUNN.

SOMEONE remarked recently that the writings of Henry Ford are read with great interest in Soviet Russia. This is true. All books dealing with the economic, industrial, scientific menagement and kindred topics are devoured by the students in the workers faculties and the universities there. Taylor, Gantt and others are read with the greatest interest. And what Ford says and does is studied by the workers in the Soviet Union.

Pays Black Hundred Head.

IN recognizing this fact one must not forget that had Mr. Ford had his way there would be no Soviet Union Mr. Ford contributed long and generously to the overthrow of the Soviet government. On his payroll, for example, worked the notorious Boris L. Brasol, former leader of the Russian Black Hundred, and the leading spirit in the monarchist restoration movement in America. While he was working for Mr. Ford Brasol got a month ($200 extra for expenses). Mr. Brazol, pal of Admiral Kolchak, boasted that he had written two books that would "show the Jews—particularly Russian Jews—more injury than two pogroms.

Anti-Jew Crusade.

MR. FORD'S excursions into the field of Jew-hating are familiar to the American workers. In the minds of Mr. Ford a Jew and a radical were synonyms. Hence the famous Spider Web Chart published in the Dearborn Independent—a chart prepared in the office of the Chemical Service of the War Department attempting to show Moscow control over every American society to promote peace, disarmament and christian fellowship! Hence the republication by the Beckwith Press Inc. of New York, a Ford enterprise, of the Protocols of Zion.

The Beckwith press also published "The Reds in America" by the late B. M. Whitney and other literature inciting folks against all reds and progressives from Captain Paxton Hibben and John Haynes Holmes to Father Ryan and Senator Robert M. LaFollette. In fact Mr Ford and his propaganda organization literally swallowed all the pretty tales that were invented and sold to them for fancy figures by the Brasols and Spiridovitches and Dr. Houghtons and Dr. Redingts and the others who deal in red menaces and old world political scandals. Henry, it is admitted even by his friends, fell for the most lurid of their tales. Had these plotters succeeded in their schames Henry might have been crowned king of the restored Russian monarchy.

On Fingerprinting and Registering Aliens.

FORD is het for the bill to register all the aliens in our midst so that all the "radicals" may be properly segregated and deported. He subscribes wholeheartedly to the alien fingerprinting hills proposed by Secretary of Labor Davis and opposed by the American Federation of Labor, the American Civil Liberties Union and other progressive organizations. Ford time up with the chamber of commerce of the United States, the American Defense Society and other tory organizations in furthering legislation to crush agitation for better working conditions among the foreign-born workers. Both the Dearborn Independent and Ford personally have boosted the anti-alien legislation which organized labor succeeded in defeating in the last congress.

On Industrial Democracy.

FORD was out the first employer to discover that the well-paid worker, under certain conditions, like the well-fed horse may prove the most profitable in the end, particularly under a body-wrecking speed-up system. Ford, however, will have nothing to do with unions of any kind. Even company unions with their illusory "participation" in "consultation and conference" with management, make Henry tired. He prefers to be the solo father and despot to his workers. What they have to say to express themselves collectively about the conditions of their work? What right have they to butt in on management? Ford can see but one answer to this question. The workers are to be regarded as individual unit in the productive machine. They have no problems of work concerning which their co-operative action would do any good.

Beats Forstmann.

THUS Ford displays himself as a century or two more feudal in his human relations than is Mr. Julius Forstmann, textile tyrant of Passaic, N. J., who at least makes the pretense of believing in "employe representation" thru company unions. Ford is thoroly hard-boiled and cynical when it comes to matters touching on the employe-employer relationship. "It is not necessary for people to love each other in order to work together" is one of his typical remarks on the subject. He contends that he gives his workers what has been voted the best conditions, so there is nothing left to bargain about! Hence there is no necessity for a union or even a company-dided "shop committee." He thus constitutes himself the sole judge and dictator of what is good for his workers. And he spies upon them and fires them instanter if he catches them talking about trade unions or labor organizations.

Here Is An Example For Ford Workers

"Here We Come, 10,000 Strong."

With the banner reading as above, a tribute to the spirit of the Passaic textile strikers, now organized into the United Textile Workers of America, this militant labor throng stands as a great example of what the power of worker solidarity will do. The auto workers, unorganized and at the mercy of the bosses, can profit by this example.

FORD AND MARX

STATEMENT BY THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY.

The capitalists and their press are hailing as a great achievement the policies of the Ford factories. They are endeavoring to make the workers believe that the forty-hour, five-day week, as established by Ford, proves that capitalism voluntarily improves the conditions and lessens the exploitation of the workers.

Actually the Ford factories are proving the correctness of what Karl Marx, the founder of the Communist movement, contended would be the development of capitalism.

Marx wrote more than fifty years ago that the development of capitalism would bring about the use of a greater amount of machinery in the work of production and that the increased use of machinery (fixed capital) would at the same time result in more intense exploitation of the workers. The profits of the capitalists from the labor of the workers increase with the increased use of machinery, and at the same time the labor required of the workers grows.

That is what is happening in the Ford plant.

The workers employed by Ford produce greater profits for him because the use of machinery has been developed to a high point. Ford has forced over to Ford greater profits as a result of the worker's labor because of this development of the machinery of production. The worker must keep pace with the machinery which he uses in production, which means more intense labor for the worker.

Already Ford is forecasting that production in the 40-hour five-day week will be as great as previously. The capitalists generally and their press agents gloat over the fact that the workers can be compelled to give as much of their strength and energy, of their life, in 40 hours of intense work as they have been giving in the longer day and longer week's work. Nelson, the representative of the great capitalists in the government, forecasts the general acceptance of the 40-hour week in the industries of this country.

The workers gain nothing by the granting of a 40-hour five-day week, which requires of them more intense labor so that they produce as much as in the longer hours of work. They give as much labor to the capitalists and as great profits as in the longer hours of work.

The workers must fight, not only for a reduction in their hours, but for reduction in the amount of labor they give to the capitalists who exploit them. More intense labor in shorter hours drains the worker's life even more than the same work in longer hours.

The only way the Ford workers will secure a real reduction of the labor they give to their exploiter is by organizing their strength so they can force this and other improvements in their wages and working conditions from Ford. They must organize a union which can speak and act in their name and make demands which can be enforced thru their organized strength.

A labor union includes every worker in the Ford plants will have the power to secure real improvements. Ford is opposed to such a union because he knows that the workers will no longer be his slaves when they are organized in such a union.

Ford's now scheme of more intense exploitation of the workers should be a signal to them to start a movement to organize a union to fight their battles.

The lession which Ford is teaching the workers shows further that the workers cannot expect the benefits of improvements in the machinery of production and a higher standard of life thru the increase in the wealth they produce as long as the industries are in private hands.

Ford is proving that the workers who produce wealth collectively must organize their powerful to take over the control of the machinery of production. That can only be done if they organize a political struggle to secure control of the government and nationalize the factories.

Organize an industrial union of automobile workers. Organize for the political struggle to secure control of the government and nationalize industry.

That is the road the Ford workers and all other workers must follow. It is the one road that will bring them to real improvement of their working conditions and to the enjoyment of the wealth they produce thru their labor power.

Central Committee, Workers (Communist) Party, C. E. Ruthanberg, General Secretary.

NEGRO RESENTMENT IN MIAMI

By LOVETT FORT-WHITMAN
National Organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress.

THE sudden revolt two days ago of a section of the Negro working class at Miami, Florida, against the high-handed methods on the part of the authorities to compel Negroes wherever found to do gang work in the chain-gang way of the debts as a result of the disaster in that city, cannot at all be surprising and is only another one of the instances indicating the new spirit of courage and self-respect which is taking hold of the Negro in America. It further indicates the fact that the Negro people are without defense in this country save only insofar as they are able to create thru their own organisation and self-reliance.

THE Negro worker is of the most exploited, oppressed and brutalized group in America and in spite of his loyalty, the government does not protect him from the ravages of his exploiters, from the brutalities of his oppressors. On the contrary, as it is clearly demonstrated the government military forces are not only withholding protection from the Negro people against the white civil population, but from newspaper accounts, have even taken sides with those whites of Miami who would compel the Negroes to do gang work for the city.

THE clash between the Negro people and the soldiers resulting in injuries on both sides was simply the outcome of an attempt on the part of the authorities to conscript Negro labor for the city. Any Negro found in the streets regardless of any excuse was forced into a truck and carried off to do work in cleaning up the city.

THIS is something of the Negroes' every-day experience of American democracy. Down with this sort of thing! Any form of resistance that the Negro puts up against being impressed into a condition of servitude is desirable and praise-worthy. Further outbreaks are expected in Miami between the Negro working class and the authorities. And it behooves the federal government to take a hand in the matter at once. Federal troops are at Miami, but they are there to protect all citizens alike regardless of color. But the American Negro Labor Congress has all along preached that the most formidable enemy, that the Negro people has in this country is the government itself and that little at any time is to be expected in the way of protection from it. Events from day to day are impelling Negroes to the view point that organization and self-reliance and that the Negro people must rely more upon the principles of mutual welfare and organisational self-defense.

Dinner Pail Epic

By BILL LLOYD.
Federated Press

I see, down Oklahoma way, they's sneaking from each workers' pay a checkoff for Salvation Army—a piece of news that sure does jar me. It makes a fellow wants know how far the bosses' raid will flow.

Sum ladies shake the bosses fist and leave with him a long blank list, on which they ask that he shall note the names of each poor sufferin goat, and then set down how much he can wring out of each hard workin man. On payday each must grin with glee at being pumped for charity. If he speaks up and say he's sore, they just point out the exit door.

Now if your fellows would get back and send such systems with a smack, just gather round no casual knee and get the fortythird degree. Just organize to beat the band get lots of spunk and piles of sand, and when you're organized plumb through and feel prepared to turn the screw, write out a deed, with dotted line, and make the boss sit down and sign.

And if he sees you mean biz, just place a kick upon his neck.

One Thousand Received—Four Thousand Needed Immediately

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The party members and the sympathizers with the party are relying to the support of The DAILY WORKER—BUT NOT FAST ENOUGH.

In Monday's and Tuesday's paper the critical financial situation of The DAILY WORKER was presented to its supporters and the need of raising five thousand dollars of the "Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund this week emphasized.

The result of this appeal has been increased activity in the mobilization to raise the $60,000 Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund, but not enough of the party members and the sympathizers of the party have sent in their contributions to meet the immediate critical situation.

The contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund during the present week have been:

Monday, October 4 ..... $136.00
Tuesday, October 5 ..... 274.00
Wednesday, October 6 ..... 808.00

The volume of contributions has increased each day, but the total for the first three days of the week is only $1,018.50. That leaves nearly $4,000 of the $5,000 needed immediately to be raised during the next three days.

The DAILY WORKER must complete the collection of the urgently needed first $10,000 of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund by October 10 at the very latest. It must have the $5,000 asked for in its statements of Monday and Tuesday by Monday, October 11.

Can our party members and sympathizers raise $4,000 and have it in The DAILY WORKER office by Monday, October 11? Can they complete the first $10,000 of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund, which means $3,000 more to be raised, by Friday, October 15?

THE ANSWER WHICH THE PARTY MEMBERS AND THE SYMPATHIZERS WITH THE PARTY'S CAUSE MAKE TO THESE QUESTIONS WILL DETERMINE WHETHER WE CAN KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

It is our belief that the party members and sympathizers can and will raise this money for The DAILY WORKER. So far only a small part of the party has gone into action to meet the crisis. Those who have responded have shown a spirit in the fight to keep The DAILY WORKER, which, if spread over the whole party would quickly solve the immediate financial problem of The DAILY WORKER.

Every party member, every nucleus of the party, every leading committee of the party, every sympathizer of the party must TAKE UP THE FIGHT TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. A UNITED EFFORT WILL EASILY RAISE $4,000 BY MONDAY AND COMPLETE THE FIRST $10,000 BY FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15.

"WE CAN AND WILL KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!" MUST BE THE SLOGAN OF THE WHOLE PARTY.

ACT UPON THIS SLOGAN. RUSH THE CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE death of Dominic d'Allesandro, president of the Hod Carriers' and Building Laborers' International Union, may not be an unmixed blessing for the hod carriers. For one thing they may have the excitement of a convention and an election of officers. Out of consideration for the treasury and the danger of swapping leaders inside of two decades, d'Allesandro postponed a convention for the past twenty years. There are some sturdy children of the Gael in the union who believe that it is enough for the Italians to contribute a pope to the Irish race. All other jobs, they believe, should be open to all comers.

SO far the A. F. of L. convention has failed to get excited over the catholic trouble with Mexico. And in the opinion of this scribe, who knows his church fairly well, it will not, for the very good reason that the majority of A. F. of L. delegates are neither good catholics or good protestants—in fact, they are good for nothing except making money for themselves. The labor leaders have all the trouble they want in attending to their banks and their real estate. They will leave the Mexican imbroglio to the Knights of Columbus and others who make a living that way. A wise catholic's best pope is his pocketbook.

CATHOLIC labor leaders may contribute to the million-dollar K. of C. fund to fight Calles. They may curse the Masonic order over their heme-hrew. They will continue to strut down the main aisle of the church and let the people see that they are loyal sons of the papacy. But ask them to cut their economic throats or even open a financial vein by risking a religious civil war in their international unions and they will whip on their toes like dervishes. The bureaucrats of the A. F. of L., catholic as well as protestant, are sleeping in the same bed. They are not going to let a religious bedbug disturb their slumber.

THE victory of Gene Tunney is only second to the Eucharistic congress in its effectiveness as a recruiting agent for the catholic church, according to Archbishop Hayes of New York. Tunney is a catholic boy, but so is Jack Dempsey, if names mean what they say. The archbishop discovered that Gene said his prayers daily. That helped him win. Perhaps Gene's god was a marine in his young days. And still again, perhaps he put something in Jack's milk that caused bolls to develop under his hide, making the champion dull and slow. It pays to be loyal even to a deity!

ONE of the most interesting items from the Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor is Carl Haessler's tale of Dennis Batt's dilemma, when that worthy was obliged to chaperon a huge British flag while a suitable place was being provided for it. Carl says Dennis is Irish, but we are from west of the Mississippi. If Carl Haessler can't be good, he should at least try and be cautious. The Irish have their faults, but we doubt if Dennis Batt is one of them.

THE British delegates to the convention must be somewhat surprised to see the American scurrying around to secure Union Jacks in their honor. Why, over in England, even J. H. Thomas stands in the shadow of the Red Flag. the ba is one of the most loyal supporters of the king.

INDIANAPOLIS MAYOR PEDDLED CITY POSITIONS

Had Written Contract With Klan Dragon

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 7.—That Mayor J. L. Duval of this city signed a contract with D. C. Stephenson, former dragon of the Ku Klux Klan and political dictator of the state, now serving a term of life imprisonment for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, to deliver certain political jobs to Stephenson in return for his political support was the sensational charge made here by Thomas H. Adams head of the republican association probe committee which is investigating political corruption arising out of the control of the state government by officials of the Ku Klux Klan.

The Evidence.

The evidence in support of Adam's charge was in the form of a photographic copy of a contract, signed by Duval and Stephenson and dated at Indianapolis on Feb. 12, 1925. The contract reads:

"In return for the political support of D. C. Stephenson, in the event I am elected mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., I promise not to appoint any persons as members of the board of public works without they first have the endorsement of D.C. Stephenson," the contract reads.

"I also agree and promise to appoint Claude Worley as chief of police and Earl Klein as captain.

"Signed by me, this 12th day of Feb., 1925."

Mayor Duval declared today that the contract is a forgery but admitted having received the offer of an appointment as treasurer of Marion county in 1923 from Stephenson and with having consented to accept the appointment.

Politicians Desert Dragon.

Stephenson, faced with a life term in prison, has been deserted by the ruling politicians, so he has decided to tell all he knows. But the governor of the state and the warden of the prison refuse to allow anybody to see the ex-dragon. The politicians are in a state of terror but it is doubtful if they can avoid a showdown. They are in bad, whether they permit Stephenson to talk or not. The public is getting the impression that fear of the truth coming out, is back of their refusal to allow the investigating editors to interview the kinzer.

Duval is Bankrupt.

Duval, in addition to being mayor of Indianapolis, is president of the Marion County State Bank. His election was hailed by klan papers throughout the country as proof of K. K. K. political power.

Stephenson sent out a letter by the grapevine route asking for help and promising to tell everything. He professes to be afraid of meeting death at the hands of the jail officials.

Revolting Crime.

When Stephenson committed the murder for which he is incarcerated, he expected to be protected by the powers-that-be. The circumstances connected with the crime, however, were so revolting that the klan politicians were unable to aid the dragon. Once he was in the toils, they also felt that this would be a good time to get rid of the dictator.

ASSAILS HIGH BAIL AS PART OF FRAME-UP

$430,000 Bail Set to Bias Opinion

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 7.—Denouncing the high bail set in the cases of strikers brought before the local courts as a deliberate attempt to drain the resources of the union and so help the mill owners break the Passaic textile strike, Alfred Wagenknecht, chairman of the General Relief Committee of Textile Strikers, issued a statement today calling upon organized labor to stand by the strikers against the "new onslaught of the mill-controlled police and judges in the strike area."

In his statement he branded the arrest of strike leaders on the charge of throwing bombs as "the most fantastic of the numerous and brazen schemes of the mill-controlled police to break this strike and send the workers back to the mills without a union and without the rights of human beings.

Another Mooney Case.

"This is another Mooney case, but on a larger scale. Twenty-one of the most active strike leaders have been arrested on the obviously spurious charge of throwing bombs. These men were subjected to the horrible torture of the third degree and forced to sign "confessions" which they repudiated as soon as they were released on bail.

Try to Break Strike.

"This most recent frame-up is the final lawless effort of the mill-owners and their police lackeys to defeat the gallant struggle of the striking textile workers. It is a challenge to the entire labor movement, for the fight of the Passaic strikers against company unionism and starvation wages is a fight that affects every worker in the country. It is a fight that labor cannot afford to lose for to lose would be to invite a wage-slashing, union smashing campaign against the entire labor movement."

Mr. Wagenknecht compared the cases of "strikers held in bail as high as $100,000 in a case in which no one was killed and on one injured" to the sensational Hall-Mills murder case "in which a woman charged with murder is released in $40,000 bail while 10 strikers are held in a total of $430,000."

This is nothing but an attempt to impress the public mind with a false idea of the enormity of the crime with which these men are charged, the statement declares.

CANTON TROOPS DEFEAT FORCES OF CHUAN-FANG

Chang-Tso-Lin Reported in Break With Japan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HANKOW, China, Oct. 7.—It can now be stated authoritively that the Cantonese forces have defeated the armies of Gen. Sun Chuan-Fang, who since the disstar to Wu Pei-fu's troops has been the only outstanding enemy of the national forces in this part of China.

General Sun assumed Fu's place in the affections of the imperialists. The worst they hoped for was that he would be able to hold the five eastern provinces. The best, that he might be able to defeat the national armies and establish himself in Peking. These hopes are now blasted. The only outstanding militarist now left in China to oppose the people's armies is Chang Tso-Lin and there is reason to believe that Chang has internal troubles to contend with.

Green Clashes With Hicks On Unity With Russ Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 7.—George Hicks, fraternal delegate of the British Trade Union Congress and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, clashed here yesterday over the question of the admission of the trade unions of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to an all-inclusive trade union international.

John Bromley, the second fraternal delegate from Great Britain, left the discussion of international relations to Hicks who was first presented to the convention. Hicks first mentioned the Soviet Union when he told of the splendid financial relief given the striking British miners by the Russian workers, declaring it evidenced a kindness and generosity almost beyond conception. He mentioned also the financial aid given by the down-trodden of India and the ruthlessly exploited workers of China.

Must Be All-Inclusive.

"I have always been an ardent advocate of real international trade union unity," said Hicks, showing immediately that he had no intention of dragging in the Amsterdam international Federation of Trade Unions.

"The workers of the world must really establish an international of labor that will really visualize the needs of the international labor movement in its struggle for hours and conditions and the protection of the downtrodden.

For Admittance of Russian Unions.

"We must see that the trade unions of Soviet Russia are included in such an international." he concluded, and then proceeded to discussion of the British general strike.

But it was the mention of the workers of the Soviet Union that stirred Green to reply when all the fraternal delegates had made their addresses of greeting. It was not as bitter a speech as Green made last year to Arthur A. Purcell at Atlantic City, but it pleased the reactionary elements in the convention, who applauded generously but did not rise to their feet, altho quite a few tried to start a movement in that direction.

Green Opposes Unity.

"We can enter into hearty accord with all the speakers have said on the question of the international solidarity of the workers," declared Green. "We have listened to Hicks urge that the workers of that great new country of Russia should be included in the international labor movement.

"But I must say that there is an impregnable barrier between the workers of that country and the American Federation of Labor when they embrace a philosophy so antagonistic to the principles of the American Federation of Labor, it is useless to attempt any reconciliation of our differences. The Russian workers must change their viewpoint before we can think of establishing any relations with them. I know that is the sentiment of the majority of your people."

All Have Rights, But Russians.

So far the delegation sat silent. They were evidently dumfounded for the moment, since President Green had been slipping in short comments every day during the convention thus far, evidently intended as oil upon the waters of the troubled relations with Mexico to the effect that the trade unionists of the different countries could hold their own views on other questions as long as they were

BRITISH MINERS REJECT DEMAND TO SURRENDER; CONTINUE STRIKE

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The delegate conference of the Miners' Federation in session today unanimously adopted a resolution rejecting the government demands for the strikers' surrender. This action conforms to a vote of the miners' districts which voted 737,000 against 42,000 to reject the terms.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Confounding all reports of the capitalist papers, mine owners and the tory government about the "return to work" of the striking miners, the rank and file of the union districts to which the question of surrendering to the terms of the Baldwin government were put to referendum, have shown their marvelous courage once more by rejecting them flatly.

This was reported at the reconvening today of the miners' delegate conference at Kingsway Hall to discuss the situation. The Baldwin government had given the ultimatum that the terms proposed by Churchill, that the men go back to work without settlement, that the union accept district agreements, thus breaking up the national union, and that the longer workday and reduced wages thus forced on them be left to a board of arbitration elected by the tory parliament, must be accepted.

LYNCH OPPOSES MORRISON FOR A. F. OF L. SECRETARY

BULLETIN.

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—Great Britain is headed inevitably toward another general strike, to be fought even harder than the lockout of last May, George W. Hicks and Fred G. Bromley, fraternal delegates from the British Trade Union Congress, told the American Federation of Labor convention today.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 7.—James M. Lynch, recently deposed president of the International Typographical Union, is out to depose Frank Morrison, also a member of the Typographical Union, as secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

This is the latest maneuver for official position within the A. F. of L., and it is declared that strong effort will be made to put it thru at this convention. It is considered in some circles as a move to ultimately oust William Green as president.

Out of A Job

"Jim" Lynch lost out in the last election in the printers' union, as he is out of a job at the present time. Lynch doesn't take the same attitude toward official position that is credited to another member of the printers' delegation, E S McCullough, who failed of re-election as A F of L delegate. McCullough when asked where he preferred the next convention of the A. F of L. to go declared, "I don't care if it goes to hell."

"Andy" Furuseth, of the Seamen's Union, sitting near, didn't hear correctly, thinking that McCullough referred to the A F of L itself.

Andy A Little Dense.

So it had to be carefully explained to the Norseman that McCullough would not be a delegate to next year's convention of the A F of L., so it didn't matter much to him in what place he met.

But "Jim" Lynch is not so indifferent. The last time he was ousted from the presidency of the International Typographical Union he landed a soft berth as industrial counselor in New York state. In time, he drifted back to the presidency of the printers. It seems he is bent on remaining in the organized labor movement, if only by the skin of his tooth and so he has chosen, so reliable reports point out, to try to oust Secretary Morrison who was opposed to him in the last election fight in the union.

A Relic of Gompers.

Morrison has been classed more or less with what "progressives" there are in the printers' union. This has not seemed to prevent his re-election year after year, since memory runneth not to the contrary, under Gompers, and he still sticks under Green.

It may be that Lynch is teaming with Matthew Woll, head of the International Photo Engravers' Union, who is credited with having his eyes on the A. F. of L. presidency. Woll has been pursuing a rather independent course during the past year. It often clashes with the position taken by President Green.

This was especially true in the Passaic strike situation, where President Green, representing the A. F. of L., was supposed to be working in harmony with Thomas F. McMahon, of the United Textile Workers' Union. Senator Borah and other elements seeking a settlement of the strike were in the midst of the negotiations Mor-

Name of Late Sam Gompers Mentioned on Third Day of Detroit Convention; Catholic Delegates Enjoy Protestant Attack Against Detroit's Y. M. C. A.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

GRAYSTONE BALLROOM, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 7.—Dr. J. C. Curran, of the Near East Relief Committee, was the first to mention the name of the late Sam Gompers in the convention here. He eulogized Gompers for his work in connection with the relief of christian minorities in the Near East.

Kate Richards O'Hare, who is campaigning throout the country against prison-made goods, told the convention that she had found that the Detroit stores were filled with the products of prison factories. She said more money is being spent to punish criminals than for educational purposes.

Ben Gitlow, Communist candidate for governor of New York, who is now touring the country in the party's congressional campaign, was a visitor at the convention.

The catholic delegates in the convention are laughing up their sleeves as the protestants are attacking one of their pet institutions, the Young Men's Christian Association.

Alfred Wagenknecht, considered by Thomas F. MacMahon and Sarah Conboy, national officials of the United Textile Workers of America as "the wizard of finance" of the Passaic Textile Relief forces, is attending the convention as an interested observer of action to be taken on the Passaic relief resolution introduced by the Textile Workers' delegation.

Budlies of The Milwaukee Leader, Victor Berger's socialist daily published in the Wisconsin metropolis, are being given away to the delegates. They are left on a chair but few delegates avail themselves of the free Leaders. On the other hand they pay their good money to buy The DAILY WORKER from Sarah Victor, the Detroit DAILY WORKER agent who is selling "The DAILY" at the convention.

John J. Ballam, general secretary of the central bureau of the national organizing committee of the textile industry, with which the Passaic strikers were affiliated before joining the American Federation of Labor, is a visitor at the convention. He announces as a great achievement the bringing into the A. F. of L. of 10,000 Passaic textile workers, thus avoiding the pitfalls of dual unionism. He is interested in what the A. F. of L. intends to do to help organize the workers in the textile industry.

Louis N. Morones, secretary of industry, Commerce and Labor in the Calles government in Mexico, has sent greetings to the convention. He is being urged as a presidential candidate in Mexico to succeed Calles.

The infiuence of the striking Passaic textile workers, now affiliated with the United Textile Workers, is shown by the fact that the delegates of this union have introduced resolutions calling for organization of the southern textile workers, against company unionism, for relief in aid of the strike that still continues, organizing the unorganized, all of which resolutions were introduced by the progressive bloc and adopted in the U. T. W. at the recent convention of this organization.

Andrew Furuseth, delegate of the Seamen's Union, has introduced resolutions opposing participation of the United States in the League of Nations, World Court or International Labor office, thus hitting the A. F. of L. policies on these questions.

Furuseth has also introduced resolutions opposing pending bills that would weaken the Seamen's Act that it took him a score of years to get thru congress.

• • •

Delegate James O'Connell, president of the Metal Trades department, has introduced the promised resolution calling on the A. F. of L. to lead in the orgauisation of the auto workers.

Fitzpatrick Promises Union to Date Workers After Strike Victory

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, in addressing the 125 Negro women strikers, who walked out of the Meras company date factory when a wage reduction notice was posted last Friday, declared that he would make every effort to get them admitted into the A. F. of L. as a union, "if they were successful in their strike." Fitzpatrick suggested that they win the strike before they become a union, declaring that would give them a chance for fraternal success.

He promised that the C. F. of L. would give the strikers credentials to solicit strike benefit contributions from Chicago unions.

A mass meeting of the strikers and sympathizers has been called for Sunday afternoon, 3 o'clock, at Union Trade hall, 3358 South Michigan Av.

Those in charge of the strike report that many strike recruits are being obtained from girls Applying for work at the factory.

Green Clashes with Hicks on Unity

united in the fight for hours, wages and conditions, the accepted basis of international affiliation.

Here Green began to work himself into a frenzy, ending up with his pet line of attack that the Communists are seeking to destroy the A. F. of L. and its international unions. He claims this is inspired by the Russian workers. He concluded that the Russian workers' mass meeting aims to destroy the great American Federation of Labor before we can entertain any ideas of solidarity with them.

Trevino Dodges Vital Issue.

It was only this statement that brought out the applause of the delegates. It quickly died, however, lacking the stamina of last year's anti-Soviet hysteria. The addresses of the fraternal delegates were feasted by the complete failure of the Mexican spokesman, Ricardo Trevino, secretary of the Mexican Federation of Labor, head of the delegation of three, to mention the struggle of the Mexican workers and the peasants against the catholic church.

Hicks and Bromley Differ.

Hicks and Bromley also clashed on the British strike. Hicks declared, in speaking of the strike: "We did not secure all we had hoped." Bromley, on the other hand, argued that the result of the general strike was one of the greatest victories that trade unionism has ever won.

In an effort to smooth over this difference with Hicks, however, Bromley continued: "We never set out in our first great adventure and bring home all the prizes. This was labor's first attempt to free itself."

After pointing out that the conclusion of the general strike was unsatisfactory, Hicks declared that the conditions that had produced the general strike still existed; that the workers cannot escape from the reality of the tremendous economic forces at work with the present social system.

New General Strike Coming.

"The two sides are again preparing," said Hicks. "General strikes of a more formidable character are inevitable. We will be ready again when the time comes. We must not be timid. There is a glorious field of opportunity confronting us."

Hicks urged the American workers to march forward with British labor to the conquest of power everywhere for labor.

Most of Bromley's address was a humorous recital of the dire straits imposed upon the British ruling class by the strike. The efforts of the dukes and lords to act as strike breakers and of the having been sent to parliament "to keep my eye on the thieves who are there for the exploiting interests."

"Not a Politician."

Bromley declared he was only a trade unionist, not a politician, but promised that at the next election labor would come into power in Great Britain. Bromley also dealt with the British Communists, declaring: "They are not bad boys. We are anxious to work with them and keep them in the labor movement. They want a new world in five minutes and of course we have to disagree with them. They call us everything but by our first names."

Communists "Little Trouble."

Several thousand miles from the scene of the British struggle he quite confidentially declared that, "our good Communist friends and our minority movement friends cause us little trouble."

Bromley said there were now more labor votes to Great Britain than there were organized trade unionists and said it was the labor party that had smashed the liberal party.

Have Same Exploiters.

Trevino, from Mexico, after reviewing the common struggle of the workers of the United States and Mexico due to the fact that they were exploited by the same employers, invited President Green and the executive council of the A. F. of L. to visit Mexico so that they would have an opportunity to study these economic and social conditions in our country.

Fraternal Delegate Richard Lynch of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress told of the experience of the workers at Montreal with the injunction, pointing out that it was a crime for these workers to assemble on the streets. He urged more assistance from the A. F. of L. in an organization campaign in Canada.

The Old Excuse.

In excusing the militancy of American labor, as compared with the British workers in the general strike, President Green made the talk that he usually gives in opposing the labor party in this country. He showed that in Great Britain the workers have but one language, a long history behind them; that they are concentrated in a small territory, pointing out that the British workers are differently constituted and differently situated.

He declared the United States, however, is a melting pot, with differences of race and tongues, a land of great distances. He concluded with a defense of collective bargaining and trade agreements from the A. F. of L. viewpoint, declaring he must be permitted to draft those policies that will bring us the largest and best returns. He had previously deuied this right, of course, to the Russian workers.

Good Resolutions.

Resolutions are now before the convention demauding the recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics, seeking the organization of the unorganized, against the citizens' military training camps, calling for the abolition in all international unions of discrimination against Negro workers.

The A. F. of L. officialdom is faced with the probability that none of its members will be allowed to address church audiences here next Sunday. It is charged that the local chamber of commerce has brought influence to bear to stop labor spokesmen from appearing in any of the churches and before the members of the local Young Men's Christian Association where Green has been invited to talk.

were trampled to death in the rush to escape.

A British steamer and a Japanese steamer at Hankow were fired on from the shore today, but neither suffered any casualties.

Orders from Washington.

PEKING, Oct. 7.—The American military attache here has received orders from Washington to proceed at once to Hankow and liberate the American now imprisoned there by the warring Chinese factions. Plans for effecting the rescue were not revealed.

Government Worried.

TOKIO, Oct. 7.—The government is seriously worried over recent developments in Manchuria. Chang Tso-Lin seems to be feeling his rice. Chang recently repudiated that part of his agreement with Japan which permitted Japanese subjects to lease agricultural lands in Manchuria. The crops are now ready for harvesting, but Chang intends to bring them in with swords rather than with scythes. There are more than a million Corean families in Manchuria who have leased land as Japanese subjects. In all probability the Koreans are no more enthusiastic over Japan's interests in China than Chang Tso-Lin.

Chang May Desert Japan.

Chang Tso-Lin and the Japanese government are rushing troops and Red Cross units to the Corean border. This looks like war. Or it may mean another uprising in Corea. It, as seems probable, Chang has decided that this is a good time for him to drop his Japanese connections, the Koreans may take the time opportune to rise against Japan.

Reports have come from Mukden that severe battles have taken place between Japanese and Manchurian forces with heavy losses on both sides.

• • • •

Still Negotiates with Japan.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The government is still negotiating with Japan with a view of enlisting the Mikado's support in a campaign against China.

Japan is bargaining for terms. All the other powers approached by England, with the exception of Italy, turned down the plea for intervention. Whatever aid England receives from Japan and Italy will have to be purchased dearly. The black hand government of Italy does not have to be more venal than the government that broke the triple alliance to enter the war on the side of the allies, in order to uphold the Rome tradition for purchasability.

Japan's Terms.

What Chamberlain offered Italy as the price of its assistance is not yet known, but Japan's terms are as follows:

1. The reduction to a minimum of the Singapore project.

2. The recognition of Japan's "special interests" in Central China.

3. Full support to Japan's policy of penetration of Northern China, Manchuria, and Mongolia.

4. A number of concessions favorable to Japanese commercial and financial interests.

Whether the British government will be willing to pay such a heavy price, or whether Japan would be prepared to take less remains to be seen.

If agreement is reached, the danger of armed intervention will become immediate.

If no agreement is reached, there is a possibility that the British government, realizing the impossibility of single-handed intervention and impressed by the rapid extension of the authority of the Canton government, which now stands over half of China, will decide upon a startling reversal of policy.

It is reported that the cabinet has already under consideration this alternative plan of recognizing all "de facto" and provisional governments and abandoning the pretense that the Peking government represents all China.

Such a step would mean that the Canton government would be recognized in the South, the Peking government in the North, Sun Chuan-fang in the eastern seaboard provinces and Chang Tso-Lin in Manchuria.

Many Join Strike of Window Washers, Call Meeting Friday

A special meeting of the Chicago Window Washers' Union, Local No. 40, which has been on strike since last Monday has been called for Friday afternoon at 30 North Wells to discuss further steps in the strike.

Union officials report that since the strike the membership of the union has been increased by 50 men, who were eager to join in the fight for an increase in wages which the union is demanding.

No further arrests were made of the members Thursday, altho a consistent campaign of intimidation was made on the union Wednesday by the police.

The union is demanding a scale of $1.25 an hour. The 40-hour a week guarantee will not be made a major

When the Government Stoops to the Murder of the Militants of Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

NOT even the worst methods employed by backstairs private detective agencies were neglected by the United States government in league with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in the effort to legally murder Nick Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

This is clearly brought out in the affidavit now in the hands of Judge Webster Thayer in the Norfolk county court, signed by John Russamenti, would-be stool pigeon for the prosecution's forces.

Russamenti declares that he was asked by Fort Paffy Weise, of the staff of the prosecution, if he would like to act as a spy in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. This was in December, 1920.

It was at this time that District Attorney Katzmann, according to Russamenti, did him in substance THAT HE HAD NO EVIDENCE AGAINST SACCO OR AGAINST VANZETTI.

Not having any evidence, the prosecution set about, as best it could, to manufacture it.

Russamenti was to mix with the prisoners, staying in jail with them, in order to listen in on anything that they might say. But, first of all, he was to come into the prison, where Sacco and Vanzetti were confined, as a bone fide crook in order not to arouse suspicion. With this agreement between him and Weise, Russamenti came to Boston and told District Attorney Katzmon of the plan proposed to him by Weise, that he should commit a burglary and be arrested by prearrangement, committed to Dedham jail and placed in the cell next to Sacco.

But the district attorney seems to have felt that he had a better plan. Katzmin proposed instead that Russamenti should secure employment in the town of Stoughton, hire a room in Mrs. Sacco's house, establish friendly relations with her and secure any confidential communications from her as to the criminal activities of her husband.

But the mere fact that the government forces carried out either one of these plans is added testimony to the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Since Sacco and Vanzetti were not involved in the South Braintree affair, or in any other crime, they would not discuss criminal activities to discuss in prison between themselves, or with the other prisoners. There was nothing for a stool pigeon, if Russamenti was proposed to be, to listen in on.

Similarly, Sacco had no criminal activities to discuss in the few letters that he was permitted to send to his wife. Russamenti was a minue the stool pigeon's job.

In his affidavit Russamenti says that District Attorney Katzman told him it would be several days before he was ready to go ahead. Nothing further developing, however, Russamenti returned to Pennsylvania about the middle of January, 1921. Russamenti adds that District Attorney Katzman never did pay him for his time and trouble.

Thus the government double-crosses even the lowest breed of its own agents.

Instead, the government sought to bolster its case by getting an affidavit recently from Joe Morelli, the white slaver, bootlegger, payroll bandit and freight car thief, who is now serving a 12-year sentence at the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Morelli, to be sure, denied any knowledge of the South Braintree crime. He said he had never heard of Celestino Madeiros or James F. Weeks, claiming he always worked alone. He even said he had never heard of the Rice and Hutchins Shoe Factory, when four counts in the indictment under which he was convicted charged him with stealing shipments of the Rice and Hutchins factory. This is poor stuff with which to combat the affidavits of Madeiros and Weeks.

On the other hand, the case of Sacco and Vanzetti is bolstered at every point, especially in the affidavits of Barney B. Mouterio and his wife.

Barney B. Monterio, proprietor of the so-called Bluebird Inn at Seekonk, makes affidavit that Madeiros worked for him in 1924 as a carpenter; that he owned at least two revolvers; that he had several bank accounts; that he knew and associated with James F. Weeks; that Madeiros told the affiant, Monterio, that he was interested in the South Braintree affair; that he knew more about it than Sacco and Vanzetti did, that Sacco and Vanzetti knew nothing about the job, and, finally, in so many words, said that he was in the gang that committed the South Braintree crime.

Mrs. Mey B. Mouterio's affidavit supports her husband's. She also tells of a visit to Madeiros in the Dedham jail. When she asked Madeiros if his statement about the South Braintree murders were true, he said they were.

HE SAID THAT HE KNEW SACCO AND VANZETTI WERE INNOCENT AND THAT HE FELT SORRY FOR SACCO BECAUSE HE HAD SEEN SACCO'S WIFE AND CHILDREN.

It should not take the workers of the nation long to decide as between the authenticity of such affidavits as that given by Joe Morelli, at the Leavenworth prison, to the government forces, or the affidavits of Celestino Madeiros, James F. Weeks, Barney B. Monterio and his wife, and nearly three scores more. Morelli has everything to gain thru silence. Madeiros, Weeks and the rest have nothing to gain, except the hostility of the bloodhounds of the department of justice at Washington and the local prosecution in Massachusetts, thru their efforts to help cheat the electric chair of the lives of the two workers—Sacco and Vanzetti.

Here our labor fekers are a little more consistent. They believe in the capitalist system and admit it.

THERE will be a conference of the Russian Communist Party held on the 25th of October, and this is about the time we issue our annual warning to our readers to be prepared for counter-revolutionary uprisings in the Soviet Union. Even our own DAILY WORKER had a story yesterday (an authentic one) of a visit paid by the opposition to the central committee to a meeting of party comrades, where they expressed themselves vigorously in opposition to the prevailing view of the party. So far the capitalist papers have not hailed this political exuberance as an indication of the early fall of the Soviet regime. Something or somebody may fall, but it will not be the government.

THE capitalist papers are learning a by degress, tho for a while we were doubtful. If Trotsky, Zinoviev, Radek and other leading members of the Russian Party got up at 1 o'clock in the morning a few years ago to attend a meeting every liar from Riga to Peiers would be busy predicting Soviet collapse, and the exiled white guardists who are now scratching themselves in the garrets of Berlin and Moscow would be submitting their verminous anatomies to the sunlight in preparation for re-entry into society. But not any more.

POLICE ATTACK N. Y. STRIKERS ON PICKET LINE

Window Cleaners Find Legality Don't Help

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The first days of the strike of the New York window cleaners already prove that the police and the judges are on the side of the employers. Heavy bail was imposed upon the arrested men ranging from $10,000 to $50,000.

Altho picketing is legal and lawful, yet the peaceful pickets are rounded up by the police and sentenced to jail.

Many Strikers Jailed.

For speaking to scabs and attempting to take off two strikebreakers, A. Olshki and J. Rulchcki were sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse. Five other strikers for similar offence were sentenced to five days each. Frank Rocelko and William Schap were fined $50 each for merely attempting to make two scabs join the union. Others are still jailed and awaiting trial.

Before the striking window cleaners is now the problem of the right of peaceful picketing. The bosses alone are powerless, the army of gunmen they mobilized does not discourage the strikers in any way. The enemy of the striking men is now the police, who by unprovoked attacks are framing up the strikers and the courts take the opportunity to impose long jail terms upon them.

Capitalist Press Aids Bosses.

The capitalist press is trying to influence public opion against the striking window cleaners. The prostitute press with eight-column headlines is popularizing the bravery of the police in beating and jailing the peaceful pickets.

But the just cause the striking window cleaners are fighting for is well known to the working masses. To risk a human life for $44 a week is not such a great bargain. One of the liberal judges had to admit that the demands of the window cleaners are just, and the dangerous work they perform deserves even a shorter working week and a larger wage.

Lynch is Opposed to Frank Morrison for A. F. of L. Secretary

thew Woll, seemingly on his own initiative let loose a blast against Sen. Borah. Similar developments have taken place on other issues.

It is not believed that Woll will come out against Green at this convention. The fact that he is head of a small union is not held against him. It is said. This may, in fact, be something in his favor, resulting in less friction between some of the large international unions and Green's demand for the direction of A. F. of L. policies.

Green Depends on Miners.

President Green is a member of the miners' union, credited with being the largest in the A. F. of L. If Green can control the votes of the miners' delegates, in case of a vital division on some issue, then he can practically dictate the decision.

No such division has yet taken place. It is not expected to arise at this convention. But the cleavage will no doubt develop. Then it will be to the interests of some of the other unions to have the head of a small organization in the presidency of the A. F. of L.

Progressives Invisible.

There was a time when it was interesting to speculate to what committees the various so-called "progressives" in the convention would be assigned. It is not necessary to waste this effort in this convention. The "progressives" here are of such a slight tinge and they are so few that they are completely lost in the general shuffle.

PEASANTS IN ITALY REVOLT AGAINST BENITO

Old Men and Women Imprisoned

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The entire population of Milonalla, twenty miles north of Bologna in fascist Italy is in open revolt against the government.

The workers in the area have refused to join the fascist organizations, the pressure has been brot to bear on them for the past six years. Recently a leader of the working population was arrested and is now imprisoned in Rome.

Failing to induce the workers to join their ranks the fascists resorted to cruder methods. An order was issued to deport all the families that refused to agree to the fascist decree.

Taken to Bologna.

The workers knew that this order was but the prelude to an orgy of assassination, so they fled. A few days ago those who could not leave were handcuffed and hauled in closed vans to Bologna where they are housed in barracks guarded by armed men.

In addition to the deportation of the old men, women and children, the fascisti arrested over one hundred peasants.

The fascists are led by a wealthy landowner and the government is carrying out his instructions.

Signal For Revolt.

News of the Molinella revolt has spread thruout Italy and the fascisti fear that this will be the signal for a revolt among the peasantry who are at the end of their patience.

The most dramatic feature of the present uprising is the fact that the woman are taking a prominent part in the struggle. The women have retreated to the fastnesses around the town and from there, are waging war against the tyrants.

Army Revolt Against Spanish Dictator in Open Again, Reported

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Reports from Spain say that Prime de Rivera faces a new military revolt, the engineers having joined the artillery officers in demanding De Rivera's retirement, and all troops have been ordered confined to barracks for two days past.

It is expected that martial law will be proclaimed in the danger zones of Madrid and Barcelona.

American Labor Falls Short of Expectation in Mine Strike Funds

LONDON, Oct. 7.—There has been general surprise in British labor circles at the smallness of returns from the appeal made to American labor unions for strike relief to the British miners. The lack of support from America has been compared to the immense funds for strike relief sent from the Soviet Union, leaving the impression that the Soviet workers are much more interested in helping the strikers than the American unions.

It was thought that the sending of the official delegation to work in conjunction with the American Federation of Labor would produce great results, since American unionists are supposed to get the highest wages in the world. British workers are now disillusioned. The capitalist press is inferring that money was sent, but disappeared, those trying to raise a conflict in the ranks of the strikers.

KUOMINTANG IN STATEMENT OF PARTY POLICY

Chang to Send Troops South to Hunan

CANTON, Sept. 17.—(By Mail)—Tchang Tao Lin has decided to advance to support Wu Pei Fu and to send an army of 100,000 men against the province of Hunan.

The Kuomintang has published a declaration concerning the next tasks of the party. The Kuomintang fights for the unification and the democratization of the country. The chief enemy at the moment is, Wu Pei Fu, who must be smashed.

The Kuomintang appeals to all the military leaders of Central China to unite with the Canton troops in the struggle against Wu. Whoever maintains neutrality will be regarded as a friend. After the victory a national assembly will be called and a united government formed from the provinces who are inclined to this step.

Upon the field of foreign policy the Kuomintang strives for the abolition of the unequal treaties and the making of other treaties upon the basis of equality. It is not the intention of China to annul her foreign debt, she wishes nevertheless to pay off her debts in accordance with her financial and economic possibilities.

Send us the name and address of a progressive worker to whom we can send a sample copy of The DAILY WORKER.

A RUSSIAN POWER PROJECT

SAPOROSHYI, Alexandrovsk, Oct. 4 (By Mail).—This article is prompted by an article in one of the July numbers of The DAILY WORKER'S Magazine Section by Comrade Browder, who described the Volkhostroya (electric power plant) This is being written from the home of the Dniper river, where another electric project is to be built, called Dnieprostroy, but on a much larger scale than Volkovstroya.

650,000 H. P. Plant.

Dnieprostroya is to be of 650,000 h.p. or 13 turbines of 50,000 h. p. each. Dnieprostroy is important in three ways: a waterway to the Black and Baltic Seas, irrigation for hundreds of thousands of acres of land, and electric power for the metal industries in this locality.

PROF. ALEXANDROW, with a commission, went abroad to place the plans for the project before the best engineers of other countries, among them America. As a result of that trip, American engineers of the firm Cooper have been here going over the plans of the project.

Will Cost $60,000,000.

The dam of the plant is to be 126 feet high, equipped with a canal and locks to enable ships to go up and down the river, which cannot be done now, owing to the waterfalls and rapids.

The building of the plant will cost about $60,000,000. I understand that work is to start in the early part of 1927.

I do not know definitely whether the Cooper company is to be retained to help build the plant, but the people in this locality are enthusiastic over the fact that American engineers are interested, and if outside help is needed they would rather see the Americans given the preference.

Scouts Rumors.

THERE is absolutely no foundation for rumors being spread thru the American bourgeois press that there is an uprising in the Ukrainia, or anywhere else in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

I am back in the shop again after being out in the village for a year and a half. We are making farm implements where I am working, and I am earning from 120 to 130 rubles per month, with two weeks' vacation with pay every six months.

Where is the Ruslan strike fund for England's striking coal miners coming from? In the early part of the strike the workers in this locality voted a half day's pay, later 2 per cent, and at present ¾ per cent of their earnings until the strike is ended.

And that is not all. One can see young girls every day in the streets of the city and in the market places collecting funds for England's striking coal miners.

Vera Cruz Suffers Heavy Damage in Hurricane

The port of Vera Cruz, Mexico, viewed from the waterfront and across the city's housetops.

Vera Cruz, on the east coast of Mexico, suffered serious damage at the hands of twin hurricanes which have swept in from the sea over the lowlying town. Great property losses have been reported, both ashore and among the shipping in the port; losses among the inhabitants have been but vaguely estimated. Vera Cruz, one of the chief ports of Mexico, is the center of the country's industry and, incidentally, the home of the most radical section of the working class movement.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH STAGES AN ORIENTAL STUDENTS' CONFERENCE

By MANUEL GOMEZ.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

RACINE, Wis., Oct. 2.—Muffled to an artificially created silence of mock christian piety, the voice of young Asia managed to be heard at the Episcopal Devotional Center here, during the oriental students' conference. Some thirty students from universities thruout the United States gave virtually unanimous expression to the demand of the oppressed peoples of the East for freedom from imperialist domination. Meanwhile the bishop of Milwaukee, distinguished host to the delegates, looked up at the ceiling and prayed as the nothing had happened.

Representative Delegation.

Students attending the conference included Chinese, Hindus, Filipinos, Koreans, Japanese and one Siberian. The sessions, held twice a day, extended over a period of a week.

The conference was called under the chairmanship of Heridas Mozumder, author of a book on Ghandi. It was financed by the ever-ready gentry of the episcopal church, who explained their charitableness by declaring sympathy with the previously announced aims of the gathering: "to create a better understanding between East and West."

Much Religious Hokum.

Not to let a good opportunity go to waste, the hosts overwhelmed their youthful guests with courtesies, generously interspersed with religious propaganda and apologies for imperialism. Every student found a good-sized cross on the wall in his room. "Grace" was said by the bishop before and after each meal. Each session of the conference began with five minutes silent meditation. Moreover, a goodly supply of preachers and missionaries were on hand to participate in the debates.

Most of the students were obviously cowed by their surroundings. However, two Chinese students (S. C. Cheng and C. C. Chang) and one Hindu (N. K. Peranjpe), put forward the position of the oppressed peoples in vigorous fashion. Others who took a leading part in the discussion were Cirilo Manat, a Filipino law student, and Mr. Mozumdar.

No Resolution Adopted.

No resolutions were adopted by the delegates. Perenjpe made an attempt to present some, but his was gracefully brushed aside with the explanation that the conference was "merely an exchange of views." The consensus of student opinion favored a united struggle by the oppressed peoples of Asia to throw off the imperialist yoke. The delegates also showed themselves to be opposed to the so-called Pan-Asiatic movement, which was denounced as an instrument of Japanese imperialism.

Despite the unnatural restraint in which the conference took place, a sharp conflict in views between the students and their hosts was discernible thruout. Everyone of the christian crew, including the benign bishop, maintained the imperialist position. All except one or two defended the U. S. immigration restrictions against Orientals, all insisted upon "the need for continued United States sovereignty over the Philippines, and all showed their lack of sympathy with the national liberation struggle of the Chinese people. They pleaded with the Orientals "to understand" the benevolent purposes of imperialism, just as they were prepared "to understand" the Orientals.

Several of the students mostly the Chinese, let it be known that they considered the attitude of their hosts on these points to be a crude insult to the conference.

Denounce Missionaries.

There were one or two bitter moments in the discussions. Perhaps the most memorable was that which featured the debate on missionaries in the Far East. All of the Orientals except the Filipinos, denounced the missionaries in unmeasured terms.

At the end of each day's discussion, good feeling was restored by some kindly missionary who arose and explained that there was really no fundamental difference of opinion at all.

There was not a great deal of discussion—only a few hours each day. The program had been thoughtfully arranged so that most of the time was taken up by volley ball, tennis, swimming, wandering about the grounds, polite tete-a-tetes and praying.

I did not stay until the end of the conference. I left as the chairman was announcing that the delegates had been invited to march in a body to Father Sturtevant's church in Racine Sunday morning. As I was going thru the doorway I heard him add that taxicabs would be provided for those who might wish to attend holy communion.

The episcopal church obviously considered it worth while to spend a good deal of money on the conference.

Argentina Votes a $75,000,000 Naval Development Plan

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. The Argentine parliament has voted $75,000,000 to be used to acquire three light cruisers, six destroyers and six submarines. Contracts previously made for eight destroyers from France and Germany were cancelled and the new order will be placed either in England or the United States, according to the advice of a commission now in England and soon to arrive in the United States for the purpose of purchasing war material.

Parliament also provided for the construction of a navy yard at Mardel Plata and enlargements of the shipyards on the River Plate and at Puerto Belgrano.

The socialists in parliament spoke repeatedly against the additional armaments and voted against the appropriations.

Mussolini "Looking for a Fight."

ROME.—"I'm looking for a fight. I shall not shun obstacles. Opposition makes me harsher and more irreconcilable," said Mussolini in a speech at the city hall of Rome. In another speech he declared that Italy must dominate the Mediterranean.

INSURRECTION IN GREECE NIPPED IN NICK OF TIME

Government Continues Military Precautions

ATHENS, Oct 7.—Prompt military action early today frustrated what the government believes was another attempted civilian insurrection. The city today seethed with excitement and rumors.

The government's alarm was aroused by the appearance of a number of armed groups of civilians in one of the principal squares of the city, and by the sound of rifle firing on the outskirts of the capital during the early hours of the morning.

Alarm Was Sounded.

Immediately army buglers in motorcars dashed about the streets sounding the call to arms. Commanding officers held their troops in the barracks ready for any emergency, or took up positions at points of vantage in the city. The streets were cleared and all places of amusement were closed.

The populace, fearing a repetition of the massacre of September 9th when the troops battled the republican guard, resulting in the death and wounding of more than a hundred, fled indoors.

The government today continued its military precautions.

Pan-European Meet Sees Peril to the League of Nations

VIENNA, Oct. 7.—The Pan-European congress, where representatives of 28 nations are discussing Europe's affairs, is open here and some interesting phases of political life are revealed.

Several criticisms were aimed at the league of nations. It is powerless according to some and has little jurisdiction in the eyes of others. One question is whether such a Pan-European movement as the congress represents is inimical to the league.

The Greek delegate, who is that nation's representative to the league, said that jealousies already exist in the league and may develop into conflicts which the league is powerless to prevent. He objected to other than European countries having authority in the league on European matters.

He added that Brazil caused the recent crisis by withdrawal and said there is danger of a Pan-American league forming out of the Pan-American Union and taking a hostile attitude toward the league of nations.

Two Colonels to Roekpile.

ATHENS, Oct. 7. The council of war has sentenced Colonels Zervas and Dertilos, leaders of the recent republican guard revolt, to life imprisonment at hard labor.

Mexican-Swiss Treaty Signed.

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 7.—Mexico and Switzerland have established full diplomatic relations. Mexico will open a legation in Berne immediately.

WORLD NEWS AT A GLANCE

Kaiser to Get $8,000,000.

BERLIN.—The Prussian state has agreed to pay $8,000,000 and give 200,000 acres of land and three castles, at Schwes, Fteerath and Wildenbruch to the kaiser and give the crown prince a castle at Cels in settlement for claims made by the royal family for everything it left behind. The kaiser even claimed the state opera houses.

The Communists, aided by many social-democratic workers, are leading the movement to prevent such a settlement while millions of workers and war veterans are in poverty. "Not one cent to the Hohenzollern robbers," says a Communist manifesto. The Communists are agitating for the expulsion from Germany of all Hohenzollerns.

May Give Religious Home Rule.

MEXICO CITY.—It is reported that the minister of the interior is to introduce a bill allowing one foreign priest to each city where there is a foreign colony. Also each state legislature may decide on how many priests shall officiate within it.

Poland Reorganizes Cabinet.

WARSAW.—August Zaleski, who held the post of foreign minister in the resigned Bartel cabinet, has been named to refill the post in the reorganized cabinet under the premiership of Pilsudski.

Spain Angles for Tangier.

MADRID.—At the coming conference of three or four imperialist powers on the Tangier question, Spain is preparing, if denied her claim for full mandatory control, to invite the United States into the conference, which is entirely distasteful to England, France and Italy since they feel that America has no business in the matter.

Cannon on the heights of Tangier can reduce Gibraltar to ruins and England is certain not to let her line of imperialist communications to the east to be given to any power but herself or her most trusted allies.

To Hock Germany to U. S. Capitol.

PARIS.—French government heads are working hard to perfect a scheme whereby $500,000,000 of "reparations bonds" against German railways and industries to be pooled by the German government may be marketed in the United States and the 52 per cent to be France under the reparations division may go to help France rescue her bankrupt finances. Poincare aims to get permission from America to market these bonds in exchange for ratification of the debt pact.

German Industry Advances.

BERLIN.—General Director Voegler of the German steel trust in a speech to the people's party convention said that the new European steel trust would not be possible without the recent Franco-German political accord.

Voegler also said that Germany was near "freeing itself from British and American coal supremacy. We have perfected a complete process to make bituminous coal ridiculously cheap. It is said coal is turned into a liquid by adding hydrogen.

Have Their Hands Full in China.

SHANGHAI.—Thirty-nine British and American missionaries at Nienfu in Hunan province, caught by the swift southward advance of Feng Yu-hsiang's Kuomintchan army, are appealing for "rescue." British and American consuls at Hankow have replied that they are unable to send an expedition inland as these imperialist powers have all they can do to keep the Yangtze open.

The walled city of Wuchang opposite Hankow, where troops of Wu Pei-fu are besieged by Cantonese, has been again bombarded by airplanes of the southern armies.

British Relieved by Hertzog.

LONDON.—British diplomats are breathing easier. Prime Minister Hertzog of South Africa, who was expected to join with Mackenzie King, Canada's representative at the imperial conference, in a fight for greater dominion rights within the empire, has publicly declared that he will raise no question of that "revolutionary" nature.

Premier Cosgrove of the Irish Free State has sent similar assurances. Premier Bruce of Australia is known as a supporter of the empire and will not support Mackenzie King of Canada. Neither will New Zealand's representative. So the British feel that King will be isolated if he raises the question.

Primo de Rivera a Kill-Joy.

MADRID.—Primo de Rivera has issued a government order forbidding the ancient Spanish custom of the "pitopo," by which women in public places are complimented as to their attractiveness by any man who so desires. The influx of American tourists, many of the prudish vintage of the Y. W. C. A., is to blame. They object to being complimented, and some are so old as to scarcely deserve it, but the true Spaniard is always polite and does not wish to offend any one client dame by omitting what is expected as her due by any woman, the expressed admiration of the other sex.

N. Y. Workers' School Opens Semester With Large Headquarters

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Due to its splendid success last year, when it had the largest enrollment of any labor college in the country and to the already heavy registration for the coming term beginning on October 18 the Workers' School has been compelled to enlarge its headquarters. For this reason it has secured the building next door and its new address is now 106-108 East 14th street, New York City. This will give the school more than double the seating capacity it had last year.

More Comfort Provided.

The added space to the Workers' School will make possible more comfort to the workers attending the classes, will prevent congestion and delay that always accompanies an inefficient number of rooms. It also enables the Workers' School to offer more courses both of an advanced and elementary nature. In all 37 courses will be offered this year. The number of pupils allotted to a class can now be decreased, making possible better instruction on the part of the teacher and more participation by each individual student in the class.

Large Lecture Room.

There will be a large lecture room, especially equipped for such courses as American Labor Problems, Current Events and Forums. The students of the Workers' School will now be able to arrange dances and social affairs.

New equipment, such as chairs, blackboards, maps, etc., is being installed. It is intended to make all organizational arrangements as satisfactory as the character of courses and instructors.

The catalog of courses at the Workers' School for the new term can be obtained by writing to Bertram D Wolfe, director of the Workers' School, 106-108 East 14th street, New York City.

Ruthenberg to Wind Up the Election Campaign of the Buffalo Workers

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 7.—A large audience is expected for the meeting to be addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, when he arrives here Thursday, Oct. 14.

Comrade Ruthenberg will speak in the new home of the party at 36 West Huron Street.

With the removal to their new headquarters, the comrades in Buffalo expect to greatly facilitate their many activities. Plans are being made for regular open forums and classes for the coming season. A large stock of the latest books and publications will also be placed in the new headquarters which is centrally located and therefore more conveniently reached by workers in all sections of the city.

All readers of The DAILY WORKER are urged to attend the final election campaign meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party and to hear Comrade Ruthenberg discuss the issues confronting the American working class at the present time.

Party secretaries thruout the district are informed that all mail for the district office shall in the future be addressed 36 West Huron Street, instead of to the old address.

20,000 Names are Filed on Petitions

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Just before the expiration of the time for filing petitions at Albany in order that the Workers' Party candidates might get on the ballot 20,000 signatures were filed with the secretary of state.

The last of the petitions were in before midnight, which insures the names of the Communist candidates appearing on the ballot in the November elections. Over 36,000 signatures were filed in the office of the board of elections for the local candidates, which makes a total of 46,000 signatures in all that were filed.

Big Campaign Drive.

Now that the party is officially on the ballot the campaign for the last month will be intensified, with speakers covering the city in order to expose the fake democracy and the fake prosperity of the old parties and bring home the Communist message to the voters.

The following are the candidates of the Workers' Party who will go on the ballot in New York:

Good Turnout for 'Frisco Meeting of Bertram Wolfe

By E. ETTLINGER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—A very enjoyable and interesting gathering was held at the Workers' Party head quarters, 235 Valencia street, Monday, September 27, in honor of Comrade Bertram D. Wolfe on his visit to San Francisco.

Comrade Wolfe was formerly very active in this district and the occasion of his visit brought together many party members and sympathizers.

Comrade Wolfe in his remarks gave a brief account of the recent activities of the party, stressing particularly the Passaic and New York furriers' strike, the latter being the first exemple of what Communist leadership can accomplish. He also stated that compared to the situation existing a year ago the party has made definite advances and is developing slowly but gradually towards becoming a mass party.

TEXTILE MAGNATE SEEKS TO PROVE THAT CHILD LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES IS CHILD OF IMAGINATION

By LAURENCE TODD, Federated Press.

WASHINGTON—(FP)—James Edgerton of Tennessee is not only president of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and of the Natl. Industrial Council to which it is allied but he is a textile magnate and a foremost foe of federal regulation of child labor in industry. That fact makes all the more interesting the circulation thruout the country his summer by the N. A. M. of a propaganda pamphlet entitled, "Facts About Child Labor," republished from the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record. The Junior Education and Employment Committee of the N. A. M. which prepared this document from figures taken from the 1920 census is headed by Howell Cheney of the silk manufacturing firm of Cheney Brothers of Connecticut.

Protective Laws Not Enforced.

What Edgerton is trying to make the American public believe, thru this Cheney pamphlet, is that child labor in America is largely a myth. Ignoring the main argument for federal regulation—the fact that state laws limiting the employment of young children in textile mills and canneries and tobacco factories are not enforced—he quotes endless statistics to show that in 1920 only a handful of children under 16 years of age were gainfully employed in any industry except agriculture.

60,000 Children in Mills.

Richard Edmonds, editor of the Manufacturers' Record, in an introductory statement, disputes the claims of the advocates of the late federal law that 60,000 children were employed in textile mills of one southern state or that the N. A. M. spent millions to defeat the child labor amendment in Massachusetts. He quotes a Richmond business man who reproved some students for repeating these charges, which they had received from a professor "radically socialistic in his teachings."

A Christian Gentleman.

"President Edgerton," said this Richmond business man, "is one of the great christian laymen of the country. He was chairman of the committee in his denomination for raising the Centenary fund a few years ago. He is an active christian worker and in his own factory in Tennessee has a chapel where all of his working people gather for prayer and praise service before beginning their day's work."

Delivered a Tirade.

Edgerton's christian alibi did not help him when he came before the Women's Industrial Conference in Washington on Jan 19 last to oppose eight-hour and minimum wage laws and other legislative safeguards for women in industry. He read a tirade against "legislative poultices" while hundreds of women delegates stared in amazed anger or tried in vain to get a chance to challenge his most hypocritical assertions. The moment his denunciation of "bolshevists, socialists and Russian Communists" and the "social legislation in the ostensible interest of children and mothers" was completed he left the hall. Some of the women delegates asked the chairman whether he could not be brought back to face their replies. Edgerton did not return.

The Bolshevik Everywhere.

His speech to the women was circulated in printed form by the N. A. M. He said that the reformers ought to begin with the women and girls outside of industry; that there were only "a handful" of 2,000,000 women employed in organized industries; that the women's organizations that were seeking to protect these women in industry were being hoodwinked by the Bolshevik; into assisting in the tearing down of American institutions.

Run By Kollontai.

"A careful study and investigation by you ladies of your multitude of organizations and their power machinery," he said, "will show you, I think, that one Mme Kollontai, whose head quarters are at Moscow, but whose parish is the world, is exercising a very large if not a dominating influence upon at least some of the major activities of at least some of your organizations. Many innocent Americans are carrying around in their clothes germs of these insufferably alien theories and don't know it. They are made to believe that they are crusaders for defenseless women and children."

But when he had said that he fled.

The regents issued a statement which said:

Britain Works for United Imperialist Front Against the Chinese People

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 18 (By Mail)—An appeal of the Executive Committee of the Young Communist International to the working class and peasant youth of the whole world and to the soldiers and sailors of the imperialist forces, declares: The young proletarians of the whole world must follow the present events in China with strained attention. The victorious advance the revolutionary Canton troops opens up a wide perspective for the masses of the people in their struggle for emancipation from the bloody bonds of international imperialism. The revolutionary working class movement is developing swiftly in the freed districts. The mercenaries of Wu Pei Fu, the agent of the British exploiters have been smashed. The imperialists realise the danger and are hurrying to provide the bloodbound with armed assistance. They are preparing a great intervention in China. The reactionary British government, which has adopted the role of the gendarme of the world is, of course, the first to take the initiative in the attack upon the Chinese people. The British imperialists are sending one cruiser after another to the Far East and have bombarded peaceful towns, murdering hundreds of unarmed inhabitants, as, for instance, in the town of Wanhsien. Feverish negotiations are being conducted with the imperialists of other countries, particularly with Japan, for the purpose of forming a united front against the masses of the Chinese people. The agent of the Japanese imperialists, Tchang Tso Lin, is provoking the Soviet government in Manchuria. The imperialists, clinging to the power which is slipping from their hands, will stop at nothing in order to light the flame of a new world war and at the same time a crusade against the stinch ality of all oppressed peoples. The U. S. S. R. Comrades brothers, young proletarians of the whole world, you were and must always be in the front ranks of the struggle against imperialist war. The workers of the world must not permit the imperialists to drown the struggle of the Chinese people in blood. Let us fight as one man against this new criminal plan of the imperialists. Brothers, soldiers, sailors, you dare not permit that they use you as murderers against your Chinese brothers who are fighting for their elementary rights. Drive bloody imperialism out of China. Long live the revolutionary struggle of the Chinese people against international imperialism! Long live the international solidarity of the proletarian youth!

Policies and Programs
The Trade Union Press
Strikes—Injunctions
Labor and Imperialism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OAKLAND, Calif.—The 37th annual convention of the State Federation of California was held in Oakland during the week of Sept. 20 to Sept. 28. After the formal opening President Ross Baker took the chair. A local person asked the spookery for guidance. Then followed a speech of "greeting" from a moron official of the strike-breaking American Legion in which the delegates were told that the legion and organized labor had a common aim, viz., to combat radicalism and promote patriotism. This brought vociferous applause from the labor patriots followed by those delegates they are still able to delude.

A Hopeful Pessimist.

On Tuesday the international president of the Ordinary Workers made a speech in which he gave a pessimistic report of conditions in the industry, but, like a true Babbit, he made a show of optimism and declared that while the industry as a whole" it would improve—"at least we hope so."

To improve the conditions of the industry (not the conditions of the workers in it) he proposed that more time be devoted to eating—a request to the bosses to demand more service.

There were the usual perennial resolutions, many of them on public matters only remotely concerned with the workers. But the moment that the resolutions submitted by the left wing came up for consideration the reactionary character of those in control became apparent.

Dehorn Demand for Repeal of C. S. Law.

It was on the repeal of the criminal syndicalism law that their subservience to the politicians, their cowardice and fear of action showed most plainly. The resolution was adopted only after the teeth were taken out of it. As adopted it "reaffirms our opposition." The part which reads, "We demand its repeal and instruct our incoming officers and executive board to use all available means to secure its repeal," was deleted.

Left Wing Gains As It Works.

As the debates on the resolutions proceeded the left wing steadily gained strength, winning more and more support from the rank and file elements, from the proletarians.

Resolution No. 67, declaring opposition to and condemnation of citizens' military training camps "and kindred militarist institutions," was rejected after a debate led Delegate Globerman (Cigarmakers).

Touchy on Labor Party.

Resolution No. 48, demanding the establishment of a labor party "broad enough to embrace all groups in the labor movement and with a program upon which all workers can unite," went the same way. The leaders are very touchy upon this point. Political dickering with capitalist politicians, in which the "labor vote" is hawked about, provides a fertile field for securing fat jobs—for the leaders.

The resolution declaring opposition to the use of the public schools for spreading open shop propaganda by the chambers of commerce, boards of trade and industrial associations, brought a recommendation of non-concurrence from the resolutions committee.

The motion to adopt the recommendation of the committee met with strong opposition, led by Delegate Dora Rosenblatt (Office Workers), Los Angeles, supported, among others, by Harvey Gordian, editor of The Citizen, also of Los Angeles, with the result that the motion was defeated and a motion to adopt the resolution was carried.

Second Victory.

Delegate Rosenblatt sponsored a resolution calling for financial and moral support in organizing the office workers and was supported by Delegates Shults and Jacobs against the reactionary forces led in the debate by the reactionary secretary of the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, Bussall. Non-concurrence was voted down and a motion to adopt the resolution was carried.

Third Victory.

A resolution calling for support for the Passaic strikers also precipitated a strenuous debate. The reactionary Bussall indulged in vicious and ignorant red-baiting, attacking the sponsors of the resolution instead of dealing with the resolution itself. It availed him nothing, however, except to shown him up in his true colors. The resolution was adopted.

Furseuth For Strike-Breaking.

The left wing was gaining support with each resolution. One in support of Sacco and Vanzetti was adopted, but the one in support of the British miners and condemning the digging and transporting of coal to break the strike was defeated.

The efforts of the left wing, lag in this debate by Del. Feinstein, would have met with success were it not for the opposition of Andy Furseuth who wants the A. F. of L. to be a strikebreaking. The reactionary old windbag resorted to the tactics of confusion and indulged in the usual red-baiting. The resolution was defeated by a small majority.

Mooney for Class Struggle.

Whilst the peddlers of spook dope and the agent of the strikebreaking American Legion were invited to address the convention, all who addressed the convention did not deliver such tripe. To the discomfort of some of the leaders, the militant note of struggle was sounded by A. J. Mooney, a leader of the bitter carpenters' strike in San Francisco.

Mooney heaped scorn upon pacifism and told the delegates that more progress had been made in five months of fighting than was made in five years of "negotiation."

"Those had rights who dared maintain them," quoted the speaker who contended that a policy of struggle would be pursued until better conditions would be wrested from the employers.

MacDonald a Fighter.

Another speaker who breathed defence to the employers and their agents was Frank MacDonald, president of the State Building Trades Council. He assured the delegates that the carpenters would not curl up and quit in face of the slugging tactics of the industrial association and their hired thugs. They would meet them at their own game. The capitalist courts also came in for a severe castigation at the hands of MacDonald.

SACCO-VANZETTI MEETING IS HELD DESPITE COPPERS

Police Refuse Permission and are Defied

By IRVING FREEMAN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 7.—Police, after giving permission for a mass meeting in Doelger's Hall to demand new trials for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti suddenly reversed themselves and said the meeting could not take place.

Applications by Business Agent Kaplan of Painters' Local Union No. 797, and Business Agent Klein of the Cleaners and Dyers' Local Union for permits in the names of their respective organizations met with like refusal.

The Sacco-Vanzetti conference then decided to hold a meeting in another hall—Labor Lyceum, at Barclay and Montgomery Streets—without asking formal permission of the police. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn spoke and $103 was raised for the defense.

Will Protest.

Kaplan and Klein are asking the Essex Trades Council to protest the high handed action of the authorities.

Protest is being made by the American Civil Liberties Union which has had to fight previous interference with meetings by Newark authorities.

Textile Strike Smashes Profits of Mill Bosses

PASSAIC—(FP)—Net loss of $3,558,968 reported by the Botany Consolidated Mills in the American Woolen and Cotton Reporter for the six months ending June 30 interests the Passaic workers who have been striking the company since January.

"Never have workers a better case than the Passaic textile strikers, never a cause more just," says the monthly bulletin of the Women's Trade Union League of New York, which is aiding in the relief drive. "Even in the face of major outrages and abuses they will carry on, provided they can continue to receive the minimum ration of food they have been receiving from the Relief Committee (743 Main avenue, Passaic, N. J.). $15,000 a week is the price. Will you help?"

James Starr, vice president United Textile Workers, in charge of the strike, warned Chief of Police Zober of Passaic that brutal attacks on strikers must cease, according to the doctored degree methods, refuting Captain Turner, who denied any brutality by his department.

LOS ANGELES IS MOST GULLIBLE CITY OF WORLD

Aimee McPherson's Success is Prime Example

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. (By Mail).—"Los Angeles has been the center of continuous prayer every moment, for the past 22 months. Since the dedication of Angelus Temple . . . from the dark hours of midnight, thru the day, on to midday and round the clock again, there has been a steady outpouring of prayer to god that has brought down showers of blessing upon thousands and thousands of persons. Up in this Watch Tower of the temple, night or day, prayer never ceases . . ."

So wrote the Los Angeles Examiner some time ago about the amnesia Aimee, whose exhortations scooped out the shekels to build her mammoth temple, was drowned, kidnapped in Mexico and enjoying a vacation from righteousness in beautiful Carmel-By-the-Sea. The mere fact that this consummate actress and religious faker has been caught with the goods does not diminish the attendance at her temple. On the contrary, crowds battle with each other every evening to get in, and the size of the collections are greater than ever.

A Famous City.

But this is to be expected in a city which Bob Shuler's Magazine (a local weekly) credits with being famous for three things:

"First as a city where more suckers are stung . . . then in any city of like size in America. Second, as a city where . . . sex-stimulation is at the maximum. Third, as a city where there is more religious vagaries, more cults and isms, more psychic manifestations and delusions, more commercialized miracles and more flagrant deceptions in the name of the gentle child, Jesus, then in any other city possibly in the entire world. Los Angeles is fertile soil for every kind of an imposter that the feet of the earth has been cursed by. The suckers all come here sooner or later and the whole twelve months is open season."

New Boom Every Day.

Chicago or New York may get all fussed up about a Krishnamurti, but Los Angeles has had one nine years and a boom every day. If Aimee should suffer an immaculate conception as a result of her kidnapping or drowning it would not, in place of losing followers she will no doubt create a new cult of the Virgin that will back the Mormon prophet of Salt Lake City off the map.

It is hard to say why this wonder-thirst and religion-seeking and cult-faddism prevail in Los Angeles. It would be an interesting study for an American Lewis Browne. Los Angeles population is continually increased by retired farmers from the Middle West, by New Englanders fleeing their hard winters, by people broken down in health and dismissed as hopeless by the doctors. And California has more passenger automobiles per capita than any other state in the Union and has most of the dirt roads in the United States. All of these things help to explain the atmosphere that prevails in Los Angeles.

Not Explaining Things.

They also explain why the city of Los Angeles is an open-shop town, where the Better American Federation, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and similar organizations unite to smash unionism and boast to incoming business men that "there are no labor troubles."

At present the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association is all hot up about a successful strike that just took place in the city. True, it was not in the industry, but the workers are the victims of the most open-shop oppression here that the M. & M., as it is known here, is rightly afraid that the inspiration furnished by the militant tactics and successful strike of the cleaners and dyers here will stir up other industries.

Fight Cleaners' Union.

Moreover, the anti-picketing ordinance was openly violated by the striking cleaners and dyers. Consequently the word has been passed around to frame-up and smash the Cleaners' and Dyers' Union and the few unsettled shops are massing with sabotage, violence, ruin and destruction of property, etc., all of which is done by hired agents of the bosses and promptly blamed upon the union officials. Judging from present indications, we may hear of a frame-up case here any day.

There is a whole tribe of professional frame-up men here, who live on the prosecution of Wobblies and A. F. of L. labor leaders, as well as under the criminal syndicalist laws. When I made an appeal for new members at my meeting here seven applications were made out. One of the seven, according to my informants, was a stool pigeon.

K. K. K. Again.

A recrudescence of ku klux kleindom is also possible here, with city of so many notable things besides climate. An organization known as the Southwest Chamber of Commerce is endeavoring to prevent colored families from moving into their district.

MILL BOSSES REAP RICH GRAFT WHICH WOULD ADD TO WORKERS' PAY; OWNERS CONCEAL PROFITS

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(FP)—On the cover of a later issue of the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, textile trade paper, is blazoned the red headline: How Much is Graft Costing the Textile Industry? Textile workers will doubtless be interested in the text:

Overseer Oversaw Graft.

A small woolen mill has been purchasing 400 barrels of wool oil each year, for nine years, at 88 cents a gallon. The oil company has been paying one of the overseers in this mill $5 a barrel graft. This same wool oil could be bought from the same grafting concern at 50 cent a gallon. Because the overseer has been getting $5 a barrel graft, he has used 400 barrels a year where 200 barrels would be sufficient. In the nine years this small woolen mill has paid $158,400 for the wool oil, and the same result could have been secured for $45,000. Because of the graft-paying oil concern, and the graft-accepting overseer, this mill in nine years has lost $113,400.

Rich Business Proposition.

Here is another case: A big textile manufacturing organization in New England is using a sulphonated castor oil at 15 cents purchased from an unreliable concern. The same oil was offered at 11½ cents by another concern; was passed by the chemist of the corporation as acceptable; the salesman called upon the boss finisher, and the finisher bluntly said, "I am using the So-and-So oil at 15 cents because they are paying me $10 a barrel. Here is my home address, and also my home telephone number. Come up to my house and see me some night." We figured that in that one large corporation more than $2,000,000 a year is lost to net profits thru the rampant graft and grafting in its organization.

The whole industry reeks with this condition. A great majority of the sising compounds, oils, drugs, scouring oils, fleeting oils, belt dressings, boiling compounds, solvents, and other chemical concoctions offered to the industry are absolutely fraudulent in purpose, price and process.

Rich Profits Besides Graft.

It is a fact, that this loss of millions to the textile mills of the country, due to graft and to the purchase of materials that are small money value, is the fault of the heads of the mills. They can stop it any time they desire to do so.

Wool textile workers in such places as Passaic, where for seven months they have struck for decent wages, again see justification and more for their demands when the graft in the industry is exposed. The mills' stock answer that they are poor because of the depression seems not so plausible with the facts shown.

A NEW NOVEL

Bunny thought that he also would try his hand at card-writing. He got a plain postal and told Paul that they were all well and busy and producing a lot of oil to help defeat America's enemies. "I am doing a lot of thinking," Bunny added; but then it occurred to him that this might suggest a forbidden procedure to troops, so he got another card and told how happy everybody was and how well things were going, and he added, "I am coming to agree with Tom Axton in everything." Bunny figured that the censor would hardly know, way out there in Siberia, how Tom Axton had organized the oil-workers in the Paradise field.

All this time Bunny was torn between two sets of emotions, both strong within him, and absolutely contradictory. He had been in the army as a prospective officer and had burned with patriotic loyalty; but now, only seven months later, here he was with a desire to "root" for the enemies of his country and to cheer when the flag had to retreat! Yes, he was actually tempted to be glad when he read that the American troops at Archangel were checked, and their British commanders foiled in their objectives! He remembered the thrills that had stirred his soul in the training camp, when he had leaped from his tent at reveille, and seen "Old Glory" floating in the breeze of dawn; if in those days he could have seen himself as he was now, he would have called himself a black-hearted traitor!

There were very few people in the world who thought the Russians would be able to defend themselves against the hosts of all the world. Yet somehow they were managing it. There was a peculiar thing to be noticed in the newspaper despatches from the various anti-Bolshevik fronts. The allied troops would win great victories; they would take Perm, or Ufa, or whatever city it might be, and capture vast thousands of the enemy. It was no trouble at all for them to capture thirty or forty thousand, while five or ten thousand was hardly enough to make a news item. A month or two later they would win another victory, and again the patriots would be cheered up—until it occurred to them to get the map and compare the location of the two places, and discover that the second place was one or two hundred miles farther back than the first one!

It was only afterwards that Bunny found out what this meant. The peasants had a way of staying quiet while the allied forces advanced, and then rising up behind their lines and forcing them to retreat. So mighty was Bolshevik propaganda—it was working thus in Archangel, and all along the western front from the Baltic to the Crimea, and all over Siberia; no victory ever lasted. Admiral Kolchak got all the way across Siberia, General Denikin, in the Ukraine, got within a hundred and twenty-five miles of Moscow; but it all came to nothing.

Then, as summer turned into fall, and fall into winter, a still more terrifying thing began to happen. The armies of the great powers began to show signs of succumbing to the deadly propaganda poison! They were now in the second winter since the armistice, and the soldiers thought the war was over, and why couldn't they go home? The very worst of the prophesies of Eldon Burdick began suddenly to come true. The sailors of the French fleet in the Black Sea rose up and overthrew their officers and captured several battle-ships! German troops declined to win their way back to respectability by putting down Bolshevism for the allies! The British soldiers at Archangel refused to go onto the ships that were to take them to Archangel.

And most appalling of all, a mutiny in the American army! The first mutiny in the whole history of "Old Glory"! Michigan lumbermen and farmer-boys, shipped up there under the Arctic circle, put under the command of British officers, and ordered to shoot half-starved and ragged Russian working men at fifty degrees below zero—these boys laid down their arms! The facts were hushed up in the newspapers—but not in the higher circles of the army and of world diplomacy, nor yet in the office-buildings where the gentlemen and lady-patriots planned the future of the world!

In the month of October the allies made their last military effort. They sent in the Iberist General Yudenich to take Petrograd; they gave him all the supplies he could get out of many nations, and he got within a few miles of the city, so that the Soviets had to move their capital to Moscow. But the half starved and ragged Communists drove back their foes, and Bolshevik propaganda proceeded to cause a revolution in Hungary and another in Bavaria!

Also at home there were portents. In spite of all the raids and jailings and deportations, great numbers of people could not be prevented from saying publicly and loudly that we had no business making war upon a friendly people. More and more there was discontent with the program of keeping our soldiers abroad after the war was over. "Radical" newspapers and magazines continued to be circulated, and in the big cities at any rate it was not possible to prevent mass meetings.

It was a little difficult to make any protest effective, because of the peculiar condition into which the government had fallen. The president had set out on a tour, to convince the people that they should be satisfied with the peace settlement. He had come to Angel City, and Dad and Bunny had gone to hear him—in a vast hall where ten thousand people were marshalled, and taught to stand up and sit down again, and cheer at signal. All very reverently, quite like royalty. The great man's voice was strained and his face had an unwholesome flush, and his arguments were as broken as his appearance. A few days later came word that his health had collapsed, and he was hurried back to Washington, where he had an apoplectic stroke. Now for lay, a helpless, half-conscious invalid, and the country was governed by a strange triumvirate—a Catholic private secretary, an army doctor, and one of the most fashionably dressed of Washington society ladies.

But somewhere, in the cabinet, perhaps, there was left a trace of intelligence, with which to realize the mounting dangers abroad and at home. At Christmas time, while Bunny was up at Paradise, hunting quail and watching the progress of Ross Conkoldated, he went out one morning to meet the Ford car which brought the mail to the tract. He got his morning paper and opened it, and there on the front page was a dispatch from Washington, announcing that the army authorities had decided it was no longer necessary for them to police the Trans-Siberian Railway; we were going to leave the Japanese in charge, and come for Ruth. "Paul is coming back! Paul is coming back!" Then he had to run quick and catch her by the arm and help her to a chair!

FROM PORTLAND TO DETROIT

A. F. of L. Must Face Facts

The heated discussion which has taken place at the opening sessions of the American Federation of Labor convention, revolving around the attitude of the Detroit churches in support of the open shoppers, and the sharp clash between the British fraternal delegates and President Green on the question of the admission of the trade unions of the Soviet Union to a world labor federation, are of great significance.

No A. F. of L. convention in years has found the capitalists in the convention city so hostile and it would be a mistake to believe that this is a purely local phenomenon. It means that the owners of the big unorganized industries, having noted the weakness of the labor movement, are not going to cater to it. In effect, what has been done and said by the capitalists in Detroit, is a warning to the trade union leadership to keep out of these industries.

The great strike in Passaic had not escaped the attention of the capitalist owners of other industries. That the American Federation of Labor was forced at last to recognize the strike, take the strikers into the United Textile Workers, and begin a relief drive in the trade unions after having denounced the strike, is evidence to the capitalists whose industries are unorganized that conservative leaders do not always exercise a decisive influence in these matters.

They know that a show of strength by the capitalists has always made the American trade union leadership retreat and they expect the same thing to happen this time.

We expect that the bosses will be disappointed. Not because the officialdom is braver than before but because there is a growing pressure from below for genuine organization which makes complete retreat somewhat difficult.

It is certain that the trade union movement, if it is to live, must fight. If it does not fight under its present leadership, it will get a new one.

The action of the Detroit open shoppers has accomplished two good things:

1. It has shown thousands of workers that it is no bed of roses that is being prepared for them by the "welfare" schemes of the capitalists.

2. The churches have been shown up as ready instruments of the capitalists.

As for the sharp discussion on the question of world trade union unity, this is proof that the American Federation of Labor, because after all it is composed of workers, cannot escape being drawn into the world struggle of labor.

These issues, in spite of the efforts of officialdom to keep them out of the American labor movement, will attract more and more attention and will have to be met by the leadership who up to date have been able to quash them by a flood of abuse.

They Want Only Silence From Calvin

Calvin Coolidge is not going to take public part in the congressional campaign this fall and Washington dispatches state that the capital is shocked by the announcement.

We are not shocked.

We give the republican candidates who have struggled thru the primaries, and most of whom were nominated either without Coolidge support or against his open opposition, credit for enough sanity to desire nothing that could be interpreted as aid from his hands by the citizenry.

Coolidge support, as the primary elections have shown, is just about the same as throwing an anvil to a drowning man for a life preserver. The republican national committee has undoubtedly, even if its wishes were otherwise, responded to the frenzied appeals of the congressional and senatorial candidates, and prevailed upon Calvin to refrain from even a front porch campaign.

This does not augur well for Calvin's chances as the candidate of the republican party in 1928. A president whose laudatory utterances relative to the merits of republican candidates are a sort of reverse English, so to speak, and who cannot pull the administration henchmen thru in such staunch republican strongholds as Pennsylvania, is more of a liability than an asset.

Already the doleful yelps of the holders of federal patronage, who fear that their places at the trough may be taken by deserving democrats, can be heard within the sacred purlieus of the White House. They mean something because these are the lads who get out the vote.

Calvin entered the White House as the bearer of the "strong-silent man" tradition. The republican committee and the candidates appear to be in favor of the perpetuation of the silent tradition.

As to the strong part of the myth there is a large and growing body of opinion which is willing, nay, is demanding, that the word "rank" be substituted.

We incline to the belief that the big capitalists of America believe that Calvin, as the first flower of republicanism in the White House controversy, has lost his first bloom and must be replaced by one whose beauty will not fade so quickly.

Anyway, this particular flower will not be worn in the buttonholes of the champions of the G. O. P. this fall.

It seems clear that someone has started a "Back to Vermont" movement for Calvin.

All they want from him now is silence and lots of it.

TROTSKY-ZINOVIEV OPPOSITION FAILS TO WIN SUPPORT IN PARTY

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 7.—All Moscow organizations of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union continue to hear reports of the activities of the opposition. Excepting the nucleus of "Aviepribor," where they succeeded in getting twenty-six votes against seventy-seven for the Central Committee, the opposition failed to make any showing in any of the nuclei. Despite all efforts of the opposition to draw them into the struggle, all units adopted unanimous resolutions strongly condemning the factional activities of the opposition.

ARTICLE EIGHT.
By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE American trade union movement must be lifted out of the slough of despond into which it has been dragged, its morale raised and the will to struggle developed.

It must become the leader of the working masses of the United States. It does not play this role now. It simply accepts the existence of capitalism as a fact, bases upon the "prosperity" of the country in exactly the same way as the capitalist journals describe it (as a new golden age of Americanism) and follows the lead of the capitalists in its policy.

For skilled workers the trade unions have as yet some appeal but the great majority of the American workingclass are not skilled workers. They are unskilled and semi-skilled and are in the big basic industries.

A TRADE union movement cannot organize decisive masses of these workers unless it can express, to some extent at least, the revolutionary mission inherent in the workingclass. It must have a crusading spirit and the business ideology of the present labor leadership will not and cannot adjust itself to this fact.

As one of the main reasons for the moribund condition of the American labor movement the surrender of labor officialdom to American capitalism has not escaped the attention of close observers of the labor movement. Abraham Epstein says in the September "Current History":

. . . . the real strength of a labor movement lies not in its mere size, but in the virility, and missionary zeal which permeate it. And it is in the decadence of the spirit, the hopes and the aspirations of the rank and file that the dissipation of the American labor movement is most clearly revealed today.

This is correct.

EVEN the organized workers have lost faith in the labor movement as it is at present. There is a great cynicism among the membership and for this the studied avoidance or denunciation of anything tinged with militancy or class-consciousness and the constant aping of both capitalist and middle class by the officials is largely responsible. Trade union movements begin as movements of oppressed workers. When they are prostituted to the service of capitalism, as the extracts from official statements, and concrete examples given previously show is being done to the American labor movement, the rank and file of the membership as well as sections of the unorganized, in a period of rising capitalism, lose all hope and faith in the labor movement and in their class and become dependent upon the bounty of the capitalists.

TO quote Epstein again:

The ideology and aspirations characterizing the European labor movement have never been part of the main labor body in the United States. And the newer activities of labor like banking, investment companies and insurance are at best only copying what the employers are doing.

Like the capitalists, the American labor leaders have always resisted any attempt to make the social reforms such as unemployment insurance, etc., a political issue. Only workmen's compensation laws have really been fought for and chiefly on the ground that such measures were actually cheaper for the employer.

AMERICAN labor leadership always has fought and is still fighting the organization of a party based on the trade unions and playing the role of the labor party in Great Britain or the social-democrat party in Germany in putting forward the reforms demanded by the trade unions as political issues.

The consequence has been that the capitalists can now appeal, in many instances, thru their social welfare schemes, as giving workers more than the trade unions have ever demanded.

The stimulating and organizational value of the struggle for these reforms has been lost to the trade union movement.

Meanwhile the labor leadership still follows the "non-partisan" political policy, drags the labor movement into the capitalist parties as well as into capitalist unparties.

It is not surprising that the morale of the trade unions has sunk to the lowest level in its history.

When large profits enable capitalists to make substantial concessions to large sections of the workers, as Henry Ford's "five" demands for a big part of their appeal.

EPSTEIN notes this also:

For "pure and simple" trade unionism has been consigned primarily with the securing of a shorter workday, higher wages and improved working conditions. Since the eight or nine hour workday has become practically general, and since as a body the trade unions, have taken no serious steps in demanding a still shorter day, the issue has practically eliminated itself . . . the only remaining issue of the American labor movement—the improvement of working conditions—has been taken out of its hands by the employers going labor banks and ADOPTING CONDITIONS SUCH AS THE TRADE UNIONISTS NEVER DARED TO ASK. By this process the main reasons for the existence of the American labor movement have been gradually subverted, LEAVING IT PRACTICALLY LIFELESS.

Epstein undoubtedly overrates the extent of the concessions made by the capitalists but as to their devastating effect upon the labor movement when coupled with the supine attitude of the labor leadership, there can be no doubt.

THE most recent example of this servility has occurred in Detroit where, when attacked by the open shop interests of that city while the A. F. of L. convention is in session, the union officials make the point of their defense a statement that the labor movement is just as American and patriotic as the capitalists and cites the support of the imperialist war in 1917 as proof of this.

Like all supporters of capitalism in the ranks of the labor movement, the trade union leadership in America has tried to meet the attacks of the capitalist class (and the development of welfare schemes is a far more deadly attack than that made by injunctions and troops) by accepting that no basic differences exist, that there is nothing that capital and labor cannot agree on around the conference table provided the capitalists will accept the trade union officials as the spokesmen of the workers.

This is a policy which spells disaster for the labor movement and already it has travelled far on this road. This journey must be halted and the labor movement turned back to the crossroads and set upon the right path—the path of the class struggle.

In this task the Communists have a mighty role to play.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

The Ideological Bearers of the Opposition Block.

LET us turn to the question of the ideological sources from which the opposition block derives its ideas. I am of the opinion that the whole foundation of the ideology of this opposition block in all its constituents is actually, as seen at the XIV. Party Congress, Menshevist, or at best doubtful, of the possibility of building up socialism in our country, and I maintain that this arises out of the former viewpoint held by all the representatives of the present opposition block.

THUS for instance, in Comrade Trotsky's case his lack of faith is associated with his conviction that international revolution is not victorious, than the counter-revolutionary peasantry are inevitably bound to overthrow the dictatorship of the proletariat. This is the fundamental standpoint developed by him in his theory of permanent revolution, and it is the standpoint from which he has not departed.

IN the case of Comredes Kamanev and Zinoviev their lack of faith is part of their standpoint; at the time of the October revolution they thot that wa, as sole party backed by the proletariat, were not cepable of coping with the tasks imposed by power.

AND than comes the "Workers' Opposition." Here egain i must remind you of a fact which many of us have forgotten. One of the dasertars at the time of the October revolutien was Comrade Shlyapnikov; he left his post at this turning point. He was People's Commissaar at that time, and sent in his rasignation. It may of course be assumed that he did not do this on his own initiative, but probably after consultation with thoss sharing his views.

THE three main elements of the present block have shown in their historical past that their sattimats of the class forces in our country is such that they doubt the possibility of the working class, under the leadership of our party, proving capeble of drawing the mighty wagon of our backward country out of the bog into which it has fallen. These are the first and deepest sources of the ideology of the present opposition block.

I THINK it will now be fairly plain to you why the opposition has had recourse to such unheard of action as that leading to the affair of Comrade Lashevitch and others. I will not enter into the nature of this affair, here, since it is as well known to you as to me—the decisions of the party will be published). The steps taken by the oppositional comrades have led to a violation of party discipline perfectly unheard of in the history of the party, and it has been possible that a candidate to the C. C., with the undoubted approval of members of the polit-bureau, has held mass meetings in the forest, against the party, against the line pursued by the party, for the purpose of overthrowing the present leaders of the C. C. of the party, and of creating a new organization actually representing the germ of a new party whose influence was to extend over the whole country.

COMRADES, I shall not here demonstrate to you the entirely criminal character of such action from the standpoint of the party. This seems to me entirely superfluous. You all understand it without explanation. But I honestly want to understand how it could come about. I think it has been made possible because these comrades as regards ideology, have fallen away from the line of the party to such an extent, and are internally so completely convinced that without them the party will fall over a precipice, slip from the proletarian pathway, and drive the country to the verge of the abyss, that they feel themselves impelled to grasp at any available means—they rush into the forest and cry for "help." This is the only possible subjective justification for their actions.

BUT from the standpoint of the party there is no justification. The central committee and the central control commission have been faced by the fact that a number of comrades, including some holding extremely responsible positions, had actually taken such steps as the convocation of an illegal meeting against the party and its leaders. Were we to tolerate such actions, our party would cease to exist tomorrow as a leninist party. We cannot tolerate this. We say to these comrades: Defend you principles, declare your standpoint, speak in the party meetings, but if you take to the forest, if you will not reply to our questions, if you refuse to make statements before the control commission, if you choose the method of organizing a new party within our party, the method of illegal organization, then we shall fight you relentlessly. But we shall not let matters go so far as this. Comrade Zinoviev was perfectly right, two years ago, when he said that the question of schism in the party is a matter of life and death to the party and to the proletarian dictatorship.

THE danger is somewhat lessened by the fact that the comredes of the opposition have only in their imagination the masses of the proletariat behind them. In reality they will continue to be mere and more like generals without armies, or admirals of the Swiss fleet. (Laughter and applause.) This will come about the more rapidly as the party attacks the work of enlightenment more energetically, and steels its own ideology.

This work of enlightement is the leading point on our agenda. This is the first task to which we must devote attention.

THE opposition is speculating upon various possibilities. It is speculating upon our economic difficulties. It is speculating on the fact that we suffer many shortcomings in our present life, that many different trends of feeling have arisen among the workers during the past year, and will probably be followed by many others. And finally, it is speculating on the opposition that the present central committee will not be capable of leading the party without them, the highly gifted supermen. The opposition believes that we shall break down under a task too difficult for us. But we, comrades, are confident that if the opposition will not help us to lead the party, then we shall do it without them. (Enthusiastic applause.)

We Shall Overcome the Difficulties, Remova the Excrescences, Cor-

WE are confident, comrades, that however difficult our economic position is at times, still our economic prospects are good, and the excellent crops which we shall have this year will make it possible for us to really overcome the economic difficulties being undergone by the country at the present juncture. And we are even more confident that we shall be successful in leading both our party and our country forward on the broad road of development. There are none so blind as those who will not see. There are many who believe the situation to be still worse among us as it was at the beginning of the revolution, when anyone able to write an article with correct spelling could consider himself a party leader. Since then a new generation has sprung up. We have a new generation of functionaries in the provinces, we are supported on all sides by thousands of hands, and we are confidently upon its magnificent collective power of party. We are fully convinced that we shall win. (Enthusiastic applause.)

THE present opposition, like every other opposition which his hitherto risen in our party, and like those oppositional groups which contend against our party outside of its ranks, has a certain foothold upon which it bases its position. Were we to live in Paradise, and had we no faults whatever, so that everything worked as a hundred per cent state of affairs, then there would be no foothold for an opposition. I have often made this observation, and am not ashamed to bring it forward again here. During the rising at Kronstadt in the spring of 1921 the armed counter-revolutionary opposition was again based on a certain idea, for a certain disorder had eaten its way amongst us, and things had occurred which demonstrated a corresponding reaction on our part. This reaction consistad of the introduction of free trade, in the cessation of grain requisitions, etc., etc. And if there were no bureaucracy amongst us at the present time, if wages were not still so low in a number of branches of production, and if the village poor had not to bribe it for certain conditions, then the opposition would have no ground under its feet.

Of course, every opposition in the party exaggerates its faults. The whole point of the question lies in what is criticized, and in how and why the criticism is exercised.

When the comrades of the opposition declare: "Bureaucracy is strangling you," then we reply: "Yes, bureaucracy is an excrescence very detrimental to the party." But we go further and say: "Your state has recessed to be a state of the proletarian dictatorship, it is a state of bureaucrats who have nothing in common with the masses," then we reply: "That is not true we refute this criticism as a slander against our workers state."

(To Be Continued)

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE ANNUAL I. L. D. CONFERENCE

Resolution on Old Class War Cases.

THE Second Annual Conference of International Labor Defense calls the attention of the workers of America to the cases of those labor fighters, imprisoned years ago, who were sentenced on framed-up charges and whose cause has been neglected and all but forgotten by the working class. Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings have suffered the torture of trials and imprisoned for more than ten years now. The I. W. W. victims of the Centralia conspiracy are imprisoned in Washington for almost the same length of time. McNamara and Matthew Schmidt remain in their cells at San Quentin. Sacco and Vanzetti, harrassed for six years with the gloomy shadow of impending execution, may yet suffer the same fate. The many I. W. W. prisoners in California, the miner, Dominick Ventrurella, in Ohio, Edgar Combs in West Virginia, and many others have been permitted to fall into obscurity and almost out of the memory and scope of action of the workers of the country.

SUCH a position of these devoted fighters of the working class must not be tolerated. The International Labor Defense and the Labor Defender have rendered an invaluable service by reviving and keeping fresh in the minds of the workers the story of these almost forgotten cases. The task of constantly reminding the labor movement of its duty to these courageous fighters, of keeping these issues always before the eyes of the working class, is being fulfilled by the I. L. D. and must be continued with renewed and devoted vigor, for their cause is now more than ever our cause.

THE conference instructs the incoming National Executive Committee to exert every effort within the next year towards the reviving of the agitation and publicity necessary to arouse working class opinion and mobilize all strength to bring these old cases to the forefront once more, to the end that those who have suffered these long and bitter years of unjustified imprisonment shall be free to rejoin the labor movement, for the fight in whose interests they are being persecuted.

To these old prisoners in particular the conference sends its pledge of incessant labor for their speedy release from the living tombs of American capitalism.

Resolution on Debs.

WHEREAS: Comrade Eugene V Debs, a member of the National Committee of International Labor Defense, has been, and now is suffering a painful physical disorder depriving him of association and active helpfulness with his many co-adjutants thruout America—therefore be it resolved:

THAT International Labor Defense in session in Chicago, September 5, 1926, sends to him their heartfelt sympathy and cordial greetings with their best wishes and hopes for an early recovery.

Striking October "Workers' Monthly"

THE October issue of The Workers' Monthly strikes one as not only being one of the best issues of this monthly in the inauguration of a new department: "With Marx and Engels." As the editor correctly points out a knowledge of the actual writings of Marx and Engels is indispensable to the understanding of the fundamentals of Marxism and Leninism that must serve as the basis for the effective functioning of the revolutionary working class movement. And so, since comparatively little of tha total writings of Marx and Engels are available in English" a department in The Workers Monthly in which there will be published regularly articles, letters, etc., of Marx and Engels that are unavailable or practically inaccessible is certainly a highly valuable feature. This department of the monthly is under the direction of Comrade Avram Landy, a careful student of Marx. The October issue contains two striking articles—one by Engels "On the Principle of Authority," discussing the question of force and the state, and one by Marx "On Political Indifference," a scathing reply to tha anti-politicelists and anti-everything-else anarchists. The value of these articles was pointed out by Lenin in his State and Revolution and American readers will certainly be glad to get them verbatim.

Prospects of Europe.

ANOTHER new feature in tha issue is the first of a series of general informative articles on the present situations in a number of European countries. The first one in this issue deals with Yugoslavia and is written by Charles Wesley.

This issue is also remarkable for its reviews. Besides a full review on Will Durant's book, the "Story of Philosophy" there is a review of Bishop Brown's new book "My Heresy" by C. E. Ruthenberg, one of Pepper's pamphlets on the "British General Strike" by Bert Wolfe, a review of Upton Sinclair's latest, "The Spokeman's Secretary" and of a very interesting book "The Mind of the Negro as Reflected in Letters Written Duriag the Crisis of 1800-1860."

Range of Articles.

It is impossible to discuss the contents of this issue adequately in this brief review. A study of the American foreign debt situation ("Uncle Shylock" by Maurice Mendelsohn), which is followed by a discussion of the tendencies of socialist reconstruction in the Soviet Union ("Is Russia Going Back to Capitalism?" by Max Bedacht). The Philippine question, so prominent now, receives a theoretical treatment in two articles ("The Crisis in Philippine Independence" by Manuel Gomez and "Rubber and the Bacon Bill" by Ella O. Wolfe). A detailed article on the British Minority Movement ("The Third Conference of the British Minority Movement" by Earl Browder and Hams Strum) is of special interest now in view of the recent Trade Union Congress. Ella Reeve Bloor in his article "American Dollar Oligtozes and their Windmills" answers the absurd attacks of the S. L. P. on the Comintern and the Workers (Communist) Party and brings out a number of highly important points. An analysis of the situation of the Communist movement in Hungary in the light of the Rakosi trial ("The Rakosi Trial" by John Kiss) completes this issue, certainly one of the fullest and most satisfactory in a long time.

The Workers Monthly has grown indispensable not only for every Communist but for every advanced and intelligent worker who wants to keep informed on the most important subjects—theoretical and practical—for the American workers.

Send Every Penny Collected By Monday to Keep the Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The next three days will be a test of what our party is made of.

The party faces the task of keeping the revolutionary struggle in the most important organ—The DAILY WORKER.

It must, therefore energetically act, raise a total of $5,000 and have this amount in The DAILY WORKER office by Monday, October 11. This is the balance needed on Thursday night to complete the $5,000 needed to pull The DAILY WORKER thru the immediate crisis in which it finds itself.

The amount received toward the $5,000 which the party must raise during the present week and complete by October 11, now stands as follows:

Monday, October 4 ..... $188.00
Tuesday, October 5 ..... $74.00
Wednesday, October 6 ..... $60.00
Thursday, October 7 ..... $60.00
Total ..... $1,387.00

Our party can meet this emergency and raise the $5,000 still needed immediately if it harnesses the energy latent in the party membership. TEN THOUSAND PARTY MEMBERS TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CAN EASILY RAISE $5,000 BY MONDAY. THEY CAN DRIVE THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND TO THE $10,000 MARK BY FRIDAY, OCT. 15.

The Ford Factory Nucleus has shown the party what can be done by sending $188.00. The Lettish Fraction in Boston has made an equally good showing by sending $100.

The Street Nucleus at Luzerne, Pa., an anthracite miners' nucleus with not more than 25 members, has shown the spirit which must be developed in the whole party membership by raising and sending in $100.00.

Our party needs a test of its metal. It needs to have awakened a new spirit of energetic struggle. The danger in which The DAILY WORKER finds itself is a spur to mobilize the whole strength of the party in a struggle which is of the greatest importance to our whole movement.

Let every unit of the party throw itself into the work of activizing its whole membership. Let us mobilize every ounce of strength and ability to carry on work that exists among our ten thousand party members.

WORK IN THIS SPIRIT WILL ACHIEVE THE GOAL WE MUST REACH IN RAISING THE FUNDS TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

IT WILL BRING CONTRIBUTIONS THAT WILL POUR INTO THE DAILY WORKER OFFICE AT A RATE WHICH WILL PRODUCE THE REMAINING $2,500 OF THE URGENTLY NEEDED $5,000 BY MONDAY. IT WILL RAISE THE BALANCE NECESSARY TO MAKE THE DAILY WORKER FUND $10,000 B YOCTOBER 15. IT WILL COMPLETE THE $50,000 DAILY WORKER FUND BY THE END OF THE YEAR.

To work for the DAILY WORKER and the revolutionary workers movement it represents!

Awaken the spirit of struggle and fight!

Every member into the campaign to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

Write a record of achievement for the Party in the aid sent the DAILY WORKER by Monday.

EDDY'S SPEECH ROCKS A. F. OF L. MEET

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE New York Times is the best capitalist newspaper in the United States. And in its issue of October 2, it wastes two columns trying to prove that England is anxious to see Italy, France and Germany in a united front to preserve peace in Europe. It is awfully hard for us to keep on telling you that this is all bunk. But for heaven's sake tell everybody you meet, or at least everybody you are on speaking terms with, that England is as sore as a boil over the Franco-German entente and that the conference between Chamberlain and Mussolini was directed against France.

• • • •

HOW glad we would be if we could announce the fact that capitalist governments were conscientiously striving to avoid war. But we cannot do it. For the very good reason that capitalism can no more avoid war than a dope fiend can avoid taking a shot from the needle. The dope fiend would like nothing better than to develop a hunger for breakfast food instead of morphine, but, alas, he can't learn it, the temptation is too keen. The analogy is not perfect, however. The capitalists do not want war because they enjoy the spectacle of seeing guts hanging on wire entanglements. But when it comes to the point where the ruling class of England or the ruling class of some other country must give way, what of it if a few million human bodies are sacrificed?

• • • •

AT the present time we have a drive on to keep The DAILY WORKER. It is a serious matter, but many of our readers feel that a workingclass paper is always in a crisis, but that somehow or other a miracle happens and it does not go under. Now, I have not been asked to incite our readers to send in their contributions to save The DAILY WORKER, but incitement is not necessary after reading the capitalist press every day, on Italy, France, Germany, England and particularly Russia. Do you care to be fed on lies or on the truth?

• • • •

TALKING to an employe of a capitalist newspaper a few days ago, I admitted quite frankly that our paper was not impartial. We print all the news, that is fit to be printed for the benefit of the workingclass. The capitalist papers will do the opposite. They cannot help it. They are class-conscious. They are for the capitalist system and the capitalists are for them. The Chicago Tribune may disagree with the News as to the respective merits of Captain Savage, state's attorney Crowe's man, or Judge Jarecki, democrat, for county judge. But in a real crisis both will line up against the workers.

• • • •

YOU have been told this for generations. And it will be told for generations more. It will be told until the American workingclass rises to the level of the heap'ers they be long. There are people, many of them radicals, tired—who scoff at our exhortations. They say it is no use, that the masses are fools, selfish and many other things. Well, what of it? A man does not believe in his policy, even tho the whole world be against him is not worth his weight in dung. The idealist cares nothing for practical politics because "practical politics" are never practical. Certainly not for the oppressed.

• • • •

WHAT is life worth living for anyhow if not for a cause?. You may have money and commit suicide as many people do, or you may have money and spend your life flitting around the cabarets and night clubs of Broadway, New York. ## HOOSIER POLS FACE THE CAN OVER KLAN MESS

Govérnor Jackson Is in Up to His Ears

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., October 8.—Grand jury investigation of the charges of corruption made by Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, against state government officials and K. K. K. leaders, was intimated today in a statement issued by Arthur L. Gilliom, attorney-general of Indiana.

The attorney-general, while not committing himself on the charges, declared that they could not be ignored and were a challenge to honor and decency.

Might Bury Evidence.

Prosecutor Will H. Remy, called for evidence with a view to conducting a grand jury investigation of the charges that have rocked Indiana. Adams is anxious that his story should be given to the public, lest it be buried in a pigeon hole by a klan-controlled jury. Tho Remy prosecuted D. C. Stephenson, the klan leader now serving a life sentence for rape followed by the death of his victim, there is a suspicion that he is a member of the klan wing that is now bent on keeping the ex-dragon in jail.

In all probability the governor will be compelled to let Stephenson out of jail long enough to spill the beans on the klan before a grand jury. Stephenson is now trying to save his neck and he does not care how many other heads fall in the process.

Governor Is Worried.

Governor Edward Jackson who was supported for office by Stephenson is now trying to keep the condemned murderer in jail, lest he might open his head too wide and tie a political tin can on the governor and on several others. In fact, if the present disturbance is nothing more than a political maneuver on the part of the "outs,"

BRITISH MINERS TO PULL OUT SAFETY MEN

Strikers to Battle Thru to Victory

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Fear that the protracted strike may become even more acute, and may drag out for at least another two months was expressed in government circles today as the miners' conference reassembled and began drawing up plans for withdrawing the safety men from the mines.

This action follows the sweeping majority polled against the government's peace plan providing for settlement of the coal dispute by districts. The miners' federation claims to control 85 per cent of the safety men.

Plans are under consideration for a still more rigid rationing of householders and industries, while endeavors are being made to send in scabs to prevent a flooding of the pits in case the safety men are withdrawn.

TORIES WILL FRAME LAWS TO CRUSH UNIONS

Proposed Legislation Would Protect Scabs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Prime Minister Baldwin, the kindly "impartial" gentleman who claims to be equally just to miners and mine owners, threw off his Little Red Riding Hood cloak and appeared as the lion of British capitalism, even if a somewhat attenuated edition of the old men eater, at a meeting of the conservative party, when he announced that the government was prepared to introduce legislation curbing the power of the trade unions.

Baldwin Praised.

Baldwin's speech followed the passage of a resolution at the tory convention calling for law to take the teeth out of trade unionism. Baldwin was praised for his work, but mildly criticized for not showing more decision in dealing with labor.

The anti-labor resolution demanded immediate legislation to make illegal any strike without a secret ballot of the membership, to increase the security of scabs, to make picketing illegal and to compel trade unions to submit their accounts to government inspectors.

The coal owners are the heaviest contributors to the tory party's campaign chest.

Mexican Catholics Fined.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8.—A dozen catholic men and women were fined here by the police magistrate charged with holding a religious meeting contrary to law. They were fined from 20 to 50 pesos.

THREE NEGROES SHOT TO DEATH BY MOB AFTER "NOT GUILTY" VERDICT

AIKEN, S. C., Oct. 8.—Three Negroes, two men and a women, were taken from the county jail here today and shot to death by a mob of 400 men.

The lynching followed a verdict of not guilty returned yesterday against Demen Loman, 21, held on a murder charge. The three Negroes slain were Bertha Loman, 26, wife of Demen Loman, and his brother, Clyde Loman, 18.

While the mob was storming the jail, Jailor W. H. Taylor called Sheriff Charles Robinson, but when the latter arrived Taylor had been locked in a cell. Robinson also was overpowered and locked up.

The mob hustled the woman and the man to a patch of woods three miles south of the city where they shot them to death.

FIGHT TO LOWER BAIL ON FRAMED MILL STRIKERS

Bond Still Held at $350,000

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 8.—John Larkin Hughes, attorney for the textile strikers of Local 1603, United Textile Workers of America, has been granted a hearing before Judge Joseph J. Delaney of the Passaic County Court of Common Pleas, on the question of reducing the $350,000 bail on which five strikers, four of them members of the union, are being held in jail in Paterson. These five men, and one other held without bail, are charged with being implicated in a series of fake bombings which took place in September.

Mr. Hughes obtained a writ of habeas corpus shortly after the men were arrested about two weeks ago, but Justice Charles C. Black refused to lower the bail at a hearing last Saturday, and referred the matter to Judge Delaney.

Are Framed-Up!

Being convinced that these bombings were framed-up to help break the strike and discredit the newly formed Local 1603, the union is making every effort thru its attorneys, Henry Hont, Joseph Brodsky, Sigmond Unger, Passaic lawyer and Mr. Hughes, who was obtained for the union by the American Civil Liberties Union, to obtain the release of these men as soon as the bail is lowered. It stands now at the prohibitive figure of $100,000 on one man and $75,000 on three others. Charles Cerrent, not a member of the union, is held on $25,000.

Five More.

Mr. Brodsky is working on raising bail for five more men held in Hackensack on $80,000. Four of these men are enrolled as members of the union. The fifth, Paul Kovacs, is not a striker, altho his wife is. Mr. Brodsky said today that he hoped to have some of the men, at least, out by the end of the week.

U. S. Cotton Crop.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Based on a condition of 61.3 per cent of normal on October 1, the United States will have a cotton crop this year of 16,637,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight, the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture announced today. Production last year amounted to 16,103,679 bales.

Another Muscle Shoals Offer Will Soon Be Made to Government

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — A new offer for leasing the government's Muscle Shoals project will be submitted to congress next Fall by a group of New York capitalists and engineers, it was announced here today by C. Bascom Slemp, former secretary to the president.

The proposal, to be known as the farmers' federated offer, will involve a financial investment by the group of from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000, Slemp said. He added that the proposal would involve a better financial return to the government than any of those heretofore submitted by Ford and other capitalists and likewise a larger guarantee of nitrate production for the manufacture of fertilizer.

NEGROES MUST BE ORGANIZED SAYS RANDOLPH

Pullman Porters' Union Is Growing Fast

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 8.— A. Philip Randolph, organizer for the colored Pullman porters, spoke here recently on organization to a large audience at the big Zion Baptist church, colored.

"The Pullman porters are entitled to real wages," Randolph said. Their work is as much social work as any other. They do not want to be beggars and dependent for their living on the tips that are handed to them by travelers. The Pullman porters must be unionized just as well as all the other workers on the railroads and if there were a strong union of Pullman porters it would strengthen immeasurably the railroad brotherhoods and all the unions of the railways.

"The white workers look upon the colored workers largely as scabs, and this is due naturally to the fact that since the Negro workers are unorganized they are wanted in times of strikes, as involuntary strike-breakers.

White and Black Must Join.

"The white workers sooner or later will be forced to the realization that there can be no real organization in this country while the Negro worker remains on the outside and unorganized. It will be shown that for the benefit of workers white and colored that they must support this move-

CHALLENGES A. F. OF L. TO SEND DELEGATION TO SEE FOR ITSELF THAT LABOR RULES SOVIET UNION

BULLETIN.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 8.—Delegates to the American Federation of Labor here received an expurgated edition of the daily proceedings from which the speech of Sherwood Eddy on the Union of Soviet Republics, delivered yesterday, had been entirely omitted. There were merely fourteen lines stating that President William Green had presented Eddy to the convention and that he "gave information in regard to conditions as he saw them in Russia, France, Germany and England, during a visit to those countries last summer."

There were seven blank pages at the end of the thirty-two page pamphlet containing Thursday's proceedings, looking as if some censor's hand had been at work after the fashion of press suppression practiced in the old world autocracies.

The report did not even mention President Green's weak reply to Eddy. This is looked upon as an effort by President Green to meet the attack of the die-hard reactionaries here who are highly incensed ever the fact first, that Eddy was given the platform at all, and second, because Green did not make a more effective reply to the defense by Eddy of the Soviet Union.

The rest of the day's proceedings was carried in full including four and a half pages given an innocuous speech on education by Spencer Millar, Junior, secretary of the Workers' Education Bureau.

The Detroit Free Press, organ of the local open shoppers, that has ordered the American Federation of Labor to stay out of the automobile industry, is carrying scare headlines approving of the anti-Soviet policy of the A. F. of L.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 8.—The Union of Soviet Republics has invaded the convention hall here of the American Federation of Labor on the lips of an American speaker, Sherwood Eddy, International Secretary for Asia of the Young Men's Christian Association.

There was no plea for Soviet recognition. President William Green had stipulated that Eddy be silent on this subject. But the dam that Green erected against the question of recognition caused the Soviet invasion to break thru at another point, in the stirring plea that Eddy made instead to the A. F. of L. delegates themselves to send a trade union delegation to the Soviet Union to get the truth about conditions in the First Workers' Republic.

Go and See for Yourselves.

It seems that Green had had no agreement with Eddy about mentioning the trade union delegation. The plea by Eddy came naturally at the end of an address in which Eddy had pointed out that he merely went into the Soviet Union with a fact-finding commission of editors, social workers, lawyers, doctors and business men, to actually study the conditions there.

"Why don't you go and see for yourselves and find out the facts for yourselves?" asked Eddy. "The trade unionists of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany have all sent their delegations. Why don't you?

Other Nations' Labor Unions Visit U. S. S. R.

"One day we went to see the collection of the jewels of the deposed czardom," he continued. "We had to wait for the German trade union delegation that was just ahead of us. Why do you run on second hand propaganda? Instead of working on suspicion and false propaganda, get down to bedrock facts. You owe it to yourselves to do this. You are conservative but you're moving. I hope you'll move fast. I believe in the truth for nothing else will prevail."

Sharwood Eddy, who is a small capitalist in his own way, and went to the Soviet Union paying his own expenses and in no official capacity, possesses all the usual capitalist horror of the capitalist at the proletarian dictatorship established by the Russian workers and peasants, he doesn't like the abridgment of speech for capitalist agencies in the Soviet Union, and he is aghast at the materialist teachings of Communism, and he worries about

CRAFT LINES BAR TO AUTO UNION DRIVE

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 8.—Refusing to face the craft jurisdiction problems that stare the American Federation of Labor in the face, as it attempts to organize the auto industry, the convention here adopted an innocuous resolution merely instructing Pres. William Green to call a conference of the officials of national and international unions interested in the unionization of the nation's automobile plants.

Craft Jurisdiction Obstacle.

The organization committee, headed by Delegates Frank Duffy, carpenters, and Sarah Conboy, textile workers, brought in an amendment to the resolution introduced by President James O'Connell, of the Metal Trades Department, providing that the question of jurisdiction be suspended for the time being. The original resolution specifically provided that the

CASH ...FIGHT ON DISTRICT 5

Pittsburgh Coal Co. In War on U. M. W. of A.

By ART SHIELDS, Federated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 7.—Some of the richest men in the world are supporting the war on the coal miners' union in the western Pennsylvania or Pittsburgh district, No. 5, United Mine Workers of America. The Mellon brothers of Pittsburgh Coal and Rockefeller and Grace of Bethlehem mines are backing the volley of contract violations by their operating managers.

Force and Violence.

It is a hard-boiled drive to smash the union in this key outpost district of the central competitive field. Gunmen, Burns' detectives, renegade union leaders dreaming up scabs for operators; take dust unions; steel wire fencing; searchlights; company-owned sheriffs and courts are among the weapons. And there is another, most serious of all—the cheap scab coal from West Virginia and the non-union fields of southwestern Pennsylvania.

Jacksonville "Peace" Start of War.

Signing of the supposed peace treaty at Jacksonville really marked the start of a more intense war. The talk on the contracts had hardly died in April, 1924, when the above-named operators and others began making preparations to pull out. Knowing that while fallow operators in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois were observing the agreement the union was barred from using the national strike weapon the double-crossers went ahead with their treachery.

As a first step they shut down their mines thru 1924 to starve the workers. If possible, into a submissive mood. Then in late 1924 and early 1925 they began reopening on the March 1917 scale with its $6 per cent cuts—and no checkweighman on the tipple.

Renegade Official and Fake Unions.

In the strikes that followed Pittsburgh Coal used E. C. McCullough, renegade former international union vice-president, as a labor scout to breach company good will to prosperous strikebreakers. Also a pseudo independent union, the federated miners' union, was created by the company with the assistance of Bill Harris, former president of the West Virginia Federation of Labor. But this paper organization blew up in a few months.

Local strikes called by the United Mine Workers did not, of course, prevent non-union coal from seeping in from the outside, but they also allowed up local production and subsidized the companies to great expense. In 1925 Pittsburgh Coal passed dividends on common stock and its securities generally fell many points. At the end of two years' warfare it had not put one-third of its 51 district mines into operation.

Mellon Seeks Open Shop.

But Pittsburgh Coal has financial affiliations that help it get by. The Mellons are heavy stockholders in it, more than a score of big corporations and other investors have large outside holdings.

The union cannot stand alone. Without abundant outside aid it will not have the resources to long continue striking against imported coal and imported strikebreakers and starvation. Already half its more than 40,000 members have been swept away.

A terrible Fall and Winter must ensue before the Jacksonville agreement terminates and a more hopeful fight can be made. The district union has appealed to the Pittsburgh central labor union and to the state federation for succor and every good union man in whatever trade must come to the rescue if this basic union is not to go the open shop way of the Pittsburgh steel mills.

Vesta Prepares for War in Union.

Not all the Pittsburgh companies are nonstrike breakers. The union still has agreements with Vesta Coal Co., a subsidiary of the Jones & Laughlin steel mills and with Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation and a string of smaller concerns. Vesta No. 4, one of the four Vesta operating mines, has 1,400 miners working steadily.

But the Vesta company is now opening a still larger mine, in non-union Greene county, to the south. A thousand company houses are being laid out. A giant steel tipple next spring will be dumping coal onto Monongahela River barges.

Will it be union coal? The answer probably depends on the general strength the organization shows next year.

10 Hurt in Wreck.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Two persons were seriously injured and eight more slightly hurt when two coaches of a Pennsylvania passenger train were derailed at Black Creek, four miles north of Cuba, in Cattaraugus county, today.

A broken rail caused the wreck.

CHALLENGES A. F. OF L. LABOR TO SEND DELEGATION TO SEE FOR ITSELF THAT LABOR RULES SOVIET UNION

the Communist Party being the lone party in the Soviet Union. But outside of this he seems to view conditions within the Soviet Union with pretty much of an unprejudiced eye.

Not Like Detroit "Y".

President Green had presented Eddy to the delegates as a "real representative of the Young Men's Christian Association," contrasting him with the treatment dealt A. F. of L. speakers by the Detroit Y. M. C. A. and local churches.

"We are going to show him that the A. F. of L. provides a real opportunity for the exercise of free speech," said Green. "Some of the delegates know him intimately and well. I know him only by reputation, that he is a man of vision, that his mind does not run parallel with those who run the Detroit Y. M. C. A. Freedom of speech is a fundamental principle with the A. F. of L. We are willing to listen to what others have to say."

Save Your Applause.

With this introduction Eddy stepped on the platform smiling, while the delegates applauded rather vociferously.

"Save your applause until I am thru," said Eddy. "Perhaps you won't applaud then."

Eddy got into the good graces of the delegates by declaring that he stood for the rights of organized labor, that he was for the American Federation of Labor and collective bargaining.

Capitalist Nations Dying.

Then he told of visits to Great Britain, France and Germany, declaring that "the millstone of death was hanging about the neck of the nations of Europe. He told of the growing parasitysis in five of the great industries of Great Britain and concerning Germany asked:

"How long will Germany be content to remain the sweatshop of Europe?"

Investigation Not Controlled.

Then Eddy's party went to Russia where, Eddy said, "We went where we liked and saw what we liked," interviewing both friend and foe alike of the Soviet government.

"Regarding what I have to say, you can take it or leave it, just as you like," was Eddy's challenge to the delegates.

"Regarding the nationalization of women," he went on. "That's a lie. Not a single woman's body has been nationalized," and he referred to John Bromley, member of the British trade union delegation, now fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. delegation to support him.

The big thing that he admired, he said, was a whole nation rising above private profit to public service in one of the greatest time in human history. He declared that in the Soviet Union the profiteer is accounted a moral leper.

He then told how the Soviet government had inherited wreck and ruin, claiming that there was still a "basic poverty" in the Soviet Union. Then he snapped out, quick and emphatic

"But they are coming up!"

He then told of the recovery of industry and agriculture, pointing out that it would equal the pre-war maximum.

A Labor Government.

"There is nothing outside of Russia that can prevent the success of the Russian experiment," he said. "The Soviet government has come to stay. It is stronger today than ever. Here is a labor government that says no man shall exploit his fellow man. There is no lynching there, no race prejudice, an absolute equality of all races and nationalities, the first labor government trying to work out this colossal plan on a vast scale, the Soviet Union covering one-sixth of the land surface of the earth.

"I am glad to see one country determined to try out this new experiment. They have been cruelly unjust to the super-one-tenth. But they have given freedom to the lower nine-tenths. The Russian workers and country feel that it is their country and they know it.

"There are fewer murders and crimes in Moscow and Leningrad than there are in Chicago and New York City," he continued, adding, "But, of course, that isn't saying very much," as the delegates laughed.

Unions More Powerful Then Elsewhere.

Then came a bitter pill for the anti-Soviet propagandists within the American Federation of Labor as Eddy continued:

"There is no country in the world today where the trade unions have such an influence and power," he said. "There is no country where workers are so well organized. There are 5,700,000 workers in the trade unions, double the number in the powerful British trade union movement. There are 11,000,000 members of the big cooperators' co-operatives. There are 7,500,000 members of the farmers' co-operatives.

No Country Does So Much for Workers.

"There is no country in the world where so much is done for the workers," he said, pointing out the workings of old age, sickness and disability insurance, of the care given child-bearing mothers and their offspring, reciting the fact that child labor is not permitted.

"I never saw a country so energetically protecting childhood, womanhood and old age," he said.

"I am also glad to have one country stand against ruthless imperialism, against ruthless militarism," he continued, pointing out the position taken by the Soviet Union toward China.

He then urged that the Soviet Union be brought into the circle of the other nations of the world, altho he did not mention Soviet recognition, slipping instead to his plea that the A. F. of L. send a delegation to Russia.

Applauded at End!

When Eddy ceased he was applauded just as vigorously as when he started, if not a little more. Several delegates started to rise as a tribute to the speaker but the movement did not become general. Then President Green rose to reply.

"We have profitted by the information that Dr. Eddy has given us this afternoon," said Green. "We have profitted by the facts he has submitted to us. He told us what we believe, that the Communist Party is ruling with an iron hand little less than the czar used in his day (a little applause). You heard what Dr. Eddy said about the Red International being organized in 52 different nations. We have known that all the time."

Money Wage Not Everything.

Eddy had claimed that the average wage in the Soviet Union was $1 per day, adding, however, that the workers enjoyed many privileges that made the real wage much higher.

Seeking to capitalize this statement by Eddy, wa find Green in spread eagle style, shouting, "How would you like to keep your family on less than $1 per day?" but the effort didn't get very far.

Convention Will Decide.

"Dr. Eddy suggests that we send a mission to Russia," continued Green. "That is for the American Federation of Labor to decide. The convention itself will decide that," and his reply wilted to a close as he slammed the gavel on the table and not a single delegate applauded him. Then the convention session adjourned, leaving the impression created by Eddy clear in their minds. Many of them left the convention hall discussing the effect of Eddy's speech and his coming before the convention.

Some felt the incident marked a new turning point in the attitude of the A. F. of L. toward the Soviet Union. Green will no doubt be severely criticised by the ultra-reactionaries for ever permitting Eddy to address the gathering. He can either bow to this criticism or fight it. This is the same reactionary root that is demanding a more outspoken position against Mexico in its struggle with the catholic church.

What Will Green Do?

If Green completely surrenders, the basis will be established for the building of a labor opposition, if Green goes to blows with the worst reaction within the A. F. of L., something that Gompers never permitted himself to do, then the reaction will organize to unseat Green and replace him with somebody more in harmony with its views. The issues arising out of the elimination of Green as president can also help but build the basis for an opposition to the reaction.

Thus the address by Sherwood Eddy, and the conditions under which it was made, has created a new history for the American Federation of Labor.

For Better Local Affiliation.

There was a long clash between international officials and city and state officials over the question of forcing local unions to affiliate with city and state central labor bodies.

Frank Duffy, secretary of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, who heads the organization committee, defended the international unions, claiming the city central bodies were rejecting the affiliations of local unions.

City Central Refuses Locals.

He cited the Indianapolis central labor body that had refused affiliation to the printers, carpenters, garment workers and painters.

The convention also instructed the executive council to continue to aid the Free Federation of Workingmen of Porto Rico to organize the workers of the island and help the workers of the island free themselves from the political and industrial tyrants who rule that island. Delegate Santiago Iglesias stated the case of the islanders to the committee and the resolution was unanimously adopted.

Important Matters Pending.

It was announced that this was merely a partial report of the committee. It still has under consideration the general resolution for the organization of the unorganized, and also the demand for organization of the auto industry, brought in by the metal trades department.

conference seek to eliminate all questions of jurisdiction. President O'Connell, however, agreed to the charges and there was no opposition to the charges.

"I support th resolution of the committee," declared O'Connell, in getting the floor.

He then reviewed the importance of the auto industry, claiming it to be the third largest in the United States employing 1,000,000 workers, not including affiliated activities to the auto industry.

An Open Shop Fortress.

"The industry has grown by leaps and Bounds," he said. "It has become a dominant factor in the so-called American plan or non-union plan.

"The auto industry is the most specialized industry. All is the most highly developed industry leading toward mass production. Its employes are mere atoms in the production of automobiles, mere specialists in the narrowest sense of the term. The workers are hired to do one particular thing, regardless of how small that particular thing may be, year in and year out. They are compelled to do one simple operation over and over and over.

Becomes a Nut.

"Imagine the state of mind of a human being who screws nuts on bolts for an entire lifetime, with all possibility of human elevation to any other place in industry blocked. That worker becomes nothing more than a nut, and I don't use that word in an offensive sense.

A Million Workers Wait Union Drive.

"It requires the strength, power and influence of this body to approach this problem. The question of the kind of organization to adopt can be decided after careful consideration We must proceed so that the work done in this industry may be given some hope in the future. I hope that the next convention will be pleased to have us report at least a start in the work that are being made and work being done to organize the million workers in the industry."

Delegate E. S. McCullough, printers' union, attacked the head of the American Plan Commission of Detroit, who had stated in an interview given out in New York, that the organization of the auto workers union was "economically unsound." He declared that Judge Elbert H. Gary had made the same statement about the reduction of the working day from 12 to 8 hours in the steel industry. "This American planner is no more abreast of the times than Gary was," declared McCullough.

Why Not Industrial Organization?

No delegate arose to offer any suggestions as to how to organize the auto industry. No one urged an all-inclusive union for all auto workers in the place of the many conflicting craft unions.

In the discussion of the three resolutions for the "organization of the unorganized," however, Delegate Andrew Furuseth, of the Seamen's Union, had reviewed the workings of the American plan, declaring it was just the modern version of the attempt of feudal lords, 700 years before America was discovered, to destroy the guilds of that time and promote serfdom on the land.

Yours to Asleep!

"The American plan advocates are doing that very same thing now," said Furuseth, "and you are asleep while it is being done."

Delegate Furuseth offered an amendment to the substitute resolution of the organization committee, that the executive council provide forms, briefs for general distribution thruout the country to warn the people against what is now being done."

Delegate Furuseth sat down, quite dejected, declaring, "There is no use to od." This aroused several delegates to exclaim, "I'll second that," but President Green stated that the committee substitute for the resolutions offered included Furuseth's recommendation, so the amendment was withdrawn. The committee offering, containing pious wishes for the organization of the unorganized, carried unanimously.

The convention voted against prison-made brooms thru support given a resolution on this subject offered by the Broom and Whisk Makers' Union.

Freiheit—Another Revolutionary Weapon

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,

General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The appearance of the Chicago edition of the Freiheit adds another weapon to the armory of the revolutionary movement in the United States. The Freiheit, as a national organ has won undying glory in the struggles of the workers. In New York it is the leader of a mass movement which looks to it for information and leadership. Without the Freiheit the victories of the left wing, which is struggling to make of the unions fighting organs of the workers, would have been more difficult if not impossible.

With the appearance of the Chicago edition of the Freiheit the Chicago workers will have an organ which will give close attention to their struggles, which will point the way in the fight, and greatly strengthen them in the struggle against both the capitalist bosses and reactionary fight wing bureaucrats. The Freiheit's Chicago edition will help to stir into life and carry forward to victory the movement of those workers in the trade unions, and generally, who are for an uncompromising fight until the capitalists' power is broken and the Workers' and Farmers' Republic reorganizes industry for service to the producers in place of profits for the capitalists.

Hail to the Chicago edition of the Freiheit! May it quickly grow strong in its services to the revolutionary workers!

We greet this fighting comrade of our DAILY WORKER.

We must no longer be afraid to go for and make our just demands. If our demands are worth while, then they are worth fighting for. Let us get together.

The Miserable Tip System.

There are others who will support us in our demands. A union of the colored Pullman porters that can force its demand of living wages to take the place of the miserable tip system that robe a man of self respect, will be a demonstration of what Negroes can do with organization and will be the beginning of a movement of all the colored workers into trade unions. Let the beginning be a 100 per cent organization of the Pullman porters and let us not rest until our demands for wages becomes an accomplished fact in this country."

An announcement was made of the Pasaic film to be shown in Cleveland on Oct. 22 at the Engineers' Auditorium.

Cal to Remain Normal.

It is reported here that Calvin Coolidge is more disturbed over the K. K. K mess in Indianapolis than ever over the slush-fund inundated G. O. P. pastures of Illinois and Pennsylvania. He's afraid it may come out against the klan crookedness here, lest he might be punished by hooded ballots in other states.

The following letter from Mayor Duvall of Indianapolis writtco to Stephenson in March of 1924 in support of Jackson, makes interesting reading. Here it is:

His excellency the grand dragon, realm of Indiana, most wise esteemed ruler.

"I have this day, thru the regular channels, sent the following letter to all klansmen in my province:" the letter reads, e"Klansmen, attention: Remember your solemn oath to obey all edicts, mandates, rulings, and instructions of the imperial wizards. It is the order of the imperial wizard that all klansmen work faithfully for the nomination of our brother klansman, Maj. Jackson.

"'It is very important that we should nominate our esteemed brother, Maj. Jackson, in order that the dalectic and bonds of the invisible empire may rule supreme. Brother Jackson will keep the faith of the K K-Dso.

"'Done by me, the great kligrapp of this province, in this holy klavern, on the weird day of the woeful week, of the dreadful month, of the bloody moon, in the weeping year of the klan (L. V. 1). This 16th day of March, 1924.

"Yours in the sacred unfailing bond, "J. L. DUVALL."

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Ludwig Lore, editor of New York Volkszeitung, German labor daily, was twice shot at but not hit by a man who appeared to be demented.

He demanded $2,500 from Lore and wrote a threatening letter. After his second visit to Lore's office and attempt to shoot the editor ha was arrested and held on $20,000 bail.

A lawyer appeared for him and said that they had much dam to present on the case

THE DAILY WORKER is almost ready to give up the ghost. But in all probability it will not. If it does, another daily will rise on its ashes. The workingclass movement cannot be kept down. It is in line with avolution that the present system should give way to one that is more conducive to the best interests of the majority of the population. It is no accident that we had feudalism, and capitalism. Yes, and other systems before those.

THERE are some superficially wise intellectuals, writing books today, who try to make people believe that nothing ever changes. That there ware always rich and poor. That there is nothing to the revolutionary movement and the desire of certain leaders to get on top. We say to those vendors of literary shoddy that they are digging their own literary graves, if they do not recognize the outstanding feature of modern society. It is this: The old order is changing. To be more explicit, the capitalist system is on the decline The workingclass are coming into their own, History is ripe for the change and so are the workers.

THEREFORE if you are of the high spirited class that delights in bouncing gods out of their niches, chip in for THE DAILY WORKER. If you are a clodhopper who does not care how the gods shuffle you about, ignore this plea and keep on reading the mental fodder that the capitalist press ladles out to you.

START GA... TO HELP NEGRO WOMEN'S STRIKE

Strikers Get Credentials From C. F. of L.

A campaign to raise strike funds for the Negro women, employed as date stuffers at the Marsh company factory, who have been on strike since last Saturday, is under way in Chicago.

Credentials to solicit funds from local unions will be given the strikers Monday by the Federation of Labor, it is announced. The Federation also will urge support of tha strike in its Saturday and Sunday radio program.

A campaign to raise strike funds for the women, who on account of the low wages they were paid while working, and the fact that they have been on strike for a week, are almost destitute, is being conducted by the I. W. A.

Committtsan For Funds.

Some 15 committees have been formed to solicit funds from the workers in the city who are sympathetic with the strikers. Ranks of the strikers have grown daily. Organization is the goal of the women.

Two of the strikers who were arrested for picketing were released from jail after bond was furnished by the International Labor Defense. The woman demanded a jury trial on the charge of disorderly conduct. Tha date of the trial has not yet been set.

RESIDENTS FLEE ILLINOIS TOWN AS LEVEE BREAKS

Maddened River Rushes Thru Village Streets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LEWISTOWN, Ill., Oct. 8.—Residents were routed from their homes yesterday at Liverpool, a village near here, when the east levee gave way before the maddened Illinois River. The flood rushed into the village streets, now under 18 inches of water, and covered hundreds of acres of corn in fields nearby.

The other levees may break at any moment, and a general exodus from the village is in progress.

Petersburg, in Mason county, is located by bluffs rivers, and homeless there now number 75. Train trafic thru the city is at a standstill.

Hunger Stalks Flood District in Illinois

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Oct. 8.—Hunger today added its share to the misery of flood swept Beardstown. The relief workers now are the sole support of 40 families, whose all has been swept away by the raging waters of the Illinois river.

Fifteen hundred people are now homeless and the destitute are estimated at 125, who are quartered in tents and in an old hotel taken over by the relief workers.

The river was rising again today and at noon was at a stage of 23.5 feet. A forecast by the U. S. weather bureau at St. Louis states that the river will reach its crest tomorrow night, at a stage of 25.5 feet.

FOSTER SPEAKS IN DETROIT ON TUES., OCT. 12

To Review Convention and the Left Wing

DETROIT, Oct. 8.—The workers of Detroit will have an opportunity to hear a report of the American Federation of Labor Convention from two leaders of the left wing in the American Labor Movement, Tuesday, Oct. 12 at 8 p. m., when Wm. Z. Foster and Ben Gold will address a mass meeting of the Trade Union Educational League at the McKollester Hall, corner Forest and Cass.

Will Review Accomplishments.

In view of Green's bitter attacks against the left wingers and Communists it will be interesting to hear these two leaders of the left wing review some of the recent accomplishments of the left wing in the labor movement.

There will be many important issues at the A. F. of L. Convention that must be treated from the point of view of the left wing. Why is the A. F. of L. still opposed to recognition of Soviet Russia? What are the inner conflicts within the executive council on some of the important political questions facing the labor movement of the country.

Convention in Session.

The A. F. of L. Convention offers a splendid opportunity to bring many of these questions to the attention of the trade unionists of Detroit. Admission of 25 cents will be charged.

RABBI WISE RAPS PASSAIC COURTS FOR STRIKE ACTS

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 8.—The courts are "stacked" against the workers in Passaic, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, told a big meeting of woolen strikers.

The police, for the most part, are controlled by the mills; the United State senators are "representatives" not of the people of the state, but of the mill owners."

Deep Breach of Faith.

There has been a "deep breach of faith on the part of the mill owners," he declared, quelling attention to the companies' original reason not to treat with the workers because they were led by "radicals." Now that the strikers are led by the conservative United Textile Workers, affiliated with the A. F. of L., the mill owners would deal with the union if they had been sincere from the beginning.

Going to Detroit.

The rabbi said he was leaving for Detroit to make a personal report to the heads of the A. F. of L. He urged the workers to "battle on," saying they had obtained the sympathy even of persons ordinarily little interested in the cause of labor.

PROGRESSIVE OFFICIALS URGE UTAH FEDERATION CONVENTION TO ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED

SALT LAKE CITY. (By Mail)—The State Federation of Labor has just ended its annual convention which was held at the Labor Temple in Salt Lake with, as the capitalist press was happy to report, "a notable absence of 'red' and 'radical' resolutions.

Two Progressive Officials.

C. L. Speigal of Salt Lake City was elected president and F. G. West re-elected secretary-treasurer. Con D. Silva of Ogden was re-elected first vice-president.

Speigal and Silva are progressives and there will at least be less clrading against the "reds" and, we trust, more effort directed toward organizing and building up of the labor movement in Utah.

Con D. Silva, probably the most progressive of the delegates present, was, in the absence of the reactionary president Goodmanson, acting chairman of the convention. His report was as first vice-president was the most comprehensive as well as the most progressive report submitted to the convention.

Following are some excerpts from his report:

Organize the Unorganized.

"Every delegate to this convention should upon return to their own unions urge the local unions to become active in interesting all unorganized men and women who work in joining the organization of their craft. And then follow that up by having the craft come into the central body and the state federation. You owe this activity to yourselves as a protection to your wages, to your working day and to general conditions surrounding your working place.

"I regret very much that the American Federation of Labor has failed to heed the request of the Utah Federation to aid us by sending an organiser into this state. Several similar requests have been sent to the American Federation of Labor by former conventions. I am sure that if an organizer were sent here our membership would double by the next convention. God knows there is plenty of organization work to be done in this state.

Disapproves A. F. of L. Action.

"The officers of the federation regret very much that thru the action of the A. F. of L. we have lost the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. I hope that the convention will go on record as favoring such action by the American Federation of Labor as will settle this controversy on such a basis as will again give us the affiliation of this splendid body of working men and women."

Closer Relations with Farmers.

The following recommendation of Silva's was endorsed end e committee appointed:

"I would recommend that the state federation and the local assemblies make e point of cultivating closer relations with farm labor as organized in the Farm Bureaus. Not only should we extend our campaign in behalf of the union label to the farmer's but we should urge cooperation in all lines. We should have a committee from the federation and assemblies to act as fraternal delegates to the Farm Bureaus and to keep them in touch with our activities. We should ask Farm Bureaus to send fraternal delegates to meet with us.

Condemns Company Union.

"Let us not forget the menace of the company controlled union. That is one thing organized labor must fight with all its power. It is one of the worst forms of wage slavery. These company unions and the "open shop" are fostered by the Associated Industries which hide their real purposes behind what they hypocritically call the "American Plan." I recommend that delegates urge their unions to give stronger support to the "Labor Bulletin." That is the most effective means of fighting the company unions and the Associated Industries.

Labor Party?

I cannot close this report without calling to mind one incident of our dip into PRACTICAL politics two years ago. In Weber County all the labor, progressive and radical elements combined in supporting the democratic candidates for the legislature. They had pledged themselves to support the child labor amendment. They were elected. They accepted the votes of the progressives, the farm labor, the socialists, the Trades and Labor Assembly, the brotherhoods, the W. C. T. U. on the pledge to vote for the amendment. But when the test came three of them voted AGAINST the amendment and the fourth was conveniently absent from the room. THE MORAL IS THAT ONLY LABORING MEN CAN BE TRUSTED TO CARRY OUT A LABORING MAN'S PROGRAM.

Must Organize.

"In conclusion let me say that in contending today it is not for the purpose of seeing how good a time we can have but to consider seriously the problems confronting every organization within our state, and also to devise the best ways and means of bringing into our movement that great army of the unorganized workers. These workers, we say frankly, are being shamefully exploited by many selfish employers who care very little as to the fact that their employes cannot enjoy the proper standards of living. They are responsible for a condition that will tend to create a more dissatisfied population than we now have.

"I am confident that the delegates in this convention realise as I do, not only these conditions but the position in which the labor movement of our state finds itself at this time."

2,000 Involved in N. J. Automobile Walk-out

ELIZABETH, N. J.—(FP)—Mass picketing of the Hays-Hunt plant of the Durant Motor Corp. makes the strike of body workers effective. A mass meeting voted a general walkout in sympathy with the upholsterers and trimmers, who have been on strike two weeks. There are 2,000 workers in the plants involved. The strikers demand recognition of their union, reinstatement of discharged active union workers and recognition of shop committees.

The strike is backed by A. F. of L. organizer Edward McGrady and New Jersey state federation of labor officials. The Flint Motors Corp., leaving its bodies made at the Hays-Hunt plant along with various Durent cars.

WINDOW WASHERS ON STRIKE GAIN MANY MEMBERS

Since the window washers went on strike last Monday, about 50 new members joined Local 34 of the Window Washers' Union, under whose auspices the strike is carried on. Altogether about 450 people are affected by the walk-out. The Ohio Window Cleaning Co., the New York Window Cleaning Co. and the Hearst Bldg. recognized the union demands and signed up.

Police and thuggers are continuing to intimidate the strikers. Steve Ezbarchuk, the business agent of the union, was taken to the police station on Foster Avenue, near Robey Street. He was searched and when nothing incriminating was found, the captain bawled him out and let him go.

Wilfred Mattison, a striker, was arrested for picketing. At the Harrison St. police court he was fined $1 for "disorderly conduct."

The names of a few scabs were obtained by the union. They are: Justine Mesun, of 4418 So. Whipple St.; Julius Aborovitch, of 4833 So. Hamlin Ave., and Mike Pesetsky, of 2015 West Superior St.

In order to make it easier for the window washers who work in office buildings to join the union only $3 initiation fee is charged at present instead of the usual $25. Many are taking advantage of this opportunity and are joining. A meeting of the strikers was held yesterday at 30 N Wells Street.

Porters Refuse to Scab on Window Washers at Rothschild Clothing Co.

When the window washers went on strike at the M. L. Rothschild Clothing Co., cor. State St. and Jackson Blvd., the head porter, John Pafingold, made an attempt to force the porters to scab on the window washers. The porters, altho not organized into a union, flatly refused to do the work of the striking window washers. The head porter was enraged at such a stand of solidarity by the porters, and decided to fire the "ring leaders." But instead of the porters informed Mr. John Pafingold, that if anybody is fired they will all go out.

When the superintendent heard about it, he offered the porters extra pay for the extra work. This was also refused. After questioning if they belong to a union and why they refuse to do the work of the strikers, the superintendent finally let the porters alone.

No porter is scabbing on the window washers in this store.

U. T. W. ISSUES APPEAL FOR FUNDS TO AID WINNING OF PASSAIC STRIKE

The following statement has been issued by Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, and Sara A. Conboy, secretary, in regard to the affiliation of the Passaic strikers with the A. F. of L.:

"To set at rest any misapprehension about the present situation of the great Passaic textile strike, I wish to make it clear that the Passaic strikers have been received into the United Textile Workers of America, and chartered as Local 1603. These strikers are therefore now an integral part of the American Federation of Labor. The action of the executive officers of the United Textile Workers of America in chertering the Passaic Local, received the unanimous approval of our International Convention held in New York City, Sept. 13-18, 1926.

"The convention furthermore directed the general officers to give every support to this strike, and to use their best effort to bring it to a just and succesful conclusion. It further directed that we also call upon all affiliated unions of the American Federation of Labor to rush all possible financial aid to the Passaic strikers.

"Our hope is that this appeal will meet with instant and generous response for the labor movement and all friends of labor thruout the country.

"These ten thousand brave textile workers on strike for over 8 months must know that they are not now deserted, but have found new friends by the millions.

"In recent days, since these strikers have joined the ranks of the regular trade union movement of America, police brutalities have become worse even than before. Our answer to this invasion of the most elementary rights of American workers must be the utmost moral, legal and financial support of the strikers until their right to organize and their right to an American standard of living is recognized.

"Thomas F. McMahon,
International President.
"Sara A. Conboy,
International Sec-Treas.
"United Textile Workers of America."

WILL THE BRITISH MINERS WIN?

It is generally admitted in all circles that if the miners could hold out for two more months—October and November—the mine owners will be compelled to recede from their present arrogant attitude of demanding what amounts to an "unconditional surrender" of the miners.

Little arguing is required to convince one, that the miners will be able to hold out those two months or longer, only if they are kept from starving and freezing. And who will do that? Who will help them if not we, the workers? Under no consideration must we quit now, when the miners need us most. We must continue our work of relief and help them to a victorious ending of their great struggle.

COMPANY UNION REVOLT CHOKED BY RAIL BOARD

Steers Men Into Trap of Arbitration

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—One company union group has "made its point" in a disagreement with a railroad company, while another has failed to gain its first objective after joining an independent union. The records of the U. S. board of mediation in these cases show that a spirit of unrest is moving the workers in the railroad industry to appeal to federal authority for help.

They Won—Arbitration!

On the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis road the company association of clerks demanded a wage increase on the ground that they had none in two years. The company replied that it could not pay more than was paid by the largest company, the Louisville & Nashville. Commissioner Hanger mediated the dispute and secured the signatures of both parties to an agreement on arbitration of the wage demand. Arbitrators have been selected and are now starting work.

Reference to Board.

On the Boston & Maine a wage demand by the company union of shopmen at Boston led to the dismissal of the five members of the committee that called on the management. The shopmen then voted to join the Independent American Federation of Railroad Workers. The union applied to the board of mediation for its services as to the dismissals and the wage issue.

Commissioner Hanger tried to mediate but was met by the company's showing that only 1,000 of its employes had rebelled. It denied any responsibility to set up a separate adjustment board for so small a minority. Hanger persuaded both sides to refer the dispute to the full membership of the board for decision on the general principle of minority groups' right to separate negotiation and adjustment.

First Gun Fired in Drive to Organize N. J. Silk Workers

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 8.—With the mailing of several thousand of leaflets printed in four languages the Associated Silk Workers, have fired the opening gun in an energetic campaign to organise the silk workers of Paterson and vicinity. The organization of the workers in the broad silk shops is the immediate aim of the union.

Following the strike against the multiple-loom system in August, 1924, the silk barons forced through a secret wage reductions and in many cases been compelled to work longer hours, more familiarly known as-overtime.

The union is on record for the following demands:

"The complete recognition of the Associated Silk Workers' Union by the bosses; an increase in wages for all broad silk workers; a guaranteed minimum wage and the system of pay for every week; more sanitary working conditions in the old, dilapidated factory buildings; the eight-hour day for all broad silk workers and eventually the 40-hour week; the elimination of the speed-up system, which undermines and destroys the health of the workers; effective methods which will compel the manufacturers to abide by their promises."

The campaign in the broad silk industry is being conducted by the executive board of the broad silk department under the direction of Organiser Anthony Ramuglia, who has been until recently connected with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union and was elected last week by the silk workers to his present position.

The union's organization headquarters at 201 Market street will also be headquerters for the campaign. A meeting of the members of the department will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Union of Bed Workers Invites Labor of the Trade to Tues. Meet

A meeting was held at the Workmen's Circle Lyceum, corner Ogden and Kedsie Aves., at 2 p. m., October 3rd, 1926, of Mattress Makers, Box Spring and Spring Bed Workers where a union was formed, affiliated with the Upholsterer's International Union. Speakers from the American Federation of Labor, the Building Trades Council, and the Teamsters' Union. The United Hebrew Trades, etc., addressed a large crowd. A great deal of enthusiasm was displayed by the workers of the trade.

Conditions of the trade are so bad that it is impossible to earn a living wage. With the hope and co-operation of all other unions, the success of the bed industry is nearer. The next meeting of the union will be held, Tuesday, Oct. 12th, 1926 at 8 p. m. at Workmen's Circle Lyceum, Kedsie and Ogden avenues. All workers of the trade are invited to come. Help better the conditions of the industry.

MINE WORKERS VOTE

AMERICAN STUDENT DELEGATION WELCOMED AT THE RED CAPITO

(SLES)—The following letter has been written from Moscow, Russia, by Thomas L. Dahney, a graduate of Brookwood Labor College last year. Dahney is a member of the American student delegation to Russia. Other colleges and universities represented by the 12 members of the delegation include Columbia, University of Pittsburgh, Occidental College, and Washington University.

Welcome in Moscow, July 9.

The members of the American student delegation to Soviet Russia were most cordially received on our arrival at Moscow Saturday, July 2. A large reception committee of students met us at the station with cars and accompanied us to our hotel. We were confronted with cameras on every side. Pravda and other Moscow papers have carried news stories about the delegation every day since our arrival.

The students whom we have met are not only interested in the educational problems of Russia but they are eager to get all the information they can on the problems of education in America. I have never seen so many serious forward-looking students anywhere as I have seen in the three schools in Moscow which we have visited.

Our delegation has visited the first Moscow State University, the Transport Engineers' College and the Timiriazeff Agriculture Academy. At each of these schools we were given a warm reception by an official of the school. Altho it is vacation time, a considerable number of students are still at these schools—some helping in repair work or general construction and some doing special school work. Questions covering the whole range of education were fired at us by students in each school that we visited. They are particularly interested in the fortunes of women students, amount of technical training given American schools, the extent to which American colleges to Negro students, the extent to which scholarships are awarded to students and the problem of workers' education.

Almost every group of students whom we have met asked us if we were from trade union schools, like the Transport Engineers' College students were particularly anxious to know whether we represented workers and whether students in America had the opportunity of sharing the government of the colleges with the faculty. When I told the group that students at Brookwood were active members of trade unions and that they assisted in the strikes of their locals, one comrade asked the rest of the delegation: "How long will it be before your colleges will become schools like your comrade's?" Again and again I saved our delegation embarrassment by mentioning Brookwood and other labor schools.

Russian students are eager to do what they can to bridge the present gap between themselves and the American students. They would welcome the opportunity to exchange students with American colleges. After we paid a visit to Lunacharsky, a student told me that plans were on to send a student to Brookwood and they were glad to meet a representative from Brookwood and find out something about the school. Whenever possible I have assured Russian students that the few liberal students in America are interested in the progress of education in the Soviet Union and regard themselves as a part of the great movement of liberal students in all countries.—Thomas L. Dahney.

Young Stove Worker Is Popular Paper

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—The third issue of the Young Stove Worker, mimeographed factory bulletin issued by the Young Workers' League in Los Angeles, made its appearance before the O'Keefe & Merritt stove factory. The leading articles urge the workers to organize for a 16 per cent wage increase, 44-hour week and similar vital demands. There is an article written in Spanish especially for the Mexican young workers. The bosses are chasing away league members, but old ones are successfully distributed, and the workers, especially the young fellows, grab them eagerly. Due to its growing popularity, the league is planning to change it from a monthly to a weekly and enlarge it to two pages or more. Arrangements will shortly be made for open-air meetings at the factory gates, where young speakers will address the stove workers.

Hot Dog on This Youth Hike

The Chicago Y. W. L. will hold its biggest hike of the season Sunday, Oct. 10, in the Milwaukee woods. There will be weiner and marshmallow roasts, games and fun galore.

Members of the Chicago league should meet at their section headquarters and come to the woods together.

To get to the woods take Milwaukee Ave. car going west. Then meet the bunch at the end of the car line. Don't forget the date. Sympathizers are invited.

Charges Employes Were Bribed, Ford Sues Contractors

DETROIT, Oct. 8.—The Ford Motor Company has filed suit against Blair and Company, construction firm, charging that the contractors bribed Ford employes to accept inferior materials in construction work. The suit, it is believed, will involve several millions of dollars.

Ford asks that the contract with Blair and Company be terminated and that it be forced to divulge names of the employes who betrayed "Philanthropical Henry."

Girl Financiers Show How It's Done

Ethel Stevens, who specializes in financing District 8's campaign among the young miners, has started an indoor collecting work with a bang. She and Clare Cline in one-half hour collected over $25 from the miners' welfare fund. Clare made a brief talk to the crowd, explaining the purpose of the campaign among the young miners, while Ethel went around and pinned a special button on anyone who did not offer violent resistance. When everyone had been buttoned the comrades counted the total and found that they had collected over $25. This added to the other sums that Comrade Stevens had previously collected, makes over $100 that she has gotten together for the young miners' campaign.

The Soviet Union Gets a Hearing

The old lady who tried to sweep back the sea with a broom scored a one hundred per cent success compared to the result of the efforts of the American Federation of Labor officialdom to keep the question of the recognition of the Soviet Union becoming the subject of debate on the convention floor.

No more dramatic occurrence has disturbed the solemn serenity of the annual conclave of the Conservative leaders of the American labor union movement than the speech of Sherwood Eddy. The occurrence symbolizes the onward march of the proletarian revolution in Russia and dwarfs the puny attempts of its foes to prevent its achievement, the first workers' and peasants' government in the world, appearing in its glorious aspects before the American working class.

The A. F. of L. machine had everything arranged to take another rap at the Soviet Union and the Communists without any opposition from the floor. A vicious resolution reaffirming the previous adverse decisions was to be introduced and passed and the issue smothered for another year.

But times have changed. There is a delegation of trade union officials, economists, editors and labor attorneys all packed up and ready to go to the Soviet Union, the delegation has received much publicity, the British fraternal delegates spoke in praise of the Soviet Union and advocated world trade union unity, the attack of the Detroit open shoppers, direct and unexpected by the Polly-anna leadership of the federation, drew in huge quantities upon its slender store of courage, the church and the Y. M. C. A. joined in the attack and the carefully erected structure of reaction came tumbling down about the ears of an astounded bureaucracy.

Undoubtedly there will be the usual long wails of "Communist propaganda" and we do not deny that we have done the best we could to put the issue of Soviet Union recognition before the American labor movement. We are only too pleased that our efforts have not been in vain and it will be admitted by unbiased observers that we have done a fairly good job.

Not that Sherwood Eddy is a Communist or under any Communist influence except that which all honest idealists respond to when they visit the only land in the world where workers and peasants rule and are using their power to build a Communist society while at the same time aiding to the best of their ability the struggles of workers in capitalist and colonial countries to organize for and wage victoriously the struggle for proletarian power.

We are grateful to Sherwood Eddy just as we are to all honest intellectuals who have the courage to tell the truth about the Russian revolution and other achievements of our class.

But Sherwood Eddy alone could never have upset the cautious plans of the skilled jugglers who manipulate the affairs of A. F. of L. conventions. The incident is significant in that it shows an inner weakness in the hitherto apparently solid front of A. F. of L. bureaucracy, and it is additionally significant that this weakness discloses itself on a fundamental working class political issue such as the recognition of the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union is.

The pressure from the rank and file is making itself felt at this convention with greater force than in a decade. The auto industry organization resolution, the Eddy speech and the favorable reception accorded it, the very obvious failure of the officialdom to give this convention the usual quiet, restrained atmosphere of utter respectability, all point to the conclusion that the American labor movement, in spite of the efforts of the leadership to hold it in leash, is emerging from its post-war apathy and showing signs of recovering from the subtle poison administered by the labor agents of imperialism.

The High Cost of Getting Elected

Samuel Insull turned about $150,000 into Frank L. Smith's treasure chest because the public utilities magnate had a grudge against Smith's opponent and would do anything within reason to place another man in the senatorial seat occupied by Mr. McKinley. Of course, Sam had no ulterior motive. Oh, no, no, no.

Frankly, our faith in this explanation of the phenomenal campaign contribution is somewhat shaken by the perusal of an article in a Chicago newspaper purporting to be the experience of a campaign manager for a capitalist party in roping in votes for his candidates.

This particular installment tells how he lined up the foreign-born vote.

The party's publicity man was in a dilemma. He called in the campaign manager for a solution of his problem. It was this:

The foreign vote might save the party from defeat. So the publicity man wrote several articles proving why the various racial groups should support the ticket. There was one for the Poles, another for the Irish, one for the Italians and so on down the line. Now to get the stuff out so that it would not prove a boomerang was the problem. If an Irish pamphlet got into the hands of a Swede there would be trouble because the reasons given why the Irish should support the ticket were precisely the reasons why the Swedes should not.

The campaign manager wrinkled his brow and by the time he got thru he could see a mass movement of foreign-born voters moving on the polls to vote for his ticket. Money did the trick.

Lining his pockets with one thousand dollar bills the manager journeyed to New York. The first foreign-born leader he met with accepted twenty-five one thousand dollar bills on account. By the time he had covered Boston and Chicago and returned to Washington his roll was slim and the publicity director almost fainted when the amount expended was tallied.

But inside of a week the money began to talk. Mass meetings were held at which orators of every known racial group on the American voting lists expounded the virtues of the party with the eagle. And when the votes were counted, the party with the eagle got the lion's share of the votes.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

"If we are criticized and told: 'This has not been done,' and if we are criticized for the purpose of making capital for the formation of a fraction, instead of for the purpose of helping us to remedy our faults, if we are criticized in enormous exaggerations, if our party and the soviet power are slandered, if individual errors, individual mistakes, and individual weaknesses in our state and our party apparatus are multiplied a thousandfold, if a fraction platform is formed of these, and if the critics do not help us to overcome the real immediate difficulties, but take the opportunity to fry their own fraction fish, then we take up arms against such a criticism, for this is no capable help coming to aid us to overcome our deficiencies, but a system of repeated attempts to shake the unity of the party, and to attain the legalization of other parties by means of fractions and groups. This is a veiling away from the proletarian line, even if it is not acknowledged as such.

THE opposition, after making several accusations against the central committee of the party, maintained that the party should learn the following lessons from the election campaign: 1. Real industrialization; 2. real organization of the poor peasantry; 3. real alliance with the main mass of the middle peasantry under the leadership of the proletariat; 4. real fight against bureaucracy; 5. real inner party democracy. It would thus appear that our industrialization is not real—apparently we only assert that we are building new factories, whilst in reality they do not exist. It appears that we are not organizing the poor peasantry, that only the opposition proposes a real alliance, etc., etc. The opposition gives a false testimony against our whole policy, and believes that it alone is creating something "real," while all that we have done and are doing is fundamentally "wrong."

WE, however, are straightforward enough to believe that those persons who contend in the crudest form against current line in our party policy, only to let themselves be bound on this current the next; who today proclaim the question of fraction to be a matter of death to the party, and tomorrow a matter of life—we believe that these elements have found their way into "real" Leninism to a certain extent by a funny story.

I MUST tell you a funny story. In opposition circles Comrade Zinoviev's book on Leninism has been regarded as a hundred per cent gospel. Others will be known to you. A considerable part of this book was directed against Comrade Trotsky. But now Comrade Zinoviev, for the sake of the block with Comrade Trotsky, for the sake of the realisation of real Leninism, has let this book fall under the table, and is not having a farther edition published. This is the way they treat the principles of Leninism. Not merely a word which might have slipped out accidentally, but the "gospel" of Leninism.

Our Tasks.

IN conclusion, a few words on the tasks now facing us. In economic politics our main task is to steer an efficient course towards industrialism, to seek means for the acceleration of the speed of development for our industry. Our next task, in view of the coming autumn, consists of inquiring into the possibility of a rise in real wages, especially in the wages of those categories of workers whose wages have not kept pace with the others. Altho we were unable to fulfil this task a few months ago, it is certain that if we now succeed in unbelivering our exports skilfully, in bringing in our grain properly and selling it well, etc., we shall be in a position by the autumn to raise the real value of wages. This must be carefully considered and calculated a hundred times, but we must make preparations for it.

THUS one measure to be taken in our labor policy must be to combat the excrescences which have grown up about the saving regime. In some places the necessity of saving has been so interpreted that the workers have been deprived of water to make tea with, with the result that there have been smell revolts here and there in the provinces. This is not a regime of saving, but a caricature, a perfectly criminal caricature of a regime of saving. Our central committee or its secretariat must send an explanatory letter to the organisations on this subject. One of our main tasks all over the country must be the combat against the bureaucratism which is throttling us. I may remind you that one of the main thoughts in Comrade Dzerzhinsky's last speech delivered before his death and directed against the opposition, was a declaration of determined war against the immobility, the unwieldiness, and the bureaucratism of our apparatus, against conditions which oblige an urgent matter to pass thru the hands of ten to twenty authorities before it can be decided upon and executed. Here we have still a great deal to do, and here the collective endeavors of many workers' hands and heads is truly necessary.

AND finally, I am of the opinion that in the sphere of inner party politics we must not only carry on this direct struggle against fractions and groups, but at the same time we must strive to create the basis for inner party democracy. We must enlighten the mass of the party at any price, strengthen and steel its ideology, and do this in the firm conviction that the line pursued by the majority of the party is right. This is one of the greatest tasks.

THE Communist Party is the mainspring of the state administration of our great country. We are entering the autumn season faced by extremely complicated tasks. We must maneuver with our grain prices, and maneuver in such a manner that we bring in the largest possible quantity of grain. We must export and sell this grain on advantageous terms, and upon this basis we have to arrange our program of production, and find our way to a certain improvement in the wages question, the wages question, etc. We begin with these operations every year almost simultaneously with the realisation of the harvest. A very great deal depends upon how these operations are begun. They are almost determinative for the results of a whole economic year. And the we have our hands full with this great practical task, still we must increase our activity in the work of strengthening the ideology of the whole of the party on the basis of a definite political standpoint. May every member of the party know and realise that the majority of the central committee has a clearly defined standpoint, one for which it stands, which it continues, and which serves as a rule for guidance for the party.

WE are not adherents of party methods which maintain one thing today, and something diametrically opposite tomorrow; which declare a crusade against deviations today, and submit to the lead of these deviations tomorrow. We have our line of policy and we follow it consistently. We shall continue to stand for this line, to fight for it, to lead the party unwaveringly by it, and we are firmly convinced that the whole party—with the Leningrad organization, which has always been and always will be a pillar of the central committee, in the front rank—will pursue this line in every respect. The most important point is: the struggle for the right political line; everything else depends upon this, everything else is determined by the struggle for the right political line. Our line is actually a Leninist political line, from which we never deviate, for which we fight without ceasing, and which will be the means of leading us to victory. (Prolonged applause).

(Conclusion)

OLD LINE PARTIES DISCREDITED IN IND.; URGE FORMING LABOR PARTY

The Local Lake County, Indiana, Workers (Communist) Party, has issued a statement asking all of the workers of Indiana to stand together and form a Labor Party in order to purge the state of the corruption and graft which has been exposed in connection with the ku klux klan activities.

THE state of Indiana is in political turmoil. Stephenson, the ex-ruler of the K. K. K. and of the republican party, is now in jail in Michigan City, Indiana, for causing the death of a school girl, and makes a confession in which he claims to have documents to prove:

That he spent $275,000 to elect a certain prominent republican official of the state of Indiana to office.

That he received from the republican state committee the amount of $825,000 in payment for his election into office.

That republican mayors of three large cities in Indiana entered into a written agreement with him to repay him on a ratio of three-to-one for all the money he advances in the campaign for their election.

That he made further agreements with these republican mayors whereby some individuals could get control over appointments to public jobs.

That he made similar agreements with 30 or 40 less important public officials.

That he dictated the appointment of the republican senator, Jim Robinson, to his senatorial position by the republican governor of Indiana, Ed. Jackson.

That he forced this appointment by threatening the republican governor that, if the appointment is not made as requested, he would begin "to talk" and that his story would not gain any public favor for the republican governor.

When crooks begin to squeal—they expose other crooks.

A NUMBER of the ex-grand dragon's former republican friends, including the republican governor and some of the republican senators, ought to be serving time with Stephenson, if tha story he tells is true. And from the action of the republican governor, Ed Jackson, who would not permit newspaper men to see Stephenson, one would conclude that the clique of the K. K. K.-republican politicians is in control of the state machine, are afraid of his revelations.

What is the meaning of this big turmoil in the politics of Indiana?

IT shows up the total rottenness and anti-labor character of the K. K. K.-republican combination that rules the state.

They all parade as 100 per cent Americans—these 100 per cent scoundrels! They all preach law and order—these thieves and ruffians!

Against the workers on a peaceful strike they would use machine guns (as at the time of the Great Steel Strike.)

But for themselves they claim immunity from punishment for all the hideous crimes they commit.

But who put these men in power? Workers and poor farmers of the state of Indiana.

Behold now these champions of "white protestant superiority"!

Do you still admire them? Do you still insist that man's superiority depends upon his color and his creed?

YOU, workers and poor farmers, who joined the K. K. K. because you thought it will bring about cleanup politics—How many more times do you need to be fooled before you learn your lesson?

Out of the Ku Klux Klan—this hotbed of hatred—religious and racial—cultivated by the exploiters of labor in order to keep the workers fighting each other, divided and weak!

Out of the rotten K. K. K.-republican corruption! Let it fall to pieces like a house of cards!

For the republican party cannot be expected to serve your interests, even if it disassociates itself from the K. K. K.

For the republican party can be nothing else but what it is—the party of big business—the party of Wall Street, of the Morgans, and the Rockefellers and the Garys.

THE proof of this, if proof is needed at all in the recent slush funds investigations in Pennsylvania, in Illinois. The money has run the election, the biggest stake electic all of the candidates from the president of the United States down to the petty clerk.

And the democratic party—can we seek refuge in this relic of the slave holding South which now attempts to parade as the friend of the working people? No! Because it is under just as firm control of the bankers and manufacturers as the republican party. The slush fund exposures showed that the bankers and manufacturers are contributing to the democratic party as they do to the republican party. When the republican party is discredited in the eyes of the workers and poor farmers—then the democratic party is used by the exploiters to fool the working people.

DOWN with the political parties of the exploiters of labor! Let all the workers' organizations—trade unions, fraternal, political—unite to form a powerful party of their own—a Labor Party.

Let our watchword be: A Powerful Labor Party of Indiana for the presidential elections of 1928.

Let us use the remaining two years for the building of such a party. At the same time let us demand: a full and open investigation of all charges of thievery, political corruption, and graft in the capitalist politics of Indiana.

Let organized labor demand that its representatives participate in the investigation.

TO jail with the open shoppers who keep the wages down, who resist the organisation of workers, but spend millions of dollars squeezed out of workers to enrich themselves and keep themselves in power.

DOWN WITH CAPITALIST POLITICS!

LONG LIVE INDEPENDENT WORKING CLASS POLITICAL ACTION!

LONG LIVE THE SOLIDARITY OF ALL RACES!

WORKERS' (COMMUNIST) PARTY,
Local Lake county, Indiana.

SPORTS

Jack Dempsey was catpulted by Tunney and Red Grange knocked him clean off the sports page. The American college will now stage its yearly demonstration of superiority over European centers of education in fitting men for life. Red Grange after only three years of college and in three short months last fall, was able to eat regularly and leave a paltry fifty thousand or so in the bank for the day he may run out of cigarettes. The fourth year of college proved entirely unnecessary . . . in fact, could have proved harmful. The first game his team played this season drew some eighteen thousand people to the box office and the second in Cleveland, attracted over twenty thousand. It looks like Red will be able to pay his' rent on time this winter. There's no doubt about it, comrades—a college education is a wonderful thing!

• • • •

RED no doubt will raise Cain with a great source of college income. His last game at college drew 90,000 people. The professors might have been foolish enough to think this a good time to ask for a raise. But the colleges only hired a couple of extra coaches for the "higher education." It will be interesting to see the havoc that professional football will play with donations from college rooks in the midst of the football season. A contract calling for $4,500 has already pulled into professional ranks the star of the Missouri University. There is sure to be more of this as the season progresses. There is no question about it. American colleges are as marvelously superior to European universities in fitting man for life, that with a substantial argumental written in a check book, Red Grange will be able to convince certain boys that in two years in college they have learned all it is necessary to know.

• • • •

TUNNEY, the intellectual, seems to have proved the value of education. A press agent with some sense had him reading Karl Marx. At a Communist convention meeting the other night, at which a discussion of the Dempsey-Tunney battle took precedence over all business, they had on the Bill Mathison debate the fight somewhat in this order:

Mike leaped to the center of the ring. Tunney looked Dempsey squarely in the eye and shouted, "What's surplus value?" Stunned, Dempsey took three blows on the jaw and two sports writers dropped dead. In the next round, Tunney shouted: "What's a commodity?" Dempsey split Tunney's lip with one and sunked him in the ear with another. Then Tunney simply dazed him with definitions, quotations and quotations. In the last round Tunney stepped up quickly to Dempsey as the bell sounded and cried: "Did you know that the theory of unearned utility has been disproved?" The only surviving sports writer swears that at that moment Dempsey was a beaten man. And then he fainted.

• • • •

THE Negro student at the university has little chance to duplicate the feat of Red Grange. His predicament (?) must continue himself with education only. The road to becoming an athletic glory is paved with [illegible] and [illegible] . . . [illegible] . . . [illegible] . . .

The Theater Season in Moscow

By RUTH EPPERSON KENNELL.

AT the Dramatic Theater of the Trade Unions appeared early in the season the first of two successful historical plays, by the playwright, Bill-Belotserkovsky, who is best known as a chronicler of revolutionary events. "Storm," gives an intimate and sympathetic picture of the Russian Communist Party during the bitter days of civil war. In the nightmare episodes are developed the struggles of the local Communist group in a small town at the time when Denikin was operating and typhus reared. Here we find some of the Molerhold stagecraft: a single set which is ingeniously reversed and altered to form a dozen rapidly changing scenes—two walls forming an angle with a large window thru which action can be seen outside, and the walls hinged so that they can be lifted to form a larger room. The lighting is an important feature, a scene being shifted to another section of the stage simply by transferring the light, the spotlight is also generously applied and the titles of the episodes are cleverly announced by throwing the words along a beam of light so that they race all about the walls and ceiling of the theater, thus distracting the attention of the audience from the darkened stage while the rapid shifting of scenes is in progress.

PLETNEV

Here is no sentimental idealization of the characters, or melodramatic portrayal of heroic deeds, but just the simple, everyday trials of this heterogeneous little group of workers and intellectuals. A wholesome characteristic of the Russians is their ability to laugh at themselves—in this play are humorously portrayed the human foibles found in Communists as well as other human beings: there is the commissar who thought his position gave him the right to desert his wife, the girl who thought she wanted to join the party, but who ran away when the secretary assigned her for party duty to the typhus hospital, the secretary himself, their leader, one of those simple, self-effacing men whom history records as heroes, his right hand man, a one-legged sailor, the doctor, the school mistress, the factory girls and young men, and the girl soldier who overhears a non-party man in a high military post plotting a counter-revolution. The counter-revolution occurs; in the party headquarters the ill and exhausted secretary sticks to his post while thru the window the glow of conflagration can be seen and the sound of firing can be heard. Finally, he too joins in the fighting, and his body is carried "feet and laid" upon the table at which for months he had worked unceasingly day and night. As the grief-stricken party comrades bundle the body, he hears his comrade call from the window: "We are winning!" Lifting up his arms the lifeless body, he tries painfully to rouse him: "Dashaika, comrade—we have won, ours have won!" But his leader is at last beyond responding to words of hope or to praise.

Kamerny Theater Moscow.
Scene from Phedre, by Racine.

AT the Kamerny Theater, the first production of Eugene O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape" was given a few weeks ago. The play does not seem to appeal greatly to the Russians, but this is probably due to a great extent to the poor interpretation and bad production.

The first scene when the stokers are drinking and singing has the sympathetic realism, to a lesser degree, which the Russian theater creates in scenes among the workers, but the second scene on the upper deck is the usual Molerhold burlesque of bourgeois society. Like every other impersonation of American girls on the Moscow stage, this girl wears an amazing red wig, is sensuous and altogether a carricature of the frivolous society girl. The scene in the hold on the first instant holds the audience spellbound by its striking picture: the stokers stand before the glowing ovens and shovel in unison; above the sing-song of their voices, the machinery grinds and the whistle shrieks. But later one is irritated by the absence of a realistic touch—the stokers are all so clean and cool, not a trace of coal black on their chests and smooth faces. One is willing to overlook the absence of hair on the powerful, white chest and fresh face of the "Hairy Ape," but at least he might have been a little dirty. In the fall, when the apparition of the red-haired fashion plate appears on the stairs, it is difficult to understand why such a sophisticated young lady should be terrified at the Russian swear words and appearance of this young man.

The scene on Broadway with its whirling electric signs and the parade of degenerate society men and women is very picturesque, but here again the Russian conception of bourgeois society cannot be applied entirely to the United States, which is as yet saved by its youth from the degeneracy of Europe. Judging from the scene in the I. W. W. hall, the producer is wholly ignorant of this militant labor organization and presents a characterless picture. The closing act is very weak and leaves one with a feeling of uncertainty and unreality. The Russians, of course, do much better in their own new drama than in foreign plays, which seem weak and futile in comparison.

THE Kamerny is presenting a new melodrama, "Rosita," apparently a political satire on King Alfonso of Spain. Rosita is a beautiful gypsy street singer, the idol of the people, with whom the king is so infatuated that he grants a pardon to her lover who had been condemned to death. When the play reaches what we suppose is the climax—the unexpected execution of the lover—it continues in two more exciting acts. Rosita leads an uprising, gains admission to the palace and kills the king. The anti-climax occurs when the lover comes to life, just as the people storm the palace. Altho so similar in plot to the old French melodrama "Marion de Lorm" (which is much better acted at the Arbat Studio), and so long drawn out, it makes an absorbing spectacle. The stage settings are simple and beautiful, following the present custom of altering by decorations a single set; the singing and dancing are charming and the caricature of the king very clever.

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

"MEN OF STEEL."

AT last it is here: the classic of Class-Collaboration. One view of this "thunderous drama from the fire-bosom of the steel-mills" and you will kiss your boss good morning and bring flowers for his wife. Here is the class propaganda picture in all its glory glorifying the boss, damning the Reds, preaching to the workers that their interests are the same as the bosses.

The story is old-fashioned melodrama overloaded with absurd plot. But it moves swiftly and on this hook, calculated to catch the interest of the gullible worker, is hung the bait of the boss. A poor foreign-born steel worker thru "human heroism, human sacrifice and superhuman strength," proves by study, devotion and damnation of the Reds that one can rise in America to the very pinnacle of success which includes marriage to the owner's daughter and the management of the works. It takes the hero all of six reels to prove to the men in the mills and to the kind-hearted steel-master that the dirty, dirty Reds and revolution are unnecessary in this land of glorious opportunity. "It is not a question of wages as the Reds would have you believe!" No sir. And no siree! It is "only a question of a share in the management!" There you are! Nothing less will our hero have and he has it, by George! He wins the daughter, the men in the mills come to his wedding and receive stock that makes them partners in the concern (not wage slaves!) and the violence-advocating Reds are forced to slink off in disgrace. I should add that no union was necessary. What good is organization of labor when God is good and sends us good bosses! Is this vicious boss propaganda? Brother—it has never been equalled in this country.

The photography is quite splendid. The majestic steel mills hold a spell over you it seems. There is fire and motion and POWER—hard, unbending power—STEEL. The man that make steel must surely feel it in their veins. What a magnificent theme this will make some day for a picture when labor will produce it! The pictures were taken in the mills of Albania. A scene of the burial of a steel worker in the cauldron of steel into which he fell is beautifully impressive. A battle between two cranes conveying moulten metal is an unusual bit.

Milton Sills (remember his "Sea Hawk"!) gives more evidence of his ability. Doris Kenyon and Mae Allison are both beautiful and gifted. Ability, beauty, time and expenditure have been lavishly given to this vicious production. If labor-hating Judge Gary did not pay for this picture he surely ought to.

Milton Sills in "Men of Steel"

We are sure that Gary will pronounce the film (showing at the Roosevelt Theater) a masterpiece. But we are not interested. This coming, however, will reserve space for 1,000 words or less (and furnish the price of admission) to any steel workers of Gary, Pittsburgh or Birmingham who will tell us what they think of it. Speak up brother steel workers!

THE Proletcult players gave the first performance a few weeks ago of an amusing burlesque on the Dayton trial, which has aroused great interest in Russia. They have taken this skit, "The Monkey Court," to the villages. The judge in the case bears a comical resemblance to an ape. It is the prevailing belief in Moscow that Dayton, Tennessee represents the intellectual viewpoint of America and that the teaching of evolution is forbidden thruout the United States.

Karl Marx

Personal Recollections By PAUL LAFARGUE

He was a man, only taken bit in all I shall never see his like.

ENGELS.

I

IT was in the February of 1865 that I saw Karl Marx for the first time. The International had been founded on the 28th of September, 1864 at the meeting in St. Martin's Hall: I came from Paris in order to bring him a report of our progress; and our young connection was made in that same place. Mr. Tolain, now senator of the bourgeois republic and one of its representatives at the Berlin conference, had given me a letter of recommendation.

I was 24 years old then; my whole life long, I shall not forget the impression which that first visit made on me. Marx was suffering at the time and working on the first volume of "Capital" which did not appear until two years later: he feared that he would not be able to complete his work; and he received young people with pleasure, for, said he, "I must bring up men who will continue the Communist propaganda after me."

Karl Marx is one of those rare people who could, at the same time, stand in the front rank of both science and public activity. He combined them so ardently that it is impossible to understand him unless we conceive of him as a scholar as well as a socialist fighter. If he was of the opinion that every science should be cultivated for its own sake and that in no scientific investigation must one be concerned about ultimate consequences, he also believed that the scholar must never cease to participate actively in public life if he did not wish to degrade himself; and most not always remain confined to his room or laboratory like a rat to its cheese, without mingling in the life and the social and political struggles of his contemporaries.

"Science must not be an egoistic pleasure; those who are so fortunate as to be able to dedicate themselves to scientific purposes should also be the first to place their knowledge in the service of mankind."—To work for the world," was one of his favorite expressions.

He had not arrived at the Communist standpoint thru sentimental considerations, altho he felt a deep sympathy for the sufferings of the working classes, but thru the study of history and economy: he asserted that every impartial spirit who is not influenced by private interests and who is not blinded by class prejudice would absolutely have to arrive at the same conclusions. But when, without any preconceived opinion, he studied the economic and political evolution of human society, he still, nevertheless, wrote with the decided intention of spreading the results of his investigations, and with the firm and determined will to give a scientific basis to the socialist movement, which up to this time had lost itself in utopian clouds; he only appeared publicly to work at the triumph of the working class whose historic mission it is to build Communism as soon as it achieves the economic and political direction of society: just as the bourgeoisie, which has achieved power, has had the mission to break the feudal chains which hindered the development of industry and rural economy; to establish the free movement of products and people, the free contact between entrepreneur and worker; to centralize the means of production and exchange, to thus prepare, without becoming aware of it, the material and intellectual elements for the Communist society of the future.

MARX did not confine his activity to the country in which he was born: "I am a citizen of the world," he said, "and wherever I am, there I am active." In fact, in every country to which events and political persecution drove him, in France, Belgium, England, he took an outstanding part in the revolutionary movements which were developing there.

But he first appeared to me not as the untiring and incomparable socialist agitator, but as the scholar in that study in Maitland Park Road where the party comrades flowed together from all parts of the civilized world to consult with the master of socialist thought. This room is historic and one must know it if he wishes to penetrate Marx' spiritual life from its intimate side. It was situated on the first floor and the broad window, thru which the room received its copious light, opened on the park. On both sides of the fireplace and opposite the window, against the wall, were book cases which were filled with books and overloaded up to the ceiling with newspaper parcels and manuscripts. Opposite the fireplace and to one side of the window stood two tables full of papers, books and newspapers; in the center of the room and in favorable light was the very simple and small work-table (three feet long, two feet wide) and the armchair of wood; between the armchair and the bookcase, opposite the window, stood a leather sofa on which Marx stretched out from time to time in order to rest. On the mantelpiece lay still more books, between the cigars, matches, tobacco containers, paper weights, photographs of his daughters, his wife, Wilhelm Wolf and Frederick Engels. He was a heavy smoker: "Capital" will never get me as much as the cigars have cost me which I smoked while writing," he told me; but he was a still greater waster of matches: he forgot his pipe or his cigar when lighting it in order to light them again, the match boxes were emptied in an incredible short time.

Marx did not allow anyone to put his notes and papers in order, or rather in disorder, and the existing disorder was only apparent: everything was really in its desired place and, without looking, he always took the book or notebook that he needed; even while chattering, he stopped in order to point out a quotation, or a number in the, book itself which he had just mentioned. He was one with his study whose books and papers belonged to him as much as his own limbs.

IN the arrangement of his books no external symmetry was followed: Quarto and octavo volumes and pamphlets stood side by side; he arranged his books not according to their size but according to their contents. His books were spiritual tools to him and not objects of luxury. "They are my slaves and shall serve me according to my will." He mistreated them without consideration for their size, their binding, the beauty of the paper or printing; bent the corners, covered the margins with pencil markings and underscored the lines. He did not put notes in them, nevertheless, he could not deny himself an exclamation mark or an interrogation point at times when an author exaggerated. The system of underlining of which he made use, permitted him to find again the passage he looked for in any book with the greatest ease. He had the habit of always re-reading his notebooks and the underlined passages in his books after an interval of years, in order to well retain them in his memory which was of an extraordinary keenness and exactness. Following Hegel's advice, he had trained it from youth on by memorizing verses in a language unknown to him.

Heine and Goethe, whom he admired in conversation, he knew by heart; he always read poets whom he chose from all European literatures; every year he read Aeschylus in the Greek original; him and Shakespeare he honored as the two greatest dramatic geniuses that humanity has produced. He had made Shakespeare, for whom his veneration was complete, the subject of searching studies; he knew even his most insignificant characters. The whole family counted on a veritable cult with the great Spanish dramatist; his three daughters knew him by heart. When, after the year 1848, he wanted to perfect himself in the English language which he could already read before, he learned for and arranged all of the expressions peculiar to Shakespeare; he did the same with a part of the polemical work of William Cobbett whom he respected highly. Dante and Burns belonged to his favorite poets; he took great joy in hearing his daughters recite or sing the satires or the love-songs of the Scotch poet.

Nothing, old boy, I am putting the bible into practice. I just got religion.

A New Generation in the Making

By NAT KAPLAN.

THOUSANDS corroling fifty-two American youngsters of both sexes onto a thirty-acre New England farm and putting them: "This is your domain. Run it as your government and rule." Some of the old gray beards who think they their hardened arteries would answer, "Impossible, chaos, bumpkinism—putting parties, etc." We hate to disappoint them, but nothing of the sort took place. From the first week the Young Workers' League Summer Training School held on Lake Denelson Farm, near Winchendon, Mass., was a perfect pinnacle of self-discipline counted and enforced by the students themselves.

It is true that in the beginning we had some hangs. One of the Boston students, a member of the police organization elected by the students, was about to retire one fair evening, and found a cool reception awaiting him. Another student from Young Island had decorated his bed with small lumps of—what the student lawyer in the student's trial on the matter called—"frozen ice." The defendants court found the "culprits" guilty and promptly sentenced him to scrape the school ice man and to supply the refrigerator daily. Since then no serious breach of discipline was recorded.

Purpose of the School.

The school was one of a series of Summer Training schools established by the Young Workers' League this year. The main purpose of the school was to give a minimum political-social training to a number of earnest members of the Young Workers' League so that they could become better functionaries of the League. When the instructors arrived they found that a large number of the students were non-Communist workers, many had no contact with working class organization before. The Finnish comrades, who were helping to finance the school, had to be very extended its purpose.

The Student Composition.

Of the 52 students in the school, 20 were girls and 32 were boys. Thirty of the students at both sexes were American-born (American population in every sense of the word). The social composition was one of the best. There were 19 young workers, 3 young farmers and 11 students (the majority attending high school). Yet, we cannot be too elated in regards to the composition. Only a handful of the students in American schools have demonstrated their militancy in the struggle against compulsory military training in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. Not only but large numbers of the students from working class families are found into the industries after leaving the school. Twenty of the students could "pass" as non-Communists in any part of the school upon their arrival.

The Curriculum.

Most of the instructors were unacquainted with the plant in dissecting the old capitalist Sunday school curriculum. That is, one which starts with the creation of the earth, then and society and finally comes to a consideration of the [illegible] and the other reason, the short school term, made this impermissable. Some of the students, even when they were younger, had attended socialist Sunday schools, were questioned one day as to what they had learned there. One remembered hazily that she had learned something about an ape; another had learned that at one time there were cave men. Marxian economics, i. e., an analysis of the capitalist mode of production was begin ally our starting point if we aimed to be realists.

From this starting point we were able to advance to a consideration of the question of the class struggle and the rule of state; classes and parties in America; imperialism; forms and strategy of the class struggle and revolution; the role of the party; the role of the Young Workers' League and the youth problems, etc. During the last two weeks we also added the study of American history to our curriculum. The day was divided so that there was plenty of time for the school work, study circle work, recreation and meetings of the students' government.

Method of Instruction.

The instructors merely tried to guide the students in their self-education. Neither of the instructors assumed that they were to present their lectures and disregard whether the students were actually deriving something from them. The instructors invited interruptions and interrupted themselves during the course of the lectures to present concrete problems to the students. The collective

THE SCAB

A Story

By Max Geltman

THE thought of opening the door and confronting Margaret, or Marge, as he called her, filled him with dread. No—it wasn't exactly dread; it was rather more of a sickening feeling. The feeling one experiences, more or less, on being frightened. He knew that Marge would be surprised—startled at finding him home at this early hour of the day. It was just the past one. Questions and answers flitted through his mind. What would he say to her? And without quite fully being aware of it, he found himself inside the rather large miner's kitchen; which acted as living room as well. And walking towards the couch he plumped down upon it; sitting half bent over and dangling his cap between his knees.

Marge was not in. He felt relieved. Thoughts, disturbing thoughts kept rushing thru his mind. He couldn't decide how Marge would say when she heard that he'd gone out on strike. He put questions to himself somewhat as he thought she would put to him. He answered them. Argued inwardly with himself. Again and again he would insist to some phantom question that he or rather they—the boys had to strike. They had to strike. Of this he was convinced. And he would be an imaginary questioner argue him out of it. "Hello, Tom!" The voice startled him so that he dropped his cap. "Why, hello Marge. Didn't even hear you come in." He walked over to her and kissed her.

"But why are you home, Tom? You said you had at least three days work——Come Tom,——nothing wrong I hope. You haven't——been——fired? Have you?

"No, no! It's nothing like that. Oh Gee, Marge, everything'll be O. K. Really there's nothing wrong—you. You see the boys got kinda sore when they saw a notice this morning, posted at the mine entrance, stating that beginning with Monday they'd reduce all wages ten per cent. Gee, but Jimmy got sore, Marge." purposely brought in the part about Jimmy, thinking that by so doing he might make her smile a bit, for the fear which had taken on a grim look while he was telling her this. "He was for going up and seeing old Sanders—that's the super—right on the job, you know Bill—you know Bill—Bill Birdsley, he says: 'Before we can't be a bunch of damn fools. Let's appoint a committee to go up and see Sanders and tell him we can't accept a decrease in wages just now. Not a captain' cause's half weeks as it is, and with ten per cent reduction we couldn't live.' The boys agreed with. They all appointed Bill. Gee, but you should've heard them."

"And did the committee go to see the super, Tom?"

"Yes, but we were all told to go home—and wait for a report. Bill, Whitey and old man Jenkins are on the committee."

"But, Tom! Do you think the company will listen to your committee? You know what they've done before. Told you to go back same day or lose your jobs. Some of you didn't lose your jobs you went back later, but I forget, when you had no more money to live on. Then, you can't back 'em. They've got us down and we got to stay there—at present. Tom, you can't go on strike now. You can't. You can't. We haven't saved a nickel in the last six months; what with you working only three or four days a week—You know how far myself I get it, Tom; but——" and herewith she broke a chair and laying her head on the table, wept.

During all this Tom was sitting at the table drumming incessantly on the tablecloth—his eyes centered on a stain which seemed to have the features of Sanders on them. And he began picking on that spot with the nail. Picking and picking on it, until there was a hole almost an inch wide in the tablecloth.

"Tom, you haven't been listening to me."

TOM BURKIN had known Margaret only three weeks before he married her. In mining towns such as Belleville courtings weren't elongated affairs. He met her at a picnic of the local Swedeliows organization. He thought she was pretty. Made a number of dates with her and married her.

Margaret Gavin was her maiden name—— [illegible] never marry a miner. She could remember [illegible] before her father was killed in a mine accident, the hardships which her mother had to endure. Her mother, being a New England woman, never complained—aloud. But her tight set lips gave one the impression that a miner's life wasn't what Bill Gavin, her husband, had told her it would be. She was 13 years old when her mother died. Exactly two years after her father's burial, she was taken into live with a distant aunt who ran the only hotel and boarding house in the town at that time.

She had oftimes been asked by her aunt when she would get married. But somehow she always tried to evade those questions. She wasn't a bad looking girl. She would often tell herself that. But the actions of some of the boarders—especially the transient ones—gave her a feeling more of fear than of disgust. It was not till eleven years after she had come to her aunt that she was asked to come into her aunt's private parlor. For two hours she was given a severe talking to. After which she left she went up to her bedroom and cried. Two weeks after this incident she met Tom. Remembering what her aunt had said and feeling that Tom was somehow different than most of the menfolks at the boarding house, she acquiesced to Tom's marriage proposal.

IT was now eight months after they had been married. Tom had had a little money saved up but it nearly all went into a honeymoon trip which they took to Chicago. Tom was very happy as a married man. He was more fond of Marge now than when he first met her. It gave him great pride to be seen walking down Main street of a Sunday with her. This alone—to be seen walking down Main street with her—the prettiest woman in Balmaville—so they all said—was enuf to make him worship her. He really adored her. And to see her sad or cry made him feel as if he was to blame for it. He was fearful lest he lose her. The thought of losing her made him quail. So when he saw how bitterly she wept, he set his jaws tight and giving a final jab at the tablecloth with the fork (if he could only tear Sanders' face like that!) he got up and began to pace the room nervously.

He hadn't given much thought to what Marge referred to when she said it was not for her sake. But now slowly the thought of a coming baby made him stop in his tracks. So that was what she meant. Yes!—He was sure of it. Why hadn't he not thought of it before. That is he knew one was coming. He'd seen it on Marge. She even brought it to his attention. But—it wasn't so far off as he'd been thinking it was. He threw himself into a chair feeling utterly exhausted.

"Well, Marge! Whata you want me to do?" he said in a low husky voice. "Don't want me to scab? Do you?" He ran his hand over his face as if to wipe away something. "Come Marge. What would you have me do. I can't go back on the boys. Why, gee Marge, they'd never talk to me again." "You must go back, Tom. You must. Do you want me to dress it in rags when it's born. Tom! I wish I didn't have to do it. But I must. You know how we need money now. You're not gonna call old Pindal, are you?" Her eyes were all red, and as she finished her mouth began to quiver.

Tom had always counted on calling a big Chicago doctor when she should give birth. So now when she mentioned Pindal, the old doctor of Balmeville, his heart became chilled. He strode over to the couch, took his cap, and without saying a word to Marge who was sitting staring straight ahead of her, her hands in her hair, he left the room.

THE committee that had gone to see Sanders was going around to all the miners' homes announcing that Sanders had even refused to see them and that they had officially called the strike. The miners in Balmeville were unorganized. This made itself felt when it came to such things as organizing meetings and preparing speakers. In the meantime, Bill who had worked for organized companies before, took official charge. He decided with the assistance of Whitey and Jenkins to go around to each of the miners individually that they must stick it out now once and for all. He had read copies of a labor paper, "The DAILY WORKER," which sounded "O. K." to him as he put it. He went around telling all that if assistance was needed they'd try that bunch who were editing that paper. He felt rather confident. He'd met with enthusiasm so far wherever he'd been. They had just rounded Rindleys Road and were walking towards Tom's house. "Come on, boys. No need of knocking at Tom's door," cried Bill, a broad smile over his Indian tan face. Saying which they pushed open the door and entered.

They had surely expected Tom to be in, waiting anxiously for them to come. But instead they found only Margaret, who wasn't looking a bit too happy, busying herself at some sewing. She greeted the men with a "How de do." invited them to come in and continued her sewing. Bill was somewhat taken aback. Finally he blurted out that they'd decided to strike, couldn't help it, and where was Tom. They were going to organize a meeting. Margaret merely clenched her teeth a little tighter. Tom was out. She didn't know where. "You sure you don't know, Mrs. Burkin? You see, we need him just now. We want him to speak tonight at Bradley's Hall." Bill said that last almost with a plea. "Yes." Whitey put in, "we want him to speak." Margaret dropped her sewing and got up. She walked hastily over to the stove and back again to the table. Evidently she was quite nervous. She began to chew on the inside of her cheek. She always did that when she was upset. "Tom's gone back to work" she finally said. Her eyes flashed. She began to chew on her cheek more impetuously. "Yes," she cried, "I made him go back. He had to go back and you men aint gonna stop him." She flung herself into a chair and began to drum on the table with her fingers.

The men were amazed. Time and again Bill had tried to say something; but fit words wouldn't come to his mouth. He could merely gape and swallow. "Gone back to work? Tom! Impossible. You don't really mean, Mrs. Burkin that he's gonna scab on us? Why——" Bill couldn't continue. A marked feeling of disgust could be seen coming over Whitey's and Perkins' faces. And without waiting for an answer to Bill's last question, they all left the room, slamming the door behind them.

TOM, when he came back to the mine was looked at rather skeptically. But on assurance of his "good faith" they let him enter. His day in the mine was a living torture. Tools kept dropping from his hands. He would often bang his head on the water pipes which ran thru the mine. This angered him at times so that he was prompted to glare at the pipes, and make childish gestures at it. The day dragged on for him. It was almost with a prayer of relief that he welcomed quitting time. The cool air of the street felt so good to him. He walked slowly—leisurely down the street. He wanted to delay his homecoming. He wondered a bit that the streets should be deserted at this time of day. But soon he found out why. He was just rounding Main Street from Perry's Road and there he saw a great crowd collected. He could not quite make out what it was about from the distance. But as he neared, he could make out Bill's features standing on a barrel and talking to the mob. It first dawned upon him that this was the strikers' meeting. Some one had seen him. The word "scab" reached his ears. Soon the voice became louder. He was being jeered. "Hey, you scab b——d," someone shouted. His blood rushed to his face. He turned back off the street. He wasn't afraid physically, but he couldn't stand the jeering. "Blackleg! Fink! Scab! You lousy b——d of a scab." He accelerated his pace. Now he almost ran. And it was with almost a sigh of relief that he banged open the door of his house and flopped into a chair. He could still hear the ringing in his ears. Faintly the terms scab—blackleg seethed thru his mind. Marge came in from the bedroom. She greeted him with a "good evening, Tom." and went over to be kissed. But Tom felt irritable. Nervous. He could hardly keep his body from shaking. They called him scab. Scab, scab, scab. He never knew that a word could have such a filthy, vile meaning. He flung his cap into a corner of the couch and sat down at the table. The meal was eaten practically in silence. Margaret did not care to talk. She could see how he was suffering. The meal being over, Tom stretched himself full length upon the couch staring at the ceiling. He was wondering what the men were doing. Margaret busied herself about the room. It was about nine o'clock when Margaret asked him if he wouldn't go to bed. "No," he answered, "I'll sleep here tonight." And he turned his face to the wall. Margaret slowly went to the bedroom.

IT was the seventh week of the strike. The scabs were escorted to and from work by armed deputies. The strikers could be seen marching in twos down the street singing. They had been admonished to do no harm to strike-breakers. The Daily Worker was being freely distributed among the striking miners. Relief was promised. If they would only hold out. If a mine could only be disabled. Scabs were not so easy to be gotten. The mine company knew the that if the mine could be kept running by the few men they had, they'd starve the strikers back to work. The mine was well guarded. Twenty armed deputies stood around it to see nothing damaging was attempted. The smiling pickets were a contrast to the sour looking scabs that went in. On Tom they all looked upon as if on a Judas. The pickets would shout at the scabs at times, "Come on out and smile." "Be a man and help a man."

But there was almost complete silence when Tom entered or left the mine.

Tom walked or rather slunk home between his two deputies like a prisoner. He had become haggard and extremely irritable. Even at Tommy Junior who had come three weeks back, he looked at, as if, with a feeling that "for you I'm a renegade among men. For you," he would think, as he lifted him up from his crib and squeezed him tightly, "have I become a skunk, a scab, a filthy, good-for-nothing." And he would squeeze the infant so hard that it would cry out. He wondered if he really loved it. Margaret would run in when she heard little Tommy crying and grab it from Tom's hands. "Why you act as if you really meant to hurt it, the way you hold it and look at it," she one day remarked. And Tom's jaws clicked. And his eyes took on a far-away look. Yes, Tom was nervous. He was so more the old Tom, who'd take Marge out walking. They tried it one Sunday, but the looks of disdain on their neighbors' faces made Tom promise that they'd never go out any more during the day while the strike lasted.

THE company had gotten out an injunction. The whole town of Balmeville was boiling. The crisis would come to a head soon everyone felt. Meetings were being broken up. The strike leaders were told to leave town or they'd "get it." The company sent men around to each striker individually telling them that if they came back now, alone, they could work at the old wages. What with no picketing and no meetings being permitted, the strike leaders found themselves at their wits' end. The strike was slipping. If they could only shut the mine for a while; so as to get all men out. If only something would happen? The few men employed in the mine were seeing to it that the mine was merely kept in condition. If only these would come out. If only something happened to it. Thus were the strikers discussing among themselves. It was on a Friday. The company had announced that beginning with Monday, the mine would be working with most of the men back. And those who weren't back by Monday would lose their jobs. It was a snappy December day. The men were moving about briskly near the mine. The gruff "toot it" now and then would make the men move away a little. It was just a bit past two o'clock. The deputies were leaning against the mine entrance laughing evidently at some "good joke" the old watchman had just told them. The strikers were impatiently moving up and down the street. Suddenly a man half drenched dashed out of the mine hole and gulped, "Water main burst!" and fell down exhausted. The deputies rushed into the mine entrance and as fast returned. The strikers in the distance noticed something was wrong. They all ran over to the mine. Some of them entered. Those that entered soon returned and with half horror, half glee, announced that the mine was full of water. Men began to dash here and there. There were fourteen men who went down the mine in the morning. A hurry call for the company doctor and nurses was issued. Somehow the whole town seemed to know within an hour than an accident had occurred at the mine. Men and women and children rushed to the scene. Margaret was one of them. She forged her way to the front and wanted to know what had happened. Some one told her the mine was flooded. "Tom, Tom is down there," she gasped and elbowed her way nearer the front. Someone whispered hoarsely, "The strike is saved." "Enough damage done to make us all come back at our terms," another said. The crowd did not know how to behave. It was just what the strikers had wished for. They began to wonder how it happened. The inflowing water was stopped. There were still thirteen to be taken out. A group of strikers rushed into the mine, among them Bill. They had to get the men out. The inflow of water had ceased gas to enter the mine. It was stifling. Emergency gas masks were given the men for rescue work. Two men were dragged out, dead. Bill and his two men had about reached the center of the mine when one of the men tripped over somebody. They knelt down and saw it was Tom. He was lying almost prone on his back. In his right hand he clutched a heavy miner's pick. Bill was wondering at the peculiar way, Tom, an experienced miner, had met his death. He stood up and as he did so he banged his head on a water-main. Looking at it he saw how the pipe at that particular place was almost completely hammered thru. He glanced down at Tom. A thought flashed thru his mind, and kneeling down he lifted Tom's head from the ground. Thru the glass eyes of the gas masks each man looked at each other knowingly. Each man gave an individual caress to Tom's body; and lifting him gently, they carried him from the mine.

SHELL SHOCK.

He stumbled through the streets
night after night. He used to stop at every haberdashery; to stare at the shaded lamps in furniture stores, to smell the odors emanating from delicatessens and ice-cream parlors.

He was a lone star
unable to sustain the weight of his own shadow.

He lay on benches in the parks,
watching the unsteady
reflection of trees and sky in the pond, listening to the gurgle of the fountain.
His eyes would open wide when the trees were stirred by a breath of cool wind.

He was a cat
scampering over roofs, frightened by the scratching of his nails
on the thin gravel.

He was dazed by the song of a bird
at night; but never sang.
He listened to bright conversation of young people passing by;
but never spoke.
He craved the smooth clothes of the refined; and wore rags.

He had been a romantic youth who had lost his soul in war;
he had once been a man and was now only the shadow which he had lost.

He stumbled through alleys
and the wharves,
and couldn't even think to drown himself.
He slept in lanes
beneath broken wagons in the mud;
and the moon would pass over his face,
sallow, thin,
sanctifying by its wanness
the sorrow which he could no longer feel.

He was a piano
of which only the keys were left, with the tone haunting
somewhere in the distance.
He stumbled night after night
through the streets,
And when he had gone
one could hear the shuffling
echoes crying after him.

AUTUMN EVENING

The crude streets yield their bustle, and sickly lamps
flicker at the corners that they light.
Children clutch at the last soft shaft of day, reluctant to desert the gutter for the shacks in which their parents live.

And down the street,
roofined by gaunt factories,
dull streams monotonously pass;
—on either side of them
a butcher shop, a grocery, candy stores, exuding the sleepy lure of sloth
and undressed windows.

There is not even the sweet melancholy
of falling leaves, for this is a factory street,
and the one skinny tree
is long barren from the smoke.

You can see young people entering rooming-houses, gripping the greasy wrapper of a box-lunch,
and stumbling at the doorway
as they devour
the lines of a newspaper.

Looney Bonds

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

GREAT BRITAIN has recently been pressing France to renew the anti-Soviet instigation which was part of the foreign policy of that country until Poincare was kicked out of office a few years back. And now that Poincare is again in office, it is obvious that the British are meeting with success, even the Briand is supposed to have a free hand in running the foreign office. The conclusion of a Franco-Roumanian treaty in which France recognizes the theft of Bessarabia by Roumania as legal is considered a decidedly unfriendly act by the Soviet government.

STRANGE tho it may appear to people who are so naive that they assume that a reactionary will always follow an objectively reactionary policy, foreign minister Stresemann of Germany favors friendly relations with the Soviet Union—for business reasons. And it is reported that when Stresemann had his famous conversation with Briand at Thoiry, he remarked that in his opinion France had less to fear from Russia than from England, and that if any particular country deserved isolation, that country was Great Britain. Briand is said to have listened and kept on chewing his moustache.

BRITAIN'S foreign policy in Europe is very unsteady. Today she is flirting with Italy; tomorrow with France. Mussolini, who knows that there is a stiletto in many an Italian pocket, hankering for a nice soft spot in his anatomy, talks like a combination Caesar-Napoleon, and declares that the Mediterranean must be an Italian lake. This kind of oratory gives England the shivers, so Chamberlain has a tete-a-tete with Briand. Mussolini turns loose another yelp and Chamberlain hastens to Rome to convince Benito that he was only plotting against Russia with his friend Briand.

THO the Babbitt bible tells us that honesty is the best policy, and we must admit that it has some merit, dishonesty is the only policy for the imperialist powers. When two statesmen, representing rival powers shower compliments on each other, it is time for the camouflaged leader of the respective countries to begin kissing their wives and sweethearts good-bye and getting their hides in trim for the trench cootie. The chief reason why the capitalist powers do not open fire on each other today, is financial and moral weakness. Another good war would kill them off, so they hold their chariots.

WAR correspondents will soon be flocking into Chicago if predictions bear fruit. Two rival gangs of bootleggers have declared war on each other and the ordinance departments of both gangs have been stocking up on machine guns. Of course, the good people of the city don't want war. Neither does the police department. The latter make an honest dollar now and then out of the gangsters, according to statements made by federal sleuths.

COAL STRIKE HITS BRITAIN, SAY SAILORS

I. W. W. Seamen Refuse to Man Scab Ships

By GORDON CASCADEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 10.—Members of Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union No. 510 of the Industrial Workers of the World arriving here on ships sailing from the British Isles paint dark pictures of industrial conditions resulting from the determination of Britain's industrial czars to starve the striking miners into submission.

"Many great industries are shut down completely," a "wobbly" sailor declared on his arrival here today on a United States' shipping board steamship which carried general cargo to and from an English port. "Other industries are working a few days a week only.

Trade Losses Enormous.

"Manufacturers are bewailing the fact that foreign firms are getting their orders. Great shipbuilding and other plants are practically at a standstill.

"Despite the dismal, black, foggy days of the beastly English climate most places are going without fuel.

Government Offices Cold.

"Even government offices are without it. The strike might cease today but England would continue practically fuelless for weeks afterward.

"I was ill in an hospital where hospital clothing was changed at least once a week and often twice if visitors called to see us. Soon we were told that we must wear the same suit for three and four weeks. These hospital had little coal to heat hot water to wash clothes. At first we were permitted to take a bath every day but before I left we considered ourselves lucky if we got that privilege once in two weeks."

M. T. W. Shows Solidarity.

True to its principles, the M. T. W. is doing all possible to keep men from sailing out of the United States on scab coal boats. In every section of the world its members are spreading the word for all seamen to refuse to man boats carrying coal to the British Isles or to ports of other countries which got their supply from Britain before the strike.

An I. W. W. sailor was offered a job on the bridge of the Sudawocono, the first United States ship to carry a full cargo of scab coal out of Hampton Roads, the premier scab coal shipping port of the world.

I. W. W. Seamen "Won't Scab.

Altho this "wobbly" had been out of a job all summer he indignantly refused to scab when asked to go over to Newark to join the crew that was to man this transmarine liner.

Nine I. W. W.'s quit ship which called at Baltimore yesterday following a rumor that she was to carry scab coal to England. This boat, however, sailed for Cuba with general cargo, after several hours' delay in which she obtained another full crew.

"Wobblies" are quitting many ships both here and in Norfolk because they refuse to scab on Britain's miners.

CALIF. STEEL WORKERS PULL STRIKE ON CUT

Call on A. F. of L. for Organization Drive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Cal., Oct. 10.—When the wire drawers at the Pittsburgh plant of the Columbia Steel corporation blew the whistle, all the men in the department shut down the machinery in protest against the wage cut of from $1.60 to $2.00 per day the company was trying to force upon them.

Wire Drawers Start Strike.

Forty wire drawers went out and about 200 men were laid off.

The company at once began a campaign to break the strike, evicting nine workers who lived in the company-owned hotel when they refused to report for work.

Ask A. F. of L. for Organization.

There are over 1,200 men in the plant. The other departments received wage cuts, or "wage adjustments" recently.

The strikers are calling upon the American Federation of Labor to organize these metal workers.

Call For "Mac" Resignation.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 10.—The resolution introduced in the house of the special session of the Texas legislature late yesterday asking the immediate resignation of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, governor of Texas was to be taken up for consideration in the house today. The resolution is intended as a concurrent one for action in both houses.

SHANGHAI NEAR CAPTURE; CANTON ARMY SWEEPS IN

Britain Plans Armed Intervention

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Oct. 10.—Chinese student and labor bodies are preparing a gigantic celebration of the sweeping victories of the Cantonese national revolutionary armies which are advancing toward Shanghai down the Yangtze. The foreign settlements where are concentrated the forces of imperialism, are alarmed at the prospects of the capture of Shanghai, which is feared may be made by local Chinese even before the Cantonese reach the city.

Shanghai Chinese May Revolt.

The Shanghai Chinese are overjoyed at the reports that Wuchang and Hukiang, even a more important point down the river from Hankow, have fallen before the Cantonese, and the imperialist powers in Shanghai have called out all police reserves and special armed forces in fear of a united labor and student revolt, altho this city is supposed to be controlled by General Sun Chuan-fang, who has been fighting the advance of the Canton troops.

Troops Go Over to Cantonese.

Reports are that Wuchang, where Wu Pei-fu's troops were besieged for more then a month, fell to the Cantonese on terms whereby the troops join the Canton armies. Hukiang also was evacuated by the troops of Sun Chuan-fang, probably by troop desertions. Sun has been unable to control

GREEN SEEKS ALIBI FOR GIVING EDDY FLOOR AT A. F. OF L. MEET

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10. — Five officials of the American Federation of Labor were addressing audiences in local churches today, as the guests of dollar-subsidized religion, while the bitter controversy still raged as to whether Dr. Sherwood Eddy, international secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, had broken away from an alleged gag that President Green claimed was imposed upon him here last Thursday before he was allowed to take the platform and tell of his recent trip to Europe, which included a visit to the Union of Soviet Republics.

Open Shops Relent—A Little

Altho the local Y. M. C. A. was closed against President Green, hardboiled capitalism locally relented sufficiently to make it possible for Green, Frank L. Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L.; John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor; Robert M. Fechner, of the Machinists' Union; and James Wilson, of the patternmakers, to address audiences in churches.

Even two addresses by Albert F. Coyle, of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, before two churches were announced to the A. F. of L., altho the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is not affiliated to that body. The labor addresses were arranged by the Federated Churches of Christ of America, a buffer institution between the class-conscious workers and mammonized religion.

Free Speech, But Not Too Free!

While enjoying this semblance of free speech at the hands of the employers' religion, the A. F. of L. officials continue to let loose new attacks against Eddy's attempt to tell the delegates a little of the truth about the Soviet Union.

President Green still persists that he merely invited Eddy to address the convention on the former's oester from the Y. M. C. A. because it had received huge sums of money for its building program from open shop interests and did not want to endanger these sources of income.

Contributions to the Y. M. C. A. building fund made public today include the following: Henry Ford, $100,000; Edsel Ford, $750,000; Fisher Brothers (auto body manufacturers), $500,000; S. S. Kresge 15 and 10 cent story king), $500,000; Mrs. Hannan (Hannan Real Estate Exchange), $100,000. Other large employers, all hostile to union labor, also contributed huge sums.

Green's Alibi Weak.

That President Green, however, had no reference to his clash with dollar-subsidized Y. M. C. A. is clearly shown by the nature of his remarks in presenting Eddy to the convention. These remarks were fully reported in Saturday's issue of The DAILY WORKER, and show that Green boasted of the free speech privilege that he was according to Dr. Eddy. Surely Dr. Eddy needed the enjoyment of no free speech right to defend Green against those who were attacking him. Nevertheless, Green is rallying all his friends to support him in his alibi. Dr. Eddy has wired his version of the whole affair to Detroit as follows:

Eddy's Statement.

"I was asked by certain labor leaders to go to Detroit and speak at the American Federation of Labor convention on conditions in Russia. Mr. Green, president of the federation, asked me before the meeting not to refer to the question of the present government in Russia as it was a controversial question before the conven-

RESOLUTION FOR FIVE-DAY PLAN IS WEAK

"Progressive Shortening" Sole Demand

By J. LOUIS ENGOAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10.—Vice-Presidents James Duncan and Matthew Woll are whipping together the report of the resolutions committee that goes to the American Federation of Labor convention here today as a special order of business at the opening of the afternoon's session.

Chief among the resolutions are those demanding recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics, opposing the league of nations, the world court and the so-called international labor office attached to the league, seeking an investigation of the latest developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, attacking race discrimination in the unions, opposing Citizens' Military Training Camps and rejecting the fascist theory of government.

"We expect our report to cover at least two days," announced Chairman Duncan, of the committee, "as there are several very important matters before it."

The convention adopted the report of the committee on shorter workday, which refused to take a definite stand for the five-day week, instead favoring a "progressive shortening of the work-week."

Cap Makers Demand 5-Day Week.

The demand for the five-day week came up in resolutions offered by the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' delegation.

Delegate Max Zuckerman spoke in favor of the resolution and against the report of the committee. He pointed out that the five-day week had already been won in some of the needle trades.

Delegate John P. Frey furnished elaborate statistics to show the increased per capita production of workers in different industries. The output per man in the General Motors Corporation, for instance, has

MUSSOLINI PREPARING FOR WAR ON TURKEY SAYS LONDON EXPRESS

LONDON, Oct. 10.—"Premier Mussolini is preparing for war against Turkey," says a sensational article appearing in the Daily Express.

The article declares the Italian dictator wants "to secure a sphere of influence on the coast of Turkey which had been promised to Italy in 1915 by the famous secret pact of London which came to light in 1919 to trouble the peace delegates at the Versailles conference. The signatories to this pact were Russia, France, Great Britain and Italy."

ANOTHER NEGRO FALLS VICTIM TO ROPE AND BULLETS OF WHITE MOB

DOVER, Tenn., Oct. 10.—Herbert Bell, Negro, was taken from the county jail here shortly after midnight by a mob of seventy-five men, carried into the woods three miles from here, hanged to a tree and his body was riddled with bullets.

Bell was held on a charge of murder following the death of Rufus Joyner, farmer, of Clarksville, Tenn., several days ago. Yesterday in court at Clarksville, Sheriff Ellis was forced to draw his pistol to protect the Negro and his wife from spectators in the courtroom.

Forward to the $10,000 Mark Goal to Keep the Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

As this statement is written the full returns of the appeal to raise $6,000 of the $60,000 Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund during the past week are not all in. The remittances on Monday will show how near to the $6,000 total the contributions ran.

We can say now, however, that the response made during the week together with the funds that will reach The DAILY WORKER Monday, have made it possible to meet the urgent debts due on Monday and save the situation for another week.

But this has not put The DAILY WORKER out of danger. We told the party and the sympathizers with its work at the beginning of the campaign that $10,000 must be raised within two weeks to carry The DAILY WORKER thru. Our campaign, however, has been slow in getting under way. The total thus far has been:

|---|---|
| Sept. 18—First week | $ 339.50 |
| Sept. 25—Second week | 612.10 |
| Oct. 2—Third week | 1,360.53 |
| Oct. 4—Monday | 136.00 |
| Oct. 5—Tuesday | 374.50 |
| Oct. 6—Wednesday | 508.00 |
| Oct. 7—Thursday | 360.00 |
| Oct. 8—Friday | 314.05 |
| Oct. 9—Saturday | 265.75 |
| | $3,833.93 |
| Estimated for Monday, Oct. 11 | 1,800.00 |
| | $5,338.86 |

If Monday's estimate is fulfilled we will still be short $5,000 of the first $10,000. Because of the slow returns at the beginning of the campaign, The DAILY WORKER has been obliged to postpone obligations which were already long overdue. These have now accumulated so that the real crisis for The DAILY WORKER will come during the present week.

We cannot postpone meeting the pressing obligations of The DAILY WORKER any longer. We have exhausted the possibilities of doing that.

THIS FRANK STATEMENT OF THE SITUATION OF THE DAILY WORKER IS MADE TO THE PARTY MEMBERS AND SYMPATHIZERS TO SHOW THE NEED OF PUSHING THE WORK OF COLLECTING THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND WITH EVEN GREATER ENERGY.

The contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund last week were as large as for the previous three weeks. The amount raised during this week must be as large as for the previous four weeks.

ON MONDAY, OCTOBER 18, AT THE LATEST, WE MUST REACH THE $10,000 MARK IN ORDER TO PULL THROUGH.

That means that the pace at which the collections and contributions are made must increase during this week at even a greater ratio than during last week. Those party units which have not gone into action must take up the work in earnest. Thus far about 10% of the party membership has responded. The remaining 90% must join the fight to raise The DAILY WORKER fund.

THE PARTY, WITH THE HELP OF ITS SYMPATHIZERS, CAN MAKE THE $10,000 MARK BY OCTOBER 18, IF IT GOES TO WORK IN EARNEST.

Mobilize every resource of the party. Let every member purchase a $6.00 book of Keep The DAILY WORKER certificates. Sell the coupons among the sympathizers with the party.

The campaign to Keep The DAILY WORKER is now really on. The crisis of The DAILY WORKER has awakened the party. Carry forward the work with greater energy.

LET US WRITE A VICTORY FOR OUR MOVEMENT THRU THE RAISING OF THE FIRST TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS. LET US SHOW THAT OUR PARTY IS ALIVE TO ITS RESPONSIBILITIES AND ABLE TO MEET THEM BY PUSHING THE TOTAL TO $10,000 THIS WEEK.

THEN WE CAN TAKE A NEW BREATH AND GO FORWARD TO THE COMPLETION OF THE $50,000 FUND WITH THE CERTAINTY THAT WE WILL KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

WATCH THE REPORT OF THE CONTRIBUTIONS AS THEY APPEAR IN THE DAILY WORKER FROM DAY TO DAY. THEY WILL SHOW HOW HARD WE MUST PUSH FORWARD TO COMPLETE THE FIRST $10,000 AND MAKE SURE WE WILL KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

...L FORD ...ER SOLD ...OUT AT PLANT

...e Buy 2,000 Like Hot Cakes

By LENA ROSENBERG.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10.—Two ... copies of the Special Ford ... of The DAILY WORKER dated ... were sold like hot cakes to the ... in the Ford Highland Park ... The previous record for sales ... the paper at this plant was 125 ... copies.

A week had passed since the Ford announcement of the five-day week. When the special edition was announced we in Detroit wondered how those who worked for such a "benevolent" boss would receive it.

Great Surprise.

At 2 p. m. last Thursday we took our places at the gates with the 2,000 copies, not expecting even to sell 1,000, just to our great surprise, more than in any other time in our experience, workmen were taking a great interest in the paper and buying it as fast as we could make the change. This proved to us that the workers in the Ford plant are not being fooled in by the five-day week stuff and that The Ford Worker, the Communist bulletin in the shop, is having its effect.

All Sold.

When 5 o'clock came every one of the 2,000 copies had been sold. This shows that the auto workers of Detroit are ready for organization. It shows that the A. F. of L. convention meeting here had better not overlook the opportunity—or it may have another "Passaic" to deal with.

...esolution for Five Day Plan Is Weak

doubled within recent years. Since the inauguration of the eight-hour day in the steel industry, production has increased 50 per cent per capita. In the handling of pig iron seven men do the work formerly done by 125.

To Begin or Not Begin.

Delegate James Duncan came to the battle line with an amendment asking that the word "continue" be inserted for "begin," declaring that the A. F. of L. had always fought for the shorter workday. He denounced some of Frey's statistics. Frey came back with the declaration that he didn't mean to "begin" the fight for the shorter workday, but that he wanted to begin to gather material about increased per capita production, a new phase of this struggle.

Duncan denounced "Bethlehem" and "Lawrence" as two industrial spots where the lowest wages are paid under the highest tariff.

Printer for 4-Day Week.

Delegate John C. Harding, of the printers, declared that the fight should be made for the four-hour day and four-day week.

Delegate James Lynch, also of the printers, declared he did not share the tears that President James O'Connell had shed over the workers in the metal industry, especially the men who work on Scrap No. 999.

"I do not believe that Henry Ford himself could eliminate this process from specialised industry," said Lynch.

"Our task is to remedy the fatigue and the atrophy that develops as a result of the repetitive process in industry."

He declared this could only be done by the shorter workday and the shorter work-week, giving the worker an opportunity to get the poison out of his system and recuperate for the new week's labors.

President Green also spoke, worrying about what the worker would do during his leisure time.

No Real Fight.

The resolution carried unanimously as amended by the committee. Thus the A. F. of L. makes no definite fight for the five-day week.

The convention voted for the anti-repeal 44-hour week for all government employes. This provides for the Saturday half-holiday.

It was also voted to increase the monthly dues of the federal labor unions from 75 cents to $1 per month, with the per capita to the A. F. of L. increased from 25 to 25 cents per month. The maximum initiation fee was also raised from $10 to $25 for the federal labor unions. There was little opposition to this boost.

Green Seeks Alibi for Eddy Speech

tion. I told that at most I had only intended to say that I would approve of the recognition of Russia only on the basis of President Coolidge's three conditions, mentioned in his address to congress in 1922, but that if he wished I would omit this reference and would not ever refer to recognition. This agreement I scrupulously fulfilled, never once mentioning the subject of recognition.

"I never referred to the local disputes with the churches, and said at the outset that I was speaking as a private individual representing no organization. I spoke, as I told Mr. Green and others that I would, on labor conditions in England, France, Germany and Russia, mentioning the strong and weak points in the present Soviet regime."

Federated Press Hits Green's Alibi.

Eddy's contentions are also strongly bolstered up a version of the affair sent out thru the Federated Press by its manag..ng editor, Carl Haessler, as follows:

"At the convention hotel, after Eddy's address, a statement was made by President Green, Vice-Presidents Woll and Duncan, and by Treasurer Tobin that Eddy had shown bad faith.

Recognition Only Ban on Free Speech.

"This opinion was not shared by informed delegates who had learned of the conditions agreed on in advance by Green and Eddy. According to these delegates Eddy had said to Green several hours beforehand: 'Let us be frank Mr. Green; I intend to emphasize Russia.' 'Very well,' Green was overheard to reply, 'but do not confine recognition.' To this Eddy agreed and kept his agreement in his speech. The accidental witness of the agreement is a member of the same union as Green, the United Mine Workers of America."

This Federated Press version is the same as that sent out last week by your correspondent.

Green's After-thought.

If Eddy had betrayed Green's confidence, then Green certainly had an opportunity to tell it to the convention immediately Eddy had finished. But he did not do this. In fact, he didn't begin hurling charges at Eddy until the diehard reactionaries got busy. Green has completely surrendered to them, but this will not help those thinking elements, small tho they may be, who have a few thoughts of their own.

In any event, Green's assault on Eddy has proved that free speech has less of a chance in an American Federation of Labor convention than it has in a mammonised church, especially when some one comes wanting to shed light of truth on the Russian situation in favor of the workers' government.

Open Shop Not Debatable.

President Green has even received a letter from C. B. Van Dusen, president of the Detroit Y. M. C. A., inviting him to speak before the members of that "open shop" enbalmed outfit at some future time. The letter concludes:

"In view of the garbled reports of our interview on this matter, let me again reiterate the statement I made to you, that upon any occasion when an acute controversial situation such as the present does not exist, you will be a welcome speaker at any one of our Sunday afternoon meetings that will best suit your convenience."

Very evidently the great employing interests are willing to forgive President Green all else if he will only carry on his vicious attack against the Soviet Union. Especially when that attack is also levelled against Dr. Eddy, whom the big exploiters at the head of the Y. M. C. A. are seeking to rid themselves of, in fact, have been trying to do so for several years.

The officialdom of the A. F. of L. declares there are no divisions among them. They greatly resent that The DAILY WORKER should point out any differences. Altho no statement was made to the effect that Mathew Woll would contend for the presidency against William Green this year, nevertheless the head of the Photo Engravers' Union has issued a lengthy statement declaring for re-election of William Green, claiming he is too busy with the development of the Union Labor Life Insurance Company right now, the major task being to raise $400,000 "capital and surplus."

Delegate James Lynch, of the printers' union, has also come out with a statement declaring he will not contest the election of Frank L. Morrison for re-election as secretary.

Sun Retreats to Nanking.

Sun reports that he has "withdrawn" to Nanking, where he is to make a "final stand." He has now been forced to evacuate the rich province of Kiangsi, and the Cantonese have taken full control of that section. They ordered Sun a month ago to get out of the province and have made good their warning.

Cables from London say that Great Britain is preparing armed intervention in China and that by October 15, sufficient armed forces will be concentrated at Canton to make an attack in force upon the Canton government. Two thousand marines are to be landed first under protection of naval bombardment, according to reported plans.

Ready for War.

British marines have already landed at Hankow on the pretension of guarding the British concession, and two more gunboats have reached Chungking, for up the Yangtze near the recent troubles at Wanhsien. In addition, there are American, French and Japanese gunboats there.

The imperialist powers are angered by the Canton government's recent announcement that it will carry out the tariff customs terms of the Washington conference, collecting the 2½ per cent tariff of general commodities and five per cent on luxuries.

Foreign ships will be required to pay that Chinese customs be collected by themselves, and not by the Chinese, thus weakening the government because the powers kept the revenue for payments of loans previously forced upon the country.

Foster and Gold to Discuss A. F. of L. Meeting at Detroit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10.— William Z. Foster and Ben Gold will address a mass meeting of the Trade Union Educational League in Detroit, Tuesday, Oct. 13, at the McCollester Hall, corner Forest and Cass streets.

The subject will be "The American Federation of Labor Convention" now in session in the city of Detroit.

What is the answer of the A. F. of L. convention to the pleas of the millions of unorganised workers in the basic industries and what are the proposals of the Trade Union Educational League and the left wing to these problems, will be the questions dealt with by the speakers.

Members of the trade unions of Detroit who are vitally interested in the labor movement are invited to hear these important problems discussed from the left wing point of view. Admission of 25 cents will be charged.

CLOAK MAKERS PREPARING TO FIGHT IT OUT

Strike Relief Fund Arm I. L. G. Pickets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 10.—Financial reinforcements are pouring into the treasury of the joint board, Cloak, Suit, Skirt and Dress Makers' unions, 130 East 25th street, to so satisfactory a degree, that the general strike of 40,000 cloakmen of New York and the vicinity can be successfully maintained indefinitely, the union has announced after tabulation of incoming funds.

Further impetus was received at a meeting of representatives of local trade union bodies at the International Auditorium, 3 West 16th street. The meeting was called for the purpose of effectively combatting the injunction against the striking cloakmakers, and also took measures to aid the strikers financially.

Settled Shops Make Up Half.

From one source alone, the levy upon workers in settled shops, there are obtained funds to meet half the strike benefits of the men and women still on the picket line. The strike benefits of $7 and $10 weekly for single and married men and women, respectively, average $150,000. At a stormy meeting in Cooper Union of workers employed in shops that have already acceded to the union terms, assessments upon them were voluntarily increased from 15 to 20 per cent of their weekly wages. This will automatically bring into the union treasury $75,000 per week to meet half the total strike benefits.

In addition to voting 20 per cent of their weekly wages to support their fellow workers still on strike, 10,000 cloakmakers at work have already given the union an additional one day's pay, the total sums obtained from both sources being $150,000. While this additional day's pay is not a regular donation, it is expected to be forthcoming voluntarily whenever the finances of the striking cloakmaker are require it.

Other Needle Trade Unions Donate.

Large sums have been obtained from other sources, and more is forthcoming. The Amelgamated Clothing Workers of America have voted $50,000 in installments to the besieged strikers. Of this amount, $10,000 was promptly received. The Rochester unions of the same organization contribute $5,000. The Boston ladies' garment workers contributed $5,000 to their striking brethren. The bonnas embroidery workers of the city, a small organization, have voted to tax themselves to $5 each. They expect to raise $6,000, of which $3,000 is already on hand.

In response to the appeal of the American Federation of Labor and affiliated international bodies for funds, the A. F. of L., at its convention in Detroit, made the call a special order of business and ordered voluntary immediate assistance. International bodies affiliated with it are already responding.

NO DELEGATE TO AMERICAN LEGION FROM A. F. OF L.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10.—There will be no representative of the American Federation of Labor officially attending the annual gathering of the American Legion. Instead President Green said a greeting would be sent in response to the greeting just received from John R. Quinn, national commander of the American Legion, reading in part as follows:

"As national organizer of the American Legion it is my privilege to send this word of greeting to the members of the American Federation of Labor assembled at their annual gathering. Were it not that our national convention comes on approximately the same dates as your own I would cast everything else I might have arranged aside and accept your kind invitation to be present and speak a personal word of greeting and extend our good wishes to you. I know you will understand why at this particular time it is impossible, but I sincerely hope you will convey to the delegates and friends in attendence at your convention the warmest thanks of the American Legion for all the American Federation of Labor has done and is doing to promulgate those things which tend toward a greater and more peaceful citizenship and which we so fatally endorse. May the years to come see the bonds of friendship between the American Federation of Labor and the American Legion grow stronger and stronger."

Delegate George L. Berry, head of the pressmen's union, is in the convention. He usually serves in the capacity of messenger of greetings between the two organizations, having been a vice commander of the legion. ... not known why he wasn't sent ...

The Sacco and Vanzetti Case Is Before A. F. of L. Convention at Detroit

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE fight for the lives of the Glean war prisoners, Nick Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, is before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in Detroit.

That is not saying very much, of course. This struggle has been before every A. F. of L. convention since the United States government first put its bloody clutches upon the throats of these two courageous militants of labor. It often entered as an uninvited guest. It was never welcome.

Last year the effort to keep the Sacco-Vanzetti case before American labor, thru securing repeated action by the A. F. of L., resulted in a severe rebuff from the stolid reaction. In the words of Vice-President Matthew Woll, reporting for the resolutions committee, "We have adopted similar resolutions several years in succession. We are on record in the case. These resolutions should, therefore, not be brought in here year after year in this way." And the Sacco-Vanzetti resolution introduced last year at Atlantic City was forthwith consigned to the waste basket.

This year, however, the powerful fist of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, demanding attention, crashes its way upward thru the floor of the A. F. of L. convention hall.

Last year the resolution was introdnced by the delegation of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, but not a single member of the delegation raised his voice in favor of it.

This year the resolution is presented by Delegate Samuel Spnibb, of the International Granite Cutters' Union, one of the most reactionary organizations in the whole A. F. of L. Its chief spokesman, James Duncan, is first vice-president of the A. F. of L., perhaps the staunchest supporters of the late Gompers' policies. He felt himself the logical successor of Gompers, but Green got the job. Thus even this wing of the A. F. of L. recognizes that "The case of Sacco and Vanzetti has again come before the public." Every worker in the land should read the resolutions which are as follows:

"Where, after six years of imprisonment those who take an interest in this case are now more convinced than ever that Sacco and Vanzetti are not guilty of the crime of which they are charged with and convicted for, and

"Whereas, the motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence, primarily on the conclusive evidence of Fred. E. Moderine, is now before the court of Massachusetts, and

"Whereas, on this motion for a new trial, affidavits of former agents of the department of justice of the United States have been produced that show there are records on file in the office of the department of justice, establishing the fact that there was collaboration between the department of justice and the district attorney of Norfolk county to convict Sacco and Vanzetti on charges of a crime, of which the department of justice did not believe them guilty, and

"Whereas, the attorney general has refused access to the records in the case to the counsel for the defense, in spite of his urgent request for the same, and

"Whereas, a large number of the international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are deeply interested in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti and have by resolutions adopted at their conventions, expressed the sentiment of their members on this matter, be it therefore

"Resolved, that the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled demand an immediate investigation by the congress of the United States of the actions of the agents of the department of justice; the connection of the department of justice with the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti, and the refusal of the department of justice to disclose its files on the Sacco and Vanzetti case, be it further

"Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the president and congress of the United States."

Not a very militant resolution, to be sure. Requesting a congressional investigation is an easy method of dodging the real issue, especially when congress is not in session, as is the case at the present time. But even this is something. The laboring masses over the land must rise and demand more.

Madeiros, who would be the chief witness for Sacco and Vanzetti, should a new trial be granted, is himself sentenced to die Oct. 27. Judge Webster Thayer may hand down a decision at any hour ordering Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair. The hour doesn't wait for congress to assemble.

With the passage of the above resolution there the A. F. of L. convention, the protest should grow so big over the land that the department of justice will be forced itself to disgorge the documents, now held in secret, that would so clearly show the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti, that even a capitalist judge, time-servor of his class, would not dare rule against the demand for a new trial.

It is, of course, good to know that the A. F. of L. convention will be told that the case of Sacco and Vanzetti is again before the public. very class conscious worker knows and feels that it has been before the whole working class clamoring for attention, since the day more than six years ago that saw the arrest of these two workers. If must stay there, for all the world to see, until Sacco and Vanzetti are free.

ANTHRACITE MINERS DIG DOWN TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER

The anthracite miners, battling against the most corrupt and reactionary bureaucracy in the American trade union movement as well as against a highly trustified group of capitalists are on the job striking telling blows for The DAILY WORKER.

The Luzerne Street Nucleus Number One of the Workers (Communist) Party of America has just sent in $100.00 to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. This was collected from the anthracite miners who are now engaged in a big fight to SAVE THE UNION.

The anthracite miners realise that The DAILY WORKER has done more than its bit for building up a powerful militant union of miners. This $100.00 is only the beginning of a number of big contributions that the anthracite miners are sending in for The DAILY WORKER.

Will you join and be with the militant miners of the anthracite coal fields?

The workers of Philadelphia are doing so!

We have just received $100.00 from the Philadelphia section of the Workers (Communist) Party. The workingmen and workingwomen of this city are surely heart and soul in the campaign to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

Will you pitch in?

We know you will!

This means every worker who is for the working class, and its militant champion, The DAILY WORKER.

GAPPELLINI IS FIGHTING HARD COAL DIGGERS

Unions Reviving Their Grievance Committees

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 10.—The general grievance committee of the Glen Alden Coal company meets on the first and third Saturday afternoon, in Union Hall, 12 Market street. Two-thirds of the mines of the Glen Alden company are represented on the committee.

The reorganization of the grievance committee is a sign that the miners are ignoring the opposition of Rinaldo Capellini and his district board, who are hostile to any attempt on the part of the miners to take the initiative in solving their problems.

Delegates from the grievance committee of the Glen Alden Coal company are urging the organization of a general grievance body made up of delegate from all collieries.

Every progressive miner in the district is intent on getting his local represented in this committee.

wife or a chunk of real estate, he takes out his squad and his flivver and whenever he spots a bootlegger or gangster, he shoves him onto the curb and concocts a sentence in which a $100 bill figures. The gangster usually has a one hundred per cent spot in his jeans and everybody goes his way.

SO there are reasons why the police are averse to seeing the gangsters slaughter each other. Recently a peace conference between the rival gangsters took place. Besides the plainclothesmen from both sides there were present a policeman and a big politician. The conference was no more successful than the last meeting of the league of nations. One side wanted the heads of the leaders of the rival gang. This concession was not granted, so the meeting adjourned. "We'll meet in the morgue," they observed jauntily and departed. Such is life in a big and thriving American city. Now, if it happened in Moscow—

THIS fellow Stephenson of Indianapolis who made governors and unmade politicians of all kinds who failed to follow his instructions was a many sided character. He made over a million dollars in a few years out of the white shirt business. Nobody knew very much about his history, except that he learned the tar and feathering business from the chief kluxer of the southlands. Stephenson was one of the lads who was going to preserve the American woman in all her natal purity. He was also out to bury Jack Lait's newsyorn.

STEPHENSON did neither. In fact he did what he could to do the opposite. It can be said to his credit that he never drank moonshine. Nothing but the best from Andy Mellon's distilleries would satisfy his palate. He was a diplomat. Being the unofficial boss of Indiana, his house was the scene of many meetings, parties and conferences. When churchmen visited his home, bibles were placed where the clerical eye could not fail to see them. But when more worldly persons were his guests women, rye and free, in scanty attire took the place of the bibles. And the rum flowed.

STEPHENSON was very much in the public eye those days. Suddenly special writers "discovered" him. He talked of the nation and its dreams. A little bit of a Napoleon was Stephenson. And the Hoosiers lapped up his publicity, just as greedily as Stephenson lapped up his whisky. Yes! The Hoosiers were giving him their money to protect their women from shame and their sons from intoxication. Stephenson debauched thousands in all-night liquor parties and wound up his career by raping a girl, who afterwards died from her injuries.

• • •

DO the saps who were carried away by their exhibitionist's imbecilities still believe in the K. K. K.? It is too much to expect that wisdom should strike them over night. In all probability, another klan organizer could prove to their satisfaction that their former dragon was stung by the devil, the pope or by an agent of the liquor interests. And they would go as nutty about the new joker as they did about the first scamp. Barnum knew that suckers are born every minute, and he made a fortune. But it seems that there are periods when the suckers bite more savagely than usual. The period since "Emperor Simmons" sold his first night shirt until recently was the greatest open season on suckers that this country has ever known.

MOSCOW ANTI-SOVIET LIES PLANNED

Beware of Stories of Soviet "Uprisings"

MOSCOW, Sept. 18—(By Mail) — The press of the Soviet Union publishes a report from Vienna. The report is from a reliable source and concerns the close co-operation between Bucharest and Warsaw for the purpose of organizing an anti-soviet campaign in the European and American press. Warsaw will take over the leadership of this campaign.

Made in Warsaw.

Material is being fabricated in the Polish foreign ministry concerning an alleged movement of the opposition in the C. P. of the U. S. S. R. to bring about a change of government. The "documents" which are in preparation in Warsaw will be handed to the Roumanian government which will then publish them in the press.

According to a pre-arranged plan, this task will be carried out by the war ministry under the leadership of the onetime poet and present fascist Octavio Goga.

Same Old Lies.

In this connection one must remember that the recent campaign in the bourgeois press against the Soviet Union which has recently weakened, also came in the first instance from Warsaw and Bucharest working closely together.

HOPE CANADA MAY HALT U.S. IMPERIALISM

Latin-Americans Have Illusion of Rivalry

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Latin-American diplomats in Washington are eagerly watching the British imperial conference soon to meet in London, to see whether it will grant Canada permission to have a diplomatic representative in the American capital. The believe that if Canada wins this right she will take a seat also in the Pan-American Union, and then the beginning of the end of Washington's hoss-ship of Latin America will be at hand.

Canadian Bankers in South.

Canadian nationalists of the British variety complain that the influence of the United States is greater today in Canada than is the influence of British. French Canadian nationalists, on the other hand, insist that Canada must further loosen her bonds with the mother country.

Meanwhile the British-Canadian financial power, embodied especially in the Royal Bank of Canada, has invaded Cuba and other Latin-American republics in competition with Wall Street banks. In Cuba both the National City Bank and the Royal Bank of Canada serve the American sugar trust, but their interests are not wholly identical.

The diplomats from Caribbean and South American countries are hopeful that if Canada breaks into the Pan-American Union the trade advantages of that organization will stimulate the Canadians to establish an anti-Washington policy and program. If the two northern countries can ho played off against each other, the Latins think, Latin American may get a chance.

When the Pan-American Union was first started, Canada was informally assured that a seat would be ready for her whenever she could persuade London to let her occupy it. Premier King is ready to demand permission.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY PRESIDENT TELLS OF GREAT PROGRESS MADE BY RUSSIA, PRAISES GOVERNMENT

By MAX GOHN.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 10.—Russia is the most stable state in Europe and is going to endure, in the opinion of Dr. W. Burnham, of St. Louis, president of the Interdenominational Missionary Society. He recently came back from an extended tour of Soviet Russia and was in close contact with conditions there.

"Industry is 90 per cent of pre-war, despite the loss of 10,000,000 men during the war, the terrible famine, civil war and the allied blockade," Dr. Burnham told the missionary convention here, "and since body being held in this city. He said that one of the most impressive things in Russia was the thirst for knowledge, and how this desire was satisfied as rapidly as conditions would permit.

Thousands Study.

"Thousands of young men and women could be seen reading their way, not to movies or dances, but to halls where they were taught the sciences and economics. They had few books and were forced to take down notes as the teacher spoke. They are being trained to become experts in leading industry and education by means of western scientific knowledge.

Workers Are Safe.

"One feels safer on the streets of Moscow alone at night than on the streets of St. Louis," he said. "There are no holdups because no one has more than the other."

The tales about the breakdown of industry, the pillaging of church treasures, the wholesale murder which were carried in capitalist newspapers are all false, according to Dr. Burnham. As a missionary, Dr. Burnham stressed the attitude of the Soviet government toward the church. Altho the party in power is atheistic, there are no restrictions against attending church. No one under 18 can be taught religion except by the parents. "When a schoolchild asks: "Is there a god?" the teacher says, "Wait till you grow older."

Great Youth Movement.

Dr. Burnham also told about the great youth movement of Russia. There are 800,000 Communist youth, 600,000 Young Pioneers and 450,000 Young Leninists.

He told of lectures being run from village to village for the purpose of teaching the peasants the world's knowledge. Maps were painted on the cars and an instructor would gather the population around him while he told them of other people and other lands.

Progressed Far, He says.

The activities of the youth of Russia and their devotion to their country exceeds anything Dr. Burnham has ever seen. The Russians are trying in the best way they know how to bring order and light into their lives. They have done much in the last eight years.

He added that train service is good. Trains are usually on time. He was delayed once for six hours on account of a washout, but for the same reason he was nine hours late getting to Peoria last night.

"We were treated better in Russia than anywhere else we traveled."

Guatemalan Labor Supports Liberal Nicaraguan Revolt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Guatemala's Confederation of Labor has called William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asking him to mediate in behalf of the Nicaraguan liberals who now are fighting to restore constitutional government and the liberties of labor in Nicaragua.

Green replied that he had already taken steps to help the Nicaraguan liberals and workers wisely present their case at the proper moment to the American state department. He expressed his hope of the early return of constitutional rule in Nicaragua.

Australia Will Back Pan-Pacifist Meeting

SYDNEY —(FP)— At the All-Australian Trade Union Congress at Sydney, attended by delegates from all parts of Australia, J. S. Garden, secretary of the Labor Council of New South Wales, read an exhaustive report upon the proposed held a Pan-Pacific conference. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"That this 2 All-Australian Trades Union congress resolves: (1) To take an active part in the struggle towards international trade union unity and to assist in calling a single world congress of all trade union organizations; (2) to attend the Pan-Pacific Trade Union conference to be called in Boston May 1 1927; (3) to issue an appeal to all workers of the Pacific, pointing out the necessity of unification of their forces against international capitalism and its war preparations; (4) to send greetings to the awakened Chinese workers and their trade unions; (5) to accept the invitation of the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions to send as soon as possible an official trade union delegation to Soviet Russia."

It is stated that Pres. Green of the American Federation of Labor, is hesitating to send even an observer to the Pan-Pacific labor conference, though United States labor is deeply involved in the fate of the Pacific.

HANKOW TRADE UNIONS JOYFUL OVER WU DEFEAT

Cantonese Lift Ban On Labor Organizations

(From Our Own Correspondent)
(By courtesy of the People's Army Stat)

HANKOW, (By Mail.)—The Workers of this district have already begun to feel the difference between the militarist and nationalist regimes. The political department of the Canton army has been removed here today from Changsha, and begins propaganda work immediately.

The first result will ho that thirty-two trade unions and labor organizations suppressed by Wu will function again. At mass meetings and lectures, and by means of leaflets and pamphlets, the workers are having the Knomintang program and policy explained to them.

A delegate conference of the whole district (covering Hankow, Hanyang and Wuchang) decided on a one-day stoppage of work to celebrate the victory of the People's army. The British-American tobacco factory has closed down for a few days, fearing that the prevailing enthusiasm may lead the workers to put in their long-standing demand for higher wages (tobacco workers are paid about 7s. a week).

German Rail Bonds to Be Sold in America to Get Reparations Cash

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 - American investors will probably soon be offered an issue of bonds secured by the German national railways, but thus far the bankers have not asked the state department to approve the sale. Reports from Paris that the French, Belgian and British governments had approached Secretary Kellogg for his approval of floating the loan in America are denied by Kellogg.

He does not deny that the bonds will be sold here, but on the contrary he points out that the Dawes plan for regulation of German reparations payments contains a scheme for bonding the German railways in order to raise cash for reparations.

Germany is not paying over to the conquering powers any more, thus far, than she is borrowing in the United States. Bigger payments under the Dawes' plan are due. Bonding the national railways of Germany is one of the resources yet unspent. No obstacles to the transaction are in sight, so far as the state department word. American investors will presumably absorb the bonds quickly when the big banks offer them.

Chile May Block U. S. Imperialistic Airplane Parade

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—That Chile may block the plans of the United States department of war for its proposed military airplane "parade" of South America is the word announced here.

Chile has failed to give its permission for the army planes to pass over that country, and until permission is given the imperialistic display will have to be abandoned.

LANSBURY TELLS OF WONDER WORK IN SOVIET UNION

Specially Pleased at Health Resorts

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—Mr. Lansbury, editor the London Daily Herald, who spent the summer in the Caucasian health resorts, returned to Moscow and was interviewed by journalists about his impressions in Russia.

Saw with His Own Eyes.

"I crossed in the train," he said, "4,000 versts from North to South and saw with my own eyes how peasants were working on the fields and workmen in factories and workshops. My general impression is this: laboring masses of the Soviet Union are intensely working every day, trying to build new forms of life. One can notice still that there is not enough of modern machinery, but this is the fault of the western countries.

"If the lazy gentlemen of London, in whose hands lies the fate of England, could have seen the heroic efforts of Soviet workers for the sake of reconstruction of their country, they would understand the silliness and narrow-mindedness of their policy toward the Soviet Union.

Workers Use Palatial Resorts.

"The health resorts and houses of rest in the Soviet Union are the best in the world. I saw in my life many health resorts, but they are, as it was in old Russia, accessible only for millionaires. It is real joy to see that in Russia health resorts are used by workmen, by whose hands in fact they have been built. The treatment of patients is excellent and leaves nothing to be desired."

Pravda Says Powers' Intervention Into China Leads to War

MOSCOW (By Mail).—Referring to the present political situation in China and rumors of a foreign intervention, Pravda, in a leading article, says:

"As it is known, Great Britain, if not to count Japan, is considered a 'most interested' power in China; she occupies the first place by her trade with China. English are in control of Chinese customs with English capital. Great Britain is one of the biggest creditors of China and has got the best concessions. She plays the first violin in the Pekin diplomatic corps.

"This dominating position of England is based on a series of treaties forcibly imposed upon China. It is not surprising, therefore, that the national revolutionary movement, aiming to overthrow all unequal treaties affects first of all and mostly England.

"But what to do? To declare war? It is no so simple as it was in 1841 and 1861. To organize a new crusade of all 'interested powers' as in 1900, when, under pretext of the suppression of the Boxer rebellion, they've chains were imposed upon China by the notorious Boxer protocol?

"That would be the best way. But, unfortunately, other powers do not see it."

Pravda concludes by saying that in spite of all denials deals are going on between the powers and there is possibility of an open intervention which may lead to a new world war.

British-Italian Pact No Threat to France Chamberlain Asserts

LONDON, October 10.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, is quite vociferous in denial that the recent pact between Italy and Albania over the mutual problems of Italy and England have any hostility inherent in the subjects debated toward other European powers.

"I need hardly say," says Chamberlain, "that any such ideas show entire misconception of our relations with other countries and of our country's policies."

Chamberlain even expressed "delight" over the Franco-German accord, which is built upon the new steel trust of continental rivalry to opposition to the British steel interests; in other words, Sir Austen feels that the new British-Italian alliance offsets the Franco-German move, and that he can afford to pretend joy at the Franco-German accord.

Leningrad Tobacco Factories Produce 12 Billion Smokes

MOSCOW (By Mail).—Amongst the seven tobacco trusts in the U. S. S. R. the first place belongs to the Leningrad Tobacco Trust, which gives more than one-third of the whole production of tobacco. Owing to the enlargement of production and rational organization, the trust gave in this year 2,125,000 rubles of profit. Its turnover is more than doubled, having reached 48,000,000 rubles. # JARDINE SLAPS ARMOUR CO. ON THE WRIST

Company Charged with Mixing Grain

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—A sharp wrist slap has been administered by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine to the Armour Grain Co. of Chicago. He has cited the concern to appear and show cause why it should not be barred from trading in grain on all contract markets on charges that it has tried to manipulate the market price of grain on the Chicago market.

The grounds of the charges are that the Armour concern is alleged to have mixed a lot of rye screenings with No. 2 rye in a public warehouse, then had warehouse certificates made out showing this mixture to be all No. 2 rye, and finally reported this stuff as a part of the stock of No. 2 rye on hand for future delivery, thereby affecting the price of that grade by falsely reporting the supply.

Accused of Mixing Grain.

Jardine's action was taken under the Grain Futures Trading Act, and curiously resembles some of the complaints made for many years by farmers and farm organizations in the northwest which culminated in the formation of the non-partisan league. In the instance the Armour company is accused of mixing 5,000 bushels of screenings with the No. 2 grain.

Hearing of the complaint will take place Oct. 11 in Chicago before a referee in Room 717, Postal Telegraph Bldg.

Political Program

1. Relief from the evils of the mortgage and tenancy evil thru the cancellation of land taxes and which will become the duty of the state.

2. The nationalization of the railroads, the meat packing plants, grain elevators, and land by control and management of these main lines of distribution done in co-operation with organizations of city industrial workers who are employed in these industries.

3. The control and operation of the farm credit system by the co-operations of working farmers, in place of thru capitalist banks and institutions which now use this, the farm credit system for their enrichment.

4. Relief for the farmers from the excessive burden of taxation thru the shifting of income taxes, and inheritance taxes on the swollen fortunes of great capitalist exploiters and higher taxes on the profits of the railroads and great industrial combines.

5. Against the expenditures for a big army and navy, which serve no other purpose than to support the imperialistic adventures of the great financial houses of Wall Street in other countries.

6. Fight against Wall Street, Capital Militarism and expenditure of the wealth produced by the farmers and industrial workers to support the capitalist exploiters in their effort to crush the life out of the people of Cuba, the South American countries, China, and the Philippines, and credits for the Philippines. Self-determination for Porto Rico, Hawaii. Withdrawal of all American soldiers and marines from Central and South American countries. No intervention in China.

7. Against the Dawes plan, thru which the American banking houses are securing control of European industries and paving the way for a new war.

8. Close co-operation with the farmers of other countries and particularly the farmers of Russia, who are so important a factor in the world market. The recognition and establishment of economic relations with the first workers and farmers' government—the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

9. The alliance of the working farmers and city industrial workers to establish a workers' and farmers' government of the United States. Only a united struggle of all working farmers, together with the city industrial workers, in support of this program will win relief for the farmers from the conditions under which they now suffer.

PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS ORGANIZE TO PROTECT DAIRY HERDS FROM "TUBERCULIN TEST" OF COMBINES

The T. B. test for cattle has been proven to be a fraud by the Farmers' Protective Association of Pennsylvania. Louis Creamer, head of the above mentioned organization, at a spirited meeting and picnic of the F. P. A., where there were over 5,000 farmers who came from a radius of 50 miles around Rock-y Springs in Lancaster County on the 11th of September, told his fellow-farmers that the T. B. test for cattle is the part of the big milk combines to drive the small milk dealers off the market and kill off the farmers' herds, thereby making a shortage of milk and giving them the control of the milk market. The Farmers' Protective Association has only been organized three months and has a membership of over 1,200. Each member pays $5 to join which money is being held to make a test case of the T. B. and area in the County of Lancaster and Federal Court at W. D.

At this meeting and picnic there were several speakers, a few which came from nearby states, like Ohio, and who came for the express purpose of telling the farmers of Pennsylvania what they are going to do with the T. B. test in Ohio, and a few other men interested in the welfare of the farmer and his rights as a producer of the national wealth.

One was from the Philadelphia sanitary board and a few veterinarians that have refused to act under the new law and spoke and showed from a scientific point of view that the men that call themselves inspectors for the state sanitary boards know nothing in regard to T. B. in cattle.

For an example they cite that when they inject the serum under the tail of a cow and on the next day or two a swelling appears they say that she has the T. B. and has to go down. This does not prove anything, as the swelling can arise from the irritation. The speaker then went on and denounced the usurpation of the state powers for the interests of the big milk trusts, and the government in general, and issued a call for a new political party that will protect the interests of the producers and consumers.

Another one of the speakers was Dr. Murhurger, editor of the Millersville Press, a weekly paper that is taking up the fight for the farmer.

In his talk he denounced the politics of the states and called for the support of the farmers to stand by him in case of the oppression that will naturally follow this movement.

Most of the farmers in Lancaster county subscribe to the Lancaster News-Journal, which did not take up the fight of the farmers, and they have for the most part revoked their subs and are subscribing for the Millersville Press.

Another one speaking the speakers challenged any members of the state sanitary board and the mayor of Lancaster, who have been in the fight on the side of the testing of cattle and for the tests, to come to the place and date to debate the question on whether or not the T. B. test for cattle is not a fraud, with the exception that the debate must provide for the public to attend. So far no one has dared to accept the challenge.

At Rocky Springs Park the entertainment was free for all the children.

There also was at the meeting the Millersville Sirine Orchestra that added to the atmosphere, and they played all the old-time pieces. The farmers called for honest government and if they could not have it they would have it, if they had to shoulder a gun. Many new members were enrolled and hundreds of subs gotten for the Millersville Press, which the farmers want to make a daily. There were two sessions, morning and after noon, and the speaking lasted until 6 o'clock in the evening.

Hundreds have taken back their signatures in favor of the tests and will resist until this fraud is shown up.

At this meeting the association had bought a cow that had passed the test twice, and they tried to keep her alive until Saturday, but the cow died Friday night. Another cow was there that was to be killed, and the doctor that examined her said that she was as sound a cow as ever walked on four feet.

Thousands of leaflets have been printed and other reading matter, which has been distributed all over the state. Dr. Hall of Oxford was one of the speakers that called for the farmers to stick and issued a call for a new political party.

All thru Pennsylvania thousands of the best herds of cows have gone down under the T. B. and area tests. The best herds of farmers' pride and their families, army's sociological composition, its attitude, the farmers' ability to keep up correspondence, these subjects. Will the censor of the government allow it?

The Soviet peasants wish to inform their English comrades that they are free from the property owners' oppression; that the land, forests and orchards belong to them now; that the late land owners' estates now belong to Soviet farms, schools and homes for homeless children and orphans; that they have the right to remove from the local government's representatives of any misadministration, and that speaking their mind they are not persecuted.

FARM PROBLEM GOT SPEECHES FROM CONGRESS

Lots of Talk But Very Little Relief

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Senator Nye of North Dakota is [illegible] voters a tabulation of the 378 speeches and groups of "remarks" on farmer relief made in congress during the recent session of congress.

A very large proportion of the speeches of the Congressional Record printed during that session were [illegible] voted to this discussion of distress in American agriculture and what should or should not be done by the federal government about it.

Nye has also compiled a list of [illegible] books and magazine articles on farm [illegible] dealing with the same [illegible]

"The farm problem," he says [illegible] letter to his constituents, "is still an unfinished work, and will demand the first attention of the second session of the 69th congress, which will convene in December. Farm legislation is the paramount question now before the country."

ARMOUR GRAIN CO. IS TRYING TO STALL OFF HEARING.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The Armour Company of Chicago went to the courts today in an attempt to prevent a hearing before a referee in Chicago on October 11 on charges made by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine that the company had violated grain futures trading regulations.

doing the farmer a favor by buying milk that they do not need.

Well, that is the whole fight, and a damn serious fight, as most of the [illegible] get along on the milk checks they get, as even in the so-called "golden spot of the world" half of the farmers work on the half basis. Now they are killing their cows and shooting them on the milk price. All in the name of the public, and at the same time the price of milk has gone up here already because they called it "tuberculin tested" on their milk bottle caps, and all such bunk. You should see the milk wars—10 cents a quart. This is some shewing for the farmer to make him think and they are on the right road if they will just stick and combine with the city workers to carry on a general fight against capital and the profiteers in general.

They are speaking about marketing their own milk in Lancaster and Philadelphia, which is the only way open for the farmer to do—co-operative distribution of production. That will help us along on the organization society on a sound basis for the benefit of those that produce, and not a small number of drones that have usurped the government power and keep the rest of the people slaving for their lust.

Russians Peasants Seek Information on Great Britain

The following is a letter to the Peasants' Gazette, and forwarded to The DAILY WORKER, written by I. V. Bunin of the Osernsky Village Council of the Tulsky Gubernia, Union of Soviet Russian Republics:

To the Peasants' Gazette:

Please send my letter to any English paper that is supporting the workers' and peasants' movement.

When I read the paper there pass an audiences questions and discussions inevitably arise. They are interested in what is going on in England, and in events connected with the strike. I told them that letters must be sent abroad. They were very enthusiastic about it and asked me to write abroad requesting the English farmers to reply on the following points, which they are interested in:

Conditions in England, farmers' attitude towards the strike, farmers' conditions, land questions, schools, taxation, conditions of miners and their families, army's sociological composition, its attitude, the farmers' ability to keep up correspondence on these subjects. Will the censor of the government allow it?

The Soviet peasants wish to inform their English comrades that they are free from the property owners' oppression; that the land, forests and orchards belong to them now; that the late land owners' estates now belong to Soviet farms, schools and homes for homeless children and orphans; that they have the right to remove from the local government's representatives of any misadministration, and that speaking their mind they are not persecuted.

WORKERS PARTY PROTESTS N. Y. POLICE TERROR

Asks Socialists for a United Labor Ticket

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—In a telegram sent to the mayor, James G. Walker, the Workers (Communist) Party, thru Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for governor, denounces the New York police for their wholesale arrests of striking cloakmakers.

The telegram declares that the New York police are lining up in the struggle on the side of the manufacturers against the cloakmakers who are struggling to maintain their union and fight against the introduction of sweatshop labor.

Ask United Labor Ticket.

The Workers (Communist) Party, in view of the necessity of unity of all forces of labor in support of the cloakmakers' fight against injunctions and police brutality, has invited the socialist party to join in a united labor ticket in the campaign, with one set of candidates backed by both parties. The invitation is, in part, as follows:

"Socialist Party,
"7 East 15th Street,
"New York, N. Y.

"Dear Comrades:—A vicious unjunction has been issued against the 40,000 striking cloakmakers in the city of New York. The courts, the police, the governor of New York state—the entire state machinery has been brutally thrown on the side of the manufacturers in order to break this strike of the brave cloakmakers who have continued to battle against the manufacturers in spite of hunger and the brutal attacks of the police.

A Vital Issue.

"This struggle affects the vital interests not only of these 40,000 cloakmakers but of the entire needle trades and, if the injunction is to go unchallenged and undefeated, the labor movement, of this city, state and nation will suffer a severe setback.

"At this moment, more than ever before, the united power of the working class must be thrown in support of the cloakmakers and a mighty resistance must be put up against these officials who use their offices to intimidate workers and break strikes. At this time, more than ever, the workers must utilize their political power and put up an aggressive fight with all the strength at their command in order to hearten labor and give courage to those striking workers in their battle against great odds.

Program For United Action.

"We propose a common program and one set of candidates of the socialist party and the Workers (Communist) Party for one joint campaign on the issues: 1. Against injunctions; 2. Against interfering with the right to strike and picket; 3. Against wholesale arrests of striking workers as in the cloakmakers' strike, the furriers' strike. 4. Against all attempts to deny to labor the right of freedom of speech, press, assemblage and against such laws as persecution of foreign-born and criminal syndicalist laws, which are all intended to intimidate workers and prevent their union organization.

One Ticket And Joint Support.

"We believe that on this program a way can be found to agree upon one set of candidates backed by the two political parties of labor, in spite of the fact that election day is only several weeks off. This united campaign is even more necessary because the capitalists have put forward as their candidates the open shopper Mills and the arbitration and injunction "friend of labor," Al Smith.

"Governor Smith, who has sought to introduce compulsory arbitration in this strike and who is responsible for a commission which turned down the fundamental needs of the workers in this country, bears the chief responsibility for the injunction. Governor Smith is the boss of the democratic party and is responsible for the present city administration, which has already caused the arrest of several thousands of workers.

"Dist. Executive Committee No. 2,
"Workers (Communist) Party.
"Wm. W. Weinstens, Gen. Sec'y.

SUPERINTENDENT IS IN LEAGUE WITH CAPITALISTS

Support "Pure" Press to Save Country

By a Worker Correspondent

JANESVILLE, Wis., Oct. 10.— A clean giveaway of the class nature of the Associated Press and 1,200 member newspapers, and of the tieup between religion and capitalism was divulged by E. T. Cutter, Chicago, superintendent of the central division of the Associated Press and one of the "big guns" in this service, at a meeting of Wisconsin newspapermen and the town hankers and business men here.

"Concerned" About Reds.

Cutter, whose favorite recreation is addressing conferences of Methodist preachers on the "service" of his institution, was quite concerned about what the "bolsheviks' blight de to the country.

"If we are to save the country from the bolsheviks, it must be by a definite co-operative effort between the business world, the higher education al institutions, the religious and the press," he declared quite shamelessly.

Todies to Government.

The "non-partisan" nature of the Associated Press was extelled, immediately followed by the declaration that "during the war, there was not e thing that the government wanted the Associated Press to do that it did not do."

Cutter said frankly that "day after day, night after night, we printed publicity by the yard."

Even the business men present snickered when Cutter said he knew newspapermen who started work with the prayer: "Lord, shew me Thy way that I may walk therein."

"Deserve Support."

He made an intelligent observation when he said that 'there is ne group that more deserves the support of the merchants than the newspapermen."

Cutter scared the wits out of the business men by quoting an unnamed author as saying:

"Unless there is a religious upheaval in this country within the next few years, it will be in the hands of the bolsheviks"

He immediately proposed a remedy, however. It was more support for the newspapers printing the "pure (capitalist) news" of tho Associated Press.

Urges Organization to Bring Druggists From Slave Condition

By a Worker Correspondent.

Oct. 10 to Oct. 20 has been set aside as pharmacy week. Pharmacy week was inaugurated by one of the big wholesale drug supply houses, Johnson & Johnson. During this week, and before, millions will be spent in advertising, extolling the characters of the neighborhood druggists.

It will be pointed out that the druggist is one who has spent much time and money in learning his trade, and that the public should think more of them and patronize them more.

But they will not point out the slave conditions under which the druggist works. They work for a measly wage and are forced to work hours longer than those engaged in other trades. The average druggist mnet work nine hours a day, Sundays, holidays, late at night, and receive about 50 cents an hour for his labor.

The young boys who work in the stores are even more exploited. Many work six or even seven hours a day after school for $5 a week. I knew of one, 12 years old, who works for $2.50 a week.

If a druggist doesn't like his job and quits there are many others waiting to take his job, so the boss doesn't worry.

Organization is the only thing that will save the pharmacists. Think about this during pharmacy week!

Form Booster Club for Daily Worker at Superior, Wisconsin

By ARNOLD J. RONN,
Worker Correspondent.

SUPERIOR, Wis., Oct. 10.—Having read and received several appeals and being finally convinced that something ought to be done in a jiffy to get money to keep The DAILY WORKER in existence, a number of our "live-wire" comrades were stirred into action. A meeting was held and the result was the formation of a DAILY WORKER Booster Club. This club was not organized merely to assist in The DAILY WORKER'S present drive for $50,000. It was organized to furnish permanent relief by scoring up a bunch of subs, soliciting ads, selling literature, and se on.

To date only one meeting has been held—the one at which the club was organized. Present at this meeting were such authorities as Comrades Matti Tenhunen and John Miller, business and advertising managers, respectively, of the Finnish daily, Tyomies, and others.

True to old form (tho not merely to make it appear complicated) a few committees were selected, such as executive, membership, entertainment, and by-laws, also a secretary, treasurer, and last, but by no means least, a DAILY WORKER correspondent and publicity agent (that's me). To acquire prestige, the consensus of opinion was that the club should be made "exclusive." That is, we don't expect to have our club considered a kindergarten er a dumpling ground for these about to kick in from old age, who, it was figured, would at best be only in the way. Hence an age limit was suggested.

The entertainment committee has plens for a "biewout" soon.

"BLACK JACK" IS NAME OF BOSS BLOOD HOUND

By S. GLOBERMAN
(Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Oct. 10.—Black Jack Jerome,—where I first heard this name was at the 27th Convention of the California State Federation of Labor, held recently in Oakland.

Black Jack Jerome, was mentioned at every session, and when the convention was over, the name Black Jack Jerome was still ringing in my ears. Who is Black Jack Jerome?

McDonald the president of the Building Trades Council of California, explained and described the notorious character.

Black Jack Jerome resides in San Francisco. He is the heart and soul of the chamber of commerce, the mission of the Industrial Builders' Association.

Black Jack Jerome is the blood hound of the exploiters against organized labor, during the carpenters' strike, which is still in progress, he organized a gang of underworld characters,—equipped them with shotguns and were in the midst of the strikers.

Many victims have fallen by his orders. One of the strikers was killed on his way home of his own stairways. These violences were carried on until McDonald went to the mayor and warned him that unless the Black Jack Jerome band be denied the right to carry guns the strikers will arm themselves and meet violence with violence.

When Black Jack Jerome had seen that the mayor was not too anxious to cooperate he organized a citizens committee of one hundred who offered their aid to the city authorities to stop the violence committed by the strikers.

However, McDonald, exclaimed that not Black Jack Jerome nor the citizens committee of one hundred would be able to crush the carpenter strike in order to introduce the American Plan Company Union within the building trades.

McDonald has also denounced the Supreme Court of the United States branding it as a tool of the California Builders' Association.

His speech was a ringing message which heralded it in the hearts of four hundred delegates representing a hundred thousand organized workers throughout the state of California.

Cop Points Pistol at Running Striker But Fears to Shoot

By J. N., Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The other morning while going to my work I was a witness to the following tragicomic happening: Right off Sixth avenue and 40th street one can walk window cleaning we was in the way of receiving some justly-earned beating by a couple of strikers. The cop appears and the strikers take to their heels, cop and scabs after them. The strikers have been too fast to catch, so the "guardian of law" and capital pulls out his gun and points to the two fugitives, thinking to stop them, but they would not stop. Cop and scab, realizing their failure, mutter some insults and that is all.

CONDITIONS AUGUR FOR VICTORY OF FARMER-LABOR PARTY IN RACE FOR GOVERNOR OF SOUTH DAKOTA

By JOHN GABRIEL SOLTIS

BROOKINGS, S. D., Oct. 10.—The Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota is putting on full steam ahead, with almost certain prospects of electing the veteran warrior in the Farmer-Labor movement of this state, Tom Ayres, governor.

A state Farmer-Labor conference was held last Friday at Huron, at which 40 leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party took part, representing all sections of the state. The conference was also attended by Miss Lorraine Daley, who has just recovered from an illness lasting several months, and who made an inspiring address to the conference, notwithstanding her convalescence. The conference was also attended by the editor of the United Farmer, Alfred Knutson of Bismarck, N. D., the backbone of the Farmer-Labor movement of the state was present.

The conference outlined a campaign which will insure the producing classes of the state to rally to the support of the Farmer-Labor Party. It subscribed to a campaign war chest and made arrangements to route veteran Farmer-Labor campaigners thruout the state.

Ayres Has Good Chance.

Tom Ayres stands a good chance of election, it is admitted by all political observers. The republican party is split in the state. Carl Gunderson, the present republican governor, is opposed by John Hilscher as an independent candidate. He is editor of the Capital Journal, published at Pierre, and his candidacy signalizes the rupture in the republican ranks, since he was a strong pillar in the republican par-

4,000 WORKERS ON PAPER BOXES STRIKE IN N. Y.

Independent Union in Fight for Demands

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—(FP)—Four thousand paper box workers are striking in New York for a $6 weekly wage increase, 44-hour week, time and a half overtime, double time Sunday pay. About 65 per cent of the workers are girls and women. Men do the scoring and cutting as well as driving paper box delivery wagons.

All are in the Paper Box Makers Union, an independent industrial union. Open shop workers are employed for long hours at as little as half the pay of union workers. Union shops have the 44-hour week at present.

Cops and Dicks Fight Strikers.

The paper box industry is of considerable importance in New York, where great quantities of the boxes are used in both wholesale and retail trades, especially in garment industries and by department stores.

At least one detective agency is known to be attempting strike-breaking by supplying non-union drivers and chauffeurs for manufacturers to deliver stock on hand. The agency gets $10 a day per man. Police are acting as guards on the wagons.

May Reaffiliate.

The union has been conducting an intensive organization campaign for several months. George Powers and Anthony Capraro are the organizers; Fred Caiola, the union manager.

The union was at one time affiliated with the Paper Pulp and Sulphite Workers International Union, a member of the American Federation of Labor, and hopes to again join this international.

Benefit Movie Here Will Portray Passaic Millworkers Struggles

The historic struggle of the 16,000 unorganized textile workers against the inhuman exploitation by the mill bosses will be shown in Chicago, Oct. 29 at the Ashland Blvd. Auditorium, in pictures.

The picture commences with the time the worker leaves his home in Europe, obsessed with dreams of a new and better life here in America, and shows the horrible life of the workers in the hell holes of New Jersey.

The drama of the entire strike is portrayed; the call for the strike, the brutal attacks of the mill owned police; the huge mass meetings, the splendid relief activities; all this is shown, in short, you will spend an evening in the front line trenches of American industrial warfare.

The Ashland Auditorium must be packed on October 29. Two performances will be shown, one at 7 and one at 9 o'clock. Come early.

The proceeds are to assist in purchasing necessities for the needy strikers and their families. To continue the strike, money must be sent to Passaic. By seeing this film you will not only enjoy an evening, but you will also assist in relieving the condition of the textile strikers.

Here's an Opportunity to Help

NEW YORK — (FP) — Overcoats, shoes and other clothing are needed badly for the Passaic textile strikers and their families, declares the Intl. Workers Aid. The eight months' fight began in winter and is now wheeling around to winter again. Pickets are still braving wintry winds and policemen's clubs in thin summer garments and ragged remnants of coats. Clothing collections may be left at Room 327, 799 Broadway, New York, or sent directly to the Passaic Strikers General Relief Committee at 743 Main ave., Passaic, N. J.

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

Window Cleaners Fight for Standards

By LEON PLATT
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The yearly agreement between the Protective Window Cleaners' Union and the Employers' Association of Window Cleaners expires on September 30. At the same day a general union membership meeting was held with a 100 per cent attendance to discuss the negotiations between the Employers Association and the union.

Among the new demands that the union put forward to the employer were featured a $44 and 44-hour week, instead of $40 and 48 hours as it prevails now. Altho these demands are considered by the window cleaners modest, the employers refused even to discuss them with the labor representatives. This attitude of the employers, and their constant attempts to break the Window Cleaners' Union, served as a signal to the workers to strengthen their ranks and resist the offensive of the bosses to lower their standards of living. This was clearly demonstrated at their membership meeting, where all like one man decided to fight for their new demands and union. The challenge of the bosses was met by a declaration of an unanimous general strike, beginning October 1 of all window cleaners in New York City.

The Window Cleaners' Job.

Not only is the work hard and tiresome, but the danger of it would justify a working week of less than 44 hours. The worker in the other branches of the building trades won a long time ago the demands the window cleaners put up now. The wages of the bricklayers, structural iron workers are $14 to $18 per day while window cleaners, whose work is more dangerous, get only a half of that.

In general, the window cleaners' job is the most dangerous. The worker has to stand on a space of 8 to 8 inches on the 50th floor and wash the windows. There is nothing that can assure his safety. The belt is attached to side screws which are often loose and unreliable and are the only things on which the man relies on. As a result of such risky work many window cleaners loose their life and greater numbers are injured and crippled for life.

The Bosses' Trick.

The window cleaners experienced many struggles with the bosses in their attempts to raise their standards. But since they organized themselves into a union and especially when a militant leadership was put into office, the window cleaners fought bravely by their battles and succeeded to improve their conditions.

The employers, seeing that no force can break the determination and solidarity of the workers, attempted to split the ranks of the workers by spreading false rumors about their leadership, with the intention to confuse and sidetrack the workers. This was speedily and successfully checked at the membership meeting.

The state department of labor, thru its department of mediation and arbitration, offered to arbitrate their dispute with the bosses. But the workers felt that their demands are just and refused arbitration. The bosses took advantage of that and spread rumors among the workers that the union refused to meet them at a conference to negotiate the new demands. This trick and provocation met with complete failure, the solidarity of the workers is now stronger than ever. The fighting spirit of the workers and a militant, honest leadership assures the workers of victory and success in their struggle for better conditions.

CAPPELLINI'S MAN REFUSES TO AID STRIKING MINERS

Local President Charges Board with Non-Support

PARSONS, Pa., Oct. 10.—Local 3072 of the U. M. W. of A., that struck when four members were discharged by the mine boss for having cigarettes in their possession—which the miners declare were planted—decided to return to work without having their demands acceded to by the bosses of the Glosh Alden Coal Co. The strikers wanted the men reinstated and the mine boss dismissed.

President Cappellini of District 1, ordered the miners to return to work saying that he would not allow any unauthorized strikes. He informed Thomas Burke, president of the local, that the strike must be called off. The grievances could be taken up by a committee of miners who would meet the operators. The question of discharging the mine boss, a notorious strikebreaker, was dropped by the board.

Board Member Spoke.

A special meeting of the local was called at which a district board member was present. The miners flocked to the meeting. The minutes of the previous meeting at which the strike decision was taken were read. Then the board member spoke.

He frankly told the miners that he would not stand for strikes over such "petty matters" as the discharge of union miners. He would never permit such a strike.

Miners Were Angry.

When the board member got thru talking miners began to clamor for the floor. One speaker pointed an accusing finger at Cappellini's representative and demanded what good it would do the miners to have a person like him (the board member) representing them, suggesting that he would be more likely to help the boss than help the men.

President Burke of the local declared that the local committee never got any help from the district board.

Operators Defended by Official.

The board member declared that the operators had a right to discharge anybody in the mine. The miners resented this, saying that even the laws of the capitalist state of Pennsylvania do not guarantee any such right to the owners. The faithful disciple of Cappellini replied that the operators had a right to do what they please with their employes.

President Burke then declared that since they had not only to fight the bosses but also the officials of the district, they would have to return to work, pending a settlement of their grievances, with the understanding that unless their fellow-workers were given back their jobs, that they would come out again.

A. F. OF L. NOW ON WATCH FOR FAKE LABORITES

Daily Mail Hoax is Lesson

WASHINGTON — (FP) — President Green of the A. F. of L. has been put on his guard as to the British government's royal labor commission, which is soon to tour the industrial districts of the United States under guidance of the British ambassador. Green says the A. F. of L. accepts the invitation to co-operate in showing the visitors around, but does not hold itself responsible if they fail to visit plants where union men are employed. Ambassador Howard has also invited the Intl. Assn. of Manufacturers and the National Industrial Conference Board to help in furnishing information.

American labor executives have learned a lesson as a consequence of their ready acceptance of the hospitality of the London Daily Mail's handpicked delegation of trade unionists last March. By agreement with secretary Robt. Dissman, German Metal Workers' union, president J. T. Brownlie of the British Amalgamated Engineering union and other representatives of European labor, European trade unionists visiting America in the future will not be received officially unless officially sent.

Brownlie explained to the executive board of the Intl. Assn. of Machinists and to executives of the Metal Trades department of the American Federation of Labor the true character of the Daily Mail "labor" commission. He said the men chosen by the foremost anti-labor newspaper in Britain to make the trip were reactionaries who happened to hold union cards because the places where they worked are unionized. On their return to England they were given a great banquet, at which the most notorious enemies of British labor were present. They made a report flattering to the biggest non-union shops in the United States. It glorified the "welfare" schemes of these anti-union corporations and praised the company unions.

"We were taken in by these fellows because they showed union cards," said Vice President Conlon of the Machinists. "After they left Washington to investigate industrial plants we discovered that they were being entertained by U. S. Steel and General Electric and many other concerns that are hostile to organized labor.

WORKERS SUFFER IN CALIFORNIA COTTON FIELDS

Low Wages and Horrible Conditions Prevail

By JOHN H. OWENS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

RIPLEY, Cay., Oct. 10.—The cotton-picking season has opened in the Palo Verde, San Joaquin, Imperial and Coachilla valleys. These valleys produce the bulk of California's cotton.

Low Wages Prevail.

The pickers are usually paid from $1.00 to $1.50 per hundred pounds for picking. These are all desert valleys and are watered by irrigation methods. The air is dry, and the cotton is light and fluffy. An average picker, working from sun-up to sundown, earns about $2.25 per day.

The picking is done mostly by Mexicans, Negroes, Indians, and poor whites (migratory workers) from Texas and Oklahoma.

Live in Tents.

The ranch owners seldom furnish houses for the pickers; they usually provide tents. The workers eat and sleep on the ground. Health inspectors never visit the ranches to enforce sanitary regulations.

Suffer from Cold.

Like most desert climates the days are warm the year around, but from September to March, the nights and mornings are intensely cold, usually below the freezing point. The pickers suffer from cold and exposure in order to make weight one must pick very early.

The cotton is cold and wet with dew. Pickers frequently contract dew-poisoning; the fingers crack and split open; many workers are incapacitated from further picking for several days or weeks.

All Unorganized.

The workers are nearly 100 per cent unorganized. The ranchers carefully encourage the fiction of social inequality. White workers refuse to pick in the same fields with Mexicans and Negroes.

The ranchers even shatter the Mexicans and Indians, and make them feel superior to Negroes. In this way they force all to work for less money and put up with very poor accommodations.

California State Federation Meets.

OAKLAND, Cal.—(FP)—J. F. Dalton of the Los Angeles Typographical union was elected president California State Federation of Labor over Roe H. Baker of San Francisco, incumbent, and Paul Scharrenberg was elected secretary. The convention passed resolutions condemning capital punishment, calling for repeal of the criminal syndicalism act, favoring old-age pensions and the state water and power act, opposing comment by trial judges during criminal cases, and calling for legislation against the "hell ships" of the Alaska salmon packers. It also declared against the labor department of the league of nations.

Wages in Pottery Industry Low.

WASHINGTON—(FP)— Wages of men and women employed in the American pottery industry are decidedly low. This is shown by a study which the U. S. department of labor has just completed, based on statistics for 48 potteries, most of which were in the region centering about East Liverpool, O. For 6,626 men and boys the average earnings per week in 1925 were $26.22, and for 2,857 women and girls they were $13.27 in the semi-vitreous plants, producing common tableware.

BIG CO-OPERATIVE APARTMENT IN GOTHAM WILL BE READY FOR TENANTS EARLY IN NOVEMBER

By ESTHER LOWELL, Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Early in November the first group of workers and their families will move into the big new co-operative apartment house they have built as the first unit of a co-operative colony in Bronx borough, New York City. About 1,100 persons will enter the brick-and-span, spacious rooms to enjoy the benefits of co-operative living under their organization, the United Workers' Co-operative.

Each of the 250 apartments, whether two-room, three-room or four-room, has at least two exposures so that cross ventilation and sunshine sometime of the day are assured. The apartment rooms and the 100 single ones are all larger than those of ordinary apartments, having more windows and higher ceilings. Great inner courtyards separate the different units of the building, which occupies only 45 per cent of the square block in which it is built. Neighboring apartments cover much more of the ground because their owners want the maximum returns by crowding. The workers' co-operative house faces Bronx Park on one side.

Low Rental Rates.

The workers entering the new co-operative apartment pay in $200 per room to help finance the building construction. When they are unable to pay the full rentals, the Consumers Finance Corp., a subsidiary owned by the United Workers' Co-operative, loans half the sum at 4 per cent, repayment at the rate of $1 a week. Maintenance of rooms is to be $13 per room per month, covering all charges, including $2.50 allowed for paying off the $1,300,000 building mortgage. Rental for other apartments in the district mounts to $20 or $25 per room per month. The maintenance charges may eventually go down to $5 as the mortgage is paid off.

No Industrial Ownership.

Residents may withdraw their payments if they leave the building, the co-op must agree to stay at least two years. New residents will pay in the same sums, but in no case will any resident ever own his apartment or be able to sell or sub-let it as he would in other so-called co-operatives. This is a true co-operative apartment, the whole property remaining in the hands of the organization, and proceeds beyond expenses belong to the co-operative.

To Get Woman Out of Home.

Every member of the United Workers' Co-operative must be a worker, a member of the union if there is one in his trade. Every resident of the apartment house 18 or over must belong to the co-operative. Some of the most interesting features of the new apartment are designed to bring the women out of their domestic activities into broader co-operative and labor action. There will be a co-operative restaurant, day nursery, kindergarten, gymnasium, music room, library, reception hall and auditorium, and electric laundry. The co-operative restaurant will aim to give such good food so cheaply that it will compete the housewife out of her kitchen—or kitchenette, as it is in most cases.

To Spread Out.

The first apartment will be followed by two others, one ready next May, the other next October. A group of co-operative stores to serve the colony—and its neighbors—will be partly completed by spring. A co-operative bakery may be built later and the organization hopes to erect its own school where workers' children may go instead of to public school. A theater for the co-operators' use will be built and a swimming pool. Lots for the business structures are already owned by the organization. Purchase of land for a second colony is already proceeding.

They Have a Doctor.

The interest of the builder, Bernoti Brodsky, in the co-operative colony idea is a big factor in the progress of this particular venture. Brodsky, a successful New York builder, is allowing his service charge to be put into a three-year mortgage. He helped secure the necessary loan to commence building and has given much practical advice. One unusual feature of the apartment is the central electric meter, which reduces the cost about 45 per cent, allowing for the increased used of electricity by residents. A co-operative clinic, with Dr. B. Liber as physician, and dentists to be chosen—chiefly for preventive work—is another feature.

(A further article on the United Workers' Co-operative and its activities in "building a co-operative movement" among workers will follow in The DAILY WORKER next week.)

Co-operators Make Big Success at Waukegan

There are few finer co-operative societies in the country than the Co-operative Trading company of Waukegan, Ill. The society was organized 10 years ago by a few Finns for the co-operative purchase of groceries. Today there are 1,000 members, many of them American, Swedish, German and of other nationalities; and the concern is operating two grocery and meat stores and a large milk plant. The members started the business with a capital of $400. Today they have invested in the business nearly $65,000 of share capital and savings deposits.

During 1925 the sales of all kinds of foodstuffs amounted to almost exactly half a million dollars, on which a "profit" or surplus of $21,652 was made. This means that every member gets 6% paid back to him on his capital investment, and an additional 4% of the amount he spent with the co-operative.

The company has 38 employes and a dozen delivery rigs for distributing groceries, meat, milk, cream, butter and cheese. For the past three years the increase in sales have averaged $100,000 per year.

And the most interesting feature of this co-operative is the attention it gives to educational and propaganda work. Courses of lectures for employes, evening classes, summer picnics for the members, propaganda parades thru the city, mass visits to co-operatives in other cities—these are a few of the activities.

Plan Huge Building Program for Moscow Workers' Apartments

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—The Moscow Soviet has applied to the Central Commercial Bank for a long-term credit of 55 million roubles. The money will be spent on the building of houses and workers' apartments in Moscow.

LANSFORD, Pa.—(FP)—Delegates to Dist. 7, United Mine Workers, convention disgusted the failure of the Lansford bank board of conciliation to institute the checkoff system, expected when the anthracite agreement was signed. Delegates urged that Pres. John L. Lewis be invited to meet the conciliation board and go over the checkoff. The checkoff is a system whereby union dues are deducted by the company from wages given. It still exists in the organized bituminous districts.

Boilermakers Hammer for Bigger Pay Check

NEW ORLEANS—(FP)—Eight hundred members of Boilermakers Union No. 37 are on strike demanding an increase in wages of approximately 30%. Operations at the Jahncke Dry Docks, Johnson Iron Works and Dry Dock Company, Todd Engineering and Dock Company, Dubus Machine Company, Union Iron Works, Hooley Metal Works, the Southern Boiler Sealing Company and many small marine plants are practically suspended. The scale which expired Sept. 1 called for 75 cents an hour for boilermakers and 45 cents an hour for holpers. The new scale calls for 90 cents an hour for boilermakers and 60 cents an hour for helpers.

While boilermakers have walked out, machinists, pipefitters, coppersmiths and blacksmiths have remained on the job. The employing association refuses an advance, stating that, according to the old contract in wage fixing the scale paid by Atlantic coast ports and Gulf ports shall be used as a basis. It points to the scale at Galveston, which is 72 cents and 45 cents, and at Mobile, which is 72 cents and 60 cents.

New Lumber Trust.

SEATTLE—(FP)—A gigantic merger of lumber companies involving 70 of the largest concerns in the Pacific northwest is under way. Organizers of the merger are now conferring with the bankers. One hundred million dollars of new investment will be required and a capital outlay of $350,000,000 will be represented by the new corporation, with its 20,000,000,000 feet of commercial timber.

SOVIET TRADE UNIONS TELL OF PARTICIPATION OF MEMBERS IN GROWTH OF THE CO-OPERATIVES

The following article on workers' co-operatives in the Soviet Union is sent out by the Central Council of Trade Unions of the Soviet Union in their Trade Union Bulletin, and shows the participation of the labor unions of the workers' and peasants' republic in the co-operative movement.

Workers' Cooperatives in the U. S. S. R.

Prior to the revolution the workers' cooperative movement was in an embryonic state and represented a negligible quantity, both from the point of view of membership and business turn-over.

Since then the movement has developed on a large scale. Thus on Oct. 1, 1926, the workers' cooperatives had a membership of 3,666,703. This does not include the transport (the transport section has an autonomous standing) which on that date had a membership of 1,025,560 (including temporary workers.)

The total number of workers affiliated to the movement was therefore 4,692,263. The trade union membership at that time was 7,800,000 (in round numbers); so that the percentage of trade-unionists organised in the cooperatives was 59.8. In the more industrial regions the percentage was much higher.

Increase 100 Per Cent.

The turnover at the workers' cooperatives has been rapidly growing. While the annual turnover (exclusive of the transport section) in 1923-24 was 648,148,000 rubles, that for 1924-25 was 1,291,585,000 rubles, showing an increase of almost 100 per cent.

The share capital of the workers' cooperatives (exclusive of transport) at the end of last year was nearly 16,000,000 rubles. The shares are rather small, being equal on an average to a little over 2 rubles each.

On January 1, 1926, there was a total of 1,661 primary cooperatives with 13,044 stores in the country employing 70,000 persons (exclusive of industrial establishments).

An interesting question is how big a percentage of the workers' purchases is made thru the cooperatives. Here the picture varies in different parts of the country. In many of the industrial centers, for instance, the percentage is as high as 70 and 80, sometimes even going up to 100 per cent. In the less industrial sections the percentage is smaller.

On the whole about 50 per cent of the workers in the cities are covered by the workers' cooperatives, while in the villages the supply by the cooperatives is a matter of places the workers' cooperatives have developed to such an extent that they have completely replaced all private trade (Tuls, etc.)

Assisted by Government.

The workers' cooperative movement continues to grow under favorable conditions of development. The government has granted the cooperatives a number of privileges in the form of reduced taxes, priority in the receipt of goods from the nationalized industry and easy terms of payment. The cooperatives are granted large credits both by the state and the cooperative banks. In addition interest-free loans have been granted to them on a number of occasions.

The movement constitutes a part of the general system of cooperation in U. S. S. R. but it enjoys a high degree of independence and is controlled by the Central Labor Section attached to the trade unions. The connection between the workers' cooperatives and the trade unions, however, is purely voluntary, though the unions naturally exert considerable influence over the cooperatives.

The cooperatives sell to their members both for cash and on credit. There are two forms of credit: short-term credit, including food and other primary necessities allowed between pay-days, and long term credits (up to six months), under which articles of general use (clothing, etc.) may be purchased.

The Coal Miners—Shock Troops of the British Workingclass

The stern struggle of the British miners challenges the admiration of every working man and woman in the world.

After five months and a half of battle with starvation gnawing at the vitals of the miners and their families, these workers hurl back the lies of the capitalist class, the capitalist press and the treacherous reformist leadership by voting to pull out the maintenance men and continue the strike.

The vote of 767,000 to 42,000 for these propositions nails fast the lie that the miners are breaking ranks and going back to work in any considerable numbers.

That this action was taken after the Bournemouth Trade Union Congress, dominated by the same officials who deserted the miners, had refused to allow the question of the general strike or the miners' strike to be discussed, is doubly significant.

It means that the miners realize their responsibility to the rank and file of the labor movement, realize that they are the shock troops of the British working class and are going to fight without thought of surrender. The miners ask no quarter.

This unshakable determination of the miners changes the situation. British capitalism has staked all on a quick defeat of this workers' offensive. But the British ruling class and their agents in the labor movement underestimated the fighting spirit and the endurance of the coal diggers, their wives and children.

Last week the news came that 400 textile mills have reduced their working schedule to one week in three. Coal and other fuel is being rationed. Heavy industry is paying suicidal prices for coal. British coal markets are passing into the hands of German and American coal concerns.

In other British markets the customers refuse to wait longer for the commodities whose manufacture has been held up by the strike.

And the miners are not beaten. Not by several Irish miles. They are bruised and bleeding but they are choking the British lion to death.

The Russian trade unions have made it possible for the miners to fight as long as they have. From the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union has come the greater part of the financial relief sent to the coal fields. This, too, is a glorious record.

Contrasted with this is the shameless and shameful conduct of the Trade Union Congress leaders and those of Amsterdam. They have joined hands with the British government and if the miners are beaten they and they alone must take the blame.

But will the miners be beaten?

We do not think so. They may not win all their demands, but it is certain now that they will save their union and they have dealt their enemy, British imperialism, a blow from which it will never recover.

The courageous struggle of the miners has accelerated the decay of British capitalism and will make it possible and necessary for the British working class to select a leadership for the new great struggles of the near future which will give the labor movement a general staff that will not sound the call for retreat when the masses are in the midst of an onslaught on the fortresses of British imperialism.

Cooking the Klan's Goose

It is generally and freely admitted that the political crowds on the heads of the G. O. P.-dom are not sitting any too pretty nowadays. In capitalist politics, victory is only a prelude to disaster.

Only a few short years ago there was great rejoicing in the G. O. P. camp because the old stalwarts of all that was most conservative in republicanism won out in Indiana. Today there is weeping and gnashing of teeth.

It seems that the Hoosier voters had as little to do with the election of Governor Jackson and his machine as J. P. Morgan had to do with winning the war. The job was done by D. C. Stephenson, protector of pure womanhood, defender of the Volstead law and half a dozen other worthy and laudable causes. But when the quilts were lifted Hoosierdom did not see much purity, or sobriety for that matter.

Now it will be told. Because in the G. O. P. of Indiana, there are worthy persons whose needs have not been satisfied. No matter how susceptible graft may be to the spreading-out process, there is a limit, and so the murder is coming out.

Concisely, the present government of Indiana owes its existence to that infernal organization known as the ku klux klan. Stephenson, head of the K. K. K. at the time the present government got into power, is now serving a life term in prison for murdering a girl he had previously raped. The beneficiaries of Stephenson's klan influence are now willing that the ex-dragon should stew in his own juice. But unfortunately for the present officialdom, Stephenson was able to get in touch with a number of dissatisfied persons, with the result that some of the truth is being told and the governor of Indiana and the prosecutor are beating a retreat to shelter.

The K. K. K. represents fundamentally the rotting heart of capitalism. It is based on graft and corruption, just as capitalism is based on robbery. Klanism is passing, for the time being. But the mental types that fall for klanism are the types that get excited over a Coolidge interview on the value of religion.

LENINGRAD WORKERS HEAR ZINOVIEV AND CONDEMN HIS FACTIONAL WORK

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—Continuing their open defiance of the Central Committee of the Communist Party's resolution against unauthorized public meetings to discuss party policy, Trotsky and Zinoviev, leaders of the opposition against the policies of the Central Committee, addressed meetings of factory workers today.

Zinoviev spoke in Leningrad to a meeting of 2,000 workers and was continuously interrupted by shouts and whistling.

The press reports [illegible] voted on a resolution condemning Zinoviev [illegible] supported the resolution.

WHEN A MAN STRIKES IN PASSAIC!

As The N. Y. Graphic Sees The Frame-up Of Passaic Strikers

From Portland to Detroit

ARTICLE NINE.
By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE gap between the unorganized semi-skilled and unskilled workers in the basic industry and the organized workers is growing wider—not only in the sense that the wages, working conditions and the extent of job control of the unorganized workers are less favorable, but the trade unions have lost a good deal of their former influence among them for two reasons in addition to those already cited:

First, because the trade union officialdom makes little if any attempt to reach these workers and in some cases actually displays a contempt for them.

Second, because the trade union officialdom, saturated in craft unionism and tied to the bosses by the machinery of the capitalist parties and a thousand bonds of worker-employer cooperation, is incapable of approaching these workers who, when they engage in a conflict with the capitalists, know little of and care less for the internal politics of the trade union movement and its perennial jurisdictional conflicts, its craft divisions and obsolete machinery which acts as a brake on the struggles of its membership and the unorganized workers as well.

A CLASSIC example of this impotence of the present leadership was furnished recently by the strike of the motormen and switchmen employed by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York.

After many attempts on the part of the strikers and their sympathizers to get action from the officials of the Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes, the trade union having jurisdiction over this industry, a conference was arranged. The strike itself was an inspiration to anyone except an old line trade union officer. The workers had broken with the company union, they had struck without any guarantee of support from any section of the labor movement, the New York police had been mobilized against them, but the strikers were the last to acknowledge that they had tackled too big a job without adequate preparation.

INSTEAD of taking charge of the strike and giving it organizational direction, placing it under the auspices of the recognized union and appealing to the labor movement for support, the official of the Amalgamated Street & Electric Railway Employes first informed the strikers that they would have to be split up into separate local unions in accord with the sacred constitution and by-laws of his union.

The strikers quite naturally looked upon this proposal as a method of weakening the strike and particularly were they unable to understand the necessity of such procedure when they were at grips with one of the most powerful corporations in New York City.

To the trade union official the union as an institution, with all its rules and regulations, was paramount. To the unorganized strikers, the strike and the extension of the strike was the important thing.

The strikers were right and here is shown the fundamental difference between unorganized workers in motion and a trade union officialdom which thinks first of a "settlement," of "getting the men back to work."

THE same reverence for craft autonomy in a more aggravated form was largely responsible for the defeat of the steel strike in 1919-20. The officials of the national and international unions involved placed the question of their craft union rights above the question of winning the strike.

The same symptom of a malady fatal to the trade union movement in these days of huge concentrations of industrial capital, was evidenced in the strike of metal miners in Butte and other great metal mining camps in 1917-18.

Here the officials of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smeltermen, confronted with the possibility of organizing decisive sections of the industry and regaining the ground lost in the previous ten years, insisted that the strikers must first go back to work, bring up their grievances thru the "regular union channels" and allow the executive board to pass upon them.

All this after a bitter struggle had been in progress for weeks.

A STILL more recent instance is the elimination from the resolution calling for the organization of the auto industry passed by the A. F. of L. convention in Detroit of a provision postponing jurisdictional questions for the time being. The elimination of this provision practically nullifies the purport of the resolution as was no doubt intended.

Instances of this sort could be multiplied almost indefinitely and a still more recent one, small in itself but important as representing a general tendency, has occurred in the strike of 600 Negro women working for a low wage cut and appealed to the Chicago Federation of Labor for assistance in organizing and conducting their strike. A leading official of the Chicago Federation of Labor spoke to the meeting of strikers and in place of telling the workers what union they could and should join, stated that the question of organization should be postponed until the strike was settled.

The truth of the matter is that the trade union officialdom lives in deadly fear of a great influx of formerly unorganized workers into the trade unions. Their control of the trade union movement is made possible today by the silent changes in the personnel of the movement. They have to deal now only with organizations, large numbers of the members of which are victimized by the traditions of the past and who participate in varying degrees in the special privileges of the trade unions which skill, custom, strategic situation or support of the capitalist parties give.

THE trade union leadership does not want to and cannot organize large masses of workers who can and must be organized. While these workers remain outside of the trade unions the officialdom has a comparatively easy time maintaining its control. While they retain control it is a herculean task to get the trade unions to launch genuine organizing campaigns and a still more difficult task to prevent these campaigns ending in defeat and disillusionment for the workers involved.

This is a vicious circle which the Communists and the left wing must break.

MIKE GOLD ISSUES FERVENT CALL FOR THE MISSING LITERARY CRITIC

"AMERICA needs a critic," declares Michael Gold, editor of the New Masses, in the October number of the magazine, which appeared today. He declares that most of our young writers turn to France for new ideas, but "young Americans can learn nothing from the 200-year-old boulevardiers except to sit at sidewalk cafes and sip aperitifs, literariously."

"Mencken," Gold says, "is a salon-singer celebrating the 'freedom' of the artist, but is himself the best example of the fallacy of that dogma. He is popular, not for esthetic reasons, but because he has expressed the philosophy of our nouveaux riches. He has rediscovered Nero's philosophy of feasting and futility. An idealist is not a good money-maker, and if he is to get on the band-wagon, to share some of the immense boodle that is now circulating so freely here, he must cast overboard all his ideals. This renegadism Mencken has made seem the jolliest and most sophisticated of gestures."

Waldo Frank, Van Wyck Brooks, Floyd Dell, Max Eastman, Jos. Krutch, Edmund Wilson and V. F. Calverton are all rejected in turn by Gold as the great critic needed by the new generation of American writers. All are unequipped or have gone up blind alleys, he continues.

His article ends with the following apostrophe:

"A Poet's Prayer.

"O Life, send America a great literary critic. The generation of writers is going to need again. Some of them started well, but are beginning to live fat and high, and have forgotten the orders of their generous youth. The generation of writers is corrupted by all the money floating around everywhere. It is unfashionable to believe in human progress any longer. It is unfashionable to work for a better world. It is unfashionable and unsophisticated to follow in the footsteps of Tolstoi, of Dickens, Shelley, Blake, Burns, Whitman, Trotsky. Send us a critic. Send us a giant who can shame our writers back to their task of civilizing America. Send a soldier who has studied history. Send a strong poet who loves the masses and their future. Send someone who doesn't give a damn about money. Send one who is not a pompous liberal, but a man of the street. Send no mystics—they give us Americans the willies. Send no coward. Send no pedant. Send us a man fit to stand up to skyscrapers. A man of art who can match the purposeful deeds of Henry Ford. Send us a joker in overalls. Send no saint. Send an artist. Send a scientist. Send a Bolshevik. Send a man."

Victims of World War of 1917 Still Lacking Hospitals to Die in WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.— Recommendations have been forwarded to the White House as to the location of the new tuberculosis hospital for victims of gas and other sufferings in the world war. The hospital will be built near Tucson, Ariz. In it will be gathered veterans who have been dragging out a miserable existence in other shelters where they testify the housing and attendance have been so bad that they could not hope to regain health.

CHAPTER XI
THE REBEL
I

At Southern Pacific University the class lines were tacitly but effectively drawn, and in the ordinary course of events a man of Bunny's wealth, good looks and good manners, would have associated only with members of fraternities and sororities. If some Negro boy were to develop eloquence as a debater, or if some one taking a course in millinery or plumbing were to display fleetness as a hurdler, the hurdler might hurdle and the debater might debate, but they would not be invited to tea-parties or dances, nor be elected to prominence in the student organizations; such honors were reserved for tall Anglo-Saxons having regular features, and hair plastered straight back from their foreheads, and trousers pressed to a knife edge and never worn two days in succession.

But here was Bunny Ross, persisting in fooling with "dangerous thoughts," that made his friends angry. Of course, as anyone would have foreseen, there were "roughnecks" and "goats," anxious to break in where they were not wanted, and perfectly willing to pretend to think that our country ought not to intervene in Russia, if by so professing they could get to know one of the socially elite. So Bunny found himself on talking terms with various queer fish. For example, there was Peter Nagle, whose father was president of a "rationalist society," and who seemed to have one dominating desire in life—to blurt out in class that what was the matter with the world was superstition, and that mankind could never progress until they stopped believing in God. In a university all of whose faculty were required to be devout Methodists, you can imagine how popular this made him. Peter looked just as you would expect such a boor to look, with a large square head and a wide mouth full of teeth and a shock of yellow hair which he allowed to straggle round his ears and drop white specks onto his coat collar—his coat did not match his trousers, and he brought his lunch to the university tied with a strap!

And then there was Gregor Nikoliaeff. Gregor was all right, when you got to know him, but the trouble was, it was hard to know him, because his accent was peculiar and at critical moments in his talk he would forget the English word. He had jet black wiry hair and black eyes with a sombre frown above them—in short, he was the very picture of what the students called a "Boisheviki." As it happened, Gregor's father had belonged to one of the revolutionary parties whom the Bolsheviks were now sending to jail; but how could you explain that to a student body which dumped into one common garbage-can Socialists and Communists and Syndicalists and Anarchists, Communist-Anarchists and Anarchist-Syndicalists, Social Revolutionaries and Social Democrats, Populists, Progressives, Single-Taxers, Non-partisan Leaguers, Pacifists, Pragamtists, Altruists, Vegetarians, Anti-vivisectionists and opponents of capital punishment.

Also there was Rachel Menzies, who belonged to a people that had been chosen by the Lord, but not by the aforesaid student body. Rachel was rather good-looking, though in a dark, foreign way; she was shorn of her feminine graces and would have called "dumpy"—and made no pretense at finery, but came to the university in black cotton stockings and a shirt-waist that did not match her skirt. There was a rumor that her father worked in a clothing factory, and her brother was pressing students' pants for an education.

And here was the discoverer and heir-apparent of the Ross Junior oil field, letting himself be seen in public with these people, and even trying to introduce them to his fraternity brothers; excusing himself by saying that they believed in "free speech." As if it were not obvious that they would, having everything to gain and nothing to lose! Proletarians of all universities unite!

Poor Bunny got it from both sides. "Look here," said Donald Burns, president of the sophomore class, "don't you introduce me to any more of your Yid fairies." And then, "Look here," said Rachel Menzies, "don't you introduce me to any more of your male fashion-plates." Bunny protested, he had the idea that all kinds of people ought to know one another; but Rachel informed him that she thought too much of herself. "Probably you've never been snubbed in your life, Mr. Ross, but we Jews learn the lesson early in our lives—not to go where we aren't wanted."

Said Bunny, "But Miss Menzies, if you believe in ideas, you've got to teach people—"

"Thank you," she said; "I believe in my ideas, but not enough to teach Donald Burns."

"But how can you tell?" Bunny protested. "You're teaching me, and I don't belong to the working class." He had learned that this girl was a member of the Socialist party, and it was "class consciousness," as well as Jewish consciousness.

Rachel insisted that Bunny was one person in a million, capable of believing what was contrary to his economic interests. But Bunny had no awareness of anything extraordinary about himself. Instead of being a conspicious and shining leader, as his high destiny directed, he was always looking for some one he could lean to, some one who was positive, and whom he could trust. He found some of this in Henrietta Ashleigh, who knew exactly what was proper; and he found some more of it in Rachel Menzies, who knew exactly what was true, and said it with energy and frankness that were like flashes of lighting in the twilight of Southern Pacific culture.

The only trouble was, the contradiction between his two authorities; it appeared almost as if what was true was not proper and what was proper was not true! For Henrietta considered Rachel an impossible person, and was cold as a corpse in her presence; while Rachel's idea of being insulting was to tell Bunny that it was with Henrietta he really belonged, his Creator had made him to take her to church.

A. F. OF L. ASKED TO HELP PASSA

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE drowning man who expects to survive by grasping at a straw has no slimmer hold on life than a sorely-pressed person nowadays who stretches out an appealing arm for aid to the ku klux klan. Yesterday's paper informs us that Aimee McPherson now blames the pope for her troubles. Now, we do not have to insist that this column has not carried many eulogies of his holiness, and yet in this instance we cannot come to bat for Aimee. For the very good reason that Aimee is as willing a faker as the pope, tho her organization is not as effective.

YET, it is not surprising that an evangelist caught unclothed, so to speak, should fall back on the klan. Since its formation the K. K. K. has supplied ninety-nine per cent of all the rape cases that appeared on the front pages of our papers. And for sexual abberations of less magnitude the hooded patriots left about one-half of one per cent to the rest of the nation. Then, why should not Aimee, who expected to make $50,000 out of her adventure with Kenneth Ormiston, fall back on an organization that specialises in lewd and bawdy conduct? But how any person, even of the degree of intelligence that is standard in Los Angeles, should continue to believe in Aimee's integrity is inexplicable, except that it throws light on the reason why real estate agents thrive in lower California.

THE United States Shipping Board, Kaye Marie, queen of Roumania, a "royal suite" almost free, on its star vessel, the Leviathan. Roumanian children, 3,000,000 of them, can have bread only on Sunday. This is capitalist charity, capitalist christianity. This little piece of news turns the spotlight on a system that lives from the toil exacted from human suffering. And the rulers of our great, glorious, wealthy republic shower favors on a parasite queen, who revels in luxury while her "subjects" starve.

THE condition of the Roumanian people is so bad that even capitalist correspondents are forced to take cognizance of it. The peasant is forced to work for the big landed gentry for 25 cents a day and when the season is over the employer is able to prove that the peasant owes him money. If the peasant kicks, the estate owner can call on Queen Marie's government to put him in jail, provided the boss is too lazy to shoot the peasant in which case the beautiful queen's government is saved a lot of trouble.

• • •

THE suggestion was made in this column a few weeks back, that it would not be a bad idea for some workingclass organization to meet the queen of starving, persecuted Roumania, at the pier with some banners or placards carrying appropriate signs. "Queen occupies royal suite while her subjects starve." "U. S. government wastes tax payers' money on parasite queen while Roumanian peasant children can't have bread." Of course Jimmy Walker's tammany police would be on the job to protect the queen, but the news would go forth.

• • •

H. G. WELLS has written another book. If it is not any better than his other late productions our readers would be well advised to spend their money elsewhere. This man Wells is about the most muddleheaded scribe that ever made a fortune out of a dictionary. He turns out thousands of words a day and a public with a stomach for punishment swallows them. Wells is considered a radical by many, but as a matter of fact he is a conservative and imperialist at heart.

• • •

IT was rather tough on William Green and his fellow lackeys of the A. F. of L. council to be refused the privilege of making some class-collaborationist speeches in the Detroit churches, owned and operated by the chamber of commerce and its servants. What fools those capitalist mortals are? What did they have to fear from Green? This baptist, with the physiognomy of a small town deacon, is one of the best friends of the capitalist system. What he would say in the Detroit pulpit would be that the workers and the employers should get together. This is just what they are doing now, only too well.

• • •

THE only difference between Green's conception of trade unionism and company unionism, is that under the

800,000 N. Y. WORKERS BACK CLOAKMAKERS

Central Bodies, Locals Vote Support

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Eight hundred thousand workers represented by 162 delegates of ten central labor bodies and 61 local unions in a conference at the national headquarters of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 8 West 16th St., voted their wholehearted support to the 40,000 striking cloakmakers who have recently been served with a drastic injunction prohibiting picketing.

They elected an executive committee of thirty, whose function will be to carry out the decisions of the conference which includes a one dollar tax each week on the members of all the needle trades in the U. S., a demonstration to be held at the city hall by all the unions to express to the mayor the protests of the labor movement against the brutalities of the police during the course of the strike, and urging the members of other trade unions to join the cloakmakers on the picket line.

Many Represented.

Among the unions represented were the following: New York Central Trades and Labor Council, United Hebrew Trades, New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Furriers' Joint Board and International Executive Board, and many locals of the Cap and Mil-

CANTON ARMY WINS ENEMIES TO ITS RANKS

Soldiers Turn Against Reactionary Generals

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Oct. 11.—Reports from Hankow stated that the fall of the city of Wucheng, after a five weeks' siege, was due to the opening of the city gates by the Honenese brigade to admit the southern forces.

Capture Northern Generals.

Several of the northern generals were captured, including Governor Chen Chi-hao, and a part of the northern forces are being incorporated into the Cantonese armies.

During the course of the evacuation, negotiations suddenly broke down when some of the northern troops tried to take the artillery with them. The Cantonese finally compelled them to leave the artillery behind.

Cantonese Protect Foreigners.

Foreign missionaries in Wuchang are safe, despite all reports to the contrary spread by the imperialist press, General Chiang Kai-shih, commander of the Cantonese, having enforced the policy of protecting the lives of foreigners in the war zone. The defeated reactionary troops, however, outside the lines of the Canton armies, have been running wild with looting and killing.

The Chinese government declarets at Shanghai is now the subject of international interest on account of the resignation of the chief superintendent, Rehus Bacco Mauchan.

The superintendent is resigning because the northern militarists, including Sun Chuan-fang, are trying to get possession of the huge dockyards fund in order to use it for financing more war against the Cantonese. They have already forced the dockyards commission to give them $1,000,000.

Reactionary Generals Want Loot.

The dockyard, known as the Kiangnan dockyards, is capable of extensive ship-building, and the United States navy recently placed a contract with the enterprise for building a new fleet of gunboats for use by the navy on the Yangtze River.

The United States congress appropriated $4,000,000 for this work, and it is felt that if the reactionary generals succeed in confiscating the dockyards funds, the possibility of building the boats according to the

Leads Fight to Expose Indiana Klan

THOMAS H. ADAMS.

Declaring that he has concrete evidence to prove that the ku klux klan of Indiana ruled the state politically from top to bottom, Thos. H. Adams, publisher of the Vincennes, Ind., Commercial, is leading the demand for a complete probe of the activities of the hooded order in the Hoosier state. Practically every official in the state and in many counties is implicated in the sweeping charges of graft and political trading.

Governor Who Is Implicated in Ind.

GOV. ED. JACKSON.

Governor Jackson has been named by D. C. Stephenson, ex-dragon of the Indiana klan as one of those who took orders from the kluxers in every political move of importance from the appointment of senators down.

ORGANIZE NEGRO WOMEN WORKERS THRUOUT CITY

That the strike of the Negro women workers employed by the Maras date stuffing factory should be made the first step toward organizing all of the industries in Chicago which employ Negro women was the keynote of an enthusiastic meeting Sunday afternoon which was held by the strikers. The meeting was held at the Union Trade Hall, 3358 South Michigan Ave., and the hall was packed by the strikers and sympathizers.

Many Speakers.

Speakers included Lovett Fort-Whiteman, of the American Negro Labor Congress, Dora Lohse of the International Workers' Aid, Irene Goins of the Women's Trade Union League, Isbel of the American Negro Labor Congress, W. Matheson of the Chicago Window Washers' Local 40, and Mrs. Robert Jones and Mrs. Ella Smith, two of the strikers who were arrested by police.

Used as Pawns.

The strikers were told that only organization could prevent Chicago employers using the Negro women workers as pawns to beat down the wage standards of other workers, as well as themselves. They were urged to maintain their struggle until the date company would recognize their right to collective bargaining. This was met with great applause by the strikers

K. K. MURDERER TO APPEAR IN HOOSIER COURT

Politicians Stage Fake Inquiry

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BULLETIN.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 11.— The Indiana political controversy took on a wider aspect today when a United States senate investigation of alleged public corruption was requested of Senator William B. Borah by Thomas H. Adams, chairman of the probe committee of the Indiana Editorial Association, around which the storm rages.

• • •

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 11.—Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, will appear before the Marion County grand jury this afternoon to tell his story of alleged wholesale graft and corruption in Indiana, County Prosecutor Will H. Remy announced just before the grand jury convened at 10 a. m. today.

Attorney general Arthur L. Gilliom was present in the courtroom when Judge James J. Collins prepared to instruct the jury.

Court Asher, D. C. Stephenson, klan leader and perhaps scores of others whose names have been mentioned in connection with the allegations of a wholesale graft corruption in Indiana, may be subpoenaed to appear.

To Launch Fake Probe.

Decision to launch an immediate grand jury probe into the Stephenson charges was reached after a conference between State's Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom and County Prosecutor William H. Remy. Gilliom offered Remy all the assistance of the state's attorney general's office. He also asked Governor Ed. Jackson to defer appointing an investigating committee as the governor had promised to do, until after a grand jury had sifted the charges.

CAL WON'T CALL EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS FOR COTTON GROWERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—President Coolidge sees no need of an extra session of congress to extend aid to the cotton growers of the south, it was declared at the White House today.

Representative Pou of North Carolina had suggested that President Coolidge summon congress

Pleads for Organization of the Textile Industry

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—Writing an earnest plea for the organization of the whole textile industry, with the charge that the Passaic textile mill owners are clinging to their "company union" merely as a weapon to fight organized labor and strengthen the open shop, one hundred per cent open shop, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue, New York City, addressed the American Federation of Labor convention here today. He urged the delegates to declare for all possible aid to the Passaic strikers.

Pleads for Organization.

"I plead with you today," said Rabbi Wise, "not so much for the Passaic strikers, as to lend your best efforts for the organization of the workers in the textile industry. The textile is one of the fundamental industries of the land, employing between 750,000 and 1,000,000 workers.

"In the cause of organization, the workers in the Passaic textile mills have dared to stand as pioneers. The first weapon used against the Passaic workers was poisoned, namely the charge that they were agents of revolution."

Suffer Injustice.

Rabbi Wise declared that the Passaic strikers do not know what revolution is, nor what Communism means, but he charged, "They do know what injustice is, for they have been its long suffering and for the most part, uncomplaining victims.

"They are workers in an industry which the government subsidizes by imposing an enormous protective tariff, while at the same time the textile workers are shamefully underpaid.

Mill Owners Object to Weisbord.

"Against their elementary plea for the right to organize and to secure a living wage, the mills have pitted their brute power, and they have had, for the most part, the co-operation of the police and the law courts. The mill owners held that they could not see Americans—heaven save the mark—deal with the young man who for a time led the strike, on the ground of his political views."

This reference was to the Communist strike leader, Albert Weisbord. Rabbi Wise continued by showing that in spite of the fact that the strike had now come under the direction of the United Textile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, "and still the cry is that there will be no dealing with the strikers. In the meantime the strikers have borne themselves with patience, courage and self-mastery. They have left injunctions and violence to the mill owners.

Owners Still Fight Unions.

"And now, the attempt is being made to batter and starve into submission workers whose sole offending acts lies in their demand that they be free to organize and that theirs be a living family wage from the American standpoint. The mill owners have refused and they continue to refuse to deal with them.

"They offer the company union as

"HERRIN" ISSUE RAISED BY OPEN SHOPPERS' RAG

Make Insolent Threat to Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

Convention Hall, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—"Will It Be Another Herrin?" is the question in big type that appears on the first page of the current issue of "The Detroiter," official publication of the Detroit Board of Commerce, as part of its counter-move against the steps taken by the American Federation of Labor for the organization of the auto industry.

This question appears along with a quotation from the address of President James O'Connell, of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., in which O'Connell is quoted as saying:

"I have given the situation much thought and I am convinced that if any success is to be had in organizing automobile mechanics it must be of a general character carried on by the American Federation of Labor thru its organizing forces. I recommend, therefore, that this convention instruct the delegate from this department to the A. F. of L. convention to introduce a resolution calling attention to the necessity of inaugurating a campaign of organization in the automobile industry of the country."

Play on Prejudice.

"Will It Be Another Herrin?" is the only comment of "The Detroiter," showing that the editors of this sheet feel that the poisonous propaganda spread by the reptile press concerning the struggle of the coal miners of Williamson county, Illinois, has completely prejudiced the Detroit populace against the labor unions.

"Herrin" and "Detroit" offer two entirely different problems. At Herrin, Illinois, the coal miners had a 100 per cent union. It was the mine owners who sought to smash the miners' union at Herrin thru the most ruthless and careful planned campaign of murder.

The hope was not only to establish the American plan alias the "open shop" in the mine pits of Williamson county, but to smash the powerful Illinois coal miners' union, which is the backbone today of the United Mine Workers of America. It has been thru the miners' union that the Illinois coal miners have won what conditions, hours and wages they enjoy.

Detroit Different.

The situation in Detroit is just the opposite. Here the American plan, with its $7.50 per week wages for the slaves of Kresge's "five and ten cent stores," is in full bloom. The "open shop" devotees everywhere glory in labor's helplessness.

At Herrin, labor was on its feet, organized in its unions' fight, for a better life, and the open shoppers were trying, and failed miserably, to pull it down.

In Detroit labor is down, trampled on by its exploiters. It is trying to come up, thru organization. The employers are trying to keep it down. There can only be a Herrin in Detroit if the employers, in the next strike, bring in their army of thugs and assassins to shoot down the workers. It is the ruling class that provokes violence whether it is in Herrin or Detroit.

Under these conditions it is rather peculiar that the Detroit Saturday Night, auxiliary "open shop" sheet, pleads for the assistance of President William Green, of the A. F. of L.

DAUGHERTY JURY ACTING FUNNY; FIXING HINTED

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Hopelessly deadlocked for 46 hours, the federal jury in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy case confessed their inability to agree on a verdict and was dismissed this afternoon by Judge Julian W. Mack.

The jury had deliberated since last Friday night, continuing over Sunday, establishing a duration record in the annals of New York federal court history.

Accepted Bribe.

Nearly twenty hours have been spent in a futile endeavor to determine the guilt or innocence of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, charged with accepting part of a $441,000 bribe for passing a $7,000,000 war seizure claim.

Jury Deadlocked.

With one member near collapse after hours of wrangling in a smoke-filled jury room, the jury was dismissed at 10:50 o'clock last night until this morning by Judge Mack. After the jurors declared they were hopelessly deadlocked, Judge Mack insisted that they continue their deliberations until a verdict was reached.

HAILS PRIEST BUT CENSORS EDDY SPEECH

Ryan Speaks for Class Collaboration

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 11.— Although the speech of Dr. Sherwood Eddy on his visit to the Union of Soviet Republics still remains stricken from the record, the convention today without opposition ordered the printing as part of the convention proceedings the sermon delivered yesterday by the Reverend John A. Ryan at the Ste[illegible] Avenue church, where the convention delegates to the convention were asked to worship Sunday.

Catholic Church for Bolshevism.

Reverend Ryan used the encyclical of Pope Leo XIII on the condition of labor as the basis of his sermon, which is in this encyclical that Pope Leo denounced the idea that class is naturally arrayed against class, declaring that capital and labor each needs the other and commended the practice of mutual agreement.

Thus the reverend Ryan declared "A conspicuous example of [illegible] agreements and arrangements which are in full harmony with Pope Leo's views, is the union management co-operative plan in force on the Baltimore and Ohio and certain other railroads."

Reverend Ryan then seized the opportunity afforded him to attack the workers in Europe as follows:

Opposes World Labor Units.

"All intelligent lovers of their country and all believers in the christian principles of society and civilization should rejoice that in the United States labor is organized according to the spirit and the principles of American Federation of Labor. In this respect the contrast between many of the European countries and the United States is striking and profound. Across the Atlantic the labor movement is to a great extent communistic and socialistic or in some other way hostile to christian principles.

"This should be a cause of rejoicing particularly to us catholics; for we realize the great injury that has been wrought to the catholic cause by unfriendly labor organizations in Europe. We are aware, or ought to be aware, of the great advance enjoyed by our catholic wage-earners in having access to the unions that constitute the American Federation of Labor."

Complimented for Reaction.

Reverend Ryan did not mention the Mexican situation unless he indirectly referred to it when he said: "In this great organization (the A. F. of L.), does not always live up to the high standards that we would set before it, let us at least be charitable enough to recognize the difficulties which are responsible.

"And let us be sufficiently just and sufficiently generous to recognize the incalculable good achieved by the federation in keeping the American labor movement free from decrying influences which are not only subversive of social and public welfare but destructive of the faith and morals of our own spiritual children."

The catholic delegates, by vote, anxious to have the convention go on record attacking the stand of the Mexican workers against the Mexican church. Attempts Are Being Made to end have succeeded so far, in burying this question off the convention floor by inserting Father Ryan's speech in the record, however, is indicative of the watchful and active working of the catholic bloc here.

...ERS BADLY ...TEN BY COPS

...ic Police Torture Frame-up Victims

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 11.—Strike leaders issued a statement this morning that the union physician, Dr. ..., 228 o'President Street, who died yesterday to visit the man in the county jail, Hoelenmann, in connection with the bomb throwing ...field, reported finding the men in very bad physical condition. One of the prisoners, Paul Kobasco, plainly showed signs of a terrible beating. Dr. Tellman is said to have found this ... in plaster and bandages and to have reported back to the union that he had several ribs fractured or ... and that altho the marks discovered from his body it was clear ... the man's internal condition that he had been maltreated. Dr. Tellman found that Tom Regan, another of the prisoners, had had one of his teeth knocked out.

Desk's Statement.

Gustav Desk, chairman of the strike committee of Local 1903, United Textile Workers, in making public the report of Dr. Tellman, declared "this report by the union's doctor substantiates the statements of the men now on bail that they had been subjected to the worst sort of police brutality and third degree methods in the effort to force them to sign "confessions" they were not allowed to read. More and more it becomes clear, until today even the uninitiated in police methods must realize the truth, that the arrested men are victims of a police plot to break the strike by arresting and attempting to discredit the leaders of the strike.

"But we want to tell the police again that this latest attempt will go the way of all the others in miserable failure. Not only that, but this fantastic plot will react as a boomerang against the mill owners whom the police are so assiduously trying to serve. These plots only help to make the strikers more determined on victory. They serve also to arouse public opinion thruout the country against the industrial autocracy that has made the city of Passaic and the other cities of the strike zone, the center of industrial oppression and ... corruption thruout the civilized world."

Held Illegally.

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 11.—Claiming that it is illegal, improper and unconstitutional to hold the group of strikers now in jail in Patterson under bail on conspiracy pleas that they can never possibly secure it, John Larkin Hughes, attorney for the strikers, presented arguments this morning before Judge Joseph G. Delaney in the Passaic County Court of Common Pleas for the lowering of this bail, now standing at $375,000 for six men.

Bail Too High.

"Bail should be just enough to secure a defendant's appearance before the court for trial. It should be based upon a man's financial circumstances," said Mr. Hughes in his plea for lower bail.

"To place it so high that it has never be raised is practically the same as holding the men without bail.

"The indictments on which these men are held were secured on alleged confessions which they were forced to make when third degree methods were used on them. We claim that these men have been badly beaten. Confessions secured under such circumstances are worthless."

ILLINOIS FLOOD WATERS RECEDE, PEAK REACHED

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Oct. 11.—Steady declines in the gauge readings at Peoria, while the river here remained stationary at a water mark of 20.54 feet, today aroused hope in this flood-ridden city that the flooding Illinois river has reached its peak. The water now is over a foot higher than at any time in past history.

Active relief and rehabilitation work will get under way today with the expected arrival of Paul Dettmen, new director of Red Cross relief work.

Railroads are operating day service trains into this city altho in many places the tracks are covered.

The results of the flood now are apparent as sheds, garages, ... and other debris float thru the streets.

URGE A. F. OF L. TO MAKE ENERGETIC DRIVE FOR BRITISH MINERS' FUND

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 11. — Tag Days for the British coal miners now on strike, in all the large cities of the land, are being urged in the convention of the American Federation of Labor here as the result of a telegram received from E. G. Hall, president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, stating that $800 had been raised in a tag day held in Minneapolis recently. The telegram, addressed to Secretary Frank Morrison, read:

"I am sending you today to the Washington office check for $800 for the benefit of the striking coal miners of Great Britain. This money was raised by a tag day in Minneapolis, Saturday, Oct. 3, and the committee suggests that the convention recommend thruout the country tag days be inaugurated in behalf of the British miners and their families."

This is done the small amount of financial relief sent in aid of the British miners by the A. F. of L., by declaring that it isn't the amount sent, but the spirit in which it is sent. There are those who believe, however, that money talks louder than words in this case.

They Are Still Waiting.

There were those among the delegates who said on last Friday that the omission of Dr. Sherwood Eddy's speech on his European tour was omitted from the proceedings due to lack of time required to set it up in type in the printshop. They declared it would surely appear in the minutes issued in Saturday. But the printed record of the proceedings, issued daily, appeared Saturday and still no report of Dr. Eddy's speech, altho the speeches of Miss Anna Fitzgerald, fraternal delegate of the Women's International Union Label League, appeared in full, as did the address of Miss Rose Schneiderman, fraternal delegate of the National Woman's Trade Union League. This will no doubt be a rather rude shock to the believers in the so-called "democracy" with the A. F. of L., under the Green-Woll-Duncan regime.

Fear "The Radical."

On the day following the sale of 2,000 copies of the Special Ford Edition of The DAILY WORKER, at the Highland Park plant of the Ford Motor Company, all the delegates to the American Federation of Labor visited the institution. Many officials of the A. F. of L. have been issuing statements on the Ford plant and the five-day week ever since. "It has become a sort of nightmare with them. They not only heard of the distribution of The DAILY WORKER, but also of the shop bulletin. The Ford Worker, published in a 20,000 edition for October. The statement of A. J. Berries, secretary-treasurer of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., typical of the rest, is as follows:

"The constant monotony which the men in the Ford plant, which we visited this afternoon, are subject to, added to the tremendous pressure which these men labor under, means that within a comparatively few years these men become another addition to the human junk heap and their places are taken by newer arrivals. So long as new men can be constantly added to the force, such a plan can go on, but no longer.

"Instead of tending towards helping these men end making them better Americans, this system provides men who cannot help but being good material for the radical and the demagogue to work upon."

But it is only the radicals who take the fight of the auto workers seriously and carry on the struggle to organize them.

linery, Shoe Workers, Bakers, Painters, Furriers, Bookbinders, Waiters, Grocery Drivers and others.

$100,000 From Furriers.

Delegate Liebowitz told the conference that the joint board of the Furriers' Union has already raised $50,000 and expects to raise another $50,000 for the strikers. Several days ago the shop chairmen's meeting of the Furriers' Union decided to tax all of their members one dollar a week for the duration of the strike.

Enthusiastic applause greeted Sam Lipizen who brought in two hundred dollars in cash from the workers in the shops and the Trade Union Educational League Section of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Earlier in the conference several delegates had criticised the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union officialdom for its sabotage of the strike.

Bring Checks.

Checks were brought to the conference from the following unions: Painters' Union, Local 87, $500; Bakers' Union, Local 174, $100; Suit Case and Bag Makers' Union, $500. The delegate of the Retail Cleaners and Dyers' Union announced that they are taxing their 7,000 members one dollar a week for the strikers.

The executive committee of thirty elected by the conference includes Edward Lavin and Jim Walsh who led the recent I. R. T. strike in New York; John Sullivan, president of the New York State Federation of Labor; Joseph F. Coughlin, secretary of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council; Ben Gold, manager, joint board, Furriers' Union; Joseph Schlossberg, general secretary, Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union and M. Feinstein of the United Hebrew Trades. This executive committee was instructed to hold the demonstration at the city hall within a week.

"Herrin" Issue Raised

against the politicans in the labor movement, putting Green's administration in the A. F. of L. for all the reactionary measures that it espouses. Thus the Detroit Saturday Night, in its current issue, declares:

"There is better work for the American Federation of Labor to do than to force the closed shop on American industry with all that it costs the public in money and freedom of action, not to speak of the numerous and conspicuous outrages committed by closed shop bosses, concerning whom the parent organization maintains an ominous silence. The development of the labor banks and the labor insurance company is one of the most notable and encouraging achievements in the economic history of the country.

"The American Federation has stood four square against the Communists and the recognition of Russia. It has endorsed the Citizens' Military Training Camps, in every test of patriotism it has been American first. Mr. Green himself has declared against the general strike as a violation of contract. But there is something wrong with an organization that shows a steady decline in membership for the past six years. Evidently it needs a housecleaning, and the first thing it needs to clean out is the closed shop and all its works. Public opinion is boss in this country, and not any church, klan, lodge or labor union."

ORGANIZATION OF TEXTILE IS PLEA TO A. F. OF L.

a substitute for organization of the workers within trade or textile unions. On their lips is the company union, in their hearts is "the open shop." What is its essence is the open shop? A shop open to the unorganized until it can be closed to the organized workers.

Open Shop Means Despotism.

"The open shop is designated not to assure the freedom of the workers but to safeguard the power of the unchangeable masters. Open is a misnomer and a delusion, for open has something of the atmosphere and connotation of freedom. The 'open shop' is the open door to industrial despotism.

"'Abandon ye who enter here,' will be written over the door of the open shop. The ultimate purpose of the open shop is to destroy the organization of the workers, and the American republic, with its workers denied the right to organize and smashed into submission, were not worthy of its name and destiny.

Workers' Courage Glorious.

"The Passaic mill workers have dared to stand up and do battle with the weapons of the spirit with glorious courage and amid unbelievable suffering, for something which is in keeping with the traditions of American freedom. The mill owners, who deny and would crush them, are bent upon the destruction of organized labor. Then let the American Federation of Labor accept the challenge.

"If the mill owners, drunk with prosperity and entrenched in power, persist in their un-American refusal, then is the time come for the American Federation of Labor to grant the fullest measure of its support to the undaunted workers in the Passaic mills.

Duty of A. F. of L.

"Victorious, these become the symbol of your strength; defeated and broken, they may become the token of your weakness. Upon you lies the duty of organize the workers in the textile industry thruout the land, thru the instrumentality of the United Textile Workers.

"Remember that the American people are deeply stirred over the Passaic struggle. Lawlessness and disorder have been monopolized by the mills and their police and judicial allies. Know that American men and women do not wish to wear clothing sweated out of underpaid workers."

Hits at Controlled Churches.

Rabbi Wise also hit at the attitude of the Detroit churches toward the A. F. of L. convention.

"The churches must not become the Sunday clubs of the would-be destroyers of labor," he declared amidst great applause.

"We must not allow the church and the synagogue reduced to the level of scab agencies."

Wants Whole Industry Unionized.

Rabbi Wise declared the Passaic strike had now developed into a lockout under the Prussian despotism of the mill owners.

"I am here to plead for the organization from top to bottom of the textile industry," he repeated again in concluding his talk.

When Rabbi Wise had finished President Green pledged the support of the A. F. of L. to the Passaic strikers.

Delegate Sarah Conboy, secretary of the United Textile Workers' Union, also spoke, telling of the eight months' struggle of the Passaic strikers, declaring:

"If the mill owners can win in Passaic, only God knows who will be their next victims."

Must Fight Open Shop.

"It seems that two organizations, the United Mine Workers of America and the United Textile Workers' Federation, are the butt of the open shop attack. You must help the Passaic strikers now. You must back them up today. Their victory will be your victory."

Also it was known that Rabbi Wise would appear before the convention on behalf of the Passaic strikers, the resolutions committee had not prepared to report out the Passaic resolution, as it did in the case of the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, unanimously endorsed last week.

Convention Delays Action.

Thomas MacMahon, president of the Textile Workers' Union, was not in the hall when Rabbi Wise made his appeal and did not appear later. Ellen Dawson, an official of the textile strikers' union, was in the hall, but was not given the floor. President Green announced that the Passaic strike relief collection would come up later, when there would doubtless be other speeches on the subject. Instead of completing its action on the Passaic strike, the convention was asked to listen to an address by Eugene T. Lies of the Playground and Recreation Association.

The convention stood for a few moments in memory of labor officials who had died during the past year. The name of Sam Gompers, who died nearly two years ago, immediately following the El Paso convention, was added to the list.

Mighty U. S. Government Can't Dodge Confession by One of Its Own Agents

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

WORKERS of America! Memorize the testimony offered by the department of justice agent, Fred J. Weyand, in his affidavit now on file with Judge Webster Thayer, in the Dedham, Mass., court where rests the power to say whether Sacco and Vanzetti shall live or die.

Especially American labor must commit to memory several statements by Weyand as follows:

"At one time as many as 12 agents of the department of justice in Boston were assigned to cover Sacco and Vanzetti meetings and other radical activities connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti case."

"NO EVIDENCE WAS DISCOVERED WARRANTING THE INSTITUTION OF PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ANYBODY."

"Shortly after the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti was concluded, the affiant (Weyand) says he told Weiss (Fred Weiss of the prosecutor's staff) that he did not believe that they (Sacco and Vanzetti) were the man that shot the paymaster (of South Braintree), and Weiss replied that that might be so, but they were bad actors and would get what they deserved anyway."

"Mr. Weyand says that he is thoroly convinced, and always has been, that these men had nothing whatever to do with the South Braintree murder, and that their conviction was the result of cooperation between the Boston agents of the department of justice and the district attorney."

"It was the general opinion of the Boston agents of the department of justice having knowledge of the affair, that the South Braintree crime was committed by a group of professional highwaymen."

These are statements from the confession of the ex-department of justice agent, Weyand, who has at last, after six years, unleashed his tongue to tell what he knows.

Weyand says that he was concerned in the government's activities against workers called "reds" and "radicals," including the wholesale raids made in January, 1920. This was under the regime of President Woodrow Wilson and Attorney General J. Mitchell Palmer, the New Jersey college professor and the Pennsylvania politician.

Weyand says that some time before the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti, the names of both of them had got on the files of the department of justice as radicals to be watched, and as followers or associates of an Italian editor named Galleani. The suspicion entertained by the department of justice against Sacco and Vanzetti was that they had violated the selective service act, and also that they were anarchists and held radical opinions of some sort or another.

Shortly after the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti, meetings began to be held by sympathizers, and Weyand says he was assigned to attend those meetings and report to the department. He says an agent was assigned, as undercover man, to win the confidence of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, and that this man became one of the collectors. This government stoolpigeon told Weyand that he was in the habit of taking as much money for his own use as he saw fit.

Mr. Weyand says that no evidence was obtained of utterances at any meetings which warranted proceedings against anybody. The reports of the meetings were sent to the Washington office of the department of justice and duplicates were kept in the Boston office.

It was under these preliminary circumstances that the government took an active interest in the joint trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, with Mr. Weyand being assigned to cover the trial.

Another agent, William J. West, who attended the trial for the same purpose, told Mr. Weyand that an Italian named Carbone was under an arrangement with the district attorney, the sheriff and Mr. Weiss, placed in the cell next to Sacco's some time during the year 1920 for the purpose of getting Sacco's confidence in order to obtain incriminating evidence against him.

NO EVIDENCE OF THE SORT WAS OBTAINED BY CARBONE.

The understanding in this case, Mr. Weyand says, between the agents of the department of justice in Boston and the district attorney, followed the usual custom that the superiors of justice would help the district attorney to secure a conviction, and that he in turn would help the agents of the department to secure information that they might desire. The Boston agents believed that these men were anarchists, and hoped to be able to secure evidence against them, from their testimony at their trial for murder, to be used in case they were not convicted of murder.

There is correspondence between Mr. Katzmann (district attorney) and Mr. West (department of justice agent) on file in the Boston office of the department, but it is kept in secret. All efforts to force it to public view have failed. Mr. West furnished Mr. Katzmann information about the radical activities of Sacco and Vanzetti, to be used in their cross-examination.

Thus at no time did the prosecution, bolstered by the U. S. department of justice, really believe that Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty. Yet with this knowledge, and also with the damning if not actual proof that the South Braintree affair was the work of the Morelli gang, the police bloodhounds were called off the real scent and the U. S. agents set to watch the rising protest of American labor over the arrests of Sacco and Vanzetti."

It will be remembered how Elisworth C. Jacobs, the New Bedford police agent, told how the search for evidence against the Morelli gang was dropped with the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti, altho everyone connected with the case knew that Sacco and Vanzetti had no connection with the payroll robbery and murders at South Braintree.

Powerful and mighty tho the United States government may be, it cannot dodge or sidestep the facts revealed by its own agent, Fred J. Weyand.

• • •

Our Duty Towards the Daily Worker

By H. PURO.

IT is almost three years since the the Daily Worker was born. Ever since it has been a fearless fighting organ of the American working class. Whenever and wherever workers are compelled to struggle against their oppressors, the Daily Worker has always been found on the job, helping workers. But it has not been only fighting. It has also enlightened and educated workers and poor farmers regarding their role in the class struggle. It has also helped to organise the unorganised and strengthen the already existing organisations of workers and poor farmers.

In this work, in this great and invaluable service to our cause, the Daily Worker has been greatly hampered, because of its need of ample support.

THE American working class does not yet, as a whole, appreciate the great work done by the Daily Worker —for its cause. Therefore, the workers are unable to estimate the value of their own daily paper. This is true, not only for the rank and file of the workers of this country, but even for the so-called class conscious worker who does not become a regular subscriber and supporter of his own paper.

This is why the Daily Worker is not self-supporting. This is why it has to make general campaigns at least once every year.

As a rule, the Daily Worker has to appeal to the workers to remember the importance of a daily organ for the American working class. It is not a shame that the workers' paper appeals to us. It would be a shame, should it appeal to our enemies.

SO it is our duty to respond to this appeal. It is the unquestionable duty of the Party members who should respond one hundred percent. Also, it is the duty of all those workers who realize how important such an organ is in the class struggle as the Daily Worker is.

Let us all do our duty! Let us all build the Daily Worker strong, powerful!

UNION WEAK IN PA. SOFT COAL FIELD

Only Hope a National Strike Movement

By ART SHIELDS,
Federated Press.

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 4—(FP)—More than half the former members have been swept out of the miners' union in the great soft coal fields of Pennsylvania by the openshop tide of the last years.

Six desperate months must pass before the 5-year Jacksonville agreement expires and the union is free to negotiate another national pact or to use the weapon of a national strike to recover its losses. Till then it must depend on local strikes. Local strikes are a frail protection in an overdeveloped industry that can easily supply the market with only half the mines in operation.

Local Strikes not Enough.

The Allegheny mountains that hide the coal of central Pennsylvania—Dist. 2, U. M. W. A.—and the broad river valleys that overlie the seams of the western Pennsylvania, or Pittsburgh, district (6) are spotted with these local strikes. The local unionists that are left carry bravely on. But they know that their salvation lies in a national movement that will swing the great West Virginia fields back into the fold.

Unionizing West Virginia the Key.

The fate of the Pennsylvania miners is inseparably wrapped with that of their West Virginia brothers. The breaking of the union's hold on the border state has let loose a flood of cheap scab coal into the northern markets on which the Pennsylvania men depended. The two states together produce about half the total bituminous production of the nation. Formerly Pennsylvania had the major portion but last year West Virginia, with its more than 30% wage differential, nosed it out.

The men of the four counties were left out of the settlement in 1922. Soon after the union membership fell to its former proportions. But with the rest of the state still unionized the United Mine Workers were still a highly formidable institution.

Jacksonville Pact no Security.

Then came the Jacksonville agreement, going into effect April 1, 1924, and promising to give these older fields security for the next three years. Yet—such is the irony of events—the great losses have taken place since this peace treaty was signed.

Jacksonville agreement was, in the language of wartime diplomacy, a scrap of paper as far as some large operators were concerned. They signed it to avoid a national strike in 1924, knowing that the operator who broke the contract would be faced only with local strikes. As long as any operator kept the agreement a complete tieup of the industry would not be attempted.

The Starvation Cure.

In 1924 great shutdowns began. Men were being starved by the prospective contract-breakers; the Pittsburgh Coal Co., Bethlehem Mines Corp., Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh R. R. group and others. After months on the meager relief that district organizations could furnish, men were offered scab work at the 1917 scale, a 20% cut. To their honor few accepted. Strikes were fought bravely against gunmen, imported strikebreakers, and all the paraphernalia of the openshop plan.

Furnishing "Bleak" Coal Help!

This summer it seemed that things were cracking. Now even the British coal demand. Some mines have reopened on the union scale. The union has a slight breathing spell.

But a desperate winter of fighting and waiting is near. The miners need all that the rest of the labor movement can give them to maintain what is left of their union till next April when the chance may come of recovering the rest.

(Later Pennsylvania stories will deal with Dist. 2, Dist. 5 and the non-union Somerset-Payette fields.)

Sunday Worker Takes Lead in Campaign

LONDON, Oct. 11.— The Sunday Worker, organ of the radicals in the British Trade Unions has initiated a campaign to oust the tory government.

Among those who have given their support to this campaign are A. B. Swales, member of the general council of the Trade Union Congress, Will Lawther of the Labor Party executive committee and Alex Gossip of the Furnishing Trades.

Sunday Worker On the Job.

The Sunday Worker anticipated the decision of the tory party convention to launch an attack against the trade unions. Stanley Baldwin, in obedience to the demands of the coal operators announced that the government was prepared to introduce legislation to curb the power of the trade unions.

In the opinion of the Sunday Worker and its large circle of supporters, labor's reply to this ultimatum should be an ambitious campaign with the object of ditching the tory government and establishing a labor government in its place.

Can't Restore Rights to China Until Peace Comes, Says Chicagoan

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11.—"It is impossible to think of having America give up its extraterritorial rights in China until peace is restored in that country," declared Silas H. Strawn, Chicagoan and only American member of the commission on extraterritorial commission, who arrived here from China.

Nothing can be done to help China until a "stable" government is established, quipped the American. Until then the foreign nations must be forced to continue to reap profits from China, was the substance of his comments.

"WINNING A LOT" IN GAMBLE RUN BY REAL ESTATE COMPANY BAITS HOOK FOR POOR SUCKER

By NORMAN BURSLER.

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 11.—An innocent little advertisement in an Oakland paper reads: "Wanted well-dressed young man for outside work. Short hours. Good pay to start; no selling." As I had just replaced my worn-out clothes by new ones and being in great need of a boss, I could pass as well-dressed in a real small sense, at least until the first rain, so I answered the ad.

I was ushered into the offices of the Suburban Realty Company and after a brief interchange of words was invited to return in the evening when they would initiate me into the mysteries of the real estate game.

The Humble Salesman.

Among the instructions given me were "Go up to the door, bat in hand. It will give you the appearance of a visitor." "Try to have your prospect visit our property at 10 a. m. the next day. If you give them time to cool off, we lose 4 out of 5. We get 7 out of 10 who go out the next day.

The work I was asked to do was to go around in the mornings and get people to sign a card, "obligating them in no way whatever." Then in the evenings I was to go and tell each of them the same thing, only corresponding with that told by the salesman initiating me, which ran:

The "Come on" Prize.

"Mrs. Sucker, I have some wonderful good news for you. You are entitled to one of our $400 lots in our Haywards subdivision. If I may come in, I'll tell you all about it." Of course, the guillible one permits the fisher—that is the best name for the so-called salesmen—to enter and usually exclaims, "Why, I never won anything before!"

"What," returns the fisher, "I'm so glad that it was you. What we want to do, Mrs. Sucker, is to make an appointment for you to see our property tomorrow at 10 o'clock. Our business manager will drive you out. You see, we do not do much newspaper advertising, so we want you for our booster, that is, we want the privilege of sending a couple of prospects to you, but the main thing we want is to have you write a letter telling what you think of our property. It is important that you should see it, for otherwise you couldn't conscientiously recommend it."

"Five Dollars, Please!"

If the prospect consents to go to the property at 10 o'clock the next day, the fisher says: "Now we would like to have a deposit of $5.00 to hold this spot for you, if you don't want the lot, the money will be refunded. The prospect then signs a paper which reads, "This lot has not been sold by any lottery or form of gamble," thus getting around the state laws.

Up to this time the prospect has been under the impression that the lot has been won. The fisher then emphasizes that the lot has not been won by any form of chance. "You see, Mrs. Sucker, out of a list of names in this section, we thought you were the best one to boost us." The fisher is now in the seventh heaven of delight, but if she should inquire further, the fisher tells her it is necessary that she should pay $75.00 for legal expenses, surveying, notary's fee, deed, titling, insurance and a host of other things. The prospect still thinks herself fortunate. When about to depart the fisher says, "Mrs. Sucker, I would suggest that you don't mention this to your neighbors, as it might affect the resale value of your lot."

Next to Cemetery.

Of course, all prospects are told the same story. The salesman tells me they have a few lots, on the steep side of a hill, next to the cemetery—those lots are the ones which they offer at first to the suckers. Usually the sucker doesn't like it, so they commence, "Well, we would like to have you for our booster, and we want you satisfied. I'll tell you what we'll do. We will allow you $400 on one of our $1100 lots and your $75 can be considered as a down payment—the rest can be paid on monthly terms. Out of 167 who fell for the game, my initiator tells me only two insisted on taking the lots offered. The others traded theirs in on more expensive lots. "Even selling lots at $75," he says, "we lose no money."

Many Aliases.

As the salesman mentioned his company was a national one, I questioned him and learned that "We feel we should not use the same name in towns too close together, so in San Francisco and in some Eastern cities, we operate under the name of the Kof Realty Co."

This game is being quite extensively practiced by real estate companies. Everybody is "entitled" to one of their lots. Recently while on a hiking tour of the East, I noticed advertisements in papers offering similar propositions. If one would send his name to some land company,

For Only 8 Per Cent.

Probably a more truthful advertisement would read, "Wanted well-dressed sucker fisher; short hours; commission basis; you get the suckers; we separate them from loose cash and mortgage them for life." The fishers are allowed 5 per cent commission on each lot taken by a prospect brought in by him. "After you get your prospect's deposit," warned the salesman, "change the subject." Talk about anything but real estate.

LACK OF COAL TIES 400 BRITISH COTTON MILLS IN THIRD TIME

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Four hundred mills in the Lancashire district engaged in the spinning of American cotton announced today that they had decided to operate only one week in every three because of the high prices which make running expenses prohibitive.

The decision gives a concrete example of the paralyzing effect of the long coal strike.

MEXICANS BID FAREWELL TO SOVIET ENVOY

Kollantai to Replace Comrade Pestkovsky

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 11.—Julio Antonio Mella, the famous Cuban hunger striker, is preparing to attend the world conference of colonial peoples to be held at Brussels, Belgium, as the delegate of the Anti-Imperialist Leagues of Cuba and Mexico.

Pestkovsky Leaving.

The representative up to now of the Soviet Union in Mexico, Ambassador Pestkovsky, is sailing today after a farewell dinner given in his honor by the Mexican university, the diplomatic corps and members of the Mexican cabinet.

Pestkovsky was given an ovation at a farewell meeting planned by the Students' Federation, workers' organizations and the Agrarian Leagues of Mexico at the National Preparatory School of Mexico City.

Movies showing the burial of Lenin were exhibited.

Kollantai to Arrive.

The League of Agrarian Communes of the state of Vera Cruz, Michoacan and Tamaulipas and miners of Michoacan and many other labor organizations telegraphed their farewells to Ambassador Pestkovsky, expressing their solidarity with the workers of the Soviet Union.

Leon Hayknas remains as charge d'affairs until the arrival of the new Soviets ambassadress, Alexandra Kollantai.

Independence Day Made Anti-Clerical Day

On Mexico's Independence Day, President Calles, his ministers and representatives of the labor movement made the day also part of the war upon the reaction represented by the Catholic Church in Mexico.

PEOPLE OF HANKOW CHEER ENTRY OF CANTON TROOPS: DENOUNCE WU

From Our Correspondent

(By courtesy of the People's Army Command)

HANKOW, —(By Mail)— I am enabled, by the kindness of the People's Army staff, to get thru to you some details of the army's entry into this city, which gives a clear reply to the question, "Are the people on the side of Canton?"

The population literally poured out en masse to meet the troops of the People's Army, as they tramped in, sunburnt, footsore, ragged, and happy after their long march north from Canton and their stiff fight with Wu-Pei-Fu.

Indeed, one of the most frequent remarks one heard as one pushed thru the crowded streets was: "Look, they are smiling!"

In Britain you don't realize what it means to see a victorious Chinese army smiling! In China they know too well that in the past their first concern, when troops entered a city after a fight, was to barricade the doors and lay in stocks of provisions. Not smiles but scowls, if not pillage and murder, was the rule.

They Are Different.

But, as an American correspondent said to me, "These fellows are different." Their bearing is different: soldierly but reserved, not the wild bandit atmosphere of Chang's troops or Wu's. Their songs are different. Even their banner is different—the white sun on a blue background that expresses the aspirations of revolting China.

For the first time since the 1911 Revolution, the revolutionary battalions were accompanied thru the streets by a solid, cheering, mass of coolies, workmen, clerks, even merchants—representing the new unity of the Chinese people around the Kuomintang. Everywhere—another novelty—the troops were greeted with ringing cheers and clapping from the houses with shouts of "Down with Wu-Pei-Fu!" "Down with the imperialist robbers!" "Welcome the People's Army!"

New Chinese Proletariat.

The railway station presented a remarkable scene. All over the depot were little groups of soldiers, standing around their piled arms or eating their dinner, with here and there the renowned Whampoa Cadets—90 per cent members of the Kuomintang, and many of them Communists. Around and thru their ranks moved a vast concourse of railwaymen and other workers: the new Chinese proletariat on whose growing industrial power all the best elements in the Kuomintang rely.

Young Workers Talk.

They were talking for the first time to "their" soldiers—something unheard of in China's three thousand years of history, eagerly drinking in details of the long march and the battle questioning the soldiers closely about labor conditions in Canton, or listening in rapt silence while a fiery young Whampoa Cadet was—to use a phrase so dear to our own labor movement—"stating the position" for the Kuomintang or for its affiliated body, the Communist Party.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic of all, however, are the shopkeepers, particularly after the painful experience of Wu's troops. They have never heard of an army that does not loot. "These soldiers pay for everything they get," said an old fruit-seller in an awed whisper to me this morning.

One does not need to see the troops in the battlefield, in short, to realize that they will go far. The people of China are on their side, and that is the guarantee of victory.

HUNDREDS OF SOUTH AMERICANS VISIT SOVIET UNION; EXPRESS APPRECIATION OF ITS WELCOME

MOSCOW (By Mail).—Several hundreds of South American tourists have arrived at Leningrad on the "Cape-Polonia," one of the biggest German ships plying between Hamburg and South American ports. This is the first visit of this kind to the Soviet Union. The tourists were greeted by representatives of the Society of Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, who went on board of a small steamer to meet them as far as the lighthouse near Kronstadt.

Amongst the tourists were representatives of Argentine, Brazil, Chili and Uruguay. These were prominent statesman, business men, journalists and ordinary globe-trotters. Mr. Lebretton, the former minister of agriculture in Argentine, said to a Tass representative:

"We know very little about your Union. Our information is very poor and full of lies. Our staying here will help to elucidate real facts before the public opinion in Argentine. I hope to see in Moscow Mr. Tchitcherin, whom I respect very much."

Argentinian Interested.

Mr. Perez, the ex-minister of finance and founder of the liberal party in Argentine, asked the Tass correspondent to explain in the Soviet press that he always followed very closely the activity of the Soviet Republic, whose experience, he is sure, will be beneficial for the humanity.

Prof. Herbora of the Montevideo University, on behalf of the Uruguayans, expressed his deep satisfaction with the news of the "de jure" recognition of the Soviet Union by their country. They have heard about it only on their arrival at Leningrad.

During the few days' stay of the "Cape-Polonia," nearly all the tourists visited Moscow, its various museums, institutions, and the grand opera, where they saw the famous ballet.

Soviet Union Academy of Science Progresses, Declares a Professor

MOSCOW (By Mail).— Professor Fersman, member of the Academy of Science, in an interview with the journalists, said:

"The Union Academy of Science enters now in a new period of its history. Until now the academy paid its most attention to the development of its scientific institutes.

"During the next year we are going to put before us two chief objects: (a) strengthening and enlarging of our work on an international scale; (b) the thoro study of our autonomous republics in order to raise their productive forces and the cultural level of backward nations in the Soviet Union. Our international relations with other foreign academies of science have been greatly increased during the last following telegram to Mr. Tchitcherin, people's commissary for foreign affairs:

"We are deeply touched by the hearty welcome accorded to us by the people and the government of the U. S. S. R. during our unforgettable staying in your beautiful country. Permit us to express our profound gratitude and best wishes for the welfare of the peoples of the Soviet Union."

CHICAGO POLICE HIGHERUPS FACE PRISON SENTENCE

Huge Liquor Graft Exposed by Federal Probe

Wholesale indictments against Chicago police officers from patrolmen to the "higher-ups" will be brought in by the federal grand jury soon, it is reliably reported as a result of investigations made by federal agents in connection with the graft revelations of Chicago police bootleg activities.

Have Enough Dope.

Enough evidence is in the hands of the government now to send at least five police captains to Leavenworth, it is reported, and by the end of the week, it is expected that 15 of the "higher-ups" will face similar charges.

The inquiry is uncovering an intricate pay-off system, whereby police officials are waxing rich protecting bootleggers.

Officers Squeal.

Most of the evidence in the case is being gleaned from disgruntled police officers who failed to get "theirs" when the graft money was distributed, federal investigators report. Not being with these officers he called before the jury, but prominent figures in Chicago's underworld are also slated to testify.

One angle in the investigation discloses that some police, while shaking down bootleggers in their own districts were peddling booze themselves on their off-time.

Received Huge Sums.

Sums paid officers for protection range from $250 a month to flat payments of $1,000 and $2,000, it is alleged. A cutting plant on Ogden avenue is reported to have "kicked in" $2,000 as "initial payment" and $250 monthly heeldes. Three places in a single block on West Division street, according to officials, put in $3,500 to be allowed to conduct their business.

Chief of Police Collins, it is indicated, will be asked to testify to explain the system of "open bookings," by which officers arrest offenders, "fine" them, and release them, without making records of the case.

Political Prisoner to Tell Indianans of Mexican Revolt

Charles Cline, who spent 13 years in a Texas prison, is coming to Gary, Ind.

He will tell a story of how a group of revolutionists took action to help the oppressed masses of Mexico to gain land and freedom, how they were betrayed by a spy; how the group of revolutionists were captured and a charge was made against Charles Cline accusing him of murdering the spy.

Cline will tell what the International Labor Defense had done to help gain his freedom.

The meeting and reception in honor of Comrade Cline is being arranged by the Gary branches of the International Labor Defense. It will take place Sunday, October 17, at 7:30 p. m. at the Spanish Hall, 14th Ave. and Madison St., Gary, Ind.

In addition, Comrade James Ford of the American Negro Labor Congress will tell of the case of the Texas martyrs, the Negro soldiers, some of whom suffered death and some imprisonment because they stood up to defend the rights of their oppressed race.

The Hammond meeting will take place Saturday, October 16, at 7:30 p. m., at the Holy Trinity Hall, 540 Ame street, Hammond, Ind., with the same speakers on the program.

We and 17 Cents Richer This Year Than Last, U. S. Government Says

The total money stock was $4,448,247,866, or $345,190,000 more than on October 1, 1924. The rest was held in federal reserve banks.

OLD BROWNING'S DARLINGS TAKE A FLYING HIKE

Hearst's Serial Story Finished in Time

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—"Peaches" Browning, the 16-year-old bride who has given her wealthy 50-year-old "Cinderella man" husband, Edward W. Browning, "the sir," is planning to leave for Canada with her mamma as soon as possible, she said today. She is all packed up and ready to go.

But, according to Browning, she'll come back—when her money gives out.

"I've got to have a rest, and I'm going to get it," said the bride of six months today when located, with her mother, Mrs. Catherine Heenan, in the apartment of a friend in Manhattan. Mother and daughter plan to remain in Canada for a week or two, in seclusion.

Old Man Is Sore.

"Peaches'" gray-haired, middle-aged husband is meanwhile most disconsolate. He spent last night again alone in his hotel awaiting a conciliatory move on the part of his bride. He misses her terribly.

"I want my 'Peaches' back," he said this morning as he left for his office, "and mark my word, she will return—when her supply of cash is exhausted. I will certainly welcome her back with open arms. There never has been a time since we were married that I wouldn't have given my life for her."

Trailed By Dicks.

Browning denied that "Peaches" had been trailed by detectives wherever she went of late. He also scoffed at reports that he had denied her spending money and made provisions in his will whereby his bride would receive no substantial share in his estate.

Asked if she expected to sue for a separation, "Peaches" said she had no plans and wanted a rest.

The Hearst papers recently finished a serial purporting to be a "confession" of "Peaches" Browning's life with her old husband.

BIGGER THAN TRADITION IS UPHELD IN CA...

Sentence Negro on No Evidence at All

By ED. OWENS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 11.—Earl Waters, a Negro of Sacramento, is to be hanged by the neck until he is dead on December 10. He was charged and convicted of killing his wife with a .25 calibre rifle.

Since California is one of the states which still resort to capital punishment, the fact that a Negro is to be executed does not occasion much surprise. But there are some little details about the trial and conviction of Waters that makes this case one of the most astounding in criminal court history.

Small Evidence.

The only evidence presented by the prosecution was the testimony of a nine-year-old girl who told of seeing Waters shoot his wife with a .25 calibre rifle. She ran from the room in fright. She did not even see the woman fall. No proof was submitted that the woman was dead. Her body nor any part of her body was produced. There were no bones nor ashes, no bloody clothing, no blood stains any place—not even the rifle with which Waters was alleged to have committed the crime.

Hypothetical.

In the absence of any material evidence to bolster up his case the prosecutor advanced the theory that perhaps the body might have been dismembered and thus disposed of. Waters is a poverty-stricken Negro. He was not put on the stand in his own behalf, nor was any defense witness called. But on an hypothetical proposition that he might have dismembered the victim and cast the parts into the Sacramento River the jury brought in a verdict of guilty of first degree murder and the judge sentenced him to be hanged.

Like Mooney.

You ask how is all this possible? Well, California is California. Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings are serving life sentences on a frame-up. Herman Suhr answers to a number, instead of a name. California has a criminal syndicalism act that is perhaps the most vicious piece of anti-labor legislation on the statute books of any state. California produced a Judge Busick who opened up new vistas to the possibilities of the injunction evil.

George Waters will surely hang unless his case is appealed. He is poverty-stricken, friendless and a Negro. California furnishes another bit of evidence to prove that to be the most backward state in the Union.

Rabindranath Tagore, Indian Poet, to Visit the Soviet Republics

MOSCOW (By Mail).— Rabindranath Tagore, the most famous of living poets of India, has visited in Stockholm Mr. Arosev, charge d'affaires of the U. S. S. R. in Sweden, and told him that he intends to take a trip to Russia. He gave the following short message to the U. S. S. R.:

"When I have known Russia, I admired her and began studying her great literature. My heart is alive with sympathy to her call for humanity."

Students Experiment on Effect of Noise on Workers' Nerves

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 11.—(FP) What effects noise has on the health and efficiency of office workers is the subject of experiments by two Colgate University students.

A noise-making machine which will automatically blow a siren at varying intervals, cause a gong to ring, and smaller bell to tinkle, while a five-sided tin box full of nails and screws gyrates to add to the din will be used in a small room where the subjects of the experiment will sit typing.

Wolfe Speaks to Frisco Audience

By E. ETTLINGER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Oct. 11.—Sunday evening, September 26, Comrade Bertram D. Wolfe addressed a large and enthusiastic mass meeting of workers under the Workers Party headquarters, 225 Valencia street, on the subject of "Whe Owns the Government?"

Comrade Wolfe, in the course of his talk, pointed out that in spite of popular belief, the United States is owned and controlled by a small group of financial capitalists who dictate policy to the American government, which in every respect voices their interests and not the interests of the broad masses of workers and farmers.

Pointing out that only the Workers (Communist) Party is fighting for a labor party in this country, Comrade Wolfe appealed for workers to join the party. As a result of his appeal six new members were taken in.

KLUXER EXPOSURE MEANS CRISIS IN G. O. P.

Slush Fund Equalling Illinois' Reported

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 11.—The recent ku klux klan exposure in Indiana is more than a debacle for the klan organization, but also creating a crisis in the republican party in that state.

This is clear from the fact that Senators Watson and Robinson received the unanimous nomination from the republican party, which is under indisputed control of the klan, and has been for the past three years, as stated to The DAILY WORKER by a prominent Negro lawyer of Indiana.

When asked by The DAILY WORKER reporter why no opposition candidates had been set up during the senate primaries, the lawyer stated that the domination of the klan was so complete that it was useless to attempt it. This same lawyer received an invitation from the national republican committee to make a speaking tour for the party, but declined and states that he is thru with the republican party.

Will Lose Thousands.

This exposure will cost the republican party thousands of votes, especially among the Negro voters of the state.

Emmet N. White, chairman of the Lake county democratic organization for the past 18 years, was interviewed by The DAILY WORKER, and he said: "A great deal of pressure was put on the workers by the corporations in order to compel them to vote for the republican nominees, especially in national politics. But at the present time and during the past few years their efforts have failed.

Klan Disgusts Them.

"People who formerly went along with the klan are becoming disgusted with the political situation in Indiana. Considering the fact that 150,000 voters deserted the democratic party for the klan during the past three years, the possibility of these returning will mean a revolution in the state's politics.

"It is virtually impossible for Watson or Robinson to be elected to their offices," White said. He also confidently expects Gary to go democratic, because he says his party has never gone any compromise with the klan. No harsh criticism will be given those who come back from the klan, he said.

Slush Funds.

That the same slush fund conditions that were found in Illinois exist in Indiana was stated by White, who declared that not less than $500,000 was spent for every general election in these conditions continue, he said, he would appeal to Senator Reed's investigation committee. He stated that the republican party organization was systematically buying democratic workers, paying them $15 a day, and that not less than $400 was spent in each precinct during the election.

When asked who furnished the funds for the republican campaign, he said they were furnished by the manufacturers' association and by Walter Riley, president of the Calumet Trust, and Savings Bank, East Chicago.

In the republican headquarters at Gary, The DAILY WORKER reporter was told that the local organization does not interest itself in the expenses made by the Republican Press Association, and no statement can be expected from Mr. Kyle, republican county chairman.

Post-Tribuna is Agent.

The reporter was not allowed to see a copy of the publicity material prepared by the republicans for their campaign, and was referred to the Gary Post-Tribune for information which paper handles all publicity for the party.

When asked what stand the Gary Post-Tribune takes on the exposures, the newspaper told The DAILY WORKER reporter that the Gary Post-Tribune was not a member of the Republican Press Association, but an "independent" paper.

The paper was asked if it did not handle the publicity for the republican party, and it answered that it handled the publicity for both the republican party and democratic party. Mr. Snyder, a republican, the paper admitted, was the owner of the Gary Post-Tribune.

When asked whether they felt a change would be made in the republican nominees due to the exposure, the Post-Tribune answered negatively. But it admitted that the party was handicapped because of the exposures.

---

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—(FP)—Two thousand new members have joined the Shoe Workers Protective union, a national independent organization, Secy. Daniel F. Fitzgerald of Haverhill, told the union convention. The union claims a membership of 14,000.

Increased appropriations for organization work were recommended by Pres. John D. Nolan. There is little rivalry between the Protective and the American Federation of Labor unions—Boot & Shoe Workers—he said, since the Protective is chiefly of women's shoe workers and the A. F. of L. union of men's shoe workers.

SPEAKERS BOOSTING LEWIS' RECORD AT MINER MEETING ARE MET WITH COOL RECEPTION BY RANK OND FILE

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 11. — Fearing the defeat of John L. Lewis and his administration in the coming election of the United Mine Workers of America, a special mass meeting was called by officers of District 5 here, to eulogize the record of the Lewis machine.

Pat Fagan presided at the meeting. Fagan realized that the sentiment of the rank and file is opposed to the Lewis administration, and he confined his speech to attacking the Workers (Communist) Party. One of the statements that Fagan emphasized was "The Communist Party is in league with the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce to destroy the U. M. W."

Hired Applauders.

Among the 2,000 miners present at the meeting, the only applause given Fagan on his remarks came from the "Fagan machine," a small group, which was organized at the meeting for that purpose.

Philip Murray, vice-president of the U. M. W., addressed the meeting and was also met with a cool reception.

Murray admitted that the meeting was called for political purposes and urged that the miners vote for Lewis. Most of Murray's speech was spent in praising the "lily" character of Fagan.

Kennedy Speaks.

Thomas Kennedy, international secretary-treasurer, who is also afraid he would lose his job if Lewis is defeated, spoke on the policies of John Brophy, Lewis' opponent, declaring, that they would not solve the problems of the miners. He outlined the Lewis policies, but neglected to name any of the policies of Brophy.

No mention was made at the meeting of the British mine strike, which forms one of the most important miner issues of the day.

"WORKERS' COMPENSATION"

By M. PERLIN.

MR. BAROFSKY is 45 years old.

He is a diner by trade. He has worked for thirty years at this trade, and he never thought of giving up his work, at which he had worked since his childhood. But, a year ago, while he was working on a roof, he slipped and fell off. After that fall he was sick for eight months. He spent every cent he had, and also what his friends had borrowed for him.

To his work he thanked return. On account of his long sickness, his left arm was left a little paralyzed.

It is four months already since he has been looking for a job, but without results. At last the lucky day came and he received a job at Mandel Bros. department store. The working hours are from 8.20 a. m. to 5.15 p. m. If an employe works till 6.15 p. m. he doesn't get paid for it if you work till 7:15 p. m., then you receive 75 cents. On the hottest day the employes must wear their jackets and collars. They are not allowed to sit or stand, they must constantly be on the move. They also are not permitted to talk to each other.

Mr. Barofsky gets $16 a week. He is a package carrier. And he must run around the floor constantly. When he comes heme, he is very fatigued. He doesn't believe that he will stay long at that job. But, the company gave him good hopes. They have a rule that after a worker has been working there for six months, he receives a policy worth a few hundred dollars, for which the company pays. After working there a year, he receives a week vacation.

All in all it is a good job, but, the only trouble is that the wages are small and the hours long.

WALL NEWSPAPER APPEARS IN PASSAIC

By LEONA SMITH
(Worker Correspondent.)

WALL newspapers, made by the workers, are common in Russia, not only in workers' clubs and meeting halls, but also in factories. There the workers, being in control, can freely express themselves through this medium. They can criticize the administration of the factory, express their opinion of officials and official policies, or tell stories of their everyday experience. The wall paper reflects all phases of their life.

In Russia it would not be distinguished from the bulletin which is placarded in the street in time of emergency in order to spread news. Such papers are officially published, where the wall paper is made and posted by the workers. It is the workers' own voice.

Few in America.

In a capitalist country, the wall newspaper cannot very well develop in a factory. In America, workers of certain clubs and of other groups such as the New York Pioneers, have had wall papers posted in their own meeting places. In Passaic since the strike, the union has developed wall newspapers. So far as the writer knows, this is the only time that workers of a union in America have a wall paper.

The textile strikers' wall papers are made up every week and are posted in the stores which are used in different parts of Passaic, Garfield, Lodi and Clifton as mobilization points for the picket lines. As picket lines are changed frequently and large numbers of strikers participate in them during the day, papers posted in these picket line stores reach a great many people.

Made Mistakes.

In the beginning, the wall papers were made up by a committee consisting of the organizer and two or three strikers. The interest the workers took in those first papers, once their novelty were off, was not so great as had been expected. What was the reason? There were apparent, (1) The material was mostly written, typewritten or printed in English, a language which only a small number of the workers could read. (2) The written and printed articles were long and covered most of the paper, whereas pictures and slogans were few and color was lacking. (3) Very few contributions came from the workers themselves.

Now the thing is managed better. The papers are entirely in the hands of the workers' Committees of strike delegates. In charge of the papers of their sections, collect material, make up and post the wall papers.

Also a corps of girls as writers and artists has been developed thru the wall-papers. Excellent work is produced by strikers who never had a lesson in drawing or who had never written a line before. The encouragement of having their work put up for every one to see spurs them on to further efforts. Other workers, seeing the name of their comrade on the paper, try their hand at making something also.

Are Newsy Shasts.

What does a textile strikers' wall paper look like? It is a piece of wrapping paper about three by four feet, on which are pasted, drawn, written and painted all sorts of articles, pictures, slogans, cartoons, clippings and what not. The theme in general is the union and the strike, but there is nothing to prevent the workers taking excursions into other fields such as the British miners' strike or the exploitation of Chinese textile workers, which the class-conscious worker knows are his problems also. There is much color used in the papers. Drawing and cartoons, made by the workers themselves, attract the most attention. The worker who cannot read, getting interested in a drawing, will ask his comrade to explain what is written underneath, whereas a printed article would leave him cold.

The articles are short, and are written in Polish, Hungarian, Italian or English. It may be a story of how the cops broke up a picket line, and a protest against the beating of fellow-workers. It may be a knock at the company union or an appeal to strikers to come out on the picket line.

Striking Cartoons.

The cartoons are the best. There was one of a fat Mr. Forstmann standing in front of a cook-stove, stirring up a company union mess. The worker, tasting of it, makes a very face and says "No!" Again the company union appears in the form of a huge yellow snake, across which is written in red letters "No."

Another cartoon shows a policeman holding on strings a swarm of cockroaches labelled "scabs." There was one which showed a fat boss walking over a row of coffins. Underneath was written "The boss walks to wealth over the coffins of the workers. The union will put a step to the march of death. The union gives us life and happiness."

All the spaces on the paper are filled up with slogans written or printed in colored letters. "Solidarity forever!" "We will win." "The union is strong." Thru all these means the workers express their class-consciousness and pass it along to others.

LOS ANGELES HEARS STORY OF NEW CHINA

Tso Yan Wang Outlines Nationalist Demands

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 11.—"What is the matter with China?" was the subject of a speech by a young Manchurian student, Tso Yan Wang. Wang, a graduate from the universities of Peking, China, and Columbia, U. S., is a Chinese lecturer and educator and a former interpreter for John Dewey, said to be "America's foremost philosopher" (whatever such wise-sounding highbrow stuff means), on his recent visit to awakening China.

Anti-Foreign Domination—Not Anti-Foreign.

"Nothing's the matter with China. Only leave us alone," was Mr. Wang's warning message to imperialistic America. "Your gun-boat policy must stop! Keep your missionaries at home! Western civilization needs christianizing."

Wang said that the civil wars fed China are not affecting the masses in his country as much as the aggressive policies of hypocritical western robber nations. These policies have created in the past, and are creating now, a strong nationalist feeling—called an anti-foreign movement.

"We are not anti-foreign. We are against anti-foreign domination of our republic. We want back our property—stolen by the great powers."

Anti-Gun-Boat Christianity.

The Chinese are not anti-christian, Wang declared, but they are anti-gun boat christianity—anti-hypocrisy of any form. They are also opposed to extra-territoriality, foreign concessions, the loss of their seaports, the limitations on their right to levy tariffs and taxes and other foreign aggressions on their nationality.

Nationalists and Bolshevika Friends.

Questioned about the relations between the governments in Canton and Moscow, the speaker said: "Very friendly! Very friendly! The Reds have even sent us some real ammunition!"

Well—every worker with any common sense at all knows—what!—that a "mental dynamite" policy alone is not enough to turn the trick.

Schwab is Satisfied With Conditions of Country; Why Not?

By ROMA.
(Worker Correspondent)

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 11. — Every now and then one of our so-called "captains of industry" present political leader, or some prize boxer acquaints the drinking, moronic public, thru the medium of the capitalist press, that this country is undergoing an unusual era of prosperity.

We will ask his pardon at once for what I, as written underneath, whereas a printed article would leave him cold.

The articles are short, and are written in Polish, Hungarian, Italian or English. It may be a story of how the cops broke up a picket line, and a protest against the beating of fellow-workers. It may be a knock at the company union or an appeal to strikers to come out on the picket line.

PLAY, BANQUET AND DANCING FEATURE DAILY WORKER BENEFIT OCTOBER 24

All Chicago comrades and their friends are looking forward to the grand affair being given for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER on Sunday, October 24, at the Douglas Park Auditorium, 3202 South Ogden avenue, corner of Ogden and Kedzie avenues.

The program includes a play to be given by the Studio Players, entitled, "The Adding Machine," which starts at 4 p. m. The Studio Players give performances every Saturday and Sunday night at the Radical Book Shop, 826 North Clark street. They consider this play one of the best they have ever given.

Worker's Plot.

The play deals with a certain Mr. Zero, a bookkeeper, who after twenty years of "service" for his boss gets up enough courage to ask for a raise. As he is about to put his question to his boss he is told that, he has been a very good employe, the firm has decided to put in adding machines and will no longer need him. He kills his boss, and is executed for the murder.

His slavish psychology follows him to heavan and hell. When he is in heavan he is uncomfortable, for his life on earth has taught him that pleasure and sin are the same thing. When he is told that he must leave hell (where he has been put to work on an adding machine) he doesn't want to go, as he has become enslaved to the machine and is contented to continue pushing the keys.

Rice is Author.

The play is written by Elmer Rice and was very successful on the Broadway stage. It is one of the greatest works the theater ever produced and written in America and will be especially interesting to workers.

In addition to the play, a banquet will be served at 7 o'clock. A committee is already at work arranging it, and they promise a good meal at a reasonable price.

 Dancing.

Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock. A good orchestra will furnish the music and the affair will wind up at midnight.

Admission to the play is 50 cents and an extra charge will be made for the banquet and the dancing.

COLORADO, ONCE A Mmilitant MINER STATE, NOW WEAK

Ludlow Forgotten, Workers Disorganized

By HARRY KLETZKY.

I.

COLORADO, coal center of the west, scene of many dramatic struggles of the mine workers, where ideals and bravery and class consciousness were mixed literally with blood and fire, is today but a limping phantom of its former self, when the roll-call of union misers is made, and when the temper of union strength is tested.

Here and there a few miners still remember Ludlow and Cripple Creek, where their fellow workers were killed and maimed, and "mock-tried" and jailed. But the most have forgotten.

And what is the price they have paid for their forgetfulness?

Wages have been beaten down to and below the bare subsistence level. In many mines, principally those controlled by the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company (a Rockefeller corporation), the workers are slaving for as low as $3.50 a day, and even then they are lucky if they receive five days' work.

Company Union Strong.

The company union, which means the "Rockefeller plan for industrial democracy," the arch-angel of all company unionism, has gained such a foothold in Colorado that it is doubtful if the idea alone could be uprooted from the minds of the workers affected for many years, provided, then, that a real systematic campaign of education is conducted.

No further condemnation of the C. F. and I. company union and exploitation of its workers is needed when it is known that the daily press of Colorado carries from time to time headlines which read: "Coal Miners Ask That Their Wages Be Reduced."

Perfect Dupery System.

The Rockefeller plan is a perfect system of dupery. On paper, the workers are "given" the power to ask for what they want. But they are told what they want! Those men who know what they want soon receive dismissal orders. The 1926 report of the Coal Age foundation is enough worthy for this statement.

The Industrial Commission.

Another shackle on the Colorado coal miner is the industrial commission, set up by the state soon after the "battle of Ludlow." Many local unions and unorganized groups have gone to the industrial commission in controversies, like the lamb before the lion, trusting in its impartiality, and have gone away even more shorn than they were before. The industrial commission was organized by the bosses as a control on the workers, and in Colorado it is performing its job well.

Need Leadership.

Internal union troubles have without doubt played havoc with the morale of the union miner. The old John L. Lewis-John Lawson melee, which reached its climax in Cripple Creek, is still an open wound.

Colorado miners have not had the best of leadership. If the U. M. W. is conservative, the Colorado district is ultra-conservative. The secretary of the district is an ardent American Legionnaire. That is enough.

But there is some hope in the Colorado situation. And it lies in the bedrock of the whole miners. It is impossible to believe that the Colorado miner will continue to "take," and never "give." The breaking point is near. All indications point to that.

Are Restless.

There is a restlessness sweeping the entire state. The miners are beginning to realise, little by little, that they have little to lose now, if they make the struggle for liberty.

What is needed in Colorado now, perhaps more than any one thing, is a strong, militant leadership. It will not be long before the workers will be ready to follow. Perhaps one more winter, perhaps two. But the time is coming.

AUTHORS OF 'EXPERT' TREATISES ON COMPANY UNIONISM GET BIG JOBS WITH LARGE CORPORATIONS

By ROBERT W. DUNN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(FP)—Company union experts are in strong demand among American corporations. This is illustrated by the appointment of Ernest Richmond Burton, author of Employe Representation, as the head of labor manager for the White Motor Co, of Cleveland, and by the subsequent appointment of Henry C. Metcalf, director Bureau of Personnel Administration, to the joint personnel director for Continental Baking Co., the great Ward anti-union baking combine.

Both Burton and Metcalf have been connected with the Bureau of Personnel Administration of New York. Burton recently turned out the latest and most authoritative work on company unions.

Metcalf wrote the foreword. Both predicted a "new day in industry" as a result of the application of company union principles to the personnel policies of American corporations. Both have landed high-salaried jobs with anti-union companies.

White Long Offender.

The White Motor company is a company union practitioner of long standing. The Continental company, like its parent the Ward Baking company, refuses to deal with trade unions and has been smacked by the American Federation of Labor. The Continental is said to be "the largest and most extensive industrial unit ever set up in the baking business."

Burton's book is the last word on the science of company unionism. Metcalf in his introduction to the book wrote: "There is little doubt that employs representation is contributing to the evolution of a truly democratic order in industry. . . . Mr. Burton has made a unique contribution to the literature of the employer-employe relationship."

Book Lands Job.

Almost as soon as the book appeared the Bureau of Personnel Administration closed its doors. A sign "Parlor Room to Let" hangs in the window. Burton and Metcalf have gone to the payroll of the corporations.

GARMENT TOILERS HERE WILL HELP GOTHAM STRIKE

Joint Board Calls Meeting of All Unions

Decision of call a conference of all labor organizations in the city to formulate plans for aiding of the 40,000 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of New York who have been on strike for 15 weeks, was made at the meeting of the Chicago Joint Board Friday.

The New York strike received the endorsement of the Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor last week.

The date for the Chicago conference has not yet been set, but will be announced soon.

Call Mass Meeting.

A special mass meeting of all Chicago garment workers and friends has been called for Wednesday night, October 12, at Schoenhofen Hall, Milwaukee and Ashland Aves., by the board for the purpose of reviewing the strike, and to secure strike fund contributions.

All members of the union and their friends are urged to attend this meeting.

Heroic Strike.

The New York members are carrying on their strike to prevent the bosses imposing a lowering of living standards on the garment workers. The bosses have resorted to every known anti-strike measure to break the spirit of the workers. They have held out against the bosses, but are now in need of financial assistance.

Two More Companies Sign Contract With Window Cleaners Here

Two more Chicago window cleaning companies signed up with the Window Washers' Union, Local 34, it was announced Monday.

The Olsen and Johnson Co. and the Ohlo company signed the new agreement providing for the $1.25 an hour scale.

The Boston company signed during the first days of last week.

A long meeting was held by the local Friday afternoon called specially to consider further steps in the strike.

It is possible that all of the companies will sign the agreement asked by the union within a few days, according to officials.

TICKET SALE FOR PASSAIC PICTURE HERE GOING BIG

Film Depicting Strike to Be Shown Oct. 29

The prevailing movie craze, stimulated by the death of Rudolph Valentino, is spreading to the new labor film depicting the Passaic textile strike, to judge by the advance interest shown in union circles in the Chicago showing.

While October 29, the date of the local presentation is still many days distant, the sale of tickets already justifies two shows for that Friday evening, one at 7 and one at 9 o'clock. Both will be given in the Ashland Blvd. Auditorium, corner Ashland and Van Buren streets, half a block from the Marshfield station of the elevated.

Tried to Stop Picture.

The Passaic police have tried unsuccessfully to prevent this celluloid record of their atrocious brutality against the girl pickets and even the children of strikers. The woolen mill owners likewise take no pleasure in these motion picture photographs of their misconduct.

But the 16,000 strikers, sustaining a heroic battlefield for three quarters of a year against police violence, employer greed, executive treachery and starvation are rejoicing in this movie history of their tremendous fight.

Proceeds to Strikers.

Tickets for the Chicago presentation, Friday, October 29, are obtainable from the Chicago Conference at 328 West Van Buren Street, or at the door of the Ashland Auditorium on the night of the exhibition.

The proceeds will be sent by the Chicago Conference to the General Relief Committee of the Passaic Textile Strikers, a part of the strike machinery of Passaic Local No. 1603, United Textile Workers of America.

Typothetae Officer Opposed to Five-Day Week for the Printers

BALTIMORE, Md., October 11.—"A five-day 40-hour week cannot increase production and for that reason will not be adopted generally," George E. Horn, president of the Typothetae of the United States, the "open-shop" employing printers' organization, during 1923 and 1924, declared today in discussing the proposed 40-hour 5-day week.

"We could not accomplish the production we must accomplish to keep the country going," the member of Baltimore's nonunion printing bosses for the last 13 years, continued. "We close down from Friday evening until Monday morning by working nine and a half hours for four days and ten hours on the fifth day. A half-holiday on Saturday slows down production because men going to work for only four hours do not work with their minds on it as much as they do on a full working day. This is exceptionally true of the summer, when everyone has his mind on getting out in the open."

SAN FRANCISCO—(FP)—Twelve union carpenters have been dismissed from the Galileo High School in San Francisco under threat of withdrawal of building materials by the Industrial Assn. Several other schools have been affected previously in the same way, and the carpenters' union has opened a material house to meet such conditions. Meanwhile corrections are being made in the indictments against 13 union men charged with conspiracy arising from an assault charge in connection with the strike. Violence continues almost daily.

READING I. L. G. STRIKE WINNING LABOR SUPPORT

Over Half Force Out; Officials Active

READING, Pa., Oct. 11.—The cloakmakers' strike against the Loraine company, which imported machinery from New York and began a scab shop here, is gaining ground and winning wide support of the organized workers of Reading.

More Than Half Out.

Seventy workers, or more than half of the force employed in the plant are now out; and for the first time in the history of Pennsylvania a strike injunction has been denied the bosses.

J. Henry Stump, president of the Federated Trades Council and his colleagues in the council are very active in support of the strike.

Labor Officials Give Good Support.

Jesse George, business agent of the Plumbers' union, and M. Frey, organizer of the Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers' union, are on the picket line early every morning to see that the pickets get fair treatment.

President Stump called a special meeting of the Trades Council to consider the strike situation and urged moral and financial support to the strikers. He told the delegates to collect money from members wherever the local treasuries were empty. The council arranged a mass meeting Friday at the Labor Lyceum and a real united front is existing to aid the garment strikers.

All Upholsterers of Hartford, Conn. Walk Out; Strike Winning

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 11.—The International Upholsterers' Union, Local 33, called a strike in all shops of Hartford Friday and 70 men left their jobs.

This is a 100 per cent tie-up except in one shop where a majority remained after the pickets made their first visit to 10 shops. It is expected that this shop will be pulled out in a few days.

Goldman Brothers, one of the struck shops, signed up at once and the workers are going back under union conditions. A few more shops are expected to sign up at once.

The spirit of the strikers is excellent and their courage shows they are out to win.

Cleveland Workers' Forum Opened Sun.; Brahtin Is Speaker

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—Today the Workers' Forum will start its winter season in Cleveland. The first speaker was John Brahtin, who spoke on "The Significance of the British Strike."

The second speaker, on Oct. 17, will be Leo Gleisser on "Revolutionary Literature."

There will be other speakers on current problems and events of the day, and it is expected that the Workers' Forum will develop into the leading center of the workers of Cleveland for the discussion of all questions of interest to the working class.

The forum will be held at Room 13, 5927 Euclid Ave., and will start at 8 p. m. All workers are invited. Admission free.

Carpet Workers in Philadelphia Strike Against Wage Cut

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Philadelphia tapestry carpet workers organised in their union are striking against the Philadelphia Carpet Company because of 15 per cent wage cuts posted by the firm and its attempt to discontinue union recognition.

About 60 workers are involved, says Fred J. Fisher, secretary of the union.

Four union strikers were arrested on the picket line and released under $1,000 bail.

Miners' Lamps Sold in Seattle for Aid

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 11.—More than 100 British miners' lamps were sold at 50 cents each in an energetic drive carried on by the International Workers' Aid secretary Emma Legat in the campaign to raise funds for the British miners. The amount was forwarded to the national office. Contributions have also been sent by the local I. W. A. secretary. A number of local unions have also sent contributions of from $10 to $50 to England directly, while others have sent thru A. F. of L. channels.

CAL AND GARY URGE U. S. GET READY FOR WAR

To Conscript Labor for Trenches and Factory

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Calvin Coolige, president of the United States; Elbert H. Gary, head of the Steel Trust, and Bainford McMaster, assistant secretary of war, all joined in urging business to get ready for the next war on the occasion of a luncheon arranged by the National Association of Manufacturers today for the discussion of industrial preparedness.

The main object of the meeting was to explain the war department's plan for putting the industries of the country on a war basis at a moment's notice.

Conscription of Labor.

The industries would be immediately mobilized under this plan and the cannon-fodder that would not be needed on the battlefield would be conscripted in the factories.

This plan would save the manufacturers of this country $1,000,000,000 for every forty days saved in meeting a war emergency, according to Col. James L. Walsh.

Coolidge sent a letter to Gary, who presided at the war luncheon, saying that he wished to "express my appreciation of what you have done and are doing in this work."

VA. PORTS WAIT GREAT FLEET OF SCAB COAL SHIPS

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 11.—As the month of September ended 198 ships were bound for the ports on Hampton Roads for cargo. This is the largest number of vessels scheduled to sail into any port in America.

Thru the seven seas these ships are ploughing, the largest fleet of freight vessels ever timed as bound for Hampton Roads at one time. The previous record was 153 ships, which arrived here during July, according to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Great Fleet Coming for Scab Coal.

Most of the ships enroute here are coming for coal to be delivered in Great Britain and at other ports formerly supplied by the English coal interests. September coal dumpings for all of the Hampton Roads piers totaled 2,710,992 tons, against 2,762,030 tons for August. The decrease is attributed to the fact that September had only 30 days, against 31 in August.

For the previous month, the Norfolk and Western led in dumping records, piling up 1,107,815 tons, against 908,567 for the Chesapeake and Ohio and 694,610 for the Virginian railway. The Norfolk and Western's record was the greatest in the history of the road and the largest tonnage ever handled by any railroad in a single month.

October Will Beat Record.

It is predicted by coal men here that October will break the August record for dumpings, the greatest in the history of the port.

American steamers have entered the foreign coal trade now that the British lines are unable to supply fuel on account of the strike of miners that has been in progress in England for almost a year.

Would Kick Out Injured Worker to 'Prevent U. S. Burden'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Senator Means of Illinois, in the attempt of the United States labor department to deport him on the grounds that he might become a public charge.

The worker came to this country in 1921, according to the records. He worked at the Baldwin Locomotive Works, where he lost his arm in an industrial accident two years ago.

Now immigration authorities claim that he is likely to become a public charge because of his missing right arm. Miceli is fighting for writ of habeas corpus in the federal court to stop his deportation with his wife.

Workers Worst Hit by Florida Storm, Says Investigator

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Workers in the Florida hurricane area were worst hit by the terrible storm, according to the report from the scene by Dr. Worth M. Tippy, secretary of the commission of social service of the Federal Council of Churches, which sent him to the devastated area.

"Twenty thousand homes were entirely wrecked, mostly the flimsy structures in which workers lived," Tippy reports.

"The total dead will never be known. They are somewhere between 500 and 1,000, possibly more.

"The seriously injured number between 4,000 and 5,000 and minor casualties were much greater."

ONE A NEW NOVEL

by Upton Sinclair

(COPYRIGHT, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

Amid this perplexity, Bunny found comfort in the backing of Billy George, who was Anglo-Saxon and broad-shouldered and senior besides. Billy assured him he was right and suggested that they take some steps to make their ideas understood to the rest of the student body. Why not organize a little group, the Society for the Study of Russian Problems, or something of that sort? Bunny should ask Mr. Irving to advise them and perhaps join them—it would be much better if they could have the backing of one of the teachers. So Bunny went to Mr. Irving, who said at once that he could not give any advice on the subject, for the reason that it would jeopardize his position to do so; the students would have to follow their own judgment. The young instructor did add this much, they ought surely not use the name "Russian," but take some inoffensive title, the "Liberal Club," or the "Social Problems Society."

Bunny took that advice to the others, meeting in one of the class-rooms after hours. Billy George said it didn't seem very "spunky" of Mr. Irving; whereupon Rachel Menzies flared up, he had no right to hint at such a thing, they all knew what the teacher's position was, and he had a perfect right to keep out of trouble. What business had Mr. George to be finding fault, when he himself had done nothing publicly?

The other demanded to know what he could do, and the girl was not backward in suggestions. Why not start a student paper, a little four-page sheet, once a week or even once a month? It would cost very little, and would make a hit they could be sure; look how many people had wanted to read Mr. Ross' letter about Siberia! If they printed that letter they would set the campus on fire. Mr. George could have the honor of being editor, and Rachel would contribute her share of the cost. There was obvious irony in that, considering the quantity of iron pipe which Billy's father was known to be marketing in Angel City. But they discussed it gravely, and Billy didn't think he could take any responsibility; his old man would pull him out of college and put him to work on a bookkeeper's stool.

Then, automatically, the eyes of the group turned to Bunny. What did he think? Bunny found his cheeks growing red. He had wanted to explain his ideas to other people, but had thought of doing it in some dignified way, privately and quietly. A paper would make such a noise! Rachel Menzies apparently didn't mind a noise, But Henrietta would, she would be horrified by the bare idea. Also there was Dad—the "education business" would be damned forever by such a venture. So Bunny had to say no; and Rachel Menzies said that was all right, there were plenty of excuses, and she didn't blame anybody for finding the best one, but at least they had no business criticizing Mr. Irving for lack of courage!

III

Soon after that Bunny read in the paper that the transport "Bennington" had arrived in San Francisco with two thousand troops from Siberia. Paul's unit was listed; so Bunny called up Ruth on the telephone and told her the news, and said, be sure to let me know as soon as she got word. Two days later Ruth called him—Paul had arrived at Paradise. It was a Friday, so Bunny "cut" his afternoon courses, and jumped into his car. Dad had gone over to Lobos River, to see to a "fishing" job so missed this first meeting.

It was almost twenty months that Paul had been away, and Bunny was keyed up with eagerness. The first glance gave him a shock, for Paul looked quite terrible—gaunt and yellow, his khaki jacket hanging loose upon him. "You've been sick!" cried Bunny.

"Yes," said Paul; "but I'm getting all right now."

"Paul, tell me what happened!"

"Well, it was no picnic." And he seemed to think that would satisfy both his sister and his friend—after a year and a half!"

They were over in the cabin on the Rascum tract, where Ruth and Paul had first begun house-keeping. It was suppertime, and the girl had prepared a bounteous repast; but Paul wasn't much on eating just now, he said—afraid to trust himself with good food. While they sat at table he told them about Manila, where they had stopped; and about a storm on the Pacific, but not a word about Siberia!

Of course that wouldn't do. After the meal they got Paul settled in an arm-chair, and Bunny said, "Look here, Paul, I've been trying to understand about this Russian business. I'm quarreling with most everyone I know about it, and I counted on you for the truth. So please do tell us about it—just what happened to you."

Paul sat with his head lying back. His face had always been sombre, a prominent nose and wide mouth with a tendency to droop at the corners; haggard as he was, this tendency accentuated, he looked like a mask of sorrow. "What happened to me?" he said, in his slow voice; and then he seemed to raise himself to the effort of recalling it. "I'll tell you what happened son; I was kidnapped.

"Kidnapped!" The two of them echoed the word together.

"Yes, just that. I thought I went into the army to put down the Kaiser, but I was kidnapped by some Wall Street bankers, and put to work as a strike-breaker, a scab."

Ruth and Bunny could only sit and gaze at Paul, and wait for him to say what he meant by these strange words.

"You remember our oil strike, Bunny? Those guards the Federation sent up there—husky fellows, with plenty of guns, and good warm clothes, rain-coats and water-proof hats and everything. Well, that's what I've been doing for a year and a half—putting down a strike for Wall Street bankers. The guards here in Paradise got ten dollars a day, and if they didn't like it, they could quit; but I got thirty a month and beans, and if I tried to quit they'd have shot me. That was the cinch the bankers had."

Again there was a pause. Paul had closed his eyes, and he told a part of his story that way, looking at things he saw inside his mind:

"First thing, the allies took the city of Vladivostok. The strikers had that city, with a perfectly good government, everything orderly and fine. They didn't make much resistance—they were too surprised at our behavior. We shot a few longshoremen, who tried to defend one building, and the strikers had a big funeral with a procession; they brought the red coffins to the American consulate with banners that asked us why we had shot their people. It happened to be the Fourth of July, and we were celebrating our revolution; why had we overthrown theirs? Of conrse we couldn't answer; none of us knew why we had done it; but little by little we began to find out."

The "Y" Gets Away With Murder Again

When the boys who weren't obliged to make their permanent home there came back from Flanders they added to their own cussing vocabulary a few choice morsels they picked up on the boats from the sailors and heaped the entire collection on the Y. M. C. A. The stories of the graft and corruption of this great charitable organization feeding its treasury on the gory pennies of the lads in the big parade never got to be literature and by now has been all but forgotten except by the unfortunates who had to pay 25 cents for a "free" package of Camels in France.

But the Y. M. C. A. was only one of the thousands of war profiteers. If its extortions of doughboys' money had been allowed to become a nation-wide scandal as the iniquity of its operations certainly warranted, there would have been other and more powerful extortionists also exposed to the searchlight. It was all quieted down.

Then too, the Y. M. C. A. is too valuable an organization to the profiteers to be exposed to the risk of losing its efficacy as a fool of the bosses. And if anyone doubts that the Y. M. C. A. is such a tool —and that with a vengeance—they need only look to Detroit.

The simple recitation of the facts tells the story adequately enough. An invitation extended to President Green of the American Federation of Labor in convention in Detroit to address a meeting at one of the "Y" buildings was cancelled at the last minute. There were no bones made about the reason. Green was frankly told that the cancellation was made because if he spoke in the building that it would endanger the prospects of a fund the Y. M. C. A. was raising among Detroit employers. The secretary of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. seemed unashamed to give the following figure of contributions to substantiate his story:

Henry Ford, $750,000; Edsel Ford, $750,000.
The Fisher Brothers (Fisher Body Co), $500,000.
S. S. Kresge, five and ten cent store magnate, of whose business the "Y" secretary in Detroit, Van Dusen, is general manager, $500,000.

And some more, all large open shop employers.

It isn't necessary to say another word about this organization that psychologizes workers in return for millions from the bosses. The Fords and the Fishers have learned that it is worth millions to take the tar out of their slaves. The two millions that these two bosses alone gave was a contribution, not so much to the Y. M. C. A., as to the open shop.

The hard-boiled bosses of Detroit, thru their creature, the Y. M. C. A., have issued a challenge to the organized labor movement that can be met only by an energetic campaign to unionize every big plant in the city.

Lots of Room at the Top

The twenty-two-year-old son of James A. Stillman, well known for other pursuits besides his banking activities, is scheduled to marry an eighteen-year-old domestic servant by the name of Lena Wilson.

This happy denouement to an acquaintance extending over a decade seems to give the lie to the theory that opportunities for financial, social or any of the common concepts of success have faded out of the American picture.

It is to be regretted that when the great American public should have such cause for rejoicing that "Peaches" Browning, the sixteen year-old gogetter who married the 57 year-old real estate magnate should quit her husband's bed and board, even tho she continues to use her purchase-on-credit privilege in the department stores at his expense. This mars the idyllic picture of American democracy painted by the young Stillman and his plebian fiance.

To those of you who are weak and of little faith, we say: Don't give up! Brains count. There is always room for the worthy at the top. Big corporations invite several jobs commanding big money stowed away for the big-capacity executive. And there are scores of American millionaires ready to fall for youth and beauty, even tho they fall hard at times. But does it matter, provided the money comes along?

Millions of American working girls, existing on slack pay envelopes, may read of Lena Wilson's luck with envy. But instead of asking for more pay and laying down on the job, they should be blind to the clock, work the joints of their fingers and only leave the shop when the boss calls in the police to eject them. In this way the boss would become richer and who knows but he may have a few sons that might fall in love with one of his father's female employes. Why not join a union?

The Crisis in the Cotton Area

Coolidge is not going to take any action to relieve the cotton growers of the south, large numbers of whom have been bankrupted by the joboggan slide which cotton prices took the other day. As is inevitable it is the small grower who has a few bales to market and who depends upon the proceeds for his year's livelihood, that is hit the hardest.

Southern congressmen have asked for a special session of congress to devise ways of meeting the emergency, but Coolidge contents himself with the appointment of a committee and the announcement that the federal reserve board has money to loan to the cotton growers.

The contempt of the government for the farmers is an outstanding feature of the Coolidge administration but not exclusively its own. The Wall Street interests which control American government are not moved to pity by the distress of agricultural communities. They see in these emergencies only a further opportunity for extending their control of natural resources by loans and mortgages on land.

That is why in every agricultural crisis the farmers are told that there is money they can borrow.

What the working farmer needs is not more loans at exorbitant interest rates but a moratorium on loans already made and which total, according to reliable estimates, more than $9,500,000—a burden under which the American farmers are staggering and which makes any real solution of the agricultural crisis impossible unless the farmers are relieved from the continuous exaction of the Wall Street usurers.

Class Solidarity a la Amsterdam

By A. LOSOVSKY
(Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions.)

WE talks in Soviet Russia have on what is a plainly distorted conception of class solidarity. Just any rate, what the British Trade Union Congress General Council delegation said at the last meeting in Berlin of the Anglo-Russian Committee, bears witness to that. The Soviet Central Council of Trade Unions' delegation's proposal for organizing joint assistance for the miners out on strike was plainly declined on the pretext that it was tantamount to interfering in Britain's domestic matters. So the effort to extend aid in time to the strike is put down as mere interference.

Well, what about refusing to help? Isn't that interfering in the struggle, only the wrong way about? If the help we are extending is strengthening the forces and militancy of the miners, then a refusal to give that help is surely strengthening the enemies of the working class. Taking that for granted, then both giving help and refusing help means interfering in Britain's domestic affairs, with the difference that in one case the interference is in the interests of our class, and in the other in the interests of the foe of our class.

SEEING, however, we have rather twisted notions on what class solidarity is and are poking our noses into other people's business, according to the competent views of both the Right and so-called Left Leaders on the General Council, there is nothing else for it but to follow the example of those, whose actions don't draw any objections of that sort from the Council.

To judge by the fact that up to now the Labor Council and its leading lights have kept silence and rather favorably then otherwise regarded the tactics of the Amsterdam and Miners' Internationals during the strike, the leaders of the Trade Union Congress are seemingly in agreement with the policy of their international.

That means we must ascertain exactly what that "policy" is if we are to understand "class solidarity a la Amsterdam."

ATHOW, what is the position of a trust of class solidarity the General Council reveals on Saturday? Its solidarity to the tune of expressions of sympathy and promises to help if a strike is declared, then resolution cut out, and a beginning made with helping the strikers only after they are at the last gasp, for unless they have been starved into it they will never realize all the charms of Amsterdam class solidarity.

Because these strikers have come to the limit of their endurance, have lost everything they have, and their wives and children are starving, an appearance must be made on the scene, another resolution passed, more "breeding" purposes, though not adverse to providing those in need with a loan if required.

But to give that loan a real business like look, to make it look like a solid deal, instead of smelling like Mussolinis intermeddling in other's affairs, the same that refused to accept the "Red" gold—applied to the Amsterdam International for financial assistance the latter agreed to arrange a loan at 4½ per cent, although it hadn't lifted a finger throughout the strike to help the miners.

But whilst the Amsterdam International was arranging the rate of interest, separate sections of the International were of the view that it was exactly the proper moment to make just a little bit out of their British colleagues (when going to the dogs and thence Internationalist!). The General Federation of German Trade Unions demanded 10% from the British!

WELL, fairly lengthy negotiations took place between London and Berlin, as they say in diplomatic circles, and finally, Leipart, of the IFTU, participating, as to precisely what rate of interest might be asked as the price of class solidarity.

When the RILU stated in one of its appeals that the German reformists were asking 10%, Leipart, President of the General Federation of German Trade Unions, lost his head and sent in his "denial" to the press. It reads: "By agreement between Amsterdam and London 4½% has been fixed on." Now the social democratic press is kicking up a big row about the RILU's statement having been a pure fabrication, and so on and so forth.

BUT there is just a couple of points we would like to note in regard to Leipart's justification. First, as to call the President of the IFTU, and a member of the General Council, Purcell, to witness. It was he who conducted these negotiations. As President of the International where class solidarity is quoted at 4½%, Purcell stated in an interview given in Berlin on August 25th: "The GFOTU agreed to grant a loan at 4% only after the British trade unions unconditionally turned down the previous and far better conditions brought forward by the Federation."

THERE'S the very person who negotiated with the German reformists telling us the Germans imposed "far worse conditions" while the President of the GFGTU informs us the rate of interest was fixed on by the Amsterdam International and that it doesn't amount to more than £4 10s. on every £100.

Who are we to believe? In this case we believe the President of the Amsterdam International, as on the half of the British unions, did not agree to the "far worse conditions." Then the denial brought forward by the Vice-President of the IFTU is in turn denied by the President of the same International.

BUT just let us suppose for a minute that Leipart is right, that the Amsterdam International (where they've got experts in financial operations all right!) fixed on 4½%, and that as a disciplined section of the International when it comes cutting down the latter (they're quite plastic about their discipline!—the Germans gave the money in conformity with the instructions of their International. Let us suppose, further, that Leipart is so innocent in the business as the Virgin Mary herself; yet the fact remains that, under the high patronage of the Amsterdam International, the All China Federation of Labor Unions is going to get International, as is usually done in all proper banking operations.

BUT if the matter is to be regarded from such a financial standpoint what does the International exist for? Maybe to do away with haphazard methods in financial and banking operations and to establish uniformity in the matter of rates of interest? Such it seems are the functions of an International. Apparently that is the ideal International, in the opinion of the General Council, that is deserving of support precisely because it does not interfere in British's internal affairs, and if it does then only to extract the same rate of interest from the pockets of the British workers that is regarded as correct in "good society."

RELATIONS like that between the International and its sections, and the sections of the same International, are quite like the relations that exist between brokers and members of the Stock Exchange; though in this case they go one better by quoting class solidarity, of all things! Right to the last half percent.

IT goes without saying we could never rise to such heights of solidarity. That is why the General Council representatives are so upset at the behavior of the Soviet CCTU and are prototyping against our tactics. The Council prefers solidarity a la Amsterdam to solidarity as Moscow sees it. Well, that is its lookout; but we do not doubt that the broad working masses of Britain will put the true value on the words of the Amsterdam and Berlin money-changers and will understand from this practical example the difference between Moscow and Amsterdam.

"His Name Is Not In the List"

By MICHAEL SZUBOTZKY.

A BARRIER divides the room into two unequal parts. There is a kind of a booking office like in a bank. Behind the trellis there is the lieutenant— the chief police officer and two others, his assistants.

It is already noon time. The sun pours thru the windows into the room and myriads of dust particles dance joyfully.

A powerful, stontly built gendarm is sleeping on a chair near the door. On the visitors' bench two people are sitting—an old man and a boy. They whisper continuously and their whispering sounds like the humming of a big, frightened fly.

Now a door is opened in the corridor, the gendarm gets up in a hurry, salutes. The police officer enters the room and sits down behind the trellis.

He is still a young man. His superiors keep their eyes on him, they are obedient to him. Therefore, he is always in a good mood, therefore he speaks so abruptly, therefore his movements are always so determined. When he passes his hand over his moustache, he has the air of a field marshal before battle. And the police officer just now passes his hand over his moustache and says abruptly:

"Anything on?"

The old grey haired Jew approaches the trellis, supporting himself on his stick. His long beard trembles with every step. The women follows him hesitatingly—she, too, is old and weak.

The old man looks at the inspector with his red eyes and murmurs something which is incomprehensible.

"Louder!" says the police officer.

Suddenly the rough, old voice of the man breaks through:

"My son, my son!"

Then again follows an incomprehensible murmur.

"I went to the chief . . . and he says his name is not in the lists . . . What does that mean lists, when they have themselves arrested him and taken him away from home last night? No . . . he is not in the lists . . . he should go to the district town and ask in the prison there . . . Wherefrom does Roshkel take the money to travel to the district town? His wife sells her last dress for it!" Jewish director says. "From Roshkel is not in the lists . . . Again lists . . . I should go to the police . . . there I would hear about everything."

"Enough," says the police officer. "Shut up."

He opens a big book and says with importance:

"First name?"

"From, he is called From."

"Father's name?"

"Yevsi."

"Family name?"

"Roshkel."

The police officer turns the pages—it is a big and heavy book.

Old Roshkel stretches his thin neck as if he, too, looked for the name of his son in this terrible book. But old Roshkel can only see the back of the book. His wife is behind him, her eyes are turned down, her lips whisper without interruption:

"My God, my God . . . Roshkel . . . Roshkel . . ."

The polished finger nail of the officer glides over the lines. Then he closes the book and says:

"Jew, your son is not in the lists."

A silence of tension spreads in the room. The gendarm coughs into his fist and grins. The dust is dancing in the sun beams and from the courtyard sounds a boy's voice. Now a dying senile voice asks, whispering:

"Is he dead?"

The officer moves his chair and gets up.

"Enough," he says. "From Roshkel is not in the lists. We do not know where he is, but we know that he is a scoundrel and a friend of the Bolsheviks. Go, old Jew, if you do not want some accident to happen."

The old man turns away, but now his wife appears behind his back. She goes to the trellis, her hands grips it and she screams with a piercing voice of terror:

"Give me my son back, gendarm! I have seen your lips read his name in this book! From! From! From! Gendarm, where is my son?"

Her hands pierce through the trellis as if she wanted to take the book and to read the horrible truth about her son, that truth which her mother heart verified with every stroke.

The officer turns his back to the woman. He still has the air of a field marshal before battle.

"Take them away," sounds abruptly. The gendarm rushes at the woman.

Outside, on the stairs in the courtyard they sit down—father and mother.

II.

"Do not howl, you Jews," says the gendarm after a moment . . . He grins.

"Don't howl," he says. "If you dish me up a good meal, I will tell you what happened to your son."

The old man tries to get up, but he does not succeed. His wife jumps up and looks into the face of the gendarm.

"Does he live? Is he dead?"

"All that I will tell you in detail," replied the gendarm indefinitely. "Where do you live? In the inn? Well, it is settled then, as soon as my service ends, I will be there . . ."

The woman cries and murmurs. The father has succeeded in getting up, he bows to the gendarm and says:

"Please, do us the honor, Mr. Vice-inspector."

"Well, but dish up decently, old rascal, and see to it that there is enough to drink," says the gendarm going away.

III.

THE dripping candle, flaring, awakens dark shadows in the corners. The shadows move from the dark background of the miserable room in the inn and approach the table, which is surrounded by people and covered with chicken bones, pieces of fried meat and remnants of cucumbers.

The drunken gendarm knocks on the table with his hairy fist so that the empty bottles and glasses jump in the air with a clinking sound. He howls:

"We will drive the Bolshevik pestilence from the country! Do you understand, you . . ."

He curses, getting more and more excited and continues his tale:

"You see these hands? With these hands of mine I treated your mangy offspring! The police officer did it with the sun beams and from the courtyard sounds a boy's voice. Now a dying senile voice asks, whispering:

"Is he dead?"

The old Jew covered his head with his hands and moved his body too and fro without a sound. His wife ceased His wife ceased to cry, her eyes dry and reddened fully large. The gendarm is drinking the last remnants, he is angry that there is not more to drink.

HE speaks now in a low voice and with visible enjoyment:

"In the morning he asked again for something to drink, but he did not get it. The officer gave him a document and asked him to sign, but the dirty Jew refused to, and the officer was like mad . . ."

"Where was my son buried?" asks the mother.

The gendarm answers with untruth in his voice:

"I do not know."

He suddenly regrets that he has talked so much—his small eyes take on an expression of animal-like fear.

He gets up, takes his revolver and goes. At the door he stops and says whispering:

"If you dare to tell anybody a single word, then . . . ."

A powerful, heiry fist completes the sentence.

THE night begins—cool and silent. A tired moon rises above the town and entangles his beams in the battlements of the old fortress, now a prison. The guards on the walls communicate with each other by short calls. There is dead silence. Human shadows. The prison walls.

Supported on his stick, old Roshkel and his wife appear. They are not alone. Frightened soldiers whisper:

"The 'Defensive' always buries its victims near the prison," says the guard.

The old couple creep around the prison walls . . . . Here, perhaps here under their very feet lies the red-haired From's beloved son.

The lips of old Roshkel move without a sound—a Jewish prayer perhaps.

Finally the moon succeeds in freeing itself from the battlements of the fortress. He rises quickly into the endless blue of the sky.

Letters from Our Readers

A Bit of News.

On Saturday, Sept. 25, in the Chicago Tribune was an item on the first page, as follows:

Noted Viennese Biologist, Unsung at Home, Kills Self.

VIENNA, —• The body of Dr. Paul Kammerer, noted Viennese biologist, who in recent years had toured America twice, was found today on Schneeberg near Vienna, where he had committed suicide with a revolver. The cause is believed to have been depression due to the fact that, despite his beloved home city Vienna, he was forced to gain a livelihood elsewhere.

I heard Dr. Kammerer lecture at Sinai Temple about two years ago, and considered him a most remarkable expert scientist. It was aredletter day in my life. He promulgated a theory of heredity which directly opposed the August Weismann school of thought, and hence was very unwelcome to orthodox science. The late Luther Burbank agreed with him thoroughly, having discovered the truth of this viewpoint in his work as a wizard of plant life. Also Cesper Redfield, of Chicago, has worked out the proposition from another angle. Scientists sneered and were intolerant of his views for years, and thus literally hounded him to death.

Nevertheless many recognized him as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, biologist of present day Europe. His contention and the theory he proved was that "acquired characteristics can be inherited." This the old school of biologists decidedly deny. Christian bigots hurried the death of Burbank, the medical trust persecuted Dr. Albert Abrams, of electronic diagnosis fame, and helped greatly to bring about his death; and now we have a third victim of scientific them selves.

Capitalism is a friend of science so long as it does not interfere with private profits.

Praises Tomsky.

Dear Worker Comrades:

Your letter with bundles came to hand. I was much pleased to read of efforts being made by the army of workers in the movement.

Tomsky's declaration on the British government's refusal of a permit to the Russian delegates to seats in the T. U. C. sure is a masterpiece, and throws the white light on the insincerity and hypocrisy of Britain's leaders in the labor movement and the savagery of Britain's ruling class. Perhaps it will be the means of cementing the solidarity of the rank and file in closer bonds and in ignoring all the traitors, and weeding them out of the movement for good and winning the next struggle by a more careful planning, which will make the defeat now all in vain. Here in this state we have the spectacle of an ex-secretary of labor making an issue of prohibition of liquor, and the large sums spent in buying elections.

The first, which is no concern to a working man, as only the wealthy classes can afford to buy it, and as for the latter, the less they say about where his millionaire friends get it to spend. He must not offend his wealthy friends by any demands of the working class. It would be too embarrassing should he slip into a seat beside them. Hence the workers' needs are not considered by the great ex-secretary, and we have a conspiracy of silence, instead of the important issues being discussed. The front pages of all the capitalistic papers are smeared by accounts of prizefights, baseball, football and beauty contests. The man's sport shows (which only he can attend), all with the deep purpose of keeping the worker from thinking of his wrongs and miseries, while the grand looting of the working class goes merrily on.

I will send for more literature when I am located permanently.

H. Tomsky.

Ernst Haecke on "Last Words on Evolution"

When we look at the matter impartially in the light of pure reason, the belief in immortality is wholly inconsistent with the fact of evolution and of physiology. The ontogenetic drama of the older church, that the soul is introduced into the soulless body at a particular moment of its embryonic development, is just as absurd as the phylogenetic dogma of the most modern Jesuits, that the divine spirit was breathed into the frame of an anthropoid ape at a certain period (in the Tertiary period), and so converted it into an immortal soul. Both are mere fables and tales; belief as we will, we can find in it nothing but a piece of mystic superstition. It is maintained solely by the great powers of tradition and the support of conservative governments, the leaders of which have no personal belief in these "revelations," but cling to the practical conviction that throne and altar must support each other. They unfortunately overlook the circumstance that the throne is apt to become merely the footstool to the altar, and that the blood exploits the state for its own, not the state's, good.

We learn further, from the history of this dogma, that the belief in immortality did not find its way into science until a comparatively late date. It is not found in the great Monistic natural philosophers who, six centuries before the time of Christ, evinced a profound insight into the real nature of the world. It is not found in Democritus and Empedocles, in Seneca and Lucretius Carus. It is not found in the older oriental religions, Buddhism, the ancient religion of the Chinese, or Confucianism. In fact, there is no question of individual persistence after death in the Pentateuch or the earlier books of the Old Testament (which were written before the Babylonian exile). It was Plato and his pupil Aristotle that found a place for it in their dualistic metaphysics, and its agreement with the Christian and Mohammedan teaching secured for it a very wide spread acceptance.

Another psychological dogma, the belief in man's free-will, is equally inconsistent with the truth of evolution. Modern physiology shows clearly that the will is never really free in man or in the animal, but determined by the organization of the brain, this in turn by its individual character by the laws of heredity and the influence of the environment. It is only because the apparent freedom of the will has such great practical significance in the province of religion, morality, sociology, and law that it still forms the subject of most contradictory claims. Theoretically, determinism or the doctrine of the necessary character of our volitions, was established long ago.

With the belief in the absolute freedom of the will and the personal immortality of the soul is associated, in the minds of many highly educated people, a third article of faith, the belief in a personal God. It is well known that this belief, often strangely represented as an indispensable foundation of religion, assumes the most widely varied shapes. As a rule, however, it is an anthropism or covert anthroporaorphism. God is conceived as the "supreme being," but turns out, on closer examination, to be an idealised man. According to the Biblical narrative, "God made man to his own image and likeness," but it is usually the reverse: "Man made God according to his own image and likeness." This idealized man becomes creator, and architect and produces the world, forming the various species of plants and animals like a modest, governing the world like a wise and all-powerful monarch, and, at the "last judgment," rewarding the good and punishing the wicked like a rigorous Judge. The childish conception of this extramundane God, who is set over against the world as an independent being, the personal creator, maintainer, and ruler of all things, are quite incompatible with the advanced science of the nineteenth century, especially with its two greatest triumphs, the law of substance and the law of Monistic evolution.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THERE is a fellow by the name of Westbrook Pegler, who reports sporting events for a Chicago newspaper. Recently he commented feeciously and acidly on a type of human animal that holds all those who live hilariously to be destined for oblivion. But the world series knocked this position for a row of cracked baseball bats. The two biggest bums in baseball happened to be the two outstanding heroes. They are: Babe Ruth and Grover Alexander. Not that liquor did the trick. It just happened that way. And it goes to show that prophets are always wrong.

THE queen of Roumania will be popular in America, says a fellow by the name of Vopicka, former American minister, to the Balkans. He is from Chicago which accounts for a good many things. Vopicka has the distinction of having once tickled Marie in the ribs when the poor girl had a fit, saying: "Now, little girl, don't cry, there will be stars in the sky by and by." In return for this good service it is said that Marie turned a tearful org on Vopicka, hence the blurb.

TODAY'S hot tamale goes to Brother James Oneal, editor of a New York socialist paper. James is a precocious lad, tho born in Indiana, where the socialists turned bleagles when it became evident that the pope was due to live a few years more. Oneal made the mistake of publishing a fake story of an alleged speech delivered by Joseph Stalin and sent out over the Hearst service. The speech threw the hooks into Gregory Zinoviev, but too much. So much so that it was an obvious fake. Oneal published it and took the consequences. Which were:

THE DAILY WORKER cabled to Moscow and secured an authoritive denial of the alleged speech. Then the DAILY WORKER passed the information along to Oneal with the request that he do the right thing by his publication and print the denial. But you see, it is very hard for a public man to come out and say that he made a fool of himself. So Oneal did not. He stayed put. Now Jimmy, trying to save his face, says that either The DAILY WORKER falsified a cablegram or else Stalin did not tell the truth. What can you do with a fellow like Oneal? He refuses to believe anything unless it appears in the capitalist press.

THE franc continues to fall despite the fact that Poincare is premier and those who know anything know that Poincare is a reactionary and therefore according to capitalist experts, he should be a life-saver for the franc. When he returned to power the papers told us that the franc would become healthy and surprise people. Poincare pulled off several tricks, such as stopping tourists from eating roast duck, with squab on toast—officially. But the franc did not recover. Now, that French politics have ebbed somewhat, Poincare is more or less forgotten, but one of these days the franc will again appear in the headlines and Poincare will get another vacation.

THE big news of the day is taking place in China. A few days ago we were told that Manchurians were fighting the Japanese. It was a fake story. The DAILY WORKER did not know, but hinted as much. Manchuria is run by Chang Tso-Lin, who is a Japanese agent. If the Manchurians were fighting the Japs it would have meant that Chang had broken with Tokio and was on some other payroll, British or American. Most likely British. In all probability the basis for the stories was a revolt of the Koreans on the Manchurian border against the Japanese.

HOW many times during the past few years have we been told that the revolutionary forces of China were defeated? Yet today, the armies of the Canton government are marching northward and are having a hard time trying to locate the forces of Wu Pei-fu, the favorite of the American imperialists. An American correspondent tells us that the Cantonese troops who are investing Wuchang, treat noncombatants with courtesy, while Wu Pei-fu's brigands shoot everything in sight except the enemy. Soviet Russia, the only real friend of the Chinese people, of all the powers, is friendly to the Cantonese and to hope that victory will crown their efforts.

WIN WUCHANG BY STORM ON ANNIVERSARY

Heroic Canton Armies Gain Big Victory

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 12.—An engagement between Cantonese troops and allied forces loomed today as the victorious Cantonese army was advancing toward the province of Kiangsi, according to advises received from Hankow.

Flushed with victory following the capture of Wuchang, the Cantonese were preparing to engage General Sun Chuan Fang, in a battle which will probably involve the fate of Nanchang, an allied stronghold.

• • •

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, October 12.—Details of the capture of Wuchang by the Cantonese armies arriving here cause great joy among the Chinese masses, who are especially joyful at the anticipated liberation of their own city by the advancing southerners.

Fifteen years from the day on which the first revolution turned China from a feudal monarchy into a republic, and in the same city of Wuchang where that revolution was staged, the Cantonese national revolutionary troops carried the veiled city by storm, aided by soldiery within who had been won over from their reactionary commanders.

For several days the Cantonese fourth army outside the section on the wall held by troops from Hupeh province, had been fraternising with these troops on the wall, sending them food and propaganda.

Wanted Only One Man.

On Saturday, airplanes whirred over the city dropping leaflets to the besieged soldiers and population which stated:

"All the suffering of the populace is due to the ambitions of one man. You who are starving have done nothing. We want to kill one man —General Liu Yu-chun. His soldiers may go free."

The Fruit of Fraternization.

During the night of Saturday, the Cantonese fourth army troops, aided by the Hupeh troops on the wall who had been won over, scaled the wall, and Sunday at 3:30 in the morning they descended from the wall within and rushed the Pagan gate while part of their forces attacked at the same point from outside.

A short fight and the gate was opened, whereupon the Cantonese fourth army rushed the two eastern gates and opened them from within and by six o'clock Cantonese troops were entering at all three gates and fighting thru the streets. By noon they reached the river and northern gates and opened them to the eighth Canton army which poured in and added in the mopping up.

Troops Turn Against Generals.

The besieged northern troops were in a panic. Their generals fled for safety from their own men to foreign hospitals and mission schools. While his soldiers were tearing off their northern uniforms and joining the Cantonese, General Liu fled to the Episcopal Boone university and hid in the home of Dr. Sherman, the college dean.

General Liu Gets His Reward.

Here the Cantonese found him when a sympathetic servant told them of his presence. He was then by a firing squad that afternoon in the assembly hall of the college.

At street corners for the next twenty-four hours the captured troops were being disarmed by detachments of the Canton soldiers and marching them off to quarters where a large share of them joined the Cantonese armies.

The Sign of Civil War.

By nightfall a scene such as occurs only in civil wars was being staged by the civilian population, those who had upheld the reactionary troops previous to the capture being thoroly cleaned up by other civilians whose sympathies were for the Cantonese.

So the forty-day siege of Wuchang, which is to become the capital when the nationalist revolutionary government is moved there from Canton, was ended.

New Fire Fighting Scheme.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—The Berlin fire brigade is now fighting oil and tar fires with bricks. Soap powder mixed with water, which has been found to be useless, is also being discarded.

PRUSSIAN DIET ENDED AS COMMUNISTS STAGE ANTI-ROYALTY BATTLE

BERLIN, Oct. 12.— Fist fighting climaxed the breaking up of a meeting of the Prussian diet today after the president had been ousted from his chair by Communist delegates.

The battle royal came on the culmination to a day of unruly disagreement, marked by flagrant disrespect to the chair on the part of some of the representatives.

KLAN TRIES TO BLOCK DAMNING PUBLICITY TIDE

Stage Fake Grand Jury Investigation

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 12.—Klan publicity agencies are today working overtime trying to stem the tide of popular revolt against the perfidies perpetrated by the hooded order against the people of Indiana from the time the lewd D. C. Stephenson organized the night shirt brigade until he came to grief after murdering a young girl after a debauch.

Those that Stephenson placed in power are now anxious that he should stay in jail where he cannot do much harm as long as nobody is allowed to spread his words on the printed page.

Forced by publicity to do something to save their faces the Jackson machine decided to rig up a grand jury investigation and Stephenson's associates have been subpoenaed. The jury will convene on Thursday.

Prosecutor Remy issued forthwith subpoenas for several witnesses but made notice the names of only three of them—all once lieutenants of D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana K. K. K., whose charges flung from his prison cell at the state prison where he is now serving a life sentence for murder, precipitated the present political embroglio.

The Stephenson henchmen subpoenaed were:

Earl Klench of Evansville, Ind., Earl Gentry and Court Asher of Muncie, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 12.—Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, today received a telegram from United States Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, asking full details of the Indiana political scandal and for copies of newspapers containing accounts of the recent developments.

In his reply to Borah, Adams said that "the spotlight is now being thrown on the hold the K. K. K. held on the Indiana government."

The Marion county grand jury today received instructions to begin immediately a thoro probe of charges of wholesale graft and corruption in Indiana, as aired by Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, and centering around D. C. Stephenson, deposed and imprisoned ex-grand dragon of the Indiana K. K. K.

Booed at Margate Labor Party Meet

J. H. THOMAS

RAMSAY McDONALD

LABOR PARTY MEET SCENE OF STRUGGLE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MARGATE, England, Oct. 12.—J. H. Thomas and Ramsay MacDonald, leaders of the British Labor Party, were frequently booed and hissed when they addressed the Labor Party conference here and were heard only with difficulty.

Decry Traitors.

The demonstration was significant of the hatred felt for these two reformists whose nefarious work led to the shameful capitulation of the General Council of the Trade Union Congress and the calling off of the general strike last May just as it was on the point of victory.

Thomas even defended his union's present lack of solidarity with the miners, saying that 45,000 railroad workers were out of work and 200,000 working only three days a week—saying this as an excuse for the lack even of financial support to the miners, who have appealed to the union to boycott scab coal.

More Alibis from Tillett.

Ben Tillett, also, of the Transport Workers' Union, which has also been appealed to by the miners to boycott scab coal, evaded that issue entirely and excused lack of financial support by saying that the union spent $5,000,000 during the general strike and is $500,000 in debt.

After a bitter debate, the conference adopted a resolution condemning the government for its handling of the coal strike and urged nationalization of the mines as the solution of the strike dispute.

PREJUDICE-FILLED GIRL KILLS NEGRO BOY; NO PROVOCATION FOR ACT

BRISTOL, Tenn., Oct. 12. — Because "I don't want a Negro boy hanging around me," Bertie Wise, 13-year-old white girl, shot and probably fatally wounded nine-year-old Richard Logan, Negro. Witnesses declared the boy was shot without provocation while playing in a tree. The girl expressed no regret over the shooting, and her foster-father, R. L. Hall, says: "I can't do anything with her."

CONFERENCE FOR N. Y. CLOAKMAKER AID HERE OCT. 24

New Chicago Wage Scale Planned

Sunday, October 24, is the date set for the conference of representatives from all Chicago labor organizations called by the joint board of Ladies' Garment Workers for the purpose of making plans for the aiding of the 40,000 cloakmakers who are now on strike in New York.

All Labor Invited.

The conference will be held at the South Hall, Ashland Auditorium, at 10 o'clock in the morning. Invitations have been sent to every labor union and organization to send delegates.

On Wednesday night a special meeting of all members of the Chicago garment workers' unions will be held at Schoenhoffen hall. The workers then will be asked to give their approval of relief plans to be presented by the board.

Forward Charges Refuted.

Charges made by the Jewish Forward that Chicago union garment factories were "scabbing" on the New York workers by producing New York

Federation Meets With Negro Women to Give Strike Aid

Officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the strike committee of the Negro women who are striking against wage cuts by the Maras stuffed date factory met in conference Tuesday to discuss plans for relief of the strikers.

The federation is co-operating with the Negro women workers to help them win their fight for their living standards.

More workers are joining the strike each day, it is reported. Strikes in other industries where Negro women are employed are predicted as a result of the action taken by the date stuffers.

Financial assistance is needed by the strikers, as they are almost destitute because of being on strike for so many days and because they received such low wages while they were working.

FEDERATION CONVENTION VOTES SUPPORT TO PASSAIC STRIKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—An appeal to organized labor thruout the country for immediate financial aid for the Passaic, N. J., and Willimantic, Conn., textile strikers was voted today by the American Federation of Labor.

The convention directed President Green to call a conference at once of the presidents of all international unions to organize the relief movement thru those bodies. A collection was taken on the convention floor by vote of the delegates, netting a neat sum as a nucleus for labor's contribution.

The convention was informed that there is an immediate need for $25,000 to carry on the relief work among the strikers for the next two weeks until the United Textile Workers' Union can receive remittances thru its local unions.

Green called the conference of international union representatives for Tuesday night to formulate the general appeal.

Turn Down Refuge Move.

Resolutions asking amendment of the immigration law to permit admission of political and religious refugees to this country were voted down.

Attack Daugherty.

An attack on Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, whose trial on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the government ended in a jury disagreement, broke out in today's session of the American Federation of Labor convention here.

President William Green, in opening the session, turned on Daugherty.

"The fact seems to be established," he said, "that while the jury was divided, nevertheless, it was quite impossible for the ex-attorney general of the United States to prove his innocence. He is the same man who during the railroad shop strike interested himself on behalf of the railroad lines.

Obtained Injunction.

"He it was, who in his official capacity, obtained the most drastic injunction ever issued against the workers of this land. He it was who declared that as long as he was attorney general the closed shop would not be tolerated and the open door would prevail.

"He is the man who used his power against the organized workers when they attempted to secure decent working conditions.

Against Soviet Union.

"Your committee sees no reason for recommendation that the A. F. of L. modify or change its position regarding the recognition of the autocratic Soviet regime in Russia," stated a report of the resolutions committee approved by the convention in voting down a Soviet recognition resolution. The report added:

"We regard the Soviet regime in Russia as the most unscrupulous, most anti-social, most menacing institution in the world today."

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 12.—Great and militant "Passaic" with its nine months' fighting record against the textile mill barons of New Jersey, stalked into the American Federation of Labor Convention here demanding immediate and substantial financial assistance and it got what it asked for.

In order to get something now, the call from "Passaic" had to bowl over the report of the powerful resolutions committee, that is hardly ever questioned. The total action secured as follows:

Unanimous.

First—The report of the committee calling on the executive council to send out an immediate relief call to all affiliated organizations was approved unanimously.

Second—On motion of Delegate Joseph Weber, Musicians' union, from the floor of the convention, President Green was directed to call into conference all the national and international officials in attendance at the

LABOR PARTY ISSUE RAISED BY MAX HAYES

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 12.—Latent enthusiasm for independent political action of the working class, thru a Labor Party, bubbled to the surface and spread a real class atmosphere for a few moments thru the American Federation of Labor convention here. But there was no militant champion of its cause on the floor of the convention, and the gathering passed quickly on to problems not so heavily freighted with the call to progress.

Max S. Hayes, delegate of the Typographical Union, had failed to introduce a resolution for the Labor Party, but he took the floor when a resolution urging the cause of primary elections as against delegate conventions came before the gathering. He didn't pay much attention to the primaries, but immediately began attacking the old parties and calling on the workers to build a political movement of their own.

"Hobson's Choice."

"The workers have come to learn that it is a Hobson's choice as between the two old political parties," said Hayes. "In Ohio the workers are confronted with this situation in the contest for United States senator. There is Wilson, the republican, an ultra-reactionary, and Pomerene, the democrat, with his anti-union record. As between these two the workers can certainly not develop any political enthusiasm.

"You know where I stand," continued Hayes. "I have been connected with practically every movement for independent political action in the history of our movement, during my time. You may think it absurd for me to be talking now about a labor party movement.

Still Hopeful.

"But, I want to say now, that I still have hopes that the so-called leaders of labor, who are really followers merely waiting to see which way the crowd is going, will accomplish something in this direction."

Hayes then told of republican bosses in Ohio going out and making speeches for the democrats, and democratic bosses making speeches for republicans. He said this was especially true under the so-called manager form of municipal government.

"We give of our energy and we sacrifice to build up our industrial organizations," said Hayes, "and then we realize what a pitiful position we are in when we go repping at the doors of the city hall to give voice to our grievances.

"If you don't want to register and vote for the candidates of the old parties, then for god's sake get out and build up a movement of your own."

All along, during his talk, the views expressed by Hayes met with continuous applause, spontaneous at first, then developing volume as he went along. Evidently a goodly number of

The First Ten Thousand Must be Completed to Keep the Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The units of the party and sympathizers with the cause which THE DAILY WORKER fights for, must act quickly and mobilize more power behind the campaign to Keep The DAILY WORKER if the existing crisis is to be overcome.

The amount of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund reported on Saturday was $8,838.93. The receipts estimated for Monday in answer to the call for prompt assistance was $1,500. In place of $1,500 only $656.21 was received, making the total of the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund on Monday $4,365.14.

That setback puts THE DAILY WORKER face to face with a serious situation. There must be redoubled work for THE DAILY WORKER Fund if our paper is to continue its services to our movement.

The obligations which THE DAILY WORKER has to meet make it essential that every party member, every party unit, and every sympathizer with the cause of the revolutionary movement in this country come to the aid of THE DAILY WORKER immediately.

The $4,365 which has been raised thus far does not represent the contribution of even one thousand of the ten thousand members of the party. THE OTHER NINE THOUSAND MEMBERS MUST RUSH THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

(Just as the above words were written THE DAILY WORKER office advises me that a check for $1,000 came in from L. E. Ketterfeld, the New York manager of The DAILY WORKER.)

With other receipts for Tuesday this contribution from District No. 2 raises the total of the fund close to the $6,000 mark. With this big boost and with a big drive by the rest of the party units, the fund can be increased to $10,000 by Monday, October 18.

THE COMPLETION OF THE FIRST TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS OF THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND WILL ENABLE OUR PAPER TO OVERCOME THE IMMEDIATE CRISIS. IT WILL CLEAR THE WAY FOR A GREATER EFFORT TO COMPLETE THE $50,000 KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND AND INSURE THE APPEARANCE OF OUR PAPER FOR ANOTHER YEAR.

We ask the party units and party sympathizers to follow the example of the New York comrades and rush in their contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund. The $10,000 mark is now within reach. A thousand dollars a day will bring the total by next Monday.

PUSH THE KEEP THE WORKER FUND UP TO THE TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR MARK AND KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. IS THE SLOGAN UNDER WHICH EVERY PARTY MEMBER AND SYMPATHIZER OF THE PARTY MUST WORK.

LENINGRAD WORKERS VOTE FULL SUPPORT TO CENTRAL COMMITTEE

By JOHN PEPPER.

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 12.—Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, accompanied by some of his adherents, arrived unexpectedly at a meeting of the party nucleus of the Putilov Works in Leningrad. He demanded permission to speak. Instead of the hour requested, he was permitted fifteen minutes.

The meeting by a majority of 1,576 against 22, adopted a resolution declaring full support to the Central Committee of the party and condemning the action of the opposition. Similar resolutions are being adopted in all other Leningrad factories and work shops.

The Political Committee of the party published a decision to submit the violations of party discipline by prominent leaders of the opposition to the next plenum of the Central Committee to enforce party discipline in the party ranks, a measure provided for in the resolution of the

COUNTIES FATE OF ...T COAL WAR

...rmer Nonunion ...lds Form Balance

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 12.—Four non-union counties of southwestern Pennsylvania can largely make or break the national strike in the bituminous coal fields that may follow the ending of the 3-year Jacksonville wage agreement next April 1.

Hold Key.

Four key coal counties, Fayette and Greene in the grip of the steel settlement that feed their blast furnaces in Pittsburgh and nearby metal towns with coke, Somerset county controlled by the Berwind-White Coal Co. that bunkers ships and supplies public utilities from its Windber pits and by the Consolidation Coal Co.—Rockefeller enterprise—one of the few of four largest coal companies in the nation. Westmoreland county with its 17,000,000 tons a year is of major importance.

These four counties, producing almost another 50,000,000 tons a year, surprised the world by joining the great national coal strike of 1922 and saving the United Mine Workers. Open shop since the Knights of Labor passed in the early nineties they were counted in the tonnage estimates of the enemy. But the calculations of Secretary of Commerce Hoover and other experts that the non-union fields would take care of the market were knocked awry. The four-county walkout shut off nearby sources of supply and the railroad shopmen's strike curtailed shipments from more remote fields.

Must Be Defeated.

What the Somerset-Westmoreland-Fayette-Green county miners did in 1922 must be repeated if the United Mine Workers are to win the next national strike. Unfortunately bad feeling was left in the four-county region by the results of the Cleveland maneuvers of 1923 which ignored the men who had saved the rest of the union.

The new members were left to continue the struggle by themselves except for financial assistance which District 2 continued in Somerset to the end and the national union gave the coke field workers of Fayette county for a more-limited period. And these local strikes were inevitably broken by the coal which the struck companies were getting from their own mines in other districts. Open shop relied again.

Breach Healed.

The bad feeling which was left behind has eased somewhat with the passing of four years and the hope of another joint walkout next April 1. If the union leaves the call—is bright again.

It is a fifty-fifty need. The national union cannot win without the nonunion mines and the men from there cannot recover their wage cuts and regain civil rights in their company towns without the industrial solidarity of the rest of the miners of the nation. No local strikes against their powerful employers can succeed. The Westmoreland county men found that out in the 2-year strike of 1911. The Somerset men discovered it in their fruitless continuation of the 1922 strike into 1923. Rockefeller's scores of Consolidation mines in West Virginia, old Virginia, Maryland and Kentucky can easily take care of his market needs while the Somerset men are striking alone. And U. S. Steel can feed its furnaces with West Virginia gets if its mines and ovens of Fayette county alone are tied up.

But when all the miners stand together not all the gunmen at the disposal of these big corporations—there were 2,000 in these 4 counties alone—can break the strike. That also was shown in 1922 when new and old unions men stood together without a break in the five months' common fight.

Queen Marie's Country Is a Land of Starving and Persecuted Peasants

Here is a picture taken of Queen Marie of Roumania just prior to her departure for the United States on her well-planned tour of babbit-baiting. Next to her sits Roumania's king, Ferdinand. Powerful capitalist interests, both Roumanian and foreign, control the wheat lands and oil fields of the country, both sources of huge profit to the owners. The Roumanian government, under the whip hand of its most powerful bankers, the Bratianu brothers, has become notorious for the terror it has conducted among the working population. Peasants are starving for lack of food and the necessities of life, and thousands of workers and peasants have been thrown into jail or massacred for their protests against these intolerable conditions. It is the queen of a country that is being given an official welcome by the United States government.

THE QUEEN OF ROUMANIA GETS $5,000 SUIT FREE

Meanwhile Roumanian Kids Are Starving

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Uncle Sam, who is synonomous with the United States of America, presented Queen Marie of starving and suffering Roumania with a perfectly good $5,000 worth of luxury on the palatial steamship Leviathan which leaves Cherbourg today bound for New York.

There is nothing immoral in this action of Uncle Sam's, according to insiders, tho big butter and egg men, who want to remain on good terms with their wives usually keep clear of the Queen of Roumania except when she is traveling incog.

Sam Took a Chance.

But Uncle Sam is a daring urchin and does not care what Mrs. Grundy says or thinks. Hence the big splash.

There are people in this big city who are dirty enough to say that what Uncle is buying with his $5,000 is not the queen's good will, but an interest in Roumanian oil wells for John D. Rockefeller.

Those same people hitch up the fact of Roumania's theft of Bessarabia from the Soviet Union with the fact of the United States' non-recognition of the Soviet Union, and with such a pelabridiculous person as Marie thrown in, it is quite possible that even Coolidge may be affected.

There are no arrangements made so far to give the queen a free return trip but Marie is not worrying about that little thing as there is no doubt but American republicans and democrats of easy fortune will be only too glad to do the right thing by Marie. In the meantime Roumanian peasant children are starving, but what should a queen care?

A. F. of L. Backs Passaic Textile Strike

cooperation to devise ways and means for raising relief funds immediately. This carried unanimously in spite of efforts by Secretary Matthew Woll of the resolutions committee to sidetrack it. The meeting of the officials is being held as this is being written.

Collection.

Third—On motion by Delegate William Kohn, Upholsterers' union, the delegates were called on to contribute to an immediate collection that was taken on the spot and amounted to $875.50, which is an average of about $2 per delegate.

The convention was swept by an almost unanimous desire to immediately aid the passaic strikers, in every possible way, in order to win the Passaic strike, which is considered a crucial testing of the whole American labor movement.

The resolutions committee bunched the Passaic and Willimantic strike resolutions offered by the delegation of the United Textile Workers' union, referring them both to the executive council with the authorization that an appeal for financial aid be issued to affiliated organizations. This takes a month to get results.

Conboy Seconds Wise.

Sarah Conboy, Secy. of the UAfed Textile Workers, got the floor and appealed for the committee's report, declaring there was not much to add to what Rabbi Wise had said yesterday.

Delegate Chan..ey Weaver, Musicians' union, then denounced the capitalist press for its treatment of the strike, followed by Delegate Arthur McDonnell, also of the United Textile Workers' union, who exposed conditions in the industry and urged upon the delegates that they bring the matter of relief before their respective organizations.

Hayes Stresses Emergency.

It was here that the Passaic spirit stepped into the convention arena, in the person of Delegate Max Hayes, Typographical Union, declaring, "You cannot merely pass resolutions here and then trust to god to get results. We are confronted here with an emergency proposition. The relief stores in Passaic must be closed immediately unless funds are secured now, today to keep them open."

Delegate Hayes brought up the question of raising a loan immediately in support of the strike. He also suggested that a dozen or two international unions come across immediately with $1,000 apiece. He recalled that the I. L. G. W. U. was an international union in the throes of a strike establishing a precedent for action now.

Urges Loan.

"That loan made it possible for the International Union I refer to, to forward and win a splendid victory," said Hayes. "We can do it again. We must find some immediate relief, now, or the defeat is repeated. Every dime, nickel or penny will help." Hayes finished and sat down without making any definite motion.

Tells of $1,000 Gift.

Delegate Harry Madsen, Painters' I'nion, told of his local union contributing $1,000 in aid of the British miners' strike, and also asked the convention to help as quickly as possible. He still left definite motion calling for action. Next came Delegate Charles E. Wills, Machinists' Union, who said that the discussion had helped clarify the atmosphere showing the American Federation of Labor definitely behind the struggle and that this would help get financial aid, he claimed, but no motion. Then the ice began to break when Delegate James C. Shenessy, Barbers' Union, with a few words of introduction pledged $1,000 for his union. Delegate Jacob Goldstone, muddied the water a little by a left handed attack against the Communist leadership of the strike, declaring however, that, "We must not now question how the strike has been taken care of up to the present time."

Immediate Action.

He said that if the strike is not won it will be a blow at the present A. F. of L. leadership of the struggle. It was then that Delegate Weber, Musicians' Union, got the floor and amended the report of the resolutions committee. He demanded that President Green call an immediate meeting of the national and international officials for the purpose of considering means thru which immediate relief can be secured.

Woll Objects.

Secretary Woll for the resolutions committee immediately got the floor pointing out that this was the second strike relief appeal heard by the convention. He referred to the appeal for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union issued last week. He raised the cry of discrimination against the I. L. G. W. U. tho his very evident intent was not to aid the I. L. G. W. U., but to smash Weber's amendment.

Delegate James Lynch, member of resolutions committee, came next, declaring that the injection of the Weber amendment might kill the committee's report. He therefore asked that the question be divided. President Green promised that this would be done.

Delegate Adams.

Delegate James W. Fitzpatrick, of Waterbury, Conn., who was evidently acting under the guidance of Secretary Woll another opportunity to arouse the prejudice of the delegates.

"This strike has not been, until very recently, conducted by the American Federation of Labor," said Woll.

"This strike has been run by the Communist Party."

Woll then declared that the strike had just come under the banner of the A. F. of L. thru the United Textile Workers' Union, and that this was the first opportunity that the A. F. of L. had to take up the question and issue an appeal for financial assistance.

Woll Maneuvers.

Woll went out of his way to declare that Delegate Hayes had raised the question of immediate assistance, claiming the committee was ignorant of any emergency situation existing. Woll tried to create the impression that he was working in harmony with the textile workers' delegation in the convention while Hayes was working at counter-purposes under some outside influence.

Conboy Spikes Well.

Delegate Conboy of the textile workers helped spike this new maneuver by Woll thru announcing that she was aware of the dire need of the Passaic strikers, that one of the strike officials, Elizabeth Dawson, was sitting at the table with the textile workers' delegation, and that she had all the information concerning the acute suffering of the men, women and children in Passaic. This was another rebuff for the Woll reprobanship for the resolutions committee.

Right here Delegate Kohn, upholsterers, came to the front with his demand that a collection be taken up, supported by Delegates Joseph A. Mullaney, asbestos workers, and J. W. Mara, moulders.

Take Vote.

With Delegate Mara on the floor, President Green announced the vote would be taken on the committee report. This was done and the report, without Woll's later additions, was adopted.

President Green then called on Delegate Weber to explain his proposition before it is voted on.

"It doesn't matter whether this strike was under Communist leadership or not," declared Weber. "The strikers are looking to the American labor movement for aid. There is an emergency situation at this time and my amendment seeks to provide for this emergency."

Delegate Weber's amendment was thereupon carried unanimously. Then came the Kohn proposition for a collection. Delegate Mara was allowed to open discussion on this proposition. He said he thanked Delegate Hayes for stirring up the convention on this question of Passaic.

Cash Asked.

"Every delegate here should contribute, not $1 apiece, but something adequate to the occasion. You should make it $5 apiece. We have taken in each day's hour fellow trade unionists in distress. The relief stores are closing up in Passaic for want of cash. They need money to buy supplies."

The collection proposition also carried unanimously and Delegates Fred Hewitt, machinists, Hayes, Weber and Conboy, assisted by women delegates and visitors, passed the hat, resulting in nearly a thousand dollars being raised on the spot.

"That's how the strikers for a day anyway," remarked one of the collectors, after the cash had been counted.

Previously Secretary Woll had carefully explained to the convention the refusal yesterday to endorse at this time the candidacy of Thomas E. Smith for the 1928 democratic presidential nomination.

Woll Lauds Smith.

Woll lauded Al Smith, declaring that the resolutions committee is "unanimously of the opinion and judgment that there is no official who has served labor better and the common people as a whole in his capacity as Governor of New York than Governor Alfred E. Smith," and that the committee did not turn him down, "but rather we were not in a position, and it is improper at this time to consider any presidential candidate no matter how favorably he might appear to us." The convention listened to the apology without action.

President Green had also referred to the disagreement in the trial of Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, pointing out his anti-labor record in the railroad shopmen's strike. He declared there would be no doubt as to Daugherty's guilt in the eyes of the American people.

Bunch Resolutions.

The resolutions committee bunched the resolutions demanding a lifting of the ban against immigration and also the re-establishment of the United States as an asylum for political refugees. The committee opposed any changes in the immigration laws, declaring the changes proposed would not help workers in this country.

Delegate Farnseth, seaman, told his annual story about the smuggling of Chinese into this country. Delegate Doyle, painters, told of smuggling immigrants across the Canadian border, while Delegate Edwin H. Manson, Montana Federation of Labor, urged that there was a surplus of labor in this country, and that therefore the immigration bars should be kept up. "Instead of letting down the bars," said Manson, "let us plug up the holes."

Delegates Roused.

This attack finally resulted in rousing delegates Max Zuckerman, capmakers, and Isidore Nagler, I. L. G. W. U., the two organizations introducing the resolutions.

Zuckerman attacked the committee for confusing the issues raised, while Nagler declared the immigrant worker had not reduced the standard of living in this country, but raised it instead, especially in the needle trades. But the committee report carried.

On Fighting Asked.

On the question of fighting legislation outlawing foreign born workers, the committee asked for a reaffirmation of the stand already taken to prevent deportations. Delegate Forseth sought to amend the report by declaring against, not only fingerprinting and photographing, but any other method of identification. Woll was willing to accept the amendment for the committee, but Delegate Lynch, printers, member of the committee refused, altho he did not give any reason. The original committee report was approved.

CHICAGO POLICE ENMESHED IN BIG BOOZE SCANDAL

Stealing Bananas Is Not Worth While

More than 400 subpoenaes, naming patrolmen, police officers, the elite and the humble of Chicago's bootleggerie, and scores of laymen in that gentle business of getting the alcoholic kick from the hip to the lip, were placed in the hands of federal officers here today as gangland scurried to cover before the approaching probe of the city's alleged crime and liquor syndicates.

Wednesday, the federal grand jury will begin its hearing here of evidence of alleged widespread police and official corruption which, it is charged, has permitted this section to remain a dripping oasis in the nation's alleged aridity. All the 400 subpoenaed today and probably many more will be summoned before the investigators to bolster up federal investigators' charges of police guards for liquor caravans, pay-off systems whereby patrolmen and police officers alike were enriched by giving "passes" to truckloads of booze thru their territories, and a general fraternising of police and bootleggers for mutual benefit.

A check-up of booze seizures in the city, according to the investigators, who have been working secretly here for months, shows that more than 1,000 confiscations have resulted only in the liquor being turned back to the bootleggers.

Another wholesale batch of indictments similar to the 79 handed down against Cicero gangsters and public officials a week ago, hovered over the Chicago city police department today as federal authorities launched their probe into the department's alleged bootlegging activities.

Between 50 and 100 policemen, detectives and politicians will be hit by the federal grand jury probe scheduled to start Wednesday, government officials predicted today.

Upholsterers' Strike at Hartford Winning; Young Workers Active

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 12.—The strike of the Upholsterers' Union Local 35 is progressing favorably for the strikers. More workers from the Dworkin shop joined the strikers. During the next few days all the rest of the Dworkin workers are expected to join and make the walkout 100 per cent.

The spirit of the strikers is shown by full attendance at strike meetings and work on the picket line. Many good meetings have been held.

Local Labor Backs Strike.

The strikers were addressed by the president of the Central Labor Union, the president of the Machinists' Union and a representative of the Young Workers League. The meeting was enthusiastic to the point of an ovation when eight Dworkin factory workers came in and joined the strike.

Hymie Wolfson, organizer of the Upholsterers' international Union, announced that a contract had been signed with the Goldman Brothers, winning for the workers nearly all demands, a 44-hour week instead of 49, an increase of wages, recognition of the union and other demands.

Bosses Under Pressure.

Wolfson is confident that the strike will be won. The manufacturers cannot hold out long, as they are getting orders from firms who have contracts with them and must fill them or break the contract under penalty.

The president of the Central Labor Union said that organised labor of Hartford will back the strikers financially and morally.

Morris Wolberg, the youthful president of the Upholsterers' Union, is very busy organizing, the struggle of the inexperienced but militant young workers. Old trade unionists are quite surprised at the militancy of the workers. Brother Fishman, one of the first to start organization of the union, is on the job day and night.

This union, composed of 90 per cent young workers, is a good example for the workers of Hartford.

ZERO IS COMING TO CHICAGO TO HELP OUR DAILY

He Is Funnier Than a Pair of Sidewhiskers

Meet Mr. Zero, the champion robot of the world!

Mr. Zero is the chief actor in "The Adding Machine" considered by many dramatic critics one of the best plays that ever saw the footlights in Chicago.

The Studio Players, with headquarters at 324 North Clark street, are presenting the play for the benefit of the Daily Worker, and the last date is set for October 24th, 7 p. m. in Douglas Park Auditorium.

This fellow Zero is like so many people we could name that those with sensitive natures may feel ill at ease but the ball will be plunged in darkness and blushes can be enjoyed unseen.

Bookkeepers Are O. K.

That Zero should happen to be a bookkeeper is no reflection on that exceedingly useful category. It just happened that way. He might be an editor and be just as dumb. However we cannot conceive of an editor working 30 years without asking for a raise. In fact we cannot conceive of an editor working at all.

But this is getting us nowhere. When Zero asked for the raise he got it. Had Zero a hip flask it would have got smashed. In other words the boss told him that an adding machine would take his place. Therefore Mr. Zero forgot for a moment that he was a bookkeeper and in mad fashion slaughtered his boss, perhaps with a fountain pen that could do everything but write.

Window Washers' Strike Settled, Win Guarantee

Settlement of the strike of the Chicago Window Washers' Union, Local 40, was reached Tuesday morning. Members of the union, more than 400 of them, had been out since October 4.

The settlement was in the form of a compromise, it is reported, the union gaining its demand of a weekly guarantee of 40 hours work, but accepting the old scale of $1.00 an hour. The workers had asked for an increase of 25 cents.

More than 20 Chicago window cleaning companies were affected by the strike.

Attempts to break the strike by efforts to intimidate the strikers were made by the bosses, who used slugging and police against the workers. Two members of the union were arrested, but were released when no charges could be preferred against them.

The union also won pay for holidays and several other provisions making for better conditions. One of the provisions is that the last man to be laid off shall be the "shop steward." Also a seniority clause is included in the new agreement, providing that the last man hired in the first to be fired. This prevents firing of all old men, and keeping only "young blood."

So far the Chicago workers have sent $2,000 to the New York strikers, it is announced, and money is being sent each week. It is felt that other trades will aid, as the strike has been endorsed by the Detroit A. F. of L. convention.

The joint board of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Unions of Chicago has announced an increase in wages for all members of the garment unions, ranging from $2 to $15 a week. The increases go into effect October 16, it is announced.

The increases are designed to place the Chicago needleworkers on the same scale they had in 1931, according to the board.

CUBA GOVERNED BY MURDER; ALL UNIONS CRUSHED

Labor Leaders Killed or Disappear

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Labor organizations and the entire labor press of Cuba have been suppressed by the "liberal" Machado government, creature of U. S. imperialism, as a "sequel to the disastrous railway workers' strike of this summer.

The once powerful yellow reformist "Hermandad Ferroviaria (Railway Workers Brotherhood), an extreme right-wing organization which always preached collaboration with the government, and recently negotiated with the American Federation of Labor for its entrance into the Pan-American Federation of Labor, had been reduced to absolute impotence, and to a shadowy existence.

Unions Destroyed, Papers Suppressed.

The syndicalist organizations—"Sindicato Fabril" and almost all other trade union organizations of Cuba have been suppressed, and the few which survived have had their members decimated.

No labor paper, either socialist, anarchist or Communist is published in Cuba any more. If they were found signers or naturalized citizens they were deported. With the active leaders the government took less trouble.

Government by Murder.

Following the system of the Spanish dictator Primo de Rivera, the Cuban labor leaders are being exterminated without legal formalities. They are being murdered in the streets or in their homes by "unidentified men."

One of the first to be killed was Enrique Varona, an organizer of the Railway Brotherhood. He was arrested and imprisoned. The day after his release, on his way to the theater with his wife and daughter, he was shot in the back and instantly killed. Of course no trace of the murderer has been found. This was followed by the killing of Thomas Grant, treasurer of the Railway Brotherhood, who was shot down on the railway station in full daylight, by a policeman. Another treasurer of the Railway Brotherhood, Baldomero Dusenigo was shot as he was entering the house.

Dozens Dead or Vanished.

Seventeen workers are known to have been killed in this way so far. But there are many who have disappeared and whose fate is not known, such as Alfredo Lopez, the active secretary of the Labor Federation and more recently very active union members from Camaguey and one from Santi Spiritu.

In addition there are frequent arrests. Many of the arrested men are brought to the gunboat "Maximo Gomez" anchored in the Havana Harbor, which has been transformed into a floating prison. A terrific panic among the workers that those who have disappeared were taken out of the harbor and thrown into the sea.

White Terror.

Every liberal or labor paper which mentioned the murders of the workers and the mysterious disappearances was immediately suppressed.

Never was the Cuban working class as much oppressed and persecuted under any of the former conservative governments, as under the present regime, elected as a liberal and democratic government.

"The present situation," says the Rome dispatch, "is characterized by heavy liquidation of securities, increased money stringency and uncertainty regarding the future. ## Soviet Tries Solving Row With Gen. Chang Over Dual-Owned R. R.

MOSCOW (By Mail).—In an interview with a "Tass" representative, Mr. Podvatsk, the people's commissary for ways of communication, said:

"We are sorry and surprised at the turn of the latest developments on the Chinese Eastern Railway. The Soviet Union is carrying on a peaceful policy in China. Our administration on the railway took, and is taking, all steps to negotiate outstanding questions by meeting half-way and making concessions to the Chinese side, especially when, according to the Chinese authorities, the interests of China are affected.

"As to the right of navigation of the Cer River fleet on the Sungarian, as well as of education and other questions, all this ought to be submitted for consideration at the Mukden conference, which was by mutual consent temporarily postponed. ## Accepted Lady Astor's Challenge

John Morton, with his wife and children, in Moscow.

Lady Astor Welshed

Dear Comrade Editor:

In your issue of Sept. 18th, you have a news item from London, with the headline "British Toiler Accepts Nancy Astor's Defy."

Since I have in my possession the whole of the correspondence that passed between J. Morton and Lady Astor I should like to correct the statement that Lady Astor paid his traveling expenses as she promised. You will readily see that this sentence as it stands will give the readers of the Daily Worker an entirely erroneous idea of Lady Astor's beneficence.

For this reason I believe it necessary to place before you the facts, so that your readers may judge for themselves the extent of her generosity.

Lady Astor issued her challenge in December, 1926. J. Morton immediately accepted. The correspondence that followed between them, until March of this year dealt mainly with the question of passports and other details. On the 22nd of March, J. Morton wrote to Lady Astor: "Now that I have got permission from the Russian government to go to that country, I will ask the British government for a passport, but before doing so it will be just as well that I should know what expenses you intend to allow me to cover the cost of the journey. It will no doubt be pretty obvious to you that a penniless workman can hardly undertake a journey from Liverpool to Moscow with his wife and two children and nothing in his pocket but a passport and a ticket from the steamship company.

"The ordinary expenses of such a journey would entail the purchase of traveling trunks and clothing for my wife and two children, also incidental expenses at this end before leaving.

"I would be glad if you would let me know just what you meant by "Expenses to Russia". If your conditions do not make it impossible for me, I will at once apply for passport."

To which Lady Astor's secretary replied: "If you will refer to her original letter, you will see that she offered to pay the passage money to Russia of any socialist and his family prepared to go there for two years. This was definitely specified as providing the passage money from London to Leningrad. She is afraid that the payment of other expenses was never contemplated nor covered by her offer."

During the entire correspondence that followed Lady Astor refused to budge one hair's breath from the position she had taken, refusing to pay railroad fares from Liverpool to London, also from Leningrad to Moscow where Morton had an offar of work. No doubt she meant to make it impossible for him to leave for Russia under her conditions. If she did, she mistook the caliber of our comrade for he wrote back at once: "Rather than allow Lady Astor to state publicly that her challenge has not been accepted and thereby make political capital for the Conservative party, it is my intention despite all difficulties to carry on."

I think I have now placed the matter in the right prospective and your readers will now know that Lady Astor did not pay any traveling expenses outside the bare fares from London to Leningrad, and that far from being generous she showed her despicable meanness in compelling an ailing women and two young children, 7 and 8 years old, to suffer the severe cold of a Russian winter without suitable clothing.

Fraternally yours,
Worker Correspondent.

Keep It And Make It Grow!

By J. W. JOHNSTONE

MANY important developments have been and are taking place in the trade union movement. Some are struggles within the union against the bureaucracy, others against wage cuts or for higher standards of living, the shorter workday, etc.

The significance in these struggles that brings them onto a higher plane than those of years past, is that workers in America as Communists appear in the role of active participants, and in cases such as the New York Furriers successful strike and the present textile and I. L. G. W. U. strikes, take a leading part in directing these struggles, while in the forefront, pushing these struggles in behalf of the workers and supporting every militant struggle, stands The DAILY WORKER.

THERE is a reason why the A. F. of L. executive is investigating the furriers' strike. That reason is that under left wing leaders, supported by The DAILY WORKER and the Communist press generally, the furriers stood out against the compromising betrayals of the right wing in which President Green became personally involved, and in spite of this pressure the union scored a signal victory.

The DAILY WORKER played a very important part in keeping up the morale of the strikers and stood out as the only English-speaking daily that exposed the treachery of the right wing, and urged the workers to resist any attempts of the bureaucracy to confuse the issue. The DAILY WORKER urged the strikers to stand solidly with their left wing leaders.

IN the present textile strike The DAILY WORKER was invaluable. The pressure brought to bear in congress for an investigation of the brutalities in the strike, in the A. F. of L. for admittance of the strikers into the union, in fact the whole campaign in the textile industry would have greatly weakened if The DAILY WORKER had not been in the field.

IN the I. L. G. W. U. strike The DAILY WORKER plays an important role. It can be safely said that in all these strikes The DAILY WORKER occupied the position of the unofficial spokesman of the rank and file, and as far as a newspaper can be, was a leader in these struggles.

It is the many struggles that have taken place against the Lewis-Farrington machine in the miners' union, The DAILY WORKER gave the fullest publicity and support to the progressives.

IT was The DAILY WORKER that first exposed Farrington as a tool of the coal interests. It printed the letters written between Lewis and anthracite miners of the betrayal that Lewis was leading them into.

NOW the struggle against the Lewis machine is taking on weight. The progressives are straightening and strengthening their line to give battle to Lewis in the coming national election and The DAILY WORKER will play a very important role in this struggle.

Keep The DAILY WORKER, of course! What else can we do? It is the only movement in America without our daily.

KEEP The DAILY WORKER is not enough. The left wing movement would have been much stronger if we would have been able to put a DAILY WORKER in the hands of every striker, in the Furriers, Textile and Ladies' Garment Workers' strikes.

The smashing of the Lewis reactionary machine will be a certainty if we can put The DAILY WORKER into every coal mining town in the country.

KEEP The DAILY WORKER. Yes. It shares its continuance by increasing its circulation, this is the real way of keeping The DAILY WORKER.

COOLIDGE NOT INTERESTED IN LOSS OF MINERS' LIVES; SAYS PROBING CAUSE NOT HIS AFFAIR

By LAURENCE TODD, Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—(FP)—Twenty-nine coal miners are entombed and presumably dead from gas fumes in a mine disaster at Rockwood, Tenn., and the White House "spokesman" is asked whether a federal investigation will be made.

Not Constitutional to Be Interested.

They are told, almost eagerly, that the spokesman of Coolidge is assured by legal authority that the federal government has no constitutional right to regulate the process of mining. Therefore the spokesman is sure that the federal government has no right to investigate a mine disaster. Those are matters exclusively in the power of the states.

No Pity for Labor's Dead.

It is not so much the statement made as the tone in which it is delivered that chills the press visitors. There is not a syllable or a shading of tone that would indicate pity for the industrial victims or an inclination to promote inquiry as to how another such holocaust may be avoided. What is expressed is a politician's relief that he can claim that no responsibility for mining is an embarrassing accident is his.

Bureau of Mines Silent.

Miss Ingram, official chronicler of many annual reports, could be averted by rock-dusting the surface of the mine shafts. The rock dust prevents ignition of coal dust in the air.

Mine managers have been very slow to adopt this measure of safeguarding life and property because it entails some expense, as Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor pointed out bitterly to the Industrial Accident Conference held by the department of labor some months ago.

But none of the coal companies have dared in recent years to refuse permission to the federal experts to investigate the cause of any accident in which lives were lost. Blood on the coal had to be explained.

FIGHT MONOPOLY OF BOSSES OVER WINDOW WASHING

Union Opposes Demand for All-tight Trust

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. — New York window cleaners in the Window Cleaners' Protective Union are fighting in their strike the efforts of the Window Cleaning Employers' Association to force a secret monopoly agreement on the open shop alternative offered.

The employers' organization wants the union to sign an agreement only with the association, setting up a secret joint committee which will rule whether or not the union can settle with any independent contractor and demanding that the union ask exorbitant security from independents as the price of settlement.

Union Subject to Bosses' Interests.

"This would mean virtual satisfaction of the union to the employers," asserts Union President Dark, "and we cannot permit that."

Have Auxiliary Monopoly.

The same employers who constitute the association are also in control of the Empire State Mutual Insurance Company, which provides them compensation insurance. The irresponsibility of window cleaning contractors in failing to pay for insurance made the state fund, Travelers Insurance, London Guaranty, Manufacturers' Liability and other regular firms cut them off.

Since the window cleaning employers' association did not employ the required 2,500 workers necessary for a mutual insurance organization, the contractors secured employers from other industries to round out the quota.

Freeze-Out Game.

Now the Empire State Mutual Insurance Company—in other words the Window Cleaning Employers' Association—cuts off the compensation of any employer who settles with the union. Eleven independents have already signed the union terms and given the nominal security required to insure enforcement—$100 or $200.

Meanwhile the employers are keeping thugs to guard strike-breakers and are egging police on to make as many arrests as possible of pickets. At least eight strikers have been sent to the workhouse for varying terms and others are being held on high bail for later hearings.

Strike of Window Washers Progressing; Now in Second Week

The second week of the strike of the Chicago Window Washers' Union, Local 40, finds the situation satisfactory, union officials report. The strike is gaining strength, they report, with new members being added to the union regularly.

Efforts of the bosses to break the strike by using thugs and police have failed and several of the companies have already made peace with the union.

Spanish Cyclone Destructive.

GRANADA, Spain, Oct. 12.—The village of Melvizar has been destroyed by a cyclone, according to a report received here.

Communication with Melvizar has been cut off, and it is feared that there has been loss of life. The governor of Granada has dispatched aid to the stricken village.

Floods and storms are causing heavy damage in Malaga. One workman has been killed by lightning.

MOVIE OPERATORS STRIKE IN HARLEM FOR RECOGNITION

Union Principle Involved Makes Move Important

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—A small strike in point of numbers, but one important in principle to Negro workers, is the fight of two colored motion picture machine operators for the union shop in the Lafeyette Theater in Harlem district.

The colored unionists say the fight is only part of one waged by the union against the Brecher management in this and other theaters. Union musicians in these theaters have been called out in support of the operators.

The colored operators were only recently admitted to the union, so that some of their erstwhile supporters outside labor ranks are not so eager now to encourage the strikers, fearing a possible betrayal by the union. The colored unionists have remained staunch, however, even in the face of an offer by the manager of the Lafeyette Theater to settle with them, altho the other interests would not settle with the union for all struck theaters, including those where white workers are out.

Richard Moore, organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress, was found guilty, but given suspended sentence, on a charge of obstructing traffic. Moore addressed a street meeting of workers in behalf of the colored operators' strike. The Lafayette Theater manager had Moore arrested under an injunction obtained from the Brecher interests, but when it was found that Moore had no connection but his sympathy with the union, that charge was dismissed.

Hughes Now Attorney for Packers After a Case for Rockefeller

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.— (FP) — Charles E. Hughes, former republican presidential nominee, supreme court justice and secretary of state, appeared before the court of appeals of the District of Columbia on Oct. 4 as attorney for the Armour and Swift meat packing concerns which now constitute the beef trust.

Hughes quit his cabinet job to make room for a corporation lawyer. Some months ago he appeared in Washington as counsel for the Petroleum Institute of America, dominated by Standard Oil of New Jersey. Thus he has two of the most powerful clients in America.

For the meat packers Hughes argued that the so-called consent decree agreed upon between Mitchell Palmer, then attorney general, and the packers in 1920 was utterly illegal and is not binding upon the packers.

German General Who Urged Kaiser Resign Is Given High Post

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—President Von Hindenburg has appointed General Heye as chief of the Reichswehr to succeed General Von Seeckt, who resigned as a result of the tremendous protest over the admission of Prince Frederick Eitheim, son of the former crown prince, to the army.

Heye was a general staff officer during the war, and it was he who on November 9, 1918, just before the kaiser's abdication, canvassed the opinion of regimental commanders on the front, and messaged Von Hindenburg:

"Orderly retreat of the army cannot be guaranteed unless the kaiser abdicates."

CLINE, MEXICAN REBEL HERO, TOUR COUNTRY

Was Held Prisoner in Texas 13 Years

Charles Cline, whose release after thirteen years of imprisonment in Texas for participation in a Mexican rebel expedition was enthusiastically welcomed by American and Mexican labor, will tour the Eastern part of the country for International Labor Defense beginning the middle of October.

Was Under Fire.

Cline, the only American in a group of Mexican revolutionaries organized in Texas to proceed to Mexico to aid in the overthrow of despotic rule there, was arrested with his comrades led by Captain Jose M. Rangel, on their way to the border. A posse opened fire on the encampment of the rebels and in return the latter killed some of their prisoners so as to insure their safe conduct to the border line and thence into Mexico. During the struggle, one of the possemen was killed by an unknown hand.

Altho totally innocent of any crime, Cline, Rangel and more than a half dozen of their comrades were imprisoned. A number of them died in prison as a result of the frightful conditions and persecutions there.

Arrest Flagrant.

So flagrant was their arrest, trial and sentence, that scores of labor and progressive organizations in both countries protested constantly against the continued imprisonment of the men. Conventions of the American Federation of Labor and of the Mexican Confederation of Labor repeatedly went on record for their release.

Only after thirteen years of imprisonment, when their case had aroused international interest and sympathy did Governor Ferguson finally grant them a pardon which tacitly admitted that the men had committed no crime. Cline was released on the eve of the second annual conference of International Labor Defense at which he appeared and was greeted with tumultous applause and cheering. Hundreds of workers later gathered in mass meeting to welcome him back into the labor movement in which he was formerly so active.

Will Visit 35 Cities.

In response to the numerous requests from cities in all parts of the country, a tour has been arranged for Cline from Chicago to New York during which he will speak in some thirty-five cities. Tentative dates have already been arranged for these cities and members of locals are already preceding with the necessary preparations.

Opens in Indiana.

All indications point to successful meetings in all the cities of the tour. The steel mill towns of Hammond and Gary, Ind., will see the opening of the tour on Oct. 16 and 17 respectively. Cline will proceed East from those points. Grand Rapids, Cleveland, Youngstown, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston, New York, Buffalo and Perth Amboy will be among the cities visited.

Some Dates Open.

The meetings will be in the form of Cline receptions, banquets, dances and similar gatherings and labor in all of these cities will be enabled to gather to welcome Charles Cline back into active work in the movement and hear him relate the absorbing story of his case. Considerable advertising material is being issued and big meetings are assured during the entire course of the tour. It is announced that a number of dates are still open and can be secured for Cline meetings if asked for within the next few days. The National Office of International Labor Defense is in charge of the tour. All requests must be made there immediately if they are to be properly taken care of.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

"Only fellow-worker in my shop said to me: "Well, maybe you guys are all right for the time when there'll be a revolution here like in Russia. But right now any revolution now—so what have you got to say. I guess nothing."

"I soon showed him he was wrong. I gave him a copy of the CONGRESSIONAL PROGRAM OF THE PARTY and proved to him that we have something to say about every question that is of interest to the workers. He read it and then the next day he said that he was for us and was going to vote for us and try to get others to vote for us. He liked the stand we took and he said that maybe he'd join the Party."

WOMEN REALIZE REAL DANGERS OF CAPITALISM, ACTIVE IN SPREADING COMMUNISM, CONFERENCE REVEALS

SUPERIOR, Wis., Oct. 12.—The many of our men comrades in the Minnesota district have showed symptoms of "taking it easy," on the other hand, our proletarian women are full of inspiretion and activity. Closer contact with the growing generation has undoubtedly given the women in the cities and country their youthful inspiration. They see the children they have given birth to and whom they have raised, under the destinies of capitalism. They can feel it on all sides, they know its weakness, its strength. Thru experience they know the corruptness of the capitalist society. And as a bird mother watches her young, so are they, ready to fight and sacrifice when their young are being threatened with danger. The only differences being that the proletarian women of the cities and countries know from where they can expect this danger. They know, that it is the capitalist society with all its attractions that threatens their young. That is why they are ready to organize to fight against threatening capitalism, and ready to draw with it in this fight, all the oppressed and downtrodden against this creator of evils and wretchedness, capitalism. They have experienced that acting singly will not help. Therefore, the entire, vast, oppressed mass must be with them in the struggle against capital and for the abolishment of its creator.

Hold Conference.

Al this was brought out in plain facts at the women's district conference held at Superior, Wis., Sunday, Oct. 3. The women's sections had made great headway. For one thing, its membership had grown. Another. It had become noticeably richer thru past experience.

Participation was great. Autoload after autoload cruised along the rain-drenched roads towards Superior. When the meeting was in full session, it looked as the some great party meeting were in question. From the farthest farm country hooks women had left their homes, tho none of them had knowledge of the fact that who is to pay the traveling expenses. Of the latter, nobody mentioned a word.

Women Can Speak.

It is argued that our women comrades do not know how to take the floor and deliver a speech. The Superior women's conference showed that there is no truth in this. On the other hand, many of our men comrades can take example from them. Nobody remarked the thought of another person over again. Each one had something different to say on the topic under discussion.

And what did they talk about and what did they decide? The proletarian education of the children, the organising of the Y. W. L. proletarian Sunday and summer school teachers, centralization as a body for the securing of funds for this purpose in order to get participation from those who are yet weak; the fight against liquors, which is threatening not only the working men and women, but above all the youth; the joining of the proletarian women to the Workers (Communist) Party; the distribution and financing of The DAILY WORKER; securing of English propaganda literature; the centralising of work in women's sections and their development; the winning over of the masses to the tactical problems and pulling them into the struggle—these and many other questions coming up in the proletarian movement were brought forth.

Formulate Program.

The time was much too short But all the same, all these subjects were touched upon and discussions made, above all, on each of them was made a decided program by which active work can be begun. And in this latter the women showed themselves more practical as organizers of the activities on the basis of reel life than many of our men comrades, who have long been in the party activities.

We can raise our hat to our women comrades' activities and in the course of activities try to nag behind them like a calf after its milk pail, as one proletarian woman comrade from the country strikingly said in personal conversation, when it came to discussing the helplessness and incapability of the menfolk.

Why the Workers (Communist) Party is Fighting for a United Labor Ticket

By BEN BROWN

The basic reason why the Workers (Communist) Party is fighting for a united labor ticket is because a highly centralized government functioning openly for the capitalist class has developed in this country.

The government acts as official strike breaker, employing military coersion, attacks on unions, injunctions, etc., hence it becomes a basic necessity to arouse political consciousness on the part of the workers, to get them to unite and form a United Workers' and Farmers' Labor Party. This will enable us to successfully cope with the powerful dictatorship of the capitalists as represented by the present political parties of imperialism.

An awakening is taking place today on the part of the workers to resist attacks on their standard of living. They are becoming disillusioned as to the present political parties and are beginning to feel a need for a break with the old capitalist parties. The Communist Party, as the most advanced section of the workingclass, realising the importance of independent political action on the part of the workingclass, points out these facts, creates sentiment and then leads in the fight on the class basis for building up of a real Labor Party.

HARVESTER SHOP BULLETIN TELLS WORKERS' NEEDS

Third Edition Is Full of Meaty Information.

By MARTIN ABERN.

The third issue of the Harvester Bulletin, issued by the McCormick workers (International Harvester Company) nucleus of the Workers (Communist) Party in Chicago, has just been published. It is the most attractive number yet issued. It is quite well rounded in content and appeal.

It contains, among other material, a number of shop stories on working conditions, hours, wages, the speed-up, unwarranted layoffs and discharges, numerous injuries to the men, sanitation, conditions, etc.

Expose Company Union.

There is a report and analysis of the last meeting of the company union council and its failure to meet the needs of the workers. There is a demand for a genuine organization of the Harvester workers—a labor union, but coupled with the demand, too, to transform the company union into a union controlled by workers only and containing only workers.

Demands Fit Needs of Workers.

There is an article pointing out the Passaic strike of unorganized workers and the inspiration it offers to the unorganized Harvester workers.

The demands of the workers are outlined in relation to wages, hours, vacations, the company union and other points.

There are brief remarks on the need of a labor party of the American workers and farmers, and the attitude of the Workers (Communist) Party.

An article on the conditions of the young workers in the Harvester appears. These are worse than even those of the old workers.

The shop bulletin lacks pictures and does not contain necessary humorous material. Conditions of the oppressed Negro workers are not given. There is no material on the situation of the young women and girl workers in the twine department. Comrades write more completely, but do not always mention the names of the people involved; that is, names and places which should appear in the story for the sake of emphasis and clarity. The articles and shorter will be required in order that the variety of the bulletin and its appeal and popularity may be increased. The nucleus is taking this up. Improvement in this respect over the previous issues is to be noted.

Rapid Circulation Increase.

The Harvester Bulletin was originally issued in mimeographed form. Fifteen hundred copies were printed, size 6 by 9 inches. The second number was printed in the same size. Three thousand copies were distributed. The third issue was increased in size to 8 by 10 inches and the edition increased to 5,000. An editorial committee supervises its issuance.

The distribution of 5,000 copies of The Harvester Worker is real mass agitation and is surely making its impression on the Harvester workers that the Communists lead in the daily struggle of the workers.

Baseball Season Ends as Cards Win Series

The St. Louis Cardinals Have Won the World Series with a Score of 4 to 1. St. Louis 3; New York 2.

The first week in October saw the last few games of the baseball season and the first few games of the football season overlap each other. This season in baseball, reflecting the generally prosperous conditions of business, has been the most profitable in the history of the game. From all indications, the worlds series receipts will probably set a record totalling possibly into two million dollars.

Last Saturday, in New York, the first game of the series was played between the Yankees, champions of the the American League, and the St. Louis Cardinals, champions of the National League. A capacity crowd of 63.000 people attended, paying out close to $200,000 for the privilege of doing so. In keeping with strong spirit of patriotism and nationalism that surrounds the so-called "national sport," a band played the nations] anthem before the start of the game, while the vast crowd of usually ribald and boisterous fans, stood in silence.

The Yanks won the first game, 2 to 1, but the Cards came right back in the second with a 6 to 1 triumph. The feature of this game was the pitching of the veteran Grover Alexander, whose remarkable feat of holding the Yankee sluggers to one bit in the last six innings was one of the greatest exhibitions of pitching ever seen in a worlds series. Alexander's performance came as a sensational climax to a hectic year in which he started off as the idol of the Chicago fans (who early in the season presented him with a $5,000 Lincoln car) and was shortly afterward waived to the Cardinals for alleged infringement of training rules.

Of course, this isn't the real reason for his release. The fact is that Alexander had suffered a streak of ineffectiveness that seemed to indicate that his long career was just about pettered out. It is well known that a ball player can get away with pretty nearly anything just as long as he goes out to the ball park and delivers the pitching or the base rops that bring the customers flocking to the turnstiles, which again shows that pro-baseball is a business and not sport.

But to get back to the worlds series. The third game was played in St. Louis which won, making the count two to one in its favor. Up to this time the hitting had been very light for teams that numbered many heavy sluggers in their lineups. In the fourth game, however, the batters broke loose and turned the game into a slugfest, Babe Ruth socking out three home runs and winning the game for the Yankees. This evened the count at 2 all, with one more game to be played in St. Louis.

WHY I AM A COMMUNIST

By MAX ROCK.

I am a school teacher. Children are put under my personal supervision. Who are these children. Ninety-five per cent of them belong to workers, good, hard factory workers who send their children to school hoping they will in time avoid the horrors of the present-day wage slave. What happens? These children of the workers are taught certain subjects—reading, writing and arithmetic, is that all? Of course not. Their most important subject is "Americanism." What is Americanism and why is it given first importance in the public schools? Why are children daily taught the pledge of allegiance to the flag? To perpetuate the present system of exploitation—to poison the child's mind in its infancy against any possibility of change, to give him the ideology of the exploiters. What happens to teachers who do not accept this brand of Americanism? What happens to any teacher who criticises the present form of government? They are thrown out of the system.

The public schools have become the greatest and most influential source of propaganda for the capitalist class. There is no more powerful weapon than the schools for killing any bud of clear thinking that the children may have. A school teacher is given a rigid course of study. His subject matter is worked out for him in detailed form. He is even told how to teach it. This insures against any chance for free thought or open discussion on any subject whatsoever. What chance for any scientific thinking on the part of teachers or students under these conditions?

Why did I join the Workers' Party? Because I have realized that the democratic and republican parties have never done anything for the class room teacher to better his conditions. They have failed time and again to increase salaries (witness the last salary campaign), to decrease the size of classes and to permit free discussion in the class room. Their interests have always been for hiy business. The Workers (Communist) Party is the only political party devoted to the interests of the working class, and school children and school teachers belong to this class.

C. F. & I. CRUSHES COLORADO MINER WITH 'DEMOCRACY'

Company Union Starts in Rockefeller Mines

By HARRY KLETZKY.

II.

TWELVE years have passed since the "battle of Ludlow," when 18 miners, wives and children were mercilessly slain by Colorado militiamen under orders from the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company-controlled state house.

A granite monument has been erected on the site of the massacre by the United Mine Workers' Union. It seems to the observer that the hopes of the union ever again organizing the C. F. & I. miners are also buried beneath the stone.

Monument Unnoticed.

Today miners walk to work in the company union mines where they can plainly see this landmark of a great struggle for freedom, and few receive a "fighting thrill" from the edifice. One miner, whose wife and brother are named on the stone, passes it each day. And he is indifferent to tales by union officials when he is approached.

It may be too harsh to say that this man's spirit typifies the spirit of the miner of Colorado today. But one is almost forced to that conclusion.

Robbed of Initiative.

But is it the miner's fault alone? In twelve years the C. F. & I. has successfully instilled the "fear of their job" in the hearts of the workers. They had been tricked into forsaking their union, and into accepting a plan, engineered by MacKenzie King, former prime minister of Canada, which robbed them of their initiative under the well-developed guise of allowing them that same initiative.

The "company union," which is today considered the most important problem before the trade union movement, received its start at this time in Colorado. There is no doubt but that if the "Rockefeller plan for industrial democracy" had been killed in Colorado the company union problem would not assume its present importance.

Trade union officials need not theorize on the evils and disadvantages of the company union plan as has been their custom of late. A study of what the plan has done to the Colorado coal miners will reveal its evils in bold relief.

Smooth Phrases.

The initiative of the Colorado miner has been lulled to sleep by smooth phrases and high-sounding "by-laws." His self-respect is gone. He is in complete control of his boss. If the plan was operated, perhaps, as Rockefeller promised it would be operated he might be less so.

But it was not enough to force the Colorado miner to accept a "plan" which he did not want. The plan itself was constructed to gain still more control over the workers.

Voting Corrupted.

The miners were supposed to have the power to choose their representatives by vote. But it was not long before they discovered that to vote for representatives who were "blacklisted" by the company meant "their job." Hundreds had been fired for trying to exercise their "franchise" as they desired.

Time is Ripe.

The time has, perhaps, never been riper than it is now to again bring the banner of trade unionism into the ranks of the coal miners of Colorado.

A new spirit, and the old spirit, can be awakened in the Colorado miners. In 1925, when the C. F. & I., under the plea of business depression, succeeded in fostering a wage decrease on the workers (thru the "plan") rumblings were heard thruout the state. Small groups of miners employed by the C. F. & I. even came out in open rebellion, but were forced back into line by the threat of a close-down of the mines.

These rumblings need to be "nursed" and fed to make them grow into a roar big enough to smash even the company union. It means much work and real effort to do this. But it is worth it to the entire labor movement.

CHICAGO FUR WORKERS' LOCAL 45 ASKS MEMBERS TO SUPPORT UNION AGAINST MILLSTEIN DISRUPTION

The Chicago Fur Workers' Union Local 45, thru its manager and financial secretary, Irving I. Israelson, has issued the following open letter to all members of the organization:

To All Members of Local 45.

During the past year and a half there has existed a turmoil thru our ranks which came to a culmination on September 26, 1926, by the membership electing practically a new staff of officers.

It was supposed to have been understood that all turmoil be ended, but as it looks today our battles have just begun and it is up to the membership of Local 45 to see that all those who are endeavoring to break up the union shall be removed from the organization. It is not a question of lefts and rights, but merely a question of the welfare of the membership.

Members Must Wake Up.

Those that endeavored to be elected as officers and did not succeed in the same sense take their defeat like men should take defeats.

Several of those that have lost out on the electing are endeavoring and will smash the union unless the membership wakes up and shows their solidarity to those officers that were legally and honestly elected.

A Club to Destroy Union.

Shortly after the election those that were defeated formed themselves a club known as the Furriers' Social and Civic Club. Had this been a club to better the conditions of the workers it would be perfectly legitimate, but this club was formed purely with the purpose of wrecking and destroying what the membership has built up after years of patient struggling and by the sweat of their blood.

The Way of Disruption.

A meeting of the membership was called for October 8, 1926, and everything was running along smoothly until Brother Millstein, and by the aid of the so-called Social Civic Club tried to throw in monkey wrenches. On the night of the election the principal candidates pledged themselves for amnesty towards everybody, and that question arose on the floor, and we found there was an opposition against it.

It is perfectly right for a member to oppose questions, but it is not his privilege to arise and go over with the determination to slug somebody. This is what happened at the meeting last night. Tactics like this will not strengthen our organization. On the contrary, it will only destroy our movement.

We Do Not Need Police.

In the history of our organization there has never been a time that officers of the law should be present at the meetings until my predecessor brought them to the meetings. The membership must wake up and realize that they must protect against actions as are being practiced by Brother Millstein who claims to have the interests of the organization at heart.

We must build up our ranks so that we may go forward with our movement which shall be for the benefit of our organization and not for a few who seek not to elevate our members but to destroy those that have the organization at heart.

Come to Friday's Meeting.

The office urges the membership to attend our next meeting which will be held this coming Friday night, October 15, 1926. At this meeting Brother Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board Furriers' Union, who is a representative of twelve thousand furriers, and who led the membership of New York to a successful and victorious victory for the 40-hour week, who has led the way for the rest of the labor organizations for a 40-hour week, will speak.

We will also have with us Brother O. Schachtman, our international president. The question of levying an assessment on the membership for the striking cloakmakers' of New York City, also for the aid of the Boston and Winnipeg fur workers will be taken up.

Work for the Union.

Once again I appeal to the members not to listen to rumors and not to pay any attention to the Furriers' Social and Civic Club, but to cooperate with the office on any matter that you believe is for the benefit of the organization.

I ask and urge the membership to assist us in carrying out our good work for the members. I again urge you to make it your business to attend our next meeting and all meetings called in the future. I assure the members that they will not be intimidated or threatened, or that any one will endeavor to break up a meeting so that police shall be necessary to assist.

Will Stop Destroyers.

The office will once and for all stop such cowardly tactics against the members for it is a protection for those people who seek only to destroy, and who only seek their own personal benefits.

With the expectation that all members will be present at our next meeting, I am

Fraternally yours,
Irving I. Israelson, Mgr.

JEWELERS OF NEW YORK IN UNION DRIVE

Whole Shops Join in Organizing Campaign

By SAUL WHITE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Over 500 jewelry workers crowded into the large Bryant Hall last Thursday, Oct. 7, applauded the speakers that urged them to come into the organization and filled applications immediately after.

It was the first big meeting of jewelry workers held in many years. The drive conducted by Local No. 1, International Jewelry Workers' Union, in the last few weeks has met a favorable response among the workers and revealed that the conditions of the jewelry workers since the last strike of 1920 have become intolerable and the men will not stand any longer for the abuse of the bosses.

Many large shops have joined in a body, others are joining in groups and the right wing leadership will rise to the occasion the drive will result in the re-establishment of union control in the jewelry shops, which was lost in the last strike.

The progressive jewelers who urged action continually are in the front line doing organizing work.

The campaign will assume a more militant aspect now, more mass meetings will be called and all the jewelers are urged to come in and help re-establish the union as a factor in the trade for the benefit of the jewelry workers and their families.

PENNSY PORTERS ASKED TO PICK COMPANY TOOLS

Benefit Association Voting Is Controlled

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. — An organized attempt to foist "company" officials upon the supposedly independent Pullman Porters' Benefit Association is in full swing at the Pennsylvania Terminal where primaries are in progress according to information received in the offices of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Altogether Unconstitution.

Although the constitution of the Association provides that only porters actually in service shall be eligible for office, the company is making a desperate effort to nominate a ticket composed entirely of welfare workers, instructors, and "company" men to guide the destinies of the benefit association.

Many porters have reported to the brotherhood that their pay checks were being withheld until they registered a vote in this farcical primary and that they were being instructed to vote for the company ticket.

Spread Lies.

At the same time the company is circulating propaganda to the effect that the brotherhood is anxious to get its hands on the funds of the Benefit Association and destroy it. Nothing could be further from the truth. The brotherhood wants to help the porters make a live organization out of the P. P. B. A. by taking it out of company control and separating it from the pernicious company union plan and putting it in the hands of the porters who support it and to whom it belongs. A bold attempt like this one to violate the laws and the spirit of the Association ought to be and will be opposed by members of the brotherhood and other porters as well.

The primaries closed on Thursday, October 7, and after the counting of the ballots it will be definitely known whether the scheme of the Pullman company has succeeded.

Pullman Porters Say Corporation Censored Chicago Newspapers

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—Waiting on the convention sidelines is A. Philip Randolph, general organizer of the new Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, which has enrolled over half of the Pullman employes as members. He cannot speak unless the Hotal and Restaurant Employes' Association, which claims jurisdiction over porters, waives its objections.

PRINTERS' UNION ASKS RUSSIANS BAN SCAB PAPER

Chicago Russian Paper Unfair to Union

A Russian language paper published in Chicago has had a conflict with its printers for some time and a strike has been declared against this paper, the Russky Vestnik Rasvriet.

The strikers have sent a message to the Russian All-Colonial Mutual Benefit Congress of America, in session at Philadelphia, and the Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, has also addressed the congress as follows:

"Greetings and best wishes in your work from the Chicago Typographical Union No. 16. We appeal to you representing the Russian people of the United States to help us win the strike against the Chicago Russky Vestnik Rasvriet.

"That paper is printed by scabs while union men are walking the streets. By forcing owners to recognize the union and demanding the union label on all printing, you will provide work and American standard of living to Russian printers in this country.

"Help save the good name of Russian workers as friends of organized labor."

Riot Guns Used on Upholstery Strikers

BOSTON, October 13.—(FP)—Riot guns were used by police to scatter 300 strikers picketing the Bay State Upholstering Company of Hyde Park.

The workers are out in a wage dispute.

FORD ISSUE IS CONFISCATED AT HAMILTON WORKS

General Manager Takes Papers From Boys

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAMILTON, O., Oct. 12.—On October 8, five boys took their places at the gates of the big Ford plant here for the purpose of selling the special Ford number of The DAILY WORKER to the men as they come out. The boys were armed with five hundred copies of the issue. As soon as the workers saw the paper they began buying them with great enthusiasm.

Takes Them Away.

Mr. A. O. Anderson, general manager of the Hamilton works, seeing the effect of the paper on the men, coaxed the boys into the plant and without another word, took all the papers from them. It is quite possible that legal proceedings will be instituted against the manager for this act.

In any case there was time enough to notice that the men were extremely interested in the exposure of the five-day week and that they are amenable to organization.

Two Los Angeles Building Workers Lose Lives in Day

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—Saverria Ramon, 26, a Mexican laborer, was buried alive under tons of earth in a ditch cave-in yesterday. Police rescue squads from Hollywood succeeded in bringing him back to life for 15 minutes, but he died from his injuries.

Another laborer at work on the ground floor of a building, under construction at Seventh and Flower, was decapitated when an elevator struck him last Saturday. The man was leaning over the edge of the elevator pit when the conveyance, which operates by a balance system, descended and struck him. Two detectives at once began an investigation to determine responsibility for the accident. The body was taken to the county morgue.

AIMEE APPEALS FOR SUPPORT TO KU KLUX KLAN

Radio Man's Paramour Blames the Pope

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12.—Appealing to the ku klux klan for support, Aimee Semple McPherson went to court today for the beginning of the third week of her unprecedented preliminary hearing. The evangelist, her mother, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sielaff of San Francisco are charged with conspiracy to produce false testimony.

Distributing printed cards to her congregation, which testify to the singers' unwavering faith in the integrity of the Angelus Temple pastor, Mrs. McPherson said: "How many of you are members of the klan? Take several hundred cards with you to the meetings and get signatures."

Charges Frame-Up.

Mention of the klan as a potential source of strength confirmed earlier indications that the evangelist centers her defense about a charge of a "religious frame-up." When Deputy District Attorney Joe Ryan and Capt. of Detectives Herman Cline discovered that Kenneth Ormiston, former radio man employed at Mrs. McPherson's Angelus Temple, had spent ten days in a Carmel hideaway cottage with a woman resembling the evangelist at a time when the pastor claimed she was kidnaped, Mrs. McPherson answered the charge by declaring Ryan and Cline were "catholics persecuting a protestant minister."

Miss Agnes Callahan.

Again, during the questioning of Miss Aznes Callahan, a prosecution witness who testified that she had seen a man, identified by her as Ormiston, enter a hotel room regularly rented by the evangelist, Defense Attorney Gilbert made an unsuccessful effort to introduce into the record the fact that Miss Callahan is a catholic.

Boston C. L. U. Plans Building of New Home for Unions

BOSTON, Oct 12.—(FP)— Boston's Central Labor Union is considering the erection of its own home.

American Federation of Labor organizer Frank H. McCarthy moved for the appointment of an investigating committee, which was approved.

McCarthy argued that the body had practically agreed before the war to build a Labor Temple and was then considering several possible sites. The organizer said that the outlook for organized labor is better now than it has been for years and the time seemed opportune for the Central Labor body to build.

John Van Vaerenewyck, president Massachusetts Federation of Labor, led a two-hour discussion of workmen's compensation. A joint conference of representatives from all central bodies in the state is planned for Boston to discuss what the unions shall demand before the special commission appointed by Governor Alvan Fuller to consider workmen's compensation legislation changes.

President William Green of the A. F. of L. and other union heads will be invited to speak before the commission for Massachusetts labor.

Washington Post Assays Role of Adviser to the Machinists of America

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Under the above title the Washington Post leads its editorial page with an appeal to the moral grades of the American Federation of Labor to refuse affiliation with the International Federation of Metal Workers.

It argues that American labor should beware of internationalists because any such connection would mean that American money would assist radical propaganda abroad and would lead to the introduction of socialism into American unions. If foreigners have not the nerve to get liberty for themselves which America affords to her workers, it declares, American workers have no interest in helping them. Still less, the editorial asserts, should American workers be expected to encourage foreign labor in its "heresies" whereby it fails to co-operate with the employing class abroad.

Prisoner Sends Dollar to Aid British Miner Strike Thru I. W. A.

The International Workers' Aid has received a contribution of one dollar to aid the British miners from a worker who is held prisoner in a Pennsylvania jail.

The following letter was received from the prisoner, Andy Gyrych: "International Workers' Aid,

"Gentlemen:

"Received your literature pertaining to the British Miners' Aid. Will say I have talked to some of the boys [illegible] and as things are [illegible]

A NEW NOVEL
By Upton Sinclair
(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

Paul paused, and waited so long that Bunny thought he wasn't going on. "Why, Paul?"

"Well, just outside that city, along the railroad track, there were fields—I guess there must have been ten or twenty acres, piled twenty feet high with stuff—guns and shells, railroad locomotives, rails and machinery, motor trucks—every kind of thing you could think of to help win a war. Some of it was in cases, and some without even a tarpaulin over it, just lying there in the rain and sinking slowly—some of the heavy stuff two feet down in the mud. There was a hundred million dollars of it, that had been put off the steamers, intended to be taken across to Russia; but then the revolution had come, and there it lay. One of our jobs was to guard it. At first, of course, we thought it belonged to the government; but then little by little we got the story. Originally the British government had bought it for the Tsar's government, and taken bonds for it. Later, when we came into the war, the firm of Morgan and Company took over the bonds from the British government, and these supplies were Morgan's collateral, and we had overthrown the Vladivostok government to protect it for him."

Again there was a pause. "Paul," said Bunny, anxiously, "do you really know that?"

Paul laughed, but without any happiness. "Know it?" he said. "Listen, son. They sent out an expedition, two hundred and eighty men to run the railroad—every kind of expert, traffic men, telegraphers, linemen, engineers. They all wore army uniforms, and the lowest man had the rank of second lieutenant; of course we thought they were part of the army, like the rest of us. But they got fancy pay, and by Gód, it wasn't army pay, it was checks on a Wall Street bank! I've seen dozens of those checks, it was a private expedition, sent to run the railroad for the bankers."

"But why, Paul?"

"I've told you—to break the strike. The biggest strike in all history—the Russian workers against the landords and the bankers; and we were to put the workers down, and the landlords and bankers up! Here and there were bunches of refugees, former officers of the Tsar's army, grand dukes and their mistresses, land-owners and their families; they would get together and call themselves a government, and it was our job to rush them supplies, and they would print paper money, and hire some adventurers and grab a bunch of peasants and 'conscript' them and that would be an army, and we'd move them on the railroad and they'd overthrow another Soviet government and slaughter a few more hundreds or thousands of workingmen. That's been my job for the past year and a half; do you wonder I'm sick?"

"Paul, did you have to kill people?" It was Ruth's voice of horror.

"No, I don't think I killed anybody. I was a carpenter, and my only fights were with the Japs, that were supposed to be our allies. You see, the Japs were there to grab the country, so they didn't want either the 'white' Russians or the 'red' ones to succeed. The first thing they did was to counterfeit the money of the 'white' government; they brought in billions of fake roubles and bought everything in sight—banks and hotels and stores and real estate—they made themselves the capitalists, and broke the 'white' government with their fake money. They resented our being there and the fact that we really tried to help the whites'; they butted in on our job, and there were times when we had to put up our troops and threatened to fire in five minutes if they didn't move out. They were always picking on our men; I was fired at three times in the dark—got one bullet through my hat and another through my shirt."

Ruth sat there with her hands clasped together and her face white. She could see those bullets going through Paul's clothing right now! And be sure that she was not unlearning any of her dislike for war?

"A lot of our fellows came to hate the Japs," said Paul; "but I didn't. I got a philosophy out of this—the only thing I did get. The ruling classes in Japan were grabbing half a continent; but all the poor soldiers were grabbing was pay even poorer than mine. They didn't know what they were there for—they, also, had been kidnapped. There were some that had been to America, and I got to talk with them, and we never had any trouble in agreeing. That was true of Czecho-Slovaks, and Germans—every nation I met. I tell you, Bunny, if the private soldiers could have talked it over, there wouldn't have been any war. But that is what is known as treason, and if you try it you're shot."

Romany Marie—American Imperialism's Hetaira

The visit of Queen Marie of Roumania to the United States accompanied by lyrical blurbs in the capitalist press (she has been giving advice on how to be beautiful to charmless women thru the columns of the Hearst press as one of the syndicated writers) is reminiscent of the arrival of captured queens in ancient Rome with the difference that this pampered hetaira of American imperialism instead of being chained to a chariot is given the royal suite on an American government liner.

Different time, different methods.

But there is nothing figurative about the chains which bind the Roumainan workers and peasants to American (and French) capital and the Roumanian rulers. With the possible exception of Bulgaria, the lot of the Roumanian masses is the worst in Europe.

So horrible are the conditions inflicted upon Roumanian workers and peasants that the French unitarian trade union federation, representing one-half the organized workers of that country, has sent the following protest to the Roumanian ambassador in Paris:

"We ask you to inform your government that the working class of France in solidarity with the persecuted Roumanian workers and peasants, cannot tolerate that in Roumania the system of political provocation and terror is applied by the government of Avarescu.

"The Confederation Generale Travailler Unitaire appeals to all organizations which count themselves on the side of the working class or stand for democracy, to raise their voices against the shameful actions of the government in Roumania.

"If the present protest should not be sufficient, we will organize against the government you represent and manifestations which prove necessary, manifestations of which you will hear more than the echo."

The close relations which the French government maintains with the Roumanian regime make this protest of French trade unionists all the more significant.

The American Federation of Labor convention now in session in Detroit can do a real service to the working class of Roumania and make a strong gestrure of real international solidarity if it will authorize an emphatic protest against the official welcome extended to this royal parasite whose garments are dyed with the blood of hundreds of murdered workers and peasants.

If the American labor movement were still actuated by the anti-royalist spirit of the revolutionary colonists, Queen Marie, the gory bitch of a royal family which bathes in the blood of the toiling masses, would be allowed to land only if she swam ashore.

Pax Vobiscum—Requiescat in Pace

American Federation of Labor officials went back to the churches, the ministers defended them against the charge of un-Americanism hurled by the open shop papers of Detroit, Major George L. Berry, head of the Printing Pressmen's Union, proved that it was not necessary to engage in a rough struggle with employers, that it was necessary to be much rougher with workers, pressmen, for instance, who went on strike and thus discredited their live-and-let-live officials, President Green got off some platitudes about the brotherhood of man and everybody in and near the official A. F. of L. family is happy at the gentlemanly ending of what looked for a moment like a real break between the labor leaders and gospel sharks.

But the extremely class conscious organs of the Detroit capitalists will have none of this. They are not fooled by the protestations of the labor officials because they know that officials cannot always control workers organized in trade unions and they know further that in proportion as the officials become more like the bosses the difficulty of their controlling the rank and file grows.

The open shoppers would have no objection whatever to unions made up of Major Berrys and William Greens. But unions have to have members as well as officials and these members, especially in these days of Communists and left wings, quite often get out of hand.

The open shoppers have seen in Passaic an A. F. of L. union compelled to take over a strike which it first ignored and then denounced and they have lost a little confidence in the ability of respectable labor leaders to keep the brakes on permanently.

So we have the spectacle of certain middle class elements making up to conservative labor leaders while the really class conscious capitalist elements keep up their attack with the expectation, fully justified by developments, that the A. F. of L. officialdom will make further concessions in order to keep the peace.

The protestations of patriotism, the solemn oaths of fealty to worker-employer cooperation, the determined clinging to craft lines in the anto organization resolution, the declaration for a "progressive shortening" of the work-day instead of a demand for a five-day week—all of these are concessions to the capitalists.

They indicate that the last thing A. F. of L. officialdom intends to do is to call upon the American working class to struggle for organization, higher wages and a reduction of hours.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

IN trying to break the vicious circle with which the labor officialdom is co-operation with the capitalists are strangling the labor movement, included in this circle being the loyalty to the parties of American capitalism, we must bear in mind that American capitalism is not the capitalism of the period which saw the formation of the labor movement and the early militant struggles of the American workers.

MILITANT struggle practically ceased with the close of the war period. The great struggles of the Western Federation of Miners, of the American Railway Union, of the United Mine Workers in its effort to establish the union, the still earlier struggles of the steel workers and railwaymen, represented the revolt of the workers against the new conditions which concentration of capital and centralization of industry had made them face.

THE steel workers' strike in 1919-20, the coal miners' strike in 1919, the railway shopmen's strike in 1922, can be considered as the last mass struggles of the American workers before the imperialists and imperialist labor leaders brought the official labor movement, in policy and tactics, in line with the new period—the period of American imperialist supremacy.

The development of American capitalism has been so rapid that many of the epochs, which in Great Britain for instance, lasted a decade or more, appear here simply as passing and temporary phases whose significance escapes all but the closest observation.

FROM 1846, beginning with the repeal of the Corn Laws and the establishment of a free trade policy, Great Britain until after the Franco-Prussian war and the foundation of the German steel industry based on the captured coal and iron of Alsace-Lorraine, had a monopoly position in the world markets. Two decades are included in this period, but it is only since 1915 that America can be said to have established a superior position in regards to industry and finance.

WRITING to Marx, Engels describes the labor movement of Britain in that period in these words:

Everywhere the proletariat is the ragtag and bobtail of the official parties, and if a party has been strengthened there, the new electorate, it is the Tory Party . . . . .

But nevertheless it remains a terrible example of the low morale of the British proletariat. The priesthood has given evidence of unexpected power, and so has bribetowing to social respectability. But a single labor candidate has a ghost of a chance, but Myford Tomsend or some perverse snob carried off the votes of the workers with the greatest ease.

With some slight modifications the above description can be applied to the American labor movement of today even to the undoubted strengthening of the republican party by woman suffrage amendment, the "unexpected power" of the priesthood (the recent Eucharist Congress and the attitude of the churches in Detroit), "the bribetowing to respectability," a notorious vice of the American labor movement, etc.

IT is easy to fall into an error, however, when making such comparisons and an error can be made from two directions:

First, from attaching too much importance to the militant wage and organization struggles of the American workers which took place in the pre-imperialist epoch and thereby believing that all that is necessary to revive the labor movement is to concentrate upon the obvious needs of the moment such as extension of trade union organization, higher wages, shortening of the work-day, etc.

These measures alone will not give the American labor movement the character it must have in this imperialist epoch.

THE second error can be made by attaching too much importance to the abolute influence of an imperialist environment on the American working class, by carrying the analogy with the British movement in the rising capitalist period too far.

The Great Britain of which we speak existed in a capitalist world which was fairly stable, in a world where capitalism was still on the upgrade America capitalism exists in a world where capitalism has reached its zenith and which is being torn asunder by irreconcilable conflicts between groups of imperialist nations and by the similar conflicts between capitalist class and working class, a world in which capitalism is challenged by the existence of the Soviet union.

NEVERTHELESS the history of the British labor movement contains many valuable comparisons and lessons for American revolutionists because we can see, the of an immensely lower growth, the process by which the British labor movement developed into the powerful and unparalleled, and reactionary, force (I speak now of the movement itself and not of the leaders) which it became.

By the late eighties the competition of Germany (and to some extent of the United States) was being felt by Britain in the world markets. She no longer enjoyed a monopoly position. In 1889, Engels writing to Sorge describes the change that could be noticed in the British labor movement:

The movement is at last in motion and as I think for good, but it is not overnight socialist . . . . .

Formally the movement is a trade union movement, but totally different from the old trade unions, the skilled laborers, the labor aristocracy.

People proceed quite differently now, they bring much bigger masses into the struggle, they bring forward more sweeping demands; the right-hour day, general federation of all organizations, complete solidarity . . . . . Moreover, the people themselves look upon their present demands in the light of provisional demands, altho they do not as yet know for what ultimate aim they are working . . . . . Like everyone else they must learn by their own experiences and from the consequences of their own mistakes. But this will not take very long as they, contrary to the old trade unions, deride any illusion to the common interests of capital and labor.

IT will be seen that in 1889 large sections of the British working class, under the influence of the competitive struggle which the ruling class was engaged in and which already threatened its world supremacy, had advanced farther than the American working class has in 1926, but had taken about forty years to do this.

But here again we must keep in mind the difference in the world situation and the immensely more rapid tempo of the class and imperialist conflicts today.

The favorable position of American capitalism will not last as long as that of British capitalism did, and already we see the beginning of a new competition for world markets in the rise of European industrial trusts which, ironically enough but serving to show the conflict between industrialists and financiers, are backed by Wall Street.

There is in addition the ever-increasing burden of militarism which presses, even in the absence of the ever-present danger of world war.

the delegates felt that here was a subject upon which they could express their real feelings. Altho the talk by Hayes did not put the Labor Party issue squarely before the convention, nevertheless it got a warm reception as compared to the cold shoulder accorded to Delegate John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, who announced, "We've made up our minds in Illinois to give the A. F. of L. non-partisan political program a tryout. We're going to give it a good tryout."

Evidently most of the delegates felt that the A. F. of L. program had been given an excellent tryout in Illinois where the candidacy of Sammy Insull's hired man, Frank L. Smith, who got the republican nomination for United States senator, had been endorsed by the state federation with Walker at its head. No doubt the delegates had to hold their noses with their hands, while Walker was talking, rather than use their hands in applauding his remarks.

Walker Talks.

Walker started out by telling of the fight for the primary in Illinois, where it has been declared unconstitutional. Walker declared that 90 per cent of the people in Illinois are for the primary, and if the primary law is declared unconstitutional, he declared the next legislature will pass a new primary law.

"Like the previous speaker I have been afflicted with practically everything that has appeared under the name of independent political action," he said, then making this concession, to those who he

Cursory Remarks

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE resourcefulness of Chicago's bootleggers has been written with lead on the anatomies of more people than would fill a goodly graveyard. But never did they display their ingenuity to better advantage than in the selection of the scene of the latest killing, when two bootleggers fell to rise no more before a hail of machine gun bullets that severely wounded three others.

* * *

IN the struggle for control of Chicago's boosiest pickings, a Cicero gang, angry because their north side competitors were moving in on their territory, hired a machine gun nest right opposite a cathedral and right next to a florist shop. The papers do not say that there was an undertaking shop in the vicinity. This oversight, if such it was, should be blamed on the morticians rather than on the bootleggers. I cannot think of a better location for a live funeral parlor than the immediate vicinity of a battlefield.

* * *

IF this is not civilized warfare we would like to know what it is. The church was handy, and so were the flowers. There was one little flaw in the arrangements, however, and a department of justice agent was mighty wroth over it. The gangsters double-crossed the agents. Instead of committing the murder where they had promised, and where the detectives were waiting with photographers and press statements, the gangsters pulled off the deed in another part of the city, leaving the D. O. J. men with nothing except a rusty alibi.

FRAZIER JELKE, a big oleomargarine man, purchased the Vanderbilt box at the Metropolitan opera house in New York. It cost the big grease man $165,000, but what is that in a rich country like this?. From shirt sleeves to Palm Beach, this is the path of American democracy. The average dumbbell will say that the big butter substitute man is worth every nickle he has. Nevertheless, it is not pleasant to think that a triple-paunched plute can afford to pay so much money to hear a triple-chinned star sing, while thousands of workers haven't the price of a movie.

IF I were the Queen of Roumania I would soft pedal on the publicity. One of these days she may realize that there are still a few people left in the United States who have not adopted monarchism in lieu of republicanism. A few years ago, during a strike of cooks and stewards on the White Star line, a precocious publicity agent thought it would be good to have the word go around that dukes, lords, barons, duchesses and scores of "ladies" were scabbing on the strikers. It was good news, in fact so effective was the publicity that a small army of union men and women met the ship at the pier with appropriate signs and placards calling attention to the aristocratic scabs. The latter had to stay on board ship during the night. Let us hope that Marie will not be meted out to the handsome queen.

HOWEVER, we are not losing any sleep over the possibilities. Once upon a time the students of Trinity College, Dublin, got bolsterous and decided to murder a few professors. Much to the delight of everybody except the professors, the students proceeded with their charges to the place of punishment. A student gazing thru a window saw his pet aversion being led like a sheep to the slaughter. "Don't hang him to the lamppost," he shouted. And that's that what was done, except that the professor was down before he had a decent chance to die.

GREAT progress in commercial aviation is noted in the Soviet Union by capitalist reporters. A network of air lines radiating from Moscow connects the capital with every part of Europe and Asia. This does not look as if the workers could not make a go of the job of running one-sixth of the earth. Ten years from now the dynamic energy turned loose by the Russian revolution will be the surprise of modern times. What has been accomplished to date, despite tremendous obstacles, has forced the capitalist powers to give up their ambition to crush the workers' government.

A MAKE-BELIEVE investigation of K. K. K. activities has started in Indiana. What can you expect from an investigation where the parties involved in the charges do the investigating? A former Klux official declares that 90 per cent of Hoosier officials were members of the hooded order. Also 90 per cent of eligible business men. This means business men who were not catholics, Negroes or Jews. It is not an easy task to reason with people that are so befuddled that they wonder who is going to play in the ball game.

PUT POLICE BRUTALITY TO WALKER

N. Y. Labor Rallies to Garment Strikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 13.—Representatives of 500,000 New York trades unionists and thousands of workers in the needle trades and others sympathetic to the 40,000 striking cloakmakers will march to the City Hall at 1 p. m. Saturday to protest to Mayor Walker wholesale arrests of cloak pickets and "other police brutalities," the emergency labor conference formed last Friday announced yesterday.

The demonstration has been arranged because appeals to Police Commissioner McLaughlin and other police heads have proved fruitless.

Thank A. F. of L. For Support.

The emergency labor conference, which has established headquarters at 130 East 25th Street, yesterday telegraphed President William Green of the American Federation of Labor its gratitude over the federation's decision at the Detroit convention to give prompt financial aid to the striking cloakmakers and help them combat the injunction issued against them. For the 500,000 union men of Greater New York, the emergency conference promised to carry out immediately the A. F. of L. call for financial support.

John Sullivan, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, who wired his support against the injunction, was invited telegraphically to accept the post of honorary chairman of the emergency labor conference to which he had been unanimously elected at a conference last Friday night at 3 West 16th street at which 133 labor union officials were present.

Capmakers Lead Way.

Among the first labor organizations to respond to the emergency appeal for funds and to fight the injunction is the Joint Council of the Capmakers' Union, representing seven locals. It has called a mass meeting for Thursday, at 6 p. m. at Beethoven Hall, 210 East Fifth street, of its entire membership.

Magistrate Corrigan, in Jefferson Market court, discharged scores of cloak strikers charged with picketing. In a few cases he suspended sentence or fined the defendants $1 each, in contrast to fines paid by the union of several hundred dollars a day last week, the total fines paid yesterday reached $44. About 100 men and women were acquitted before Corrigan, a number of cases having been postponed from last week.

Wire Convention.

The telegram sent to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor yesterday, read:

"The emergency labor conference to help the striking cloakmakers and combat injunctions held on October 3 with 183 delegates representing 500,000 organized workers of the city of New York was greatly encouraged and enthused by the resolution adopted by American Federation of Labor convention pledging full support to striking cloakmakers and calling upon labor organizations to extend them moral and financial assistance.

"The conference unanimously decided to extend heartfelt fraternal greetings to officers and delegates of the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled, and pledged the organizations represented in this conference to respond wholeheartedly to the appeal of the Federation.

"The conference also decided to bring to the attention of the convention drastic injunctions sought against workers of the I. R. T. of New York which would prevent organizing of workers aiming to bring them into the fold of locals of the A. F. of L.

"Kindly convey greetings and thanks of conference to the 44th annual convention of American Federation of Labor.—(Signed) M. Feinstone, chairman; J. M. Budish, secretary."

Surprise Move Takes Counsel Unawares

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 13. — D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana klan and the pivot of the current graft scandal, went before the Marion county grand jury today in a surprise move by Prosecuter Remy which took the breath away from counsel for Stephenson.

The court order directing that the former klan leader be brought before the grand jury, set tomorrow afternoon as the time of his appearance.

At 3 e. m. today, however, Stephenson was taken out of the state penitentiary at Michigan City where he is serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer.

Heavy Guard.

Accompanied by eight guards, who travelled in two automobiles, he was rushed here and taken into the county jail by the back door. This morning he was led thru a tunnel to the county building and placed in an anteroom outside the grand jury room, where he was guarded by 12 policemen.

Stephenson was before the grand jury for one hour and a quarter and then was taken back to the county jail.

A. F. OF L. PROPOSES TO OUT-DO COMPANY UNIONS IN EFFICIENCY BY CLASS COLLABORATION PLANS

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 13.—Forced into a realization of the startling fact that two million workers are today organized into the so-called company unions under the American plan or "open shop" plan the delegates to the American Federation of Labor here today took action to combat this threat to the trade union movement.

Instead of instituting drastic measures, however, to build up the labor unions as class organizations of the workers, to combat the capitalist employers, the convention resolution unanimously adopted pleaded for greater class-collaboration with the exploiter with the expectation that the substitution of the trade unions for the company unions will "be of service not only to the American workers but to the American industry in all branches and to the American public in general."

Woll Brings Subject Up.

The question of company unions came before the convention in the report of the executive and in several resolutions, one of which was brot in by the delegation of the photo-engravers' union, headed by Matthew Woll, secretary of the resolutions committee reporting this subject to the convention.

"Company unions are a menace to the trade union movement and to American industry which must be met and overcome," declared the committee report.

"The employer-controlled unions are compulsory. Compulsory co-operation is a contradiction in terms. To deny the right to voluntary organization is to deny the right to organize.

"Close co-operation the Answer."

"It is to the interest of both management and workers that union-management co-operation should be established. It is the answer to company unions.

"Your committee believes that the time is ripe for American labor to work progressively for the substitution of union-management co-operation for company unions, to substitute voluntary democratic organizations of trade unions for employer-controlled company unions or the shop representative plan.

Will Require Effort.

"To accomplish this will require continued effort over a period of time, and our method of approach must be based upon careful and scientific study of the situation supported by an aggressive, concentrated and well-directed campaign."

Delegate Frey, moulders, led off the attack against the company unions by declaring that one of the policies of the American plan was to employ as few American citizens as possible.

Frey Feels Insurance Loss.

He than told of the company union in the plant of the General Motors corporation at Flint, Michigan, where $15.60 was taken annually from the workers for insurance features, with $7.50 for welfare program activities, claiming that $1,755,000 was taken in all from the workers of this plant thru enforced dues, or what he called the company's check-off system.

"That is not bad financeering," he commented, "at the same time the General Motors corporation has doubled its output per man during the last six years."

Delegate Furuseth, seamen, told of the conditions imposed by the Shipcarriers' association on the Great Lakes, where a skilled seaman has become a curiosity, he said, and where immigration laws are violated at will.

Half Railways Use Company Unions.

Secretary Woll, for the committee, launched into an attack on the company unions, pointing out that half

SOVIET UNION OCCUPIES FLOOR OF AMERICAN FEDERATION MEET; LEWIS ATTACKS THE LEFT WING

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 13. —Lashing themselves into an unreasoning fit of frenzied fury when the resolution calling for American recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics came before the convention here, the administration leaders in the American Federation of Labor utilized the opportunity to direct a triple attack against the left wing in the American labor movement.

Soviet recognition was rejected, the idea of sending a trade union delegation to the Soviet Union was repudiated, while a bitter attack was directed against the opposition to the Lewis regime that has developed in the United Mine Workers of America, in the final assault the questions of soviet recognition and the delegation were almost lost sight of in the attempted rally in support of the Lewis administration in the miners' union.

Lewis Attacks Foster.

President John L. Lewis of the miners, himself a member of the resolutions committee that was reporting, in the midst of an hysterical argument launched into a tirade against the delegates, calling their attention to the fact that William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, had been sitting in the balcony all morning.

With dramatic gestures and utilizing the mob-inspiring oratory in which he is an adept, Lewis began pointing to the spot in the balcony where he had last seen Foster, with the delegates turning en masse to look in the same direction. But the effort failed to rather stampede anticlimax. It developed that Foster had moved to the floor of the convention hall for the afternoon session, with the result that Lewis couldn't identify him in time to make his harangue effective.

Strong Battery Against Left Wing.

Perhaps the strongest battery of speakers in the convention was mustered in defense of the administration policies against the left wing. In addition to Lewis, there were John P. Frey, moulders, and James Wilson, pattern makers, both members of the committee on the executive council's report, in addition to the closing speech by President Green.

Delegate Tim Healy, stationary firemen, and Max Hayes, Typographical Union, both spoke in favor of soviet recognition and for the sending of a trade union delegation to Soviet Russia. Their arguments were greeted with cat-calls and jeers.

But when the time for voting arrived, with administration forces demanding a standing vote, all opposition had been terrorized into silence and the committee report carried unanimously, not even one delegate announcing that he abstained from voting.

The resolutions demanding soviet recognition were introduced by the delegation of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' Union.

The Gospel According to Matthew.

Secretary Woll, reporting for the resolutions committee, offered a lengthy 500-word statement starting out with the recommendation that the American Federation of Labor refuse to change its position on the question of soviet recognition.

It was declared that the federation was not interested in the commercial aspects of the question, agreeing fully, however, with President Coolidge on this question.

"No Compromise."

The committee announced that between the Workers' and Peasants' Government of the Union of Soviet Republics and the American form of government there can be no compromise of any kind, declaring, "We repeat the call to American trade unionists to stand true to their faith, to be militant in their defense of the principles of freedom and justice for which our movement stands and upon which our democracy rests its foundation walls."

The report then takes up the question of the trade union delegation to Soviet Russia as follows:

Delegation "Unnecessary."

"Finally, we call attention to the recent declaration of our executive council, in which it was well said that our movement not only cannot join in any mission to investigate conditions in Russia, but deems any such mission wholly unnecessary. We desire to record our approval of that declaration and to add in this report the conviction that no trade unionist should go

Now We Are Moving Forward in Spirit of Victory to Keep the Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

The party and the sympathizers with its cause have at last awakened to the danger in which The DAILY WORKER finds itself and are going to work to raise the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund, which will end this danger.

The contributions to the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund are reaching The DAILY WORKER office in increasing volume. To date the fund stands as follows:

|---|---|
| Received to October 9 | $5,838.93 |
| Received October 11 (Monday) | 566.21 |
| Received October 12 (Tuesday) | 1,528.40 |
| | $8,833.54 |

The contributions Monday and Tuesday are nearly 60% as great as for the whole four weeks' period prior to those days during which the Keep The DAILY WORKER campaign has been under way.

If this spirit of work is kept up, if the volume of contributions continues to increase as it has during the last five days, The DAILY WORKER will triumph over the difficulties which it is facing.

Even now, however, only a small part of the party membership is behind the Keep The DAILY WORKER drive. The returns so far indicate that only 25% of the party is working to Keep The DAILY WORKER.

The task before the party is to mobilize the whole party organization. A 100% drive by the party organization with every party member aiding to collect the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund will bring the funds needed immediately, to meet The DAILY WORKER and raise the total $50,000 KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

Such a campaign will place The DAILY WORKER in a position to continue its fight for the revolutionary movement in the country.

The A. F. of L. convention has just been discussing the work of the Communists in the labor movement. The reactionary labor leader attack the Communists because everything that is hopeful in the American labor movement, everything that is a drive forward in the workers' interests is the work of the Communists. The activity of the Communists is a thorn in the side of the bureaucrats. They rather continue to sleep and enjoy their fat jobs than fight for the workers.

The DAILY WORKER is the heart of the forward movement among the workers. It is the voice of this movement. We must keep it for this fight. We must build it stronger.

We can do that by keeping up and extending the support which is now developing for the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund.

The next mark in the $10,000 mark which must be reached by Monday, October 18, in order to Keep The DAILY WORKER.

Concentrate on the work of securing the contributions which will put the Keep The DAILY WORKER Fund at $10,000 next Monday. Mobilize every resource to make the collections necessary. Rush in the remittances.

Make the spirit of victory in the campaign to Keep The DAILY WORKER grow.

WE CAN WIN THIS FIGHT AND KEEP THE DAILY WORKER

EAT RECORD IN SHIPPING "BLACK" COAL

U. S. Strike-Breaking Leads the World

By GORDON CASCADEN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 11.—All previous monthly records for shipment of soft coal th break the British general strike were passed by September loadings.

With one day less in which to load, last month's total tonnage of coal shipped to the British Isles and other "overseas" markets exceeded August, a record month.

Last month also marked the assumption of two additional ports into the coal-exporting trade, Philadelphia and Charleston, joining Hampton Roads and this port.

But the shipments from Philadelphia and Charleston were small indeed when comparison is made with the two large coal-shipping ports.

Supply Previous British Market.

Coal was exported from Philadelphia to all parts of the world. Coal-laden vessels sailed for the Canary Islands, Azores, Cuba, Porto Rico, Argentine, Brazil, West Africa, France. Italy and the British Isles. The latter tonnage however, was not large, ships carrying part cargoes of coal.

The British steamer Trevose, which sailed from Charleston for Buenos Aires, Argentine, on Sept. 9, was the first vessel to leave that South Carolina port with a full cargo of coal. The total Charleston tonnage during September reached around 100,000 tons, and part of it went to Cuba and South America. Dredging at the Southern Railway company's coal pier to a depth of 30 feet helped September coal export.

800,000 Tons a Week.

But more than 800,000 tons of bituminous coal are leaving the United States weekly for places hitherto supplied by British mines.

Hampton Roads, with its twin ports of Norfolk and Newport News, which ships most of this coal, did not beat its monthly record of August, altho September passed the total for the first thirty days of the previous month.

Hampton Roads' September Record.

September coal dumpings for all the Hampton Roads piers totalled 3,710,-992 tons, as against 3,762,851 tons for August.

Like the previous month, the Norfolk & Western railroad led in dumping records, piling up 1,107,815 tons. The Chesapeake & Ohio total reached 906,876 tons while the Virginian Railway dumped 494,301 tons. The Norfolk & Western's record was the greatest in the history of any railroad dumping coal for export. This railroad has bettered the million mark for three months in a row.

Baltimore Shipments.

Baltimore coal shipments for September exceeded those for any previous month in this port's long history. Incomplete returns for the month put the total at approximately 900,000 tons.

Preliminary figures show aggregate export coal loadings of 763,466 tons, carried in 135 vessels, August exports, which established a record, reached 763,629 tons, carried on 117 vessels.

782,466 Tons to British Isles.

Ninety-eight vessels transported 626,909 of the 782,466 tons, to ports in the British Isles, smaller amounts going to Italy, Spain, Egypt, Argentine, France, and Porto Rico.

The first nine months of 1926 place Baltimore's total overseas' coal exports at 9,537,374 tons, as compared with 357,827 tons for the same period last year and 390,887 tons for the whole of 1925.

U. S. Leading Scabbery.

The United States has the unenviable record of supplying nearly half the total amount of soft coal imported into the British Isles during the coal strike. Figures compiled by the Minerals Section, United States Department of Commerce, show that 2,500,000 out of 5,000,000 tons of soft coal imported by Britain from the beginning of the strike nofil the end of August came from this country.

Before the strike very, very little soft coal was shipped from the United States to British ports. During August, Great Britain imported 1,510,741 tons of bituminous coal from this country, a slight increase over the total for July.

mit himself to participate in any such adventure. Ample information is at hand and is constantly available concerning every particular which enters into our calculations in arriving at a decision on our course of action."

The debate that ensued was not without its comical features. In his committee Green was forced to press the delegates to fear and trembling by reading a report, evidently taken from the New York Times, of the second anniversary memorial of the death of Lenin, held in New York City. He read of speeches made by Charles Krumbein and William W. Weinstone, in which these speakers urged a soviet government for the United States.

Oh, William! How Shocking!

Green commented: "Those speakers showed they understood their instructions from the Red International." In A. F. of L. conventions the term "Red International" is used interchangeably by them for the Red International of Labor Unions and the Communist International.

Then Green continued reading the report stating that "the audience rose as Ben Gitlow entered the hall" and later told of Communist work in the unions, which Green of course considers very reprehensible.

Pulls an Anti-Climax.

He read on, in the effort that M. J. Olgin had spoken in Russian, and then with face flushing deep crimson, Green read in a loud and strident voice the closing paragraph of the report to the effect that the speakers had stated the the time would come when "the Red Flag would be the national emblem and the White House would be painted red."

Green had very evidently expected a wave of horror and outraged patriotism to sweep the convention. Instead the delegates had a hearty good laugh at Green's extreme seriousness, and his very miserable attempt at red-baiting. He should take lessons from Lewis.

Green failed again quite lamentably on another occasion when he tried to heckle Tim Healy, after the head of the auctioneary firemen had finished his talk. Healy is one of those mentioned as a member of the proposed unofficial labor delegation to the Soviet Union.

Irishman Won't Be Stuffed.

"If this resolution is adopted will you, Brother Healy, still persist in being a member of the proposed delegation to Russia?" asked Green.

"You're speaking information, Mr. President," replied Healy, with an Irish smile, but fearing that the delegates might misinterpret this indirect reply, Healy arose to his feet and as a member of the American Federation of Labor, I intend to go where I please, when I please and to what country I please."

"As a delegation claiming to represent the American Federation of Labor?" queried Green.

"Just so long as it doesn't go as a delegation claiming to represent the American Federation of Labor," replied Healy.

Green Feels Fist on Inquisition.

"As you or no answer would satisfy me much better," declared Green, unable to get the kind of answer he wanted.

"We'll come to that later," declared Healy, and Green had very evidently gotten the worst of it.

Delegate Thomas Sweeney, of the Journeyman Tailors' Union, who was one of the signers of the Soviet Russia Recognition Resolution at the Portland Convention, three years ago, stated that he opposed recognition now on account of the activities of the Communists in the country in the trade unions.

Heyes Defends Eddy.

Delegate Hayes came next, opening with a defense of Dr. Sherwood Eddy, whom he claimed "was a friend, is a friend and will remain a friend of the trade union movement." He said that Eddy had not espoused the cause of the Communist revolution.

"Dr. Eddy only said what dozens of others had stated they seen in Soviet Russia, and what they had reported when they returned to this country," said Hayes.

A. F. of L. Free Speech the Bunk.

"This is an Eddy tempest in a teapot," he continued. "I am certainly sorry that at least a synopsis of Eddy's talk was not published in the proceedings. We talk of conducting a free forum here in the conventions of the American Federation of Labor. We are indignant at President Green not being allowed to make his speech at the Y. M. C. A. Yet it is the same kind of treatment that Green got from the Y. M. C. A. that we are trying to deal out to Dr. Eddy."

Evidently President Green didn't like the way Delegate Hayes was getting by with his speech. He tried one of the methods used by the late Gompers, by pounding the table with his gavel, stopping the speaker and asking him, "Are you for or against the committee's report?"

Gentlemen Don't Hurt.

"I'm coming to that, too," declared Hayes. "I'm not a Communist. I have never been a Communist. I don't know whether I'll ever be one or not," and the delegates laughed.

Hayes then claimed he had also been attacked and criticized by Communists. He claimed it didn't hurt him.

"I take the same view as the British delegates," said Hayes. "The Communists are not such a bad lot at heart. Just let them have their say their steam and then they'll buckle down to work.

"I am not in favor of the world revolution," continued Hayes, "I am not in favor of the soviet form of government."

Where Was Federation During Czardom.

Then he denounced the fascist tyrannies in Spain, Italy and other countries, asking the committee why it had not prepared resolutions attacking these governments.

"If we and not in favor of relations with the Soviet Union," he said, "then we ought to be in favor of assailing our relations with all these other countries. Why not apply the same principle to all. No one in any American Federation of Labor convention ever got up to demand the recall of the American ambassador to Russia under the czardom.

For a Delegation.

"Let us approach this question open minded. Let us send a commission to Russia to investigate and make a report on what they find there. We owe this duty to ourselves and the world at large.

"The time is here," he concluded, "or ought to be here, when we ought to designate some one to go to Europe to investigate conditions to see how much Russia is progressing."

They Knew It All.

Delegate Frey got the floor and claimed there was nothing about Russia that the A. F. of L. leaders did not already know. He declared that the purpose of the Russian Communist Party was to bring about, thru a world revolution, the same kind of a Soviet government the world over. He stated that, "The experiences we have had with the Communists in this country ought to be enough. We don't need to know more than we know now," and Frey had stated as the most earnest student in the A. F. of L.

Delegate John M. Walker, of the Illinois Federation of Labor, entered into a long explanation of his part in getting permission for Dr. Eddy to address the convention. He supported Green's explanation of this affair.

Walker Lies to Us.

Walker then denounced The DAILY WORKER, from first issue to last, claiming it never had a friendly word for the officials of the labor movement.

It was here that Delegate Healy got the floor, declaring: "I can't understand the attitude of the A. F. of L. toward Soviet."

He cited the visits of labor delegations from other countries to Russia and said: "The A. F. of L. should take the same action in that line. I am not an advocate of the Soviet form of government, but I have signed resolutions demanding the recognition of Soviet Russia."

Got Truth from British.

Healey then told of his visit as fraternal delegate of the A. F. of L. to the British Trade Union Congress and getting his first real information about conditions in Russia from British labor spokesmen, especially from James O'Grady, who spent some time in Russia as chairman of a British mission there. After narrating some of the difficulties facing the Russian workers, he said:

"That country is coming along without assistance from any body. If we entered into trade relations with Russia, we could have big trade with Russia."

Cafeteria Workers of N. Y. Being Organized; Mass Meeting Tuesday

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The cafeteria industry is gradually conquering for itself a prominent place among the large and important industries of the country, yielding one of the largest interests on capital invested.

The bosses are rapidly growing rich and arrogant. Meanwhile the workers must toil for 13 hours a day under the most inhuman conditions, and in most cases seven days a week or at the most one and a half days a week, receiving some of the lowest wages paid to any unorganized workers.

During the winter months a large and extensive membership drive will be conducted, beginning with a monster mass meeting to take place on Tuesday, October 19, at 8 p. m. at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth street. A large number of members are expected to join the union at this meeting.

INJUNCTION HITS HARTFORD STRIKE OF UPHOLSTERERS

Capitalist Courts Ready, Tool as Usual

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 10 (By Mail)—Although Sunday is considered a day of peace and rest it did not stop the Dworkin concern from working overtime and bringing an injunction against the workers on strike. Just before the noon meeting of the strikers Sunday, October 10, 1926, an injunction was served on Morris Wolberg, president of the upholsterers' union.

Judge Marvin has signed this temporary injunction on the following charges:

That the employes are not dissatisfied with the conditions.

None of them belong to the union nor have any desire to join one.

Always a "Conspiracy."

That the conduct of the defendants result from an unlawful conspiracy seeking to prevent the present employes of the plaintiff from working there.

The temporary injunction restrains Local No. 35 or their associates from inducing or attempting to induce any person now employed to leave his employment, from congregating or loitering upon or in the neighborhood of the plaintiff's business or upon or in the neighborhood of the homes of the employes of the plaintiff.

Workers Cursed At and Beaten.

This ridiculous charge against the union, which conducted itself in a very orderly manner, was refuted by the strikers. This shows the weakness of the bosses and the pressure from the furniture dealers for goods that the company cannot supply. The claim that the workers in the Dworkin shop did not desire a union, and that they were perfectly satisfied with their conditions was shown up when about fifteen workers of the same shop who are on strike and were present at the meeting testified that this is a lie.

The workers showed up the rotten conditions that they have to work under, the nomanitary conditions. They said that they were treated like slaves, that were cursed, and sometimes beaten by the bosses. All these things forced them to go out and fight for better conditions and join the union.

Fight Harder Than Ever.

It is only the third day of the strike and the shops are all tied up. The bosses are firing their last guns, and the union is prepared to meet it. Financial support was promised by the labor organisatioce of Hartford and by sympathising organisations.

The organizer of the union, Hyman Wolfson, declared that this injunction will not stop the union from fighting and that they are now more than ever ready to fight the bosses and their injunctions and bring the strike to victory.

The young American boys and girls who make up the strikers are determined to stay out and fight.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 13.—Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom, of Indiana, today called upon United States Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, to return immediately to Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, any documental evidence sent him by Adams to substantiate his charges of wholesale political corruption in the state. In his telegram to Borah, sent to Washington, Gilliom declared "the glaring need of the moment was evidence of fact."

Gilliom's telegram reads: "Morning press quotes you as saying you believe Thomas Adams of Indiana has the goods to sustain his charges of political corruption in Indiana and that your belief is fonnded on documents sent you by Adams. Adams was subpoenaed and appeared before the grand jury yesterday in an investigation of his charges. I am assisting in this grand jury investigation. # COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL ISSUES APPEAL FOR MINERS' STRUGGLE

By JOHN PEPPER

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 12.—The Executive Committee of the Communist International has issued an appeal stating that the mighty social struggle in Great Britain is growing more acute every day. The last conference of delegates of the Miners' Federation, which rejected with an overwhelming majority the insolent provocations of the conservative government, decided to continue the struggle in the most energetic manner. The manifesto points to the fact that the challenge hurled at the mine workers is now accompanied by a challenge of the British capitalist class against the whole working class by the decision of the conservative party conference in Scarborough against the right of the trade unions to exist.

Communist Party Demands.

The Communist Party of Great Britain demands the driving out of the conservative government, the dissolution of parliament, the establishment of a real labor government under the control of the workers, and an embargo on coal. The workers of the world must hurry to assistance to the British miners, to help frustrate the treacherous machinations of the General Council of the Trade Union Congress and of the leaders of the labor party. They must oppose the treachery of the reformist leaders of the Amsterdam Miners' International.

Support to Miners.

The struggle of the British miners is of tremendous importance to the fate of the workers of all countries. In spite of predictions of defeat in the bourgeois press of the world, and in spite of all efforts of the reformists, the British miners will win, if supported by the world proletariat.

The manifesto calls upon the International Trade Union movement to organize internationally an embargo on coal exports to Great Britain, and an international levy for the struggling miners of Great Britain.

POLICE DISCOVER NEW INFORMATION ON CHI SHOOTING

Mayor and Chief Revise Vice Squads

Startling developments piled seasation upon seasation in Chicago's gangland Weiss-Murray murders. Chief of the developments, shown by evidence at the coroner's loquest, police and federal inquiries were:

Earl ("Hymie") Weiss was killed by shotgun slugs and revolver bullets fired from the street, and not from the machine-gun nest on the second floor of a State street building.

Patrick Murray was killed by machine-gun and shotgun bullets fired from the second floor ambuscade.

Two machine-guns, one in the second floor nest, one on the street, were used in the battle.

Attorney W. W. Otis, who, in a serious condition at Mercy hospital, also was wounded by shotgun slugs fired from above.

Sam Peller and Benjamin Jacobs, friends of Weiss, fired some of the shots at him, witnesses say.

Federal officials anoooooced onearthing of a new gigantic booze graft conspiracy.

Chief of Police Collins was summoned to the federal building to testify in the old Genna gang and police graft inquiry.

Armed guards were thrown about the courtroom where Joe Saltis and Frank Koncil, clients of O'Brien, are on trial for murder.

Mayor Dever and Chief of Police Collins called a meeting of captains late today at which a big shakeup in the police department, including rearranging of the city's vice and crime squads, was to be ordered.

Open Shop Steel Boss Shoots at Strikers; Police Action Forced

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 13.—A near-riot occurred in the business section of the city, the outcome of the boilermakers' strike, when Edward B. Ladwig, president of the Canal Steel Works, accompanied by E. Lamb, secretary of the same concern, were taken into custody by the police. They are charged with discharging firearms in the city limits.

A non-union workman, A. Oglesby, is also charged with attempting to kill Emile Myer, a union boilermaker now on strike. The officials of the struck establishment were escorting strike-breakers home when the rupture occurred.

Retrial of Daugherty Depends on Decision of Federal Attorney

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The question of the retrial of former attorney general, Harry M. Daugherty, and former alien property custodian, Thomas W. Miller, is entirely in the hands of United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, the Department of Justice indicated today.

Buckner, who prosecuted the pair only to have the jury report a disagreement, said that because of press or other business he would not decide for several weeks whether to bring them to trial again or quash the indictments.

Daugherty and Miller are still under indictment and their bail of $6,000 each is automatically continued.

TORY M. P.'S TOO TIPSY TO SUIT LABOR MEMBER, ASKS FOR BEER PROBE

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Political circles were agog today as the result of the statement made by Dr. Alfred Salter, labor M. P., that he has seen members hopelessly intoxicated in the house of commons.

"Drunkenness is most marked in the tory party, partly because they are the largest party. Frequently the debates become noisy because some one taking part in them has lost control of himself thru drink."

Dr. Salter declined to mention any names but he said he would ask for an investigation, charging that the bar in the house of commons is always open when the house is in session, even at hours when the laws provide that public houses shall be closed.

HIGHWAY POLICE LINKED IN GRAFT OF CITY COPPERS

That the highway police of Cook county were giving close co-operation to city police in the gigantic bootleg graft that is being uncovered by federal investigators was indicated yesterday. Virtually every highway patrolman in the county is implicated in the scandal which is shaking the Chicago police department, according to the investigators.

Issue 400 Subpoenas.

On Monday 400 subpoenas were issued on prospective witnesses before the grand jury, the witnesses including city police, from a patrolman to district captains, highway police, and known gamblers and bootleggers.

The highway police came into play in the graft system thru which police officers minted bootleggers out of thousands for protection, in the transporting of liquor in and out of the city limits. The investigators declare that evidence shows that the highway officers and city officers worked hand-in-hand, the former "protecting" booze shipments in the county, and the latter in the city.

Were Very Courteous.

Sometimes, it was uncovered, when protection payments were so made that it was necessary for the highway police to also protect shipments within the city, the city police would extend that "courtesy" to them, and vice versa.

A. F. OF L. PLANS TO COMPETE WITH COMPANY UNION

of the railroad mileage in the land is now under the company union plan, that the company unions are numerous in the metal trades, that they exist to some degree even in the printing trades and in the miscellaneous trades.

"They are all destined to destroy the trade union movement," declared Woll. "If we are true to ourselves we must become active in this campaign against the company unions."

He declared the company unions were really outlaws, operating in defiance of the charter rights of the various corporations responsible for them.

"We must rise en masse against this damnable condition," he concluded.

The committee report in approving of the resolutions introduced on this subject declared:

A Dictatorship—So!

"Amazing as it is that there should be employers willing to enrich themselves temporarily at such terrible and appalling cost to the masses of their employes, practicing in their own realm the very essence of the principles of dictatorship, the disguised by phrases calculated to indicate a condition of quasi-freedom, the fact remains that there are such employers and that their existence makes for our movement a problem of the gravest character.

"The purpose to study these deceptive organizations and to replace them with free associations of workers under the trade union banner has our most hearty approval. We would add only that the equally enslaving institution, falsely and treacherously called the open shop be added to the field of study, and action."

Argue Over Labels.

Delegates went into a lengthy discussion over a resolution demanding that all A. F. of L. delegates carry at least six union labels, indicating that he would be searched for them on arrival at the conventions. The committee report merely required arriving delegates to make a report on this subject. The debate became so heated that the entire matter was referred back to the committee.

Resolutions attacking the speed-up system and night work among government employes were approved, as well as resolutions calling for civil service courts of appeals to secure enforcement of civil service laws, and the modernizing of the federal compensation for injury law.

The question of the restoration of citizenship to Eugene V. Debs was referred to the executive council for action.

Never Heard of Labor Prisoners.

Resolutions demanding the release of class war prisoners the world over were rejected, it being claimed that no specific conditions to be remedied or particular prisoners to be freed had been cited.

The committee regretted to note that the resolutions attacking race discrimination implied that the A. F. of L. was not doing all that it possibly could to combat race, sex and religious prejudices within the American labor movement. It concurred in the spirit of the two resolutions introduced, but reaffirmed what it called established A. F. of L. policy on this matter.

It was reported that the troubles of the horseshoers' union in Chicago were being amicably settled.

An investigation will be made of the taxation propaganda being sent out by Professor Richard T. Ely.

Favor Golden Rule.

Near east relief was approved and International Golden Rule Sunday, December 5, endorsed.

The convention repudiated the so-called County Concrete Road, Concrete Block, Sewer and Water Pipe Layers' Union, Local No. 321, organized by Fred Meder in Chicago, claiming it was not a bona fide organization.

Working on Passaic Relief.

A supplementary report showed that the total collection taken yesterday for the Passaic strikers totaled $1,256.10. International officers are meeting with President Green to discuss immediate relief measures on a large scale.

Problems involved in radio broadcasting will be investigated.

U. S. ALLIES IN CHINA ISOLATED AS REDS REGAIN RIGHTS

Cantonese Only Honest and Orderly Force

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Radical Chinese governing the only organized resistance to Japanese aggression in the midst of the bloodiest civil war the country has yet known, while remaining loyal to China, is arousing a savage fury toward its foreign allies.

That is the perplexing fact which American state department officials gather from the confidential flow of dispatches from Peiping, Hankow, Shanghai and Canton. It is confirmed by special press dispatches from China and is now digested by a reluctant editorial in the New York Times, which always has influence with diplomatic Washington.

Expected Red Terror.

Frank Lockhart was sent to Hankow as American consul-general to watch over American non-combatants in the central China and to report on the dangerous spread of the communist doctrine of the "red" government at Canton. When the Cantonese forces started northward and captured Hankow he was greatly alarmed.

Foreign powers, except the Soviet Union, had backed the militarists, Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu, to crush the radicals. When Wu fled and Chang stayed in the north, Lockhart and his associates feared a red terror of some sort, due to the restoration of liberty to the working masses whom we had held under military heel.

Feared White Terror.

Now Lockhart reports the Cantonese forces as respecting the rights of Chinese and of foreigners, while the militarist Sun Chuan-fang is marking his campaign against the radicals by indiscriminate murders and looting.

In Peking Minister MacMurray finds chaos spreading from the native quarters to the gates of the foreign compounds. Most of the well-connected cabinet have fled to the foreign quarter for safety, and no real government exists except the momentary whim of Chang Tso-lin's ex-bandit generals. Martial law is used as an excuse for any violence which Chang may desire upon.

Only Cantonese Responsible.

Reluctantly the American authorities in touch with China who feel responsible for the safety of American lives in that country are turning to the Cantonese "radicals" friendly to the Soviet Union, as the one element which may restore order and a hope of progress in the nation.

Sun Cigars Exploded.

MANILA, Oct. 12.—Several persons were injured in Manila today from the explosion of cigars in which powder had been secreted. Officers believe the powder was inserted in the cigars by friends of striking cigarmakers, who stopped working last July.

KING GEORGE'S COMMISSION ON AMERICAN LABOR COSTS GETS TO WORK

By LAURENCE TODD, Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Premier Baldwin's Royal Labor Commission which was sent to the United States to study industrial relations in many industries in order to justify new policies in Britain, has paid its official visit to Washington and gone to work. Its first inspection of an industrial plant was that of Gen. Goethals and Otis railroad shops at Mount Clare, Baltimore, where the so-called B. and O. plan of co-operation between the management and trade unions in increasing production is in operation.

Labor Representatives!

Baldwin's commission was ostensibly created in order to help British manufacturers pay a wage scale more nearly on to the American wage level. Two representatives of British labor and two spokesmen of British employers are among its members. The labor men are Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, and J. Tarbuck, executive board member of the Amalgamated Engineering (Machinists) Union. The employers' men are Mishcon R. Dewar and Randolph Smith, the William Morris-Lord in chairman. He is assisted in the "impartial" position by F. W. Leggett, assistant secretary of the international relations branch of the ministry of labor; I. Hay Mitchell, principal conciliation officer of the ministry, and H. G. Emerson, acting as secretary.

Trying to Crush Miners.

This commission was sent to America while Baldwin's tory majority in parliament was trying to crush the British miners' union. Its announced purpose is to find out why American employers can pay high wages and still make profits while British employers are paying low wages and making no profits. In view of Baldwin's private status as a manufacturer and a tory, the majority report which will follow an admiring tour of the plants of Mellon, Ford, Schwab, General Electric, International Harvester, Baldwin Locomotive and other concerns may be readily foreseen.

That report is likely to declare that American employers who have made signal success possible and are paying high wages are untrammelled by a lot of trade union rules and agreements. It may offer a theory of industrial autocracy as the basis for reorganization of British industry on a modern mass-production plan. It will eulogize the helpfulness of the anti-union corporations in the United States and will deplore the close ties between unions maintained in British through strikes and trade union activities. Such a report by the majority may be anticipated in view of the political and economic situation faced by the tories.

Natural Resources Abundant.

Public Ownership Defeated by the Baldwin commission's majority are the struggles of more aggressive elements of American labor to establish high wages; the fact that American natural resources are abundant, labor supply relatively low, economic conditions resulting from the world war highly favorable to American as against British industries, and modern machinery far more prevalent here than in Europe. If they ignore these factors, can they understand Henry Ford's principle that the payment of a high wage promotes demand for more goods and hence makes possible higher profits and again higher wages?

It is expected that the labor members of the commission will report that the highest wages in America are paid in the building trades, which are unionized, and that the worst industrial conditions are found in those industries in which the worker has been least emancipated from feudalism.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY EXHIBITS YELLOW STREAK

Robert Williams Aids Mine Owners

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The machine of the reactionary labor party officials has at the national conference in Margate had the satisfaction of rolling over the resolutions demanding that Communist organizations be permitted to affiliate with the labor party, but the joy of the right wingers was somewhat mixed with vinegar when they saw 80 Communist delegates present at the conference, the they had no right to be there, according to the decrees of Ramsay MacDonald.

But the Communists were there because local labor party branches elected them.

Williams a Renegade.

One of the sensations of the sessions of the national conference of the labor party was the conduct of Robert Williams, one-time member of the Communist Party, but expelled for conduct unbecoming a member of a revolutionary organization. Williams is now business manager of the London Daily Harald. The former revolutionist came on the floor of the conference in this field." Allusion is evidently made to the period when the railway was in the hands of the Russian White Guard emigrants.

to attack Russia. France, at present, is thus supplementing the British policy of encircling Russia.

In the east the French ambassador in China, de Martel, has been negotiating with the White Guard Russians of the "Russo-Asiatic Bank" for the exploitation of the Chinese Eastern Railway. This is to be "compensation" for the Russian debts.

According to the Harbin Observer, while in Mukden, deMartel stated that French capital could give 43,000,000 Mexican dollars in an internal Mukden loan. He discussed the question of financing the Chinese Eastern Railway in view of the imminent taking over of the railway by Chang. The prison administration "found out" that Ousser committed suicide.

FRANCE RENEWS PLOTS AGAINST SOVIET RUSSIA

United With Britain in Hostile Intrigue

MOSCOW (By Mail).—It is a known fact that British diplomatic circles have for some time been bringing pressure to bear on the Quai d'Orsai for more active participation in the anti-Soviet crusade. This is confirmed by a renewal of French machinations.

Like Great Britain, France has been intriguing against the U. S. S. R., both in the west and in the east. The recent Franco-Rumanian treaty makes normal relations between France and the U. S. S. R. impossible. The treaty recognizes the annexation of Bessarabia; Russia can never agree to this act of robbery. Whether this policy will be continued following the Briand-Stresemann conversation remains to be seen.

Pilsudski Prepares.

By her military guarantee of the inviolability of Rumania France not only strengthens the power of the white terrorist boyars oppressing Rumania, but strengthens Rumania's alliance with the Polish adventurer Pilsudski, who is feverishly preparing an attack on Russia. France, at present, is thus supplementing the British policy of encircling Russia.

MONEY TRUSTS OF MANY LANDS UNITE IN HUGE BILLION DOLLAR COMBINE TO CONTROL INVESTMENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—A powerful combination of American and European investment bankers has concluded negotiations for the formation of the American-British Continental Company, an international banking trust for the underwriting of foreign bond issues, it was learned on good authority today.

Blyth, Witter & Company, one of the best known American investment banking houses, will head the American end of the combination, while the Henry Schroeder Company, an outstanding bond and banking house of the English financial center, will act in similar capacity on the other side of the Atlantic. The new alliance, to be known as the A. B. C. # ABYSSINIA OBJECTS TO BRITISH-ITALIAN PLAN TO DIVIDE IT AS LOOT

GENEVA, Oct. 13.—Ras Tafari, representative of Abyssinia on the league of nations has filed a note with the league declaring that the British-Italian treaty whereby the two powers divide up Abyssinia in zones of influence between themselves without the consent or knowledge of Abyssinia itself, are void and constitutes a threat against the territorial integrity and political independence of that country.

"The imperial Abyssinian government," says Ras Tafari, "very naturally is troubled on learning that two great powers have come to an understanding on their course of action toward a friendly country, which with them is a member of the league of nations, without informing that country first.

"We interpret this as an indication of their intention to combine and exert pressure in order to obtain economic advantages if the imperial government should consider that the interests of Abyssinia dictated that those advantages should be withheld."

Cloudbursts Strike Sonora, Dangerous Conditions Prevail

NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 12.—Cloudbursts and floods in Sonora, Mexico, have resulted in a dangerous shortage of provisions and the complete paralysis of all classes of public service, according to reports received here today.

One cloudburst, it was reported, closed into two entire mountains, ruining farming lands by covering them with millions of tons of rock.

Relief in heavy casualties, based upon the reports of sailors that they saw hundreds of bodies floating in the Gulf of California, was explained by the fact that the flood washed out a cemetery at devastated Carbo.

Fever has broken out at Hermosillo, where the water supply has been cut off; and living conditions are intolerable on account of the high prices charged for coffee is sold at 50 cent a cup, according to reports, and other prices range accordingly.

United States Navy Invades Nicaragua Under "Neutrality"

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Oct. 13.—Under a formal declaration of "neutrality" the United States government landed a force of sailors from the U. S. S. Denver and took possession of Corinto at 8 a. m. Sunday, Oct. 10.

This "neutral" attitude led to an immediate searching of houses and confiscation of arms from the liberal revolutionary forces who are trying to overthrow the tyrant Chamorro, a notorious tool of United States imperialism.

The U. S. proclamation says that the armed forces of the United States will control the territory until a new president has been inaugurated.

Lawrence Dennis, American charge d'Affaires, is using the pressure of the U. S. armed forces against the liberals to force through the appointment of Adolfo Diaz, a follower of Chamorro, as president to succeed the dictator, since Chamorro has been too much discredited to remain in office.

German Police Seize IRA Booklets, Court Rules Act Is Illegal

WEIMAR, Germany, Oct. 13.—In April of this year the booklets "The Land of the Gallows" and "Terror in Pictures," issued by the executive committee of the International Red Aid, were confiscated by the Jena police. The confiscation was endorsed later on by the Jena court. On the basis of the complaint of the International Red Aid against the prohibition, the district court in Weimar now arrived at the decision that the confiscation was not correct, because the appeal to the proletariats of Bulgaria, which was the occasion of the prohibition, obviously did not have as its purpose "to alter, by means of violence, the constitution of the German Reich."

19 Die in Dutch Waters.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Nineteen persons are reported dead and many ships were wrecked in Dutch waters as a result of the gale of hurricane force which swept over all Holland during the week-end, according to a Central News dispatch.

GERMAN COAL TRADE BOOMS FROM STRIKE

Big Profits from Soviet Shipments

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—The German coal industry is in the middle of a boom. For the first time since the war a shortage prevails, so that the entire Rhine reserves of the coal trade hitherto held at Strasbourg and Kehl, have been shipped south to Switzerland to satisfy the export demand.

The freight rates on coal are also going up.

Experts on the coal trade assert that even a complete cessation of the British coal miners' strike would not deprive Germany of all the advantages gained during the past half year during which German coal has been sent in enormous quantities to break the British strike.

The banks of Germany are also showing a reluctance to grant further loans and the financial stringency exists. But the extra charge on overdrafts leads the banks to be very lenient on this form of credit.

British Dominions to Insist on Autonomy at Empire Conference

LONDON, Oct. 13.—In spite of previous predictions that Premier S. M. Bruce of Australia would take a stand opposed to the program of more autonomy demanded by the dominions at the imperial conference, the dominions-ites are expected to put Bruce forward as their spokesman upon this program.

Bruce is known as the most loyal of all dominion premiers to the empire, hence anything he says cannot be discounted as coming from anti-imperialist sources or enemies of the empire.

Bruce has his ideas well fixed as to what must be done and he is believed convinced that if something definite is not done, this will be the last of the imperial conferences. The conference three years ago passed resolutions but accomplished nothing.

Australia demands that the Jena problems, especially touching defense matters, she herself, and not Great Britain, must set the policy. Canada and South Africa are supporting Australia in this as both have interests demanding dominion autonomy. But if all get what they wish, the British empire will be disintegrated.

Conservative Party of Canada Selects Guthrie as Leader

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 12.—Hugh Guthrie has been selected as leader of the conservative party in the house of commons following the resignation of Arthur Meighen. This is only temporary, however, as a party leader will be selected later this year by a caucus.

New Intervention in China.

THE horrible massacre of the Chinese in Wahneien by British gunboats is followed by the news of Britain's intention to mobilize additional forces for active and determined intervention in the Chinese civil war, together with the proposal for more concerted alliance in China between Britain and Japan in an indication of the desperate straits in which world imperialism finds itself in the face of the splendid onward march of the nationalist and revolutionary armies.

These atrocities and intentions, together with the inspired attacks by Tchang Tso Lin on the Russo-Chinese controlled Chinese Eastern Railway, are far from common sense. There is no doubt of the intention of Great Britain, the leader of the anti-Soviet European bloc, to provoke the Russian workers' government into a war. There is equally little doubt of the determination of the British imperialists to strain every nerve to prevent the inevitable victory of the Cantonese and Kuomintchen troops throughout China. A straw in the wind is the dispatch of the 8,000-ton British cruiser Dartmouth from Plymouth to China to join the squadron already stationed there.

JAPAN is taking advantage of the desperate needs of the sadly frayed British imperialists to loan her support at high rates. She demands, in return for support to an open international policy, British support to her own imperialist ambitions in North China and the abandonment by British of the plan to improve and strengthen the Singapore naval base.

Chinese progressive forces have already protested bitterly against this new development. Wahnsien papers are urging the formation of a national anti-English alliance, the boycott of all British goods in China and the dissolution of all economic and commercial bonds with England. The Kuomintang party, whose national congress opened October 1, has as the last point on its agenda: Agitation against English imperialism.

The Communist International and the entire world to support the struggle of the Soviet Union for peace and the end of the imperialist provocations against Russia in North China, and for united militant action to halt intervention against the movement for the liberation of China.

Towards a Franco-German Bloc?

THE highly significant, friendly and unpublished conversations between M. Briand and Herr Stresemann at Thoiry succeeded in a much better understanding between French and German capitalism than has existed at any other period in the last few decades. It is clear that tremendous changes have taken place at the time of the invasion and seizure of the Ruhr in 1923 by Poincare (not to speak of the world war itself). At the time of the Ruhr occupation French imperialism hoped to establish on the basis of the economic unity of German coal and technique and French iron ore, the hegemony of France on the continent. Only the interference of America and Great Britain, to both of whom such a development was a menace, prevented the consumation of this French imperialist dream.

But what cannot be accomplished by a brutal assailant can sometimes be done by a coy seducer. The relationship becomes even more easily attainable when each is under the impression that it is the other who is the victim.

GERMANY, which has gained a respite with the gold injections from American bankers, is now developing a monster appetite, reminiscent of 1910 and 1912. With an acutely intensified exploitation of labor, "rationalization" of industry, super-trustification of industry, and possibilities of a favorable trade balance in the near future, she is irked by her national confinements and chafes under the obligation to share France, with the Ruhr still uncontrolable, with England still a powerful enemy, with Mussolini rattling the sabre, and with the ever more imminent Darwasion of the country by American bankers, finds across the Rhine its most likely ally—for the moment.

THE Berlin organ of Stresemann, Tageliche Rundschau, gives as the six points of agreement between the two foreign ministers at Thoiry, (1) the progressive reduction of troops of occupation on the left bank of the Rhine; (2) evacuation, in the course of 1927, of the second and third banks of the Rhine; (3) return to Germany of the Saar valley in all of its political and economic entirety, without preliminary plebiscite, within the next year; (4) suppression of the military control commission, the control to be exercised henceforth by the league of nations; (5) negotiation of part of the preferred shares of the German Railways company as compensation to France; (6) the acquiescence of France in Germany's attempt to secure the return of the industrial territory of Eupen and Malmedy, given to Belgium by the Versailles treaty.

THE Thoiry conversations accompany the announcement of the final organization of the European steel trust. The three Belgian steel companies (Sambre de Moselle, the Providence, and the Societe Metalurgique de Halmant) that were stubborn for a time, demanding an increase in the quota assigned to them—their stubbornness was credited to England, with whom these firms have close relations, and against whom the trust is directed—have finally entered the combination. It is expected that an iron trust, a coal trust and a chemical trust, on a similar scale, will soon be consummated.

THESE developments will have a profound effect. What is directed today against Great Britain will tomorrow be directed against the United States. The United States has forged ed more than a half billion dollars in German corporations and in governmental, provincial and municipal issues since January 1, 1924. In the first year (1924) alone (according to the U. S. Department of Commerce) the U. S. invested $107,420,000 in German corporations alone, which amounts to more than 46% of the total American capital furnished foreign countries in that period. This does not include the $53,300,000 invested in governmental and municipal issues by the U. S. in the same period.

GERMANY is fertile soil for profitable investments; but the hard-headed Teuton imperialist will not tolerate for very long a condition in which he must share his profits with Wall Street. The rapprochement towards France is a move away from America. The suspicions of the London Daily Chronicle are no mere phantasies when it asks if the Thoiry postponers do not signify for England and other countries an economic war without mercy.

The reply of the United States at least has already indicated its alarm at this turn of events. Wall Street criticizes the Thoiry accord on the ground that German railways bonds for the support of the franc on the grounds that "it will be very difficult to find a market for these bonds in America." First, because the loan granted to Germany carries interest at 7%, while the railroad bonds bring interest at but 5%; second, because it is doubtful if the American government (i. e., Coolidge-Morgan-Mellon) will permit the sale of the German bonds in the United States so long as France will not fund its war debt. Wall Street would far prefer the launching of the international loan which was discussed some time ago between Messrs. Mellon, Strong, Morgan, Montagu Norman, Schacht and other financiers of Europe.

The road of the Franco-German alliance may be hard and treacherous and its bed of roses may have its thorns, but it is destined to play an important role in the history of the coming few years. It is such an alliance which changes the map of continents and brings war and revolution in its train.

The European Steel Trust and England.

NO sooner was the European steel trust accord signed by Germany, France, the Saar valley, Luxemburg and Belgium than the German industrialist, Rechberg, publicly accused the British steel magnates of having intrigued to prevent the adhesion of the Belgian steel masters to the proposed combination. The British, he said, promised the Belgian firms a large subsidy if they would consent to introduce such demands to other participants in the cartel that they would find it impossible to admit the Belgians.

The British seem to have added to a lately-acquired record of failures their unsuccessful efforts to head off the organization of the powerful steel combine.

Pilsudski Eyes Lithuanian Spoils.

IT is announced that the Lithuanian government has instructed all of its diplomatic representatives to foreign countries to draw the attention of all the governments to the concentration of Polish troops on the Lithuanian border. In a memorandum to be submitted to all foreign departments, Lithuania charges Poland of plotting the peace of Europe in danger by its lust for Lithuanian territory.

Lithuania, poverty-stricken as it is, possesses the advantage of the Baltic seaport Memel, once awarded it by the league of nations. Pilsudski, in particular, has always hankered after Memel and Vilna. Poland has been practically at war with Vilna. Now that the spring offer being made by Briand its desire for the abolition of the Polish corridor, which separates East and West Prussia, and the dissolution of the fiction known as the free city of Danzig. Poland's main outlet to the sea, Pilsudski is again marching to and fro on the Polish-Lithuanian frontier hunting for a seaport like a dying sailor.

IT is not surprising, therefore, that Lithuania has just signed a treaty with the Soviet Union whose only aim is to ensure peace between the two nations. This act has, in turn, enraged Pilsudski, who is a tool of British imperialism, which is the leader, director and organizer of the anti-Soviet bloc, in which Poland plays so decisive a part because of its contiguity to Russia and the political situation in Poland.

A repetition of the 1923 struggle in the Baltic is not at all unlikely in the very near future.

A New French Attempt on Greece.

THE announcement that M. Kafandaris, leader of the liberal-progressives, and M. Michalakopoulos, leader of the liberal-conservatives, will collaborate in the coming elections in Greece—after which the dictator Kondylis announces he will retire from political activities—is an indication of the tenacity with which France is fighting to maintain its foothold in Greece, and, for that matter, in the Balkans in general.

The collaboration of Kafkadaris and Michalakopoulos is an obvious attempt to rebuild the party of the old politician, Venizelos. Kafandaris and Plastiras threatened to march on Athens soon after the overthrow of Pangalos, when the inclinations of the victorious Kondylis turned from France to England. The proposed electoral alliance of the old French Venizelist marionettes is another form of the struggle between French and British interests for the domination of Greece.

The Narrowly-Averted Greco-Turkish War.

ACCORDING to a reprint in the Westminster Gazette of an interview with the dethroned Greek dictator, Pangalos, in prison, published in the Athens Eleftheron Vema, the general had been preparing, at the moment of his fall, to initiate a war against Turkey with the aid of another power. An offensive treaty had already been signed on August 25 with undesignated power. The Westminster Gazette adds that this power was to have sent an army to aid Greece in Western Thrace which was taken by Turkey from Greece when the latter had its Asiatian frontier shoved westward to the Maritza River after the defeat in 1922.

The mysterious power is, of course, the Italy of Mussolini. It is well known that Pangalos was, especially in the latter part of his dictatorship, very little more than a Greek instrument of Mussolini's Balkan and Mediterranean policies. A Greek attack on Turkey would serve Mussolini's purpose quite well, especially if he might participate in the spoils and incidentally weaken French imperialism, a not mean consideration.

FURTHERMORE, the Dodecanese Islands, inhabited by Greeks, off Turkish shores which Italy had already annexed unto itself after the Tripolitan War, have been a constant sore spot in Greco-Italian co-operation. To what quality Greece got in a few licks himself, Mussolini planned the attack on Turkey, inciting the Greeks with the bitter memory of the Lausanne treaty. Decisive steps were already being taken for the Greek envoy to Jugoslavia was arranging for the broadening of the road from Gevgeli, in Serbia, to Salonika, the strategic route thru Jugoslavia for the concentration of forces against the northwestern corner of the Turkish nation.

Mussolini, however, overreached himself. His support of de Rivera's Tangiers proposal earned him England and France. Pangalos overthrown. Result is defeated

HERE'S ONE CASE!

"One fellow worker of mine told to me! "Well, maybe you guys are all right but the time when there'll be a revolution here like in Russia.' But there ain't any revolution now—so what have you got to say. I guess nothing."

"I good deal more than he knew. I gave him a copy of the CONGRESSIONAL PROGRAM OF THE PARTY and proved to him that we have something to say about every question that is of interest to the workers. He read it and then the next day he said that he was for us and was going to vote for us and try to get others to vote for us. He liked the stand we took and he said that maybe he'd join the Party."

We must tell every worker the stand of the Party on the big issues of the present election campaign! We can do this by distributing

Proletarian Writers' Class Is Offered at N. Y. Workers' School

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—A new type of course has been added to the list of subjects given at the Workers' School of New York entitled: "Proletarian Writers' Workshop." Michael Gold, one of the former editors of the Liberator and present editor of the New Masses, will have charge of this new course.

Michael Gold is well known to the labor movement thru such plays and short stories as: The Damned Agitator (Red Library Series); John Brown; Strike; Diaz Mexico, and The Last Revolution.

"Proletarian Writers' Workshop" is not a formal lecture course, but a literary discussion group and experimental laboratory. It is intended for proletarian writers of some promise who are trying to find themselves in the midst of a bourgeois world. The workshop will thrash out the problems of proletarian art. They will be stimulated to production of plays, poems and fiction for the working-class press.

Admission will be based on two specimens of writing which must be submitted a week before the work begins. This course is scheduled to begin on Monday night, November 1, at 8 p. m.

PLAN MONSTER SACCO-VANZETTI DEMONSTRATION

New York Prepares for Judge's Decision

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The executive committee of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Conference of New York City met Tuesday, Oct. 5, to consider agitation plans to crystallize the local interest and support in the struggle for the two imprisoned workers.

It was decided to hold a monster demonstration, if possible, in Madison Square Garden, immediately after the announcement of Judge Thayer's decision on the pending motions for a new trial, which is expected within the next few weeks.

Expect Victory Vote.

In the event that the decision is a favorable one, which all the facts would warrant but which the known prejudice of Judge Thayer makes unlikely, the meeting will be a celebration of victory and a pledge to Sacco and Vanzetti that New York labor will not cease its work on their behalf until they are vindicated and liberated. The slogan of the committee is that Sacco and Vanzetti must not suffer the fate of Mooney and Billings. They must not be commuted to life imprisonment and forgotten. A new trial will result in an acquittal and freedom. Nothing less will satisfy labor.

Prepare For Worst.

However, those who have participated in the long, bitter struggle of six years to save Sacco and Vanzetti has no illusions about justice in Massachusetts. They are prepared for the worst and realize that Judge Thayer's decision in all probability will be unfavorable and a new trial will again be denied. As soon as such a decision is announced, New York labor will reply with a monster protest meeting to re-affirm their solidarity with Sacco and Vanzetti and their determination to save them from the electric chair. The final struggle will begin. It will be the life and death struggle for these two innocent workers.

U. S. is Guilty.

It is now known definitely that the department of Justice of the United States government aided in the frameup against them. Their innocence has been completely established by affidavits of a convict who acknowledges the guilt of himself and his gang. The whole ghastly story of this Frost "miscarriage of justice" as it was well designated at the Ri Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor must again be told to the world. Labor must be now aroused that hold its Commonwealth of Massachusetts up to the shame it deserves.

Be Ready For Call.

The New York conference requests all its delegates and affiliated organizations to be prepared to respond to a call for action in the arrangement of this monster protest meeting.

The call will be issued as soon as the decision of Judge Thayer is announced.

ON GUARD! TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

Mass Meeting for Sacco-Vanzetti to Be In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Oct. 13.—The Cleveland Sacco-Vanzetti Conference is carrying on its work in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti without intermission. Unions and fraternal societies are being visited and told the story of this outrageous frame-up against two workers, whose only crime has been loyalty to their class, the working class.

As a climax to our propaganda of the past few months, a mass meeting is being arranged. The meeting will be held on Sunday afternoon, October 17, at the Moose Auditorium, 1900 Walnut Ave.

Help boost this affair by telling your friends, your neighbors, your shopmates about it. Let's pack Moose Auditorium on October 17. Admission is 50 cents. Tickets now on sale at the office of the secretary, 414 West Superior Ave., Room 606.

Admission is free, and there will also be singing and music, and first class refreshments. Charge for bunco players will be 25 cents each. Members of the Scandinavian branches of I. L. D. are especially invited.

Mass. Employment on Rise but Behind the Figure of Last Year

Employment in Massachusetts factories gained 4.3 per cent in August compared with July, according to the monthly statement of the state department of labor. But in spite of this gain the number of workers on the payrolls is still more than 2½ per cent below the level of August, 1925. And it is 17½ per cent below the average maintained by the average number of factory workers employed in the period 1919-1923.

The August improvement in total wages was even better, amounting to 5.3 per cent. This meant a slight increase in the average weekly wage from $24.06 to $24.38.

The four important industries which contributed largely to the August gain were cotton goods, rubber footwear, boots and shoes and automobiles.

Mine Owners Hope to Cripple Unionism

By LAURENCE TODD, Fed. Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Employee ownership of stock is the panacea for workers' discontent which the American Mining Congress Journal urges upon the mine owners in the United States. As the giving direct reply to the warning against the stock-buying delusion which President Green of the American Federation of Labor delivered to organized labor in its Detroit convention, the mine owners' organ in the capital declares that the owners must embrace this plan.

Against "Radicalism."

"The industry should give it unlimited support," it says, "for the purpose of encouraging thrift, as a stabilizing influence against radicalism, as a prophylactic against government ownership, and as a means of breaking down the old alignment of labor against capital and so to prevent or lessen evils arising out of such strife."

Some Things Left Out.

This section of the mine owners quotes the most optimistic figures as to the number of persons who own corporation stock in industrial enterprises. It estimates that the wage workers of America now control nearly $1,000,000,000 of stock in the industries wherein they are employed.

It omits any discussion of the percentage of this sum to either the total capitalization of these industries or the average annual earnings of the stock to the employe-owner. But quoting from the plea the mining contains for the senate finance committee for favors in the tax bill last winter, the journal emphasizes the stabilizing influence of the selling of small lots of stock to employes."

"This Revolution" Discourages Bolshevism.

"It is a sure cure for radicalism," it declares. "It is being increasingly recognized that one who owns nothing has nothing to lose but everything to gain by radical change. Thus such a person affords fertile soil in which to sow seeds of discontent, if, therefore, to discourage radicalism and bolshevism is sound, this new economic revolution should be safeguarded and encouraged in every possible way."

"If employe ownership of stock has helped to solve the labor question in other industries," it inquires, "why should it not be a good thing for the mining industry?"

Must Be Gentle on Texas.

In view of the generous treatment given the mine owners by the senate finance committee, it can be assumed that these arguments met with material approval. The committee was cordial toward any theory which would justify reduction of federal taxes on the incomes of big corporations. The trend of the employe-ownership argument is that the dividends of the employe stockholders must not be taxed and hence the corporations must be gently dealt with.

Senator Frazier Almost Makes Us Dizzy With His Corn-Fed Diplomacy

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Giovenni Lyon Frazier of North Dakota has left the capitol to campaign in his home state for candidates on two tickets—the republican and the farmer-labor. As one of the chief spokesmen of the Nonpartisan League farmers, he endorses their own candidates who run places on the republican ticket in the primaries. But for places on that ticket which were won by the enemies of the Non-partisan League he will urge the election of nominees of the farmer-labor party, which is a group made up of the former left wing of the league and its labor allies.

Anti-league republican nominees include candidates, for state treasurer, attorney-general and commissioner of agriculture and labor, beside two congressmen and many members of the legislature.

File Protest with Society of Cruelty Prevention

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has been asked by the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism to investigate the use of Uldine Maybelle Utley, 14 year old girl, as a "prodigy evangelist", to attract churchgoers in connection with violation of the compulsory education law, the law forbidding employment of minor children without a permit, and the law forbidding the appearance of children in theatrical performances.

The Letter

The following letter has been sent to the society:

"Gentlemen:

"We desire to call your attention to what appears to be the unlawful exploitation of a fourteen-year-old by religious profiteers. So far as we can learn, the exploitation of this child involves the violation of (1) the compulsory education law, (2) the law forbidding the employment of minors in gainful occupations without securing working papers, and, (3) the law forbidding the appearance of children in theatrical performances.

Must Memorize Sermns

"The fourteen-year old child to whom we refer appears under the platform or stage name of Uldine Maybelle Utley. She has been booked for a three-week engagement at Calvary Baptist Church, 57th Street, between 6th and 7th Ave., giving afternoon and evening performances of her precocity in memorizing lengthy orations. This embryonic Aimee Semplo McPherson demands immediate attention. The parrot-like, flaping and stuttering performances of this infant are prima facie avidence, in our opinion, of cruel and inhuman tasks of memorizing sermonettes and rigmaroles.

"We sincerely trust that you will use your authority to investigate the life of this child, ascertain the facts about her education and employment and the violations of the law in that connection, find out who receives the financial returns of her performances, and advise us the result of your investigation.

PULLMAN COMPANY PROFITS BEAT RECORD; STOCKHOLDERS GET 225 PER CENT RETURN IN TEN YEARS

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Record profits announced by the Pullman Co. for the year ended July 31 reveal that wage increases granted under pressure of the new porters' union leave the workers only a small share of the overflowing prosperity. The annual report shows a net income after all charges amounting to $14,396,611, compared with $13,771,976 for the previous year.

Largest Profit in History.

The 1926 profit is the largest in the history of the company. It gives the stockholders a return of $10.58 a share on the $100 par stock. This is the third year in succession and the seventh out of the last 10 years in which the stockholders of this corporation have made over 10 per cent. For the 10-year period the total return to stockholders amounts to 92.8 per cent.

Pullman stock has always been closely held by the topmost circle of American wealth centering around the House of Morgan. J. P. Morgen is himself a director. So is Harold S. Vanderbilt. So are the Georgo F. Bakers, father and son, of the First National Bank of New York, not to mention J. J. Mitchell and Chauncey Keep of the Chicago wing of millionairedom.

225 Per Cent Velvet.

From time to time these multi-millionaires have distributed to themselves Pullman stock dividends until today they have about 2½ shares for each one originally purchased. On their real investment the 1926 return amounts to 26 per cent while the 10 year profit is a return of more than 225 per cent on the money they actually put into the business.

The profits of the Pullman Co. year by year and the war in dollars and in rates of return on the capital actually invested by the millionaire owners are:

| Year | Profits | Percent |
|---|---|---|
| 1919 | $12,720,057 | 26.9 |
| 1920 | 12,812,509 | 26.4 |
| 1921 | 6,130,934 | 12.8 |
| 1922 | 4,371,767 | 7.7 |
| 1923 | 12,216,938 | 24.0 |
| 1924 | 12,602,043 | 24.7 |
| 1925 | 13,771,976 | *25.0 |
| 1926 | 14,396,611 | 26.0 |

Easy Money.

In the last 10 years Pullman has turned over to its owners more than $100,000,000 in profits. It has paid them cash dividends in the same period totaling about $100,000,000. When profits fell short of the generous dividend requirements, the dividends were paid out of the accumulated surplus profits of previous years. The company has paid $ per cent a year without interruption since 1900, has on hand undivided surplus profits of $33,267,296 and a depreciation reserve of $16,545,933.

Cost of Operation Cut.

Revenue and expense figures show that in spite of increases in wages to porters and maids last February the company has reduced the cost of operating its cars. Revenue per car-mile the first six months of 1926 was 7.26c compared with 7.09c in the six months of 1925. Expense per car-mile was 6.13c, compared with 6.29c, and net revenue per car-mile was 1.20c, compared with 1.36c. Like the railroads, Pullman is getting more miles per day out of its cars, the average for the first half of 1926 being 353.9 miles, compared with 344.8 miles in the last six months of 1925.

Apparently Pullman is following the other industries in balancing slight wages increases with a speed-up that enables it to maintain service at a great profit.

Building Program of Housing Still Great in 78 Leading Cities

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—During the first 6 months of the present year an average of $24.43 per capita was spent for new housekeeping dwellings in 78 large cities in the United States whose population is 31,677,233.

Los Angeles, New York, Detroit, Houston and Portland, Ore., were among the cities constructing the most housing per capita.

ACTION NEEDED TO SAVE COLORADO MINE WORKERS

Miners Ready for Revolt Against "Rump"

By HARRY KLETZKY.

III.

The situation that exists in Colorado, principally that of the "Rockefeller Plan for Industrial Democracy," the first company union, is a challenge to the American Federation of Labor as well as to the United Mine Workers.

If the company union "disease" is to be cured in the United States, it must be cured first in Colorado. The policy of "watchful waiting" in Colorado has been carried out for 13 years. The time has come for the offensive. The Colorado coal miners themselves are beginning to demand it; it is time that the entire labor movement look to the "cancerous growth," which received its birth in this state.

Effort Needed.

If the A. F. of L. is sincere in its fight on the company union, then no amount of effort or money should be spared to wipe it out in Colorado. Circumstances could not be more propitious. Twelve years of the plan have revealed to the workers themselves the inherent weakness, the sickening falseness, the discouraging futility of maintaining such a program.

With the miners realising the failure of the company union in Colorado, the principal foundation of the plan has been torn down. As long as the miners themselves were debating the plan's merits, undecided as to its real benefits and disadvantages, the trade union organizer was handicapped. But today that is changed. The workers are ready. Why is not the A. F. of L. or the U. M. W.?

Strong Argument.

In the failure of the Rockefeller plan, and it is a failure, the labor movement has its strongest argument against the company union. To destroy it all together, and again help the Colorado miners back to unionism, would strike a blow at the entire company union movement which would be staggering. For Colorado is the foundation of that movement.

The entire state of Colorado is rapidly slipping into the ranks of the "open shop" state. Nothing could bring it back more quickly and more certainly, than a victorious attack on the C. F. and I. plan. For the C. F. and I., controlling the largest industries in the state, has given shelter and "backbone" to every other open shop movement. The formation of the company union on the Denver street car system, the largest in the state, is an example of how the C. F. and I. plan has eaten itself into other industries of Colorado.

Whole State Doubtful.

Colorado labor must remain dwarfed as long as company unionism exists in the mine camps and steel mills of Colorado. The mere existence of the C. F. and I. plan in the state is contaminating to the spirit of the Colorado workers. The acceptance by so many of the unions in the state of the "industrial commission," altho the commission has been officially denounced repeatedly by state federation of labor conventions, illustrates how many branches of labor in the state are now "asking" for what they want, instead of "demanding." The former militancy of Colorado labor is in great danger of giving away to "-umbleness."

Colorado labor, and especially the Colorado miner, can be saved for the labor movement of the United States. But it cannot be saved by a continuation of a "watchful waiting" policy. Action is demanded. Concentrated, fearless action. The time is near now. Is the A. F. of L. and the U. M. W. ready to strike?

Supposedly Neutral Railway Arbitrators Named by U. S. Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(F. P.) — Edgar E. Clark, former grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors and for many years member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been named by the U. S. Board of Mediation as one of the two neutral arbitrators for the demand of the Conductors and the Trainmen on the eastern railroads for a wage increase. The other "neutral" arbitrator will be William D. Baldwin, head of the Otis Elevator company, one of the most notorious open shop concerns in America.

Selection of two neutral arbitrators was made by the board because the four arbitrators chosen by the roads and the brotherhoods failed to agree within 15 days upon two neutral persons, as they were required to do under the Railway Labor Act.

What Are "Neutral Arbitrators?"

Some Information and Conclusions About the Wage Dispute on Eastern Railway Lines

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE conductors and trainmen, members of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen respectively, having failed to agree with the executives of the eastern roads on the personnel of a mediation board, have had two arbitrators appointed by the committee which administers the Watson-Parker bill to hand down a decision on wages and working conditions on these railroads.

The first important dispute to be handled by the machinery of the Watson-Parker bill, the records of the arbitrators appointed by the Coolidge-chosen committee are of great importance to railway workers as indicating the type which the so-called impartial machinery picked to "adjust" disputes between the railway capitalists and the workers.

The two "neutral" arbitrators are William D. Baldwin and Edgar E. Clark.

Baldwin is the head of the Otis Elevator Company, one of the most notorious open shop concerns in the United States and which organized, in co-operation with "friendly" labor leaders, the so-called Elevator Constructors' Union in order to get around the working rules of the building trades.

The Otis factory is completely open shop, the company has fought the International Association of Machinists and has hired the Sherman Service, Inc., to disrupt unions with which it has had conflicts.

Edgar E. Clark, a member of the law firm of Clark and Lee of St. Louis, has held high offices in the Order of Railway Conductors and this fact has been played up to the exclusion of other more interesting and significant details of his career.

According to the "Daily People" of March 25, 1902, Clark had the following achievements to his credit at that time:

1.) In 1901 Clark, during the strike of switchmen on the Denver and Rio Grande, made an arrangement with the management of the road whereby the switchmen's jobs were taken by conductors.

2.) In 1902, during another strike, he ordered the conductors to scab on the switchmen.

3.) In 1904, Clark worked hand in hand with the General Managers' Association to break the strike of the American Railway Union led by Gene Debs.

THESE early proofs of loyalty to the interests of the railroad capitalists brought their reward and in 1903 Clark was appointed Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

From 1906 to 1921 he was a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Recently, Clark, appearing for the estate of the late Adolphus Busch, defended the claims of the railroads for a higher valuation of their properties. (New York Times, Oct. 10.)

At intervals he has given lectures on the railroad situation as a representative of the "public," appearing on the same platform with "Poison Ivy" Lee, of Ludlow infamy, now a railroad publicity man.

What price neutrality?

The conductors and trainmen whose wages and working conditions are to be arbitrated by these two "impartial" individuals will get a decision giving the workers exactly what the railroads tell this precious pair to allow and no more.

If they get any concessions at all it will not be because of the arbitrators but because the conductors and trainmen hold a strategic position in the transportation industry and American capitalism is willing to contribute a little something out of its generous store rather than risk developing class-consciousness among these key workers.

BUT whatever the conductors and trainmen get from these "impartial" henchmen of the bosses—if they get anything at all—it will be less than if they were prepared to wage a militant struggle for their demands.

That is the why of the Watson-Parker bill.

Unless we are much mistaken, the union officials who sold this gold brick legislation to their membership are going to have a lot of explanations called for in the not far distant future—explanations which will take more cleverness than they possess to furnish.

PAPER BOX MAKERS' STRIKE AN EXPOSURE OF CONDITIONS THAT UNORGANIZED WORKERS ENDURE

By ESTHER LOWELL, Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(FP)—Just how bad conditions are in unorganized paper box factories is being shown up by the strike of New York paper box workers under direction of the Paper Box Makers Union. Anthony Caparo, union organizer, tells of a manufacturer in Brooklyn who has been working big girl employes from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m.—a clear violation of the state labor law limiting women's work to 54 hours per week. Saturday work was from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. But the girls struck when the union called and are telling their story.

Falsifies Time Cards.

When word that a state factory inspector was coming reached the employer's ears, he had his foreman direct the girls to punch their time cards at 5:30 p. m. but to go on working till seven. After the inspector came and saw nothing wrong—on the cards—the foremen filed his own sworn statement that what the inspector saw on the cards represented the true state of affairs.

The striking girls say that they were told to answer the inspector, if he questioned them, that they only worked to 5:30. The union hopes to push prosecution of this violating manufacturer as an example to other employers and to stir unorganized workers to realisation of what the union can do for them.

Strikers Devoted Fighters.

Arrests are frequent on the paper box workers' picket lines but the spirit of the strikers is excellent. Caparo declares that he has seldom seen such a determined and devoted self-forgetting fighting spirit among strikers. It recalls to him the fight of Lawrence textile strikers in 1919.

The week before the strike four early members of the New York police industrial squad came swinging into union headquarters, searching business agents, union officers, and by their manner intimidating workers in the hall. Police and thugs hired by employers are plentiful in the strike areas, particularly at the Specialty Paper Box Co. in Brooklyn. This firm secured an injunction in September—before the strike—in an effort to check union organization activities among its workers.

What They Demand.

The strikers are demanding recognition of the union in all shops, 44-hour week, time and a half for overtime, double pay for Sunday, pay for five holidays and time and a half for other holidays if work is required, no discharge without just and sufficient cause approved by a joint committee of manufacturers and union plus an arbiter if necessary, minimum scale of wages from $25 to $60 per week according to task, $4 a week raise at least for every worker.

SEND THE DAILY WORKER for the month to your shopmate, for the time you work together.

OPEN SHOPPER TRIES TRICKS ON U. S. SEAMEN

Compensation Law Not What It Looks Like

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union of America, has begun a fight which he will carry before committees of the house and senate next winter, to safeguard the present legal right of seamen to sue for damages in industrial accident cases.

Sounds Good But Isn't.

W. J. Petersen, manager of the Pacific coast anti-union shipping offices and lobbyist before congress for the steamship lines, is now circulating a petition asking congress to include seamen with the longshoremen and ship repairmen in a compensation act.

The Seamen's Union is resisting this move on the ground that it reduces their existing legal chance of payment for injury.

Petersen admitted before the house committee last spring that injured sailors often "nail" the companies for thousands of dollars in damages.

Longshoremen and repairmen are generally unable to get damages in the courts, and hence seek a definite compensation schedule under federal administration.

In the official journal the Seamen's Union tells sailors that they need not forfeit their jobs by refusal to sign Petersen's petition.

N. H. Federation of Labor Meets.

NASHUA, N. H. — (FP) — New Hampshire State Federation of Labor elected John L. Barry of Manchester president at its annual convention. The program endorsed included study of the prison labor problem, introduction of an anti-injunction bill, continued fight for the 48-hour law, against child labor and adequate compensation for injured or killed. Support of the Bell-Graham law was voted.

BOSSES DO NOT GRANT DEMANDS, TAILORS STATE

Supposed Concessions Concede Nothing

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The Ladies' Tailors and Custom Dressmakers' Union Local 38 branded as entirely untrue the recent statement given to the press by Mr. Goodman for the Contractor Association which said that offer of concessions made by the employers were withheld from the workers and declared that not only were the concessions not concealed from the workers but this particular offer was considered by them and unanimously repudiated as inadequate for the tailors and giving nothing whatever to the women dressmakers.

"Concession" Concedes Nothing.

The objectionable features in the last minute concessions made by the employers was that they wanted to eliminate control by the union of working conditions in the shops. Instead of giving the forty-hour week, the employers insisted that four hours work on Saturday be made compulsory which virtually nullifies the concession and leaves their offer nothing but the forty-four hours which they have now.

The workers held that the employers are doing nothing constructive to meet a real demand for a time guarantee of enough work during the year to make their real wages come up to the standard of a living wage.

Walkout Effective.

So effective has been the walkout of the custom dressmakers that the employers were forced to promise individual raises of from $2.00 to $5.00 and a reduction of from 47 to 44 hours a week in attempts to get the custom dressmakers not to join the ranks of the strikers.

Besides the strike the employers have offered improved concessions which the not fully meeting with the demands have made it possible to reopen negotiations.

Bosses Lie About Wages.

The women strikers, when interviewed in the Central Opera House today, were particularly incensed at the salaries mentioned as being paid to the women. Instead of $18 a week to learners, girls who had spent three years at Manhattan Trade School were working for Bergdorf-Goodman since last April for $12 a week and were only offered a two dollar raise since the strike in order that they should not go on strike.

Pennsylvania Miners Rally to Support of Sacco and Vanzetti

OLD FORGE, Pa., Oct. 13.—More than 1,000 anthracite miners filled the new Colombus Hall last Sunday and emphatically voiced their protest to the threatened execution and continued imprisonment of Sacco and Vanzetti. The meeting was sponsored by several of the organizations behind the meeting appointed a speaker to present to the meeting the sentiments of their respective organizations. The Scranton city administration was attacked by all speakers for their prohibiting this meeting from being held in Scranton, therefore compelling the arranging of the meeting in the little out-of-the-way town of Old Forge.

Fannie Pistkin, speaking for the Young Workers' League, received an ovation at the close of her speech.

A strong resolution was adopted calling on the governor of Massachusetts and Judge Webster Thayer, to free the two workers. A collection of $466 was taken.

Paper Box Strikers Not Gangsters, Says Union; Four Jailed

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The characterization made by members of the industrial squad of four striking paper box makers arrested on charges of disorderly conduct as "gangster records" was denounced by Fred Caiola, manager of the Paper Box Makers' Union, in a statement issued at the offices of that union at 701 Broadway.

According to Mr. Caiola, the four men, James Marbone, Frank Rosina, Benjamin Storch and James Borneo, were not sentenced by the union as "a damning record" to destroy company property, but are reputable box makers who have been active members of the union for years.

DETROIT TO STAGE FINE CONCERT FOR PASSAIC RELIEF

Famed Artist to Appear on Program

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 13.—What promises to be one of the biggest musical events of the season has been arranged by the Detroit Relief Conference, for the benefit of the Passaic textile strikers.

Artists of national fame will participate in the concert to be held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, at the Majestic Theater, Woodward near Willis.

Fine String Quartet.

Heading the program is the Detroit string quartet, one of the finest chamber music organizations in the country. This quartet is composed of four leading artists of the Detroit symphony orchestra, which has gained national prominence under the direction of Ossip Gabrilowitsch.

The quartet is led by Ilya Schkolnik, first violinist of the Detroit symphony orchestra, who has been acclaimed by critics of New York, Detroit, and various other cities, as one of the most interesting of the musicians who has come out of Russia. The other members of the quartet are William Grafing King, second violin; Valbert P. Kelley, viola; Georges Miquelle, cello; each of whom is a musician of very high rank in his field.

Baritone a Feature.

Another prominent artist on the program is Stefan Kozakevitch, a young and popular Russian baritone. Kozakevich has sang in most of the country's larger Russian communities, Detroit, Cleveland, and San Francisco being among the towns visited. He has received much praise from the press, and is generally considered a highly gifted singer showing a wonderful mastery of technique and a marvelous power of expression.

Ukrainian Workers' Choir.

The Ukrainian workers' theatrical choir will also participate in the concert. This choir, directed by Ivan Hamanec, is composed of 35 mixed voices. It has appeared at various concerts in Detroit, also with the Detroit symphony orchestra, and is considered here the finest of the nationals choruses.

The admission is 75 cents, $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00. All proceeds go for the relief of the textile strikers. Only 1,000 tickets are available and workers and music lovers are urged to get them early.

Tickets may be obtained in advance by calling on the headquarters of the Detroit Relief Conference at 55 Adelaide street, or at the following stations: 1967 Grand River aveaue, office of International Labor Defense; 9351 Joseph Campau; Freiheit; Greyling Hall, 2376 Grayling Ave., Hamtramck; Yeman's Hall, 3014 Yemans, Hamtramck.

Tickets can also be obtained at the box office on the day of the concert.

EMPLOY MORE WORKERS ON U. S. RAILROADS NOW

Maintenance of Way Work Increases Number

Railroad employment in July meant jobs to 61,550 more workers than were on the payrolls last year, according to the monthly report of the Interstate commerce commission. The commission's figures show a total of 1,857,319 railroad workers who received in July $254,617,654 in wages.

Big Maintenance Program.

More than two-thirds of the employment increase came from maintenance of way programs, requiring 42,000 more workers than a year ago. As this work is largely seasonal the late summer lay-off undoubtedly find most of these workers again looking for work. The increase of 13,396 in the train and engine service group, however, is likely to hold as long as the present high level of traffic is maintained.

In other departments the gains were relatively unimportant. Employment in the maintenance of equipment group fell off slightly compared with 1925. Apparently the larger business of the railroads does not mean more jobs for shopmen.

Railroad pay for July averaged $138 if executives and high salaried officials are included. The average for workers paid on an hourly basis was $100. These averages show practically no change compared with July, 1925.

IV

Paul and Bunny talked, that Friday night, and a lot of Saturday and Sunday, and Paul explained the Russian revolution. There was an easy way for Bunny to understand it, Paul said; if there was anything that puzzled him, all he had to do was to remember their oil strike. "Ask yourself how it would have been at Paradise, and then you know everything about Russia and Siberia—yes, and Washington and New York and Angel City. The Oil Operator's Federation, that set out to smash our strike, they're exactly the sort of men that sent our army into Siberia—often they're the same individuals. I read in the paper yesterday how a syndicate of oil men in Angel City has got some concessions in Saghalien. I remember one name, Vernon Roscoe. He's, one of the big fellows, isn't he?"

Paul said this seriously, and Bunny and Ruth exchanged a smile. Paul had been away so long, he had lost track of the oil-game entirely!

Said Paul, "The operators are the same, and so are the strikers. Do you remember that little Russian Jew, Mandel, a roughneck that was in our strike? Used to play the balalaika, and sing us songs about Russia—we wouldn't let him make speeches, because he was a 'red.' Well, by jingo, I ran into him in Manila, on the way out. He'd been travelling steerage on a steamer, on the way to Russia, and they found he was a Bolshevik, and threw him ashore and took away everything he had, even his balalaika. I loaned him five dollars, and six months later he turned up at Irkutsk, in a 'Y' hut. Lying on a shelf there was a balalaika, and he said, 'Why, that's mine! How did it get here?' They told him a soldier had brought it, but didn't know how to use it. 'You can have it if you can play it,' they said, so he played it all right, sang us the Volga Boatman, and then the Internationale—only of course nobody knew what it was. A few days later there were orders to arrest him, but I helped him get away. Months after that we came on him out in the country, not far from Omsk; he had been a Soviet commissar, and the Kolchak people had captured him, and buried him alive, up to his nose, just so that he could breathe. When we found him the ants had eaten most of his eyes, but there was still some life in him, his forehead would wrinkle."

It was while Paul was alone with Bunny that he told this; and the younger man sat, speechless with horror. "Oh, yes," said Paul; "that's the kind of thing we had to see— and know we were to blame for it. I could tell you things much worse—I've helped to bury a hundred bodies of people that had been killed, not in battle, just shot down in cold blood, men and women, children, even babies. I've seen a 'white' officer shoot women in the head, one after another; and with our bullets; brought there by our railway men—I mean our hankers' railway men. A lot of our boys went plumb crazy with it. Out of the two thousand that came off our transport, I doubt if there were ten per cent quite normal. I said that to our surgeon, and he agreed."

V

All this was so different from what Bunny had been taught that it was hard for him to adjust his thoughts to it. He would go off and think it over, and then come back with another string of questions. "Then Paul, you mean the Bolsheviks aren't bad people at all!"

Paul answered, "Just apply the rule—remember Paradise! They were workingmen, like any other workingmen on strike. A lot of them have come from America—got their training here. I used to meet them and have long talks—all kinds of fellows, that had been all over this country. They are people with modern ideas, trying to dig the Russians out of their ignorance and superstition. They believe in education—I never saw such people for teaching; everywhere, whatever they were doing, they were always preaching, having lectures, printing things—why, son, I've seen newspapers printed on old scraps of brown butcher paper, or wrappings our army had thrown away. I learned Russian pretty well—and it was just the sort of thing our strikers printed at Paradise, only of course these people have got farther in their struggle against the bosses, they see things more clearly than we do."

Bunny was staring, a little frightened. "Paul! Then you agree with the Bolsheviks?"

Paul laughed, a grim laugh. "You go up to Frisco and talk with the men on that transport! That army was Bolshevik to a man—and not only the privates, but the officers. I guess that's why they brought us home. There was mutiny in Archangel, you know—or maybe you don't."

"I heard something—"

"Let me tell you, Bunny—I've been there, and I know. The Bolsheviks are the only people in that country that have any faith or any solidarity; and they're going to run it, too— mark my words, the Japs will get out, the same as we did. You can't beat people that will die for their cause, the last man and the last woman."

Said Bunny, dimidly, "Then it isn't true what we've been told —I mean about their nationalizing the women?"

"Oh, my Lord!" said Paul. "Is that the sort of rot you've been thinking?"

"Well, but how can we know what to think?"

Paul laughed. "Come to think of it, I met some women that had been nationalized by the Bolsheviks — as school-teachers. They taught the men in their armies to read and write, and made every man swear to teach ten others what he had learned. I saw a couple of dozen such women in a cattle-car on the Trans-Siberian railway, without a single blanket, nothing but blocks of wood for pillows, not even a bucket to serve for a toilet. They had several cases of Asiatic cholera among them, and they'd been that way for ten or twelve days—prisoners of war, you understand, waiting until they got to Irkutsk, where they'd be shot without a trial. And on the other hand, Bunny—here's the truth I was in Siberia eighteen months, and never saw an atrocity committed by a Bolshevik, and never met a man in our army that had seen one. I don't say there weren't any; all I say is, I met men that had travelled all over Russia, our people as well as natives, and the only Bolshevik atrocity that anyone knew about was the fundamental one of teaching the workers they had a right to rule the world. You can set this down for a fact about the Russian revolution, all the way from Vladivostok to Odessa and Archangel—that where the 'reds' did any killing or executing, the 'whites' did ten, and a hundred times as much. You never hear about 'white' atrocities, because the newspapers don't report them—they are too busy telling how Lenin has murdered Trotsky and Trotsky has thrown Lenin into jail."

A. F. of L. Leaders Wear Out Their "Red Menace" Issue

The burning issue of the support of the Passaic strike, the attack of the open shop interests of Detroit on the trade union movement, the necessity for some sort of a declaration against company unions and the difficulty of working up any enthusiasm for the "non-partisan" political policy following the slush fund exposures, have served in a way to lighten the dark shades of reaction which have colored the sessions of the A. F. of L.

But when the question of recognition of the Soviet Union found its way to the floor of the convention reaction blazed forth in unmistakable form.

The whole battery of the executive council went into action and auxiliary artillery was furnished by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Mathew Woll, defeated in his attempt to postpone action on aid for the Passaic strikers, crawled back to prominence with a diatribe against the first workers' and peasants' government in the world. President Green and Vice-President Wilson contributed their bits to the debate and the most viciously worded resolution against the Soviet Union ever passed by an A. F. of L. convention was adopted without a vote against it.

There should be great joy in the camp of the bureaucrats at what appears to be the conclusion of a successful offensive. But no such feeling exists. This year the denunciation of the Soviet Union is a purely formal matter because it is known to wide circles of labor officials and workers that a trade union delegation is practically ready to leave for Russia.

President Lewis of the U. M. W. of A. weakened the case for reaction by elaborating on the activities of the Communists in the miners' union and "accusing" them of backing the opposition to his administration.

It is not a part of the record that Lewis said anything about the known and proved corruption of leading officials of the union by the operators, that he dwelt at any length upon the fact that the non-union mines, because of the failure of his administration to organize them, are producing the more than two-thirds of the coal mined in the United States, that the coal operators are violating the Jacksonville agreement almost at will without his doing anything in particular about it except to insist that 200,000 miners must leave the industry, that in the anthracite agreement he surrendered the closed shop enforced thru the check-off and accepted an arbitration provision which ties the union hand and foot, or that the opposition ticket in the U. M. W. of A. calls for nationalization of the mines and has a complete program covering all issues which the union faces.

Headed by John Brophy and backed by what is undoubtedly a majority of the membership aroused by the danger to the union, Lewis will have a hard time convincing anyone that the opposition in the miners' union arises simply because of a Communist drive against Lewis as an individual, or that the Soviet Union is urging on and financing members of the U. M. W. of A. who have raised the simple but all-expressive slogan of "Save the Union."

The Communists in the coal miners' union are, of course, supporting the militant program of the opposition to the Lewis administration. The Workers (Communist) Party will give the opposition all the aid it can and it instructs its members to fight for a leadership which will mobilize the union for a powerful organizing campaign and put it on a fighting basis in preparation for the coming struggle for the life of the union when the Jacksonville agreement expires next March.

The labor agents of imperialism in the A. F. of L. convention have spilled the venum they have been hoarding. The effect has been less than in the past.

The Soviet Union is stronger than ever before and struggles like those in Passaic are proof that the voices of the workers demanding the right to organize cannot be hushed by reactionary officialdom even tho Communists are in the front ranks of their struggles.

The days when the "red menace" could be used to cover completely the slimy trickery of employers' agents in the union have passed and the best proof of this is that the barrage laid down against the Communists by Green, Lewis and Woll is considered even by the capitalist press as a mere face-saving device to forestall fundamental discussion of the real status of the labor movement under their leadership.

The mass opposition to Lewis in the miners' union is the best proof of lack of popular working class support for attacks on the Soviet Union and the American Communists.

Very soon, long before they are ready to do so, the capitalist-minded trade union officialdom, is going to have to discuss basic trade union and political questions on their merits. They will be unable to evade such discussions by the cry of "Communism."

QUEEN MARIE'S WORKING-CLASS SUBJECTS LIVE UNDER TERROR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUCHAREST, Oct. 13. —(FP)—At the congress of the Roumanian national federation of trades unions affiliated with the Amsterdam International, the membership represented was 28,064 workers. The discussion dealt largely with government terrorism toward trade unionists, and with the miserably low wage and the need for stronger organization. Two plans for outlawing the government were adopted. The first was the creation of an "educational" movement "for the cultural and physical education of the workers on the basis of socialist principles." The other was the establishing of a labor bank.

Freedom of association in trade unions was declared to be non-existant in Roumania; wages had fallen to 46 percent of the pre-war level; the eight hour day had been lost. The congress demanded that labor legislation in the various provinces be harmonized, and that labor representatives be put on all permanent commissions established for this purpose. Amalgamation of existing craft unions into national groups was endorsed.

U. S. Plutes Hail Queen of Terror Land

The photograph shows Queen Marie of Roumania in one of her poses for American newspaper cameramen, part of the campaign of publicity attending upon her junket trip to the land of the almighty dollar. Above to the left is an assistant secretary of state who will receive the queen officially in the name of President Coolidge. On the right is the Tammany Hall mayor of New York who will grace the monarch no doubt in the "name of democratic New York," and, below, Vice Admiral Long who has been assigned as navy aide to the queen during her stay. By does American capitalism grant a member of one of the goriest royal houses in Europe.

Pavel Tkatchenko

Bessarabian revolutionary murdered by the agents of the political police of Roumania

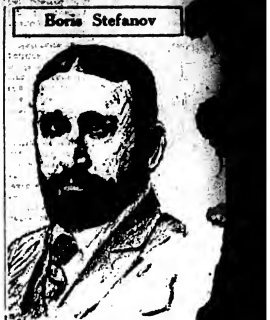
Siguranza Admits Murder of Workers' Leader in Roumania

ROUMANIA, Oct. 13.—After the government had at first prohibited to report in the press about the murder of Tkatchenko, the government and police press must now, under the pressure of the international working class protests, admit, if in a false form, that Tkatchenko was murdered." The Diminesta reports that Tkatchenko was transported in heavy chains and that he attempted to escape despite the chains. Therefore he was shot.

There will certainly be no worker who believes this obvious lie of the Siguranza and the Roumanian government. The truth is that Tkatchenko was no more able, after days of most horrible tortures, to "escape" and that his murder was done on the order of the Siguranza leaders.

This is not the only case when arrested workers and "peasants have been murdered with the excuse of "trying to escape."

But as all working class persons are manacled in medieval fashion, the charges are fanifestly false.



Boris Stefanov

ormer member of parliament at present in prison in Rumanie and in constant danger of being murdered like Tkatchenko.

Roumanian Courts Busy With Trials of Communists

ROUMANIA, Oct. 13 - In connection with the recent arrests of Communists in Rhumania with the trial against Boris Stefanov, also the case of Lisa Dijur and some other Communists who decaped during the trial against the executive committee of the Communist Party last year, will be tried.

Apart from this trial the following trials will take place.

1. Trial against the proletarian poet, Kahane, and the trade union official, Fonagy.

2. Trial against the secretary of the Unitarian Metal Workers' Union, Johann Bara.

3. Trial against the young Communist and co-operator to the Facla, Helene Filipovici, for "blasphemy."

4. Trial against the peasants who were arrested a month ago under suspicion of having participated in the Chotin illegal "conspiracy organisation."

Roumanian Working Class Leader Murdered

BUKAREST, Oct. 13.—(IRA).—After frightful tortures, after brutal meitreatment and shameful derision Pavel Tkatchenko has been murdered. No human beings, but beasts who had lost every human feeling, the agents of the siguranza, attacked Tkatchenko, who was already almost dead from revolver shots, kicked him with their feet, beat him with their clubs, subjected him to the most refined tortures, invented by an oligarchy under whose rule such crimes remain unpunished.

However, nothing could break the revolutionary courage of Comrade Tkatchenko. Terribly wounded, beaten, with broken backbone, spitting blood, Tkatchenko said no word, did not utter a sound which would have betrayed his fellow-fighters in the struggle for the liberation of the Roumanian workingclass.

The Roumanian oligarchy, this cowardly and corrupt clique, wanted to kill this man, because recently the Communist Party of Roumania has succeeded in gathering around itself all workers in the provinces annexed after the war, where national oppression and brutal exploitation has created unbearable conditions of life for the workers.

Stefanov Arrested.

IT is not accidental that together with Tkatchenko, Stefanov was arrested, who was born in the Dobrudje which was also annexed by Roumania despite the fact that it is populated mostly with Bulgarians. Both, Tkatchenko and Stefanov, were leaders of this national revolutionary movement too, which was always supported by the Communist Party of Roumania and fought under its slogans. The Roumanian oligarchy whose imperialist policy is dictated by the Anglo-French bourgeoisie, cannot itself fight against the decomposing national contradictions, but persecutes with greatest fear the growing national revolutionary movements in the annexed provinces. The Communist Party wins ever greater influence, ever greater sympathies among the workers and suppressed nationalities of Roumania.

The Roumanian oligarchy, too cowardly, miserable and incapable to find another means to maintain its power, employs brutal tortures, inhuman maltreatment and shameful murder.

Pavel Tkatchenko is murdered!

Comrade Boris Stefanov is threatened by the same fate. Both comrades remained at their posts and continued their great work for the liberation of the proletariat to their last breath.

The Roumenen proletariat will revenge the murder of its dear martyrs, the brave fighters for the proletarian revolution!

How Tkatchenko Was Murdered.

PROTESTS of the international working class have not been strong enough to prevent the murder of the Bessarabian revolutionary, Comrade Pavel Tkatchenko. After days and days of horrible tortures in the cellars of the Roumenian siguranza Tkatchenko was brutally murdered on his way to the Kichinev prison. The social-democratic "Arbeiterzeitung," Vienna, published the following detailed report about the murder:

A week ago Tkatchenko was taken to Kichinev in order, as was pretended, to be examined in connection with the Tatar Bunar revolt with which he had no connection whatsoever, even according to the statements of the siguranza organ. "Universul." Already on September 3 in the evening the Bukarest siguranza received a telegram from Kichinev with the information that Tkatchenko had "escaped" between Jassy and Kichinev on Bessarabian territory. In reality, Tkatchenko was sent back after a short stay in Kichinev, this time, however, peculiarly, without chains and despite all his wounds he had to walk the way. He was shot immediately he had left the town and buried on the spot. The siguranza does not even dare to speak about an "escape" of Tkatchenko, but speaks continually about his "disappearence." Accordinx to a prahibition of the minister of the interior all Bukarest dailies are not allowed to report on Tkatchenko's death.

"In the meantime the siguranza and the prison authorities prepare new murders. The former Communist member of parliament, Boris Stefanov and the workers, Bela Illes, Lica and the student Zaharescu, who will be taken from Jilava to Bukarest for their trial, were informed that they would be in contradiction to the usual method, transported without cheins and not in the closed automobile. As they, not without justification, fear also to be "shot whilst attempting to escape," they refused to be transported like this and addressed a protest letter to the army command.

"Threatened with death is also the editor of 'Munkasi Elet,' Stefan Foris, who is already under arrest for two months, suffers from a serious heart disease and is on hunger strike already for eleven days."

The Slave Drivers of Roumania

Above are shown, left to right, J. C. Bratianu and Ventila Bratianu, powerful Roumanian bankers who, aside from wielding financial control over this sorry country, are the tools of foreign imperialism, very much interested in Roumanian oil. On the extreme right is the cruel General Averescu who has been raised to the premiership on the strength of his policy of bloody subjugation in dealing with the Roumanian peasantry.

FRENCH FEDERATION PROTESTS BRUTALITY OF ROUMANIA POLICE

PARIS, France, Oct. 13.—The French Unitarian Trade Union Federation (C. G. T. U.) sent the following protest letter to the Roumanian ambassador in Paris:

"We ask you to inform your government that the working class of France, in solidarity with the persecuted Roumanian workers and peasants, cannot tolerate that in Roumania the system of political provocation and terror is applied by the government of Averescu.

"The C. G. T. U. appeals to all organizations which count themselves to the working class and stand for democracy to raise their voices against the shameful actions of the government in Roumania.

"If the present protest should not be sufficient, will organize against the government that you represent all manifestations which prove necessary, manifestations of which you will hear more than the echo only."

N. Y. WORKERS TO DEMONSTRATE AGAINST VISIT OF TERROR QUEEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—While the officials of this country bow in welcome to Queen Marie of Roumania next Monday, the workers of New York City will gather to voice their protest against the brutal treatment of their Roumanian fellow-workers now under arrest as political prisoners.

Plan Meeting.

A mass meeting is being arranged by the International Labor Defense, New York Section, to be held on Monday, Oct. 15, in Union Square at 5.30 p. m. Various prominent speakers, from labor unions and other organizations, will tell about the oppression of workers and peasants by the present Roumanian government which Queen Marie is on hand to represent, and to which the fascisti of America give their approval.

"Close to People."

For a year the capitalist press has been filled with pictures of the beautiful Queen Marie. Sometimes she has been dressed in peasant costume to show how close she was to the lives of her people. During the past week, the papers have devoted columns to descriptions of the Queen's new wardrobe being purchased in Paris, to her marcel wave, to what she will eat and drink in the U. S. from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

But how much space has been devoted to telling about the condition of the people in the country this queen represents? Who has told of the murderous tortures inflicted on prisoners arrested for the expression of opinions? How many of our American workers, who are not readers of the radical papers, know that in Roumania workers are held for 8 and 10 months without any charge or evidence against them, and tortured until they make a so-called "confession"? Even the Passaic police could learn a few things from the Roumanian officials, who are maintaining peace and order with gun and bayonet, clubs and chains, under the direction of Prime Minister Averescu.

Will Shun Politics.

Queen Marie has announced she does not come here to mix in politics; she will not discuss politics; she is not interested in politics—"unless one calls being interested in the welfare of my beloved Roumania, politics."

Naturally the queen does not want to discuss political conditions in her country; it might prove embarrassing. It would be difficult to reconcile her boasted love of the Roumanian people with the bloody record of the government which she represents and protects.

countries, do not hesitate a moment with your protests! Save Boris Stefanov and his comrades! Save the terribly tortured workers and peasants in the torture chambers of Roumania!

Dinner Pail Epic

It fills me jo the neck with glee to hear that old sport, Queen Marie, is on her way across the brine to see how this here land does shine, with trunks packed full of clothes and hats, how many no one nose, with Major Domos, stiff and mighty, and Ladies of the Royal Nightie. She's comin' over here to see Dumb Cal, Niagara Falls, and me.

And while she thrills our foolish folk, her peasants suffer serfdom's yoke. On Sundays only they get bread, and as to shoes, it's truly sad that only one what sports a pair is up the social scale for fair. Two measely bits the landlords pay for hardest kind of work per day. And then the peasant feels loss by bein told he owes the boss.

Her nibs is ridin a bum steer if she expects a change out here. Wherever capitalists is found, they aint no change crept under around. Our cap'talists have the very manic the queen is need to in Roumania. If she has brains beneath her bab, she'll find our cap'talists can rob

BRIT MINERS CALL OUT SAFETY MEN

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

DR. STEPHENSON, former grand dragon of the Indiana ku klux klan will not say anything that might harm the state political bosses. He had his day in court and kept his mouth shut. Of course the murderer-rapist made a deal and that is the reason why he maintains silence. If the present Hoosier administration manages to hold office Stephenson may be turned loose. A little talk was velvet for Stephenson last week but now his silence is golden.

* * *

THE American Federation of Labor indulged in its annual outburst against the Soviet Union, but Timothy Healy, of the stationary firemen, suggested that Russia would be recognized if for no other reason than because Wall Street is beginning to favor it. And Tim can bet his sweet life that just as soon as Wall Street decides to recognize Russia, William Green will be able to find a convenient excuse for changing his mind.

* * *

THE A. F. of L. officialdom follows the United States government's foreign policy very much like a tail follows a dog. Had Wall Street supported the vatican in the Mexican religious trouble, in all probability Green and his cronies would do likewise. But it did not happen to be in the interest of American imperialism to come to grips with Mexico just now so the dutyful Mr. Green rolled over and followed suit. The influence of the officials of the American Federation of Labor on political thought or action is over-estimated. The masses have no faith in them and the capitalist politicians know that they are a bunch of crooks who are knocked down to the highest bidder.

* * *

THERE are people in the radical movement who seem to think that a trace of sentimentality still remains in the systems of the labor fakers. There are some radicals (the word should be in quotes) who think that alleged liberals, who are reactionary in public, but radical in private, can be used to further the workingclass movement. Karl Marx knew what he was talking about when he said that diplomacy never was and never could be a weapon of the workingclass. The kind of diplomacy that leaves the lever in the hands of the fake liberal or the private radical is the bunk. It is a stepping stone to disaster.

* * *

THERE are no short cuts to revolution. One cannot conceive of a revolutionary movement arriving at its destination unless it is founded on the support of the masses, the people who have a bread and butter interest in seeing it succeed. For this reason the Communists are not in favor of helping one gang of adventurists to get into power in the A. F. of L. at the expense of the present office holders. In the long run, industrial conditions will force the workers to move forward, but it is always necessary to point the way and organize for the march. It is much better to lose in an honest fight than to win a victory that really succeeds in fooling the victors.

* * *

FOR the one thousandth and ninety-ninth time the Chicago police force have announced their intention to crush gangsterism. And for the same number of times, the attempt will end in bluff. The police force is run by politicians and so are the gangsters. Just as soon as the publicity resulting from the latest batch of murders dies out in the press, everything will proceed normally, and fatally.

THE following Washington dispatch should prove instructive:

"With the state department refusing to invite Russian soil experts to the fifth international conference of soil science here next June, agriculture department officials said today it would be futile to hold such a session without Soviet government representation.

"Russia has many leading scientists in soil," Dr. W. W. Weir, soil technologist of the agriculture department, said. 'Without Russia the conference would be incomplete. Russia is the second agricultural country in the world, and second only to the United States in soil science. Many new conceptions of soil have come from Russia. Without that country participating the conference could hardly be a success.'

REED DELVES INTO INDIANA KLAN SCANDAL

Action Forecasts More Revelations

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14.—Announcement by Senator James A. Reed in St. Louis today that the special senate committee of which he is chairman will meet in Chicago next Monday to consider the stories of corruption in Indiana's political structure caused considerable surprise in the capital today.

It had been understood by members of the senate here and by political leaders generally that the Indiana situation would not be made the subject of inquiry by Reed's committee because of the local character of the charges.

The Committee.

Members of the committee are Senators Reed (D.) of Missouri, King (D.) of Utah, LaFollette (R.) of Wisconsin, McNary (R.) of Oregon, and Goff (R.) of West Virginia.

None of the members of the committee were in the capital today. Senator Goff is in Europe, and the other members of the committee are scattered about the country, either at home or fulfilling speaking engagements.

May Have New Facts.

The surprise over Reed's decision to call the committee was intensified by the fact he had previously indicated he saw no reason for the senate's delving into a situation that was considered by political leaders here to be of state, rather than national concern.

Whether Senator Reed had received new information or facts which determined him to begin an inquiry is not known here.

Reed Issues Subpoenas.

The first batch of subpoenas for the Reed committee's investigation was issued today by the sergeant-at-arms of the senate. In the absence of instructions from Senator Reed, the senate officials refused to make the list public. It was indicated that four or five subpoenas went out in the first lot today.

* * *

Indicating that the senate investigation of the Indiana klan scandal would not get under way here until late next week, Hecklin Yates, secretary to Senator James A. Reed, committee chairman, announced today that subpoenas had been issued for prominent Chicagoans, who will testify before the senate committee concerning the Illinois slush fund inquisition.

Those names in the subpoenas were:

James Simpson, president of the Marshall Field Company, who was in Yellowstone Park at the time of the previous Illinois slush hearing.

Clement Studebaker, Chicago financier.

George B. Stafford, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

E. J. Davis, superintendent of the Better Government Association.

Mrs. James Falk Morrison, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters.

G. O. P. WORRYING OVER OPPOSITION OF INDEPENDENTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—With election day only a matter of three weeks away, republican leaders here were feeling somewhat glum today over three senatorial spots where they had considered G. O. P. victories as good as "in the bag."

Illinois is Sore Spot.

The republican sore spots are in New York, Oregon and Illinois, and in each instance the aggravation is the same—party insurgency and independence. In each state, the regular republican nominee is menaced by an independent republican candidacy and the leaders do not mask their fears that the split vote resulting from this situation may allow the democrat to slip in.

GANGLAND QUIET AS INVESTIGATION IN BATTLE IS ON

Habeas Corpus Writs are Being Denied

Gangland continued quiet today, and with a four-ply inquiry getting down to the routine business of investigating all angles of the mysterious machine gun ambuscade Monday in which two men were killed and three others wounded, much of the tension, portending a renewal of the gunplay, had lifted.

Cooperating with the police in this drive, chief justice William J. Lindsay of the criminal court, temporarily withheld writs of habeas corpus because "a gang war exists." The writs denied were those asked for gangsters wounded in Monday's shooting.

The inquest over the bodies of Earl "Hymie" Weiss and Patrick Murray, the two gang leaders killed in front of Holy Name cathedral that Monday, continued today. Little evidence has been introduced thus far that would help in identifying the assassins or advance a motive for the attack.

Antiheriin generally are of the opinion that "Scarface Al" Capone, Cicero vice lord, who is said to have been jealous of Weiss' growing business in the beer and alcohol industry, was the instigator of the crime.

Saltis Trial Juror Had Been Inmate of Asylum, Is Testimony

John Riley, one of the jurors in the trial of Joe Saltis and "Lefty" Koncil, charged with the murder of John "Mittens" Foley, has been confined in the Illinois insane asylum four times.

This testimony was given before Judge Harry B. Miller today by Mrs. Riley.

It is considered probable that a mistrial will be pronounced by Judge Miller, and a new jury called.

W. W. O'Brien, chief of defense counsel, who was wounded in the machine gunning Monday night, had urged his assistant, Frank McDonnell, to continue with the trial and not let any jurors be withdrawn, it was stated.

A list of jurors and witnesses was found on the dead body of Earl "Hymie" Weiss following the shooting.

Mexico Replies to U. S. Interference on Land and Oil Property Law

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Mexico's reply to the latest American note in the controversy over Mexican land and petroleum laws was delivered to the state department today.

The note is understood to insist that no foreign rights are invaded by the application of these laws—a position Mexico has maintained since the controversy started.

Members of the Chicago Ladies' Garment Workers' Union voted to assess themselves from 50 cents to $2.00 each week to aid the strike of the New York garment workers in their battle for the 40-hour week at a special membership mass meeting Wednesday night. The members of the Chicago unions accepted unanimously the recommendations of the joint board for relief for the New York workers.

Weekly Aid Until End.

It was voted that workers earning $30 a week be assessed 50 cents a week; workers earning $50 a week be assessed $1, and workers earning more than $50 a week be assessed $2. The weekly contributions to the New York strike fund will be made for the duration of the strike.

The meeting, which was held at Schoenhofen Hall, was an enthusiastic one, the workers rising to their feet several times when reports of the militant struggle of the New York union were made.

A. F. OF L. MEET DODGES FIGHT ON INJUNCTION

Samuel Memorial Fund in Two Years, $98.50

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14.—Charging that the use of the injunction by employers against the workers is on the increase, the delegates to the American Federation of Labor went into a lengthy discussion of methods to be used in combatting this powerful weapon in the hands of the enemy.

Delegate Andrew Furuseth, Seaman's Union, came to the front with the suggestion that labor must attack the rights of the courts to issue injunctions declaring:

"Say to the judge that you refuse to answer any of his questions, because you deny his right of jurisdiction in these matters. Then you must be ready to take the consequences."

Shudder At Thot of Jail.

Delegate Furuseth inferred that the delegates must be ready to go to jail in their fight against the injunction. This caused somewhat of a shudder of horror to run thru the convention.

Most of the speeches were of an extremely technical nature. These labor lawyers, some of them, claimed they were better lawyers, in the words of Delegate D. G. Ramsay, of the Telegraphers' Union, than the sheepskin product itself.

I. L. G. W. Mum On Great Struggle.

No member of the delegation of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, for instance, got up to tell of the brilliant struggle waged against the injunction, mostly by the women members of that organization in Chicago during the last strike of the union in that city, scores going to jail.

Delegate John P. Frey, moulders, first got the floor and aroused the problems confronting the labor movement as a result of the use of the injunction by the employers. He was followed by Delegate Furuseth.

Clayton Act a Fraud.

"When the Clayton act (hailed as Labor's Magna Charta by the late Sam Gompers) was passed, I told the convention at that time that the Clayton act was a fraud from beginning to end," declared Furuseth. "I charged that the Clayton act granted more power to the courts and that we would soon find that out. Don't get excited at the egotism of this roughneck sailor when he says that the decision in the Duplex case confirmed everything that I claimed at that time."

Furuseth said that a whole day was spent at the Rochester convention of the A. F. of L., but at that time not a single word expressing a new thought on the injunction problem was heard from any of the many speakers who spoke on the matter. Furuseth referred to the dissertations of economists on this question saying, "I don't know whether to say, 'God bless 'em,' or, 'God damn 'em.'"

Delegate Matthew Woll declared that the injunction process was developing so rapidly that he wouldn't be surprised if some morning court would

PAPER ATTACK ON CAPITALISM MARKS SESSION

Brave Phrases Hurled by A. F. of L. Heads

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONVENTION HALL, DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 14.—Paper declarations galore, filled to the brim with brave phrases attacking the growing American industrial tyranny were tossed into the American Federation of Labor convention here in the reports of the committees of resolutions, executive council and education.

Matthew Woll, closing the resolutions committee report, visioned "around us and hearing down upon us, a paternalism, a despotism and autocracy, that will be none the less formidable because of occasional evidences of benevolence."

The gigantic manipulations of finance capital, the yellow dog contract, lack of protection of workers in industrial and other evils were all condemned. It was declared that the measures adopted by this A. F. of L. convention provided the only "agency thru which the masses may check the arrogance and the autonomy of an automatically growing concentration of industrial power."

Still "Nonpartisan."

All this was preceded by the unanimous declaration of the convention to continue the non-partisan political action of the A. F. of L. within the two old political puppets of Wall Street, the democratic and republican parties, no matter how even made anywhere of the struggle of the Minnesota farmer-labor party that already has a United States senator in congress and is the second party in that state.

Farmers Mentioned.

It is in this endorsement of adherence to the old parties that the only approach to the farmers of the country gets any mention. It declares that, "Labor urges concerns to pass the farmers' program and is willing at any and all times to aid the farmers seeking legislation that will advance their economic interest. It refers to the efforts of the industrial and financial interests to prejudice the farmers against labor and warns them that they must defeat the attempt to enroll them on that side."

Thus the A. F. of L. stands stock still politically in the struggle against the capitalist masters of labor while at the same time confessing that, "The development of our industrial life from the standpoint of mechanical changes in its general method of operation, is proceeding at an ever increasing rate of speed. The rate of change is immensely more rapid today than was the case even ten years ago or five years ago."

No Attack on Coal Barons.

Declarations were adopted calling for the strictest observance of trade union agreements, no attack being directed, however, against employers who have torn up agreements at will, as is the case of the Jacksonville agreement between the mine barons and the bituminous coal miners. The delegation of the miners' union was silent. In fact there was [illegible]

Keep The Daily Worker!

By BEN GITLOW:

THE DAILY WORKER is the fighting organ of the American working class. Wherever workers are engaged in bitter struggles against their powerful capitalist exploiters you will find The DAILY WORKER on the job reporting the truth about the struggles and inspiring the workers to solidarity and militancy. The DAILY WORKER is in the forefront of every movement to advance the organization of workers, to unify and strengthen their organizations, and to develop among them a workingclass consciousness that will be the basis for a determined militant and revolutionary movement against capitalism. In the face of the increasing consolidation of capitalist forces in the United States and the increased centralization and power of the capitalist government The DAILY WORKER is the only organ that calls upon the policy thru a Labor Party, amalgamation, organization of the unorganized and international trades union unity.

THE DAILY WORKER is the most feared and hated organ in the United States. It is feared by the capitalists and their hirelings. It is hated by them because it exposes their iniquities to the whole working class. The reactionary labor officials whose policy of class peace and treachery to the working class is choking off the possibility of the growth of the trade union movement would welcome the destruction, the end of The DAILY WORKER.

THE DAILY WORKER is now going thru a crisis. The DAILY WORKER is now appealing to the militant and revolutionary workers for the support that it must get immediately if it is to continue its courageous course.

If you are a militant worker, if you for the unity of labor and for militant struggle against the exploiters if you want an organ that expresses and fights for those sentiments then you must rally to the support of The DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER must not die. The DAILY WORKER must be kept on the firing line and its effectiveness increased. Now is the time to help. Not tomorrow. The DAILY WORKER is the one organ that in a jungle full of capitalist hyena papers supported by capitalist millions fights the poison, lies, calumny and invective that is hurled against the working class. Strikebreakers, imperialists, exploiters and working class blood-suckers welcome the possibility of The DAILY WORKER'S suspension. You militant workers from the factories, mines and mills are the ones who can save and keep the Daily. Today send The DAILY WORKER your contribu-

MASS PROTEST IN N. Y. AGAINST ROUMANIA TERROR

Demonstrate Against the Queen's Government

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A protest has risen from workers' organizations in every country against the brutal murder of the young Roumanian radical Pavel Tkatchenko. After denying for a long time that Tkatchenko was dead, refusing to let any Bukarest papers state that he was dead, and insisting that he had escaped from captivity and mysteriously "disappeared," the Roumanian authorities have at last been compelled to announce that Tkatchenko has been shot—shot while attempting to escape, they say.

Protest Meet.

The New York section of the International Labor Defense has arranged a mass meeting at Union Square next Monday, October 18, at 5:30 to express more fully the indignation and horror which American workers feel at this latest atrocity of Queen Marie's government.

Pavel Tkatchenko, a native of Beasarabia, was a student who had been active in the Russian revolutionary movement years ago. He took part in both revolutions of 1917 and later fought as a red soldier in the Ukraine. When Bezarabia became part of Roumania according to the so-called "peace settlement" he was active in organizing th workers in Roumania and of course immediately became a target for police persecution.

Wholesale Arrests.

He was arrested a number of times, served a jail-on sentence and finally was taken with various trade union officials in a series of wholesale arrests by the secret police. At the time of these arrests, the workers realized their comrades were in grave danger both of torture and of being shot on the flimsiest charge that they were trying to escape. And in the case of Tkatchenko this is exactly what happened. The cruelties practiced upon him were unbelievably terrible. Finally, half-dead from a broken spine and fearful body bruises, he was taken to Kishinev to be examined, as it was said. He was transported without chains, and immediately it was rumored he had escaped. The truth was [illegible] him out the door.

Others' Fate Doubtful.

The fate of other workers arrested with Tkatchenko still is in doubt. If loud and mass protests arise from workers of every country, these others may be spared the terrible fate of Tkatchenko. The workers of America have their chance, while Queen Marie is here, to let her and her government know what they think of their reign of terror in Roumania. The persecuted workers and peasants of Roumania look to their fellows, especially in powerful America, to help in their bitter struggle by showing the [illegible] of the oppression in Roumania.

A mighty protest meeting next Monday in Union Square will be heard in the smallest Roumanian village and will give fresh courage to the workers in their fight for organization.

Coast Guard Sent to Beardstown, Ill.

Two boats and eight men of the United States coast guard were sent to Beardstown, Ill., today, action was taken by Capt. J. O. Anderson after word had been received that the flood waters of the stricken city are still at a high mark.

It will be a week and perhaps longer before the people of Beardstown will be able to get about the town without the use of boats, it was reported.

Lots of Coal, But Dealers Raise Price

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 14.—According to reports, coal is piling up in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, in spite of the fact that millions of tons of coal are being shipped to Great Britain to help break the strike. Nevertheless, coal dealers in this city are taking advantage of the situation—and blaming the British strike for it—to raise the price of coal $1 per ton. They claim that the coal companies have increased the price from $4 per ton in the mines to $5 per ton.

Marines Use Tunney for Recruiting

Because, quite by chance, the new champion heavyweight, Gene Tunney, was once a member of the U. S. marines, the war department decorated him with a lieutenant's stripes. The object is to use him as a recruiting sergeant for the service. Which shows that war department publicity has no limits.

MARIE UPSETS PLANS TO SHOW HER PLAINNESS

N. Y. Practices Knee Bending for Queen

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.— Consternation reigns today in New York's bootlicking officialdom, as all their pretty plans for the royal welcoming of Marie, queen of Roumania's workerbaiting government, were upset when "her majesty" changed her mind as to the manner in which she is to enter the city.

Mayor Walker, Governor Smith, and President Coolidge had elaborate plans completed, including cannon boomings, whistle tootings, horn blowings, flag wavings, hand shakings and knee bendings, which were to take place when the royal "gold digger" was to alight on a tug at quarantine.

But Marie, to shew her democracy, decided to ride right up to the pier, forsooth, so all the plans had to be changed.

Mrs. Astor is "Servant."

Mrs. Vincent Astor, millionairess is going to get a real capitalistic thrill by rubbing around with the queen while she is in New York. The American money queen will act as "lady-in-waiting" to Marie.

As further evidence to the queen that republican America is all excited about her coming, Walker has arranged a gigantic street parade for the queen, when she gets off the boat. She will be escorted from the pier to the city hall by mounted policemen, White House emissaries, state and city representatives, besides a liberal sprinkling of army officers and Roumanian consuls.

A large number of secret service men will be provided to guard the queen as she rides to the hall.

Roumanian Envoy Gives Resignation Over Queen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.— Incensed over "interference" with plans for the reception and tour of Queen Marie of Roumania on the part of various American friends of the queen, Radu T. Djuvara, Roumenian charge d'affaires here, has forwarded his resignation to the foreign office at Bucharest, according to credited reports in diplomatic circles here today. No confirmation was obtainable at either the legation or the state department, but the charge's resignation is understood to have been sent.

FIGHT PICKETS JAILED AT THE DWORKIN SHOP

Strikers Ignore Court Order to Stop

HARTFORD, Conn., October 14.—Eight members of the Hartford Upholsterers' Union, Local No. 35, who are now on strike, were arrested for picketing the B. Dworkin shop. In spite of the injunction that was taken out by Dworkin on Sunday, October 10, 1926, the workers went out on the picket line as before.

After awhile the constable, who was called up by Mr. Dworkin, came and arrested Angelo Rosentini, Morris Jackuis; Louis Nordkin; Ralph Mittica, Louis Nirenstein, Joseph Goldfarb, Abraham Gildon and Louis Bernstein.

When the union lawyer came over to the police station to take out the strikers it was impossible for him to find out who the officers were that were responsible for this arrest.

At the strike meeting the jailed strikers who were taken out by the lawyer without bail were cheered by all the strikers and took their places as honorary members at this meeting. These young workers, who never had any experience with strikes, police, or injunctions seemed to take all these things as good old time union members should.

admitted to the country as "unofficial observers.'

Allowing the Russians to enter would necessitate issuance of visas to them nevertheless, as passports would necessarily be issued, and the state department will officially welcome the visiting delegates. Officials admit they would be at a loss how to receive Russian delegates."

BRITISH papers are trying to minimize the seriousness of the industrial crisis. The papers are owned by the big capitalists. But the situation is serious just the same. Factories are closing down, either because they cannot get coal at any price, or they have to pay too much for it. On the beach at Backhaven, Pitsahire, the shore is sometimes littered with seacoal. So scarce is this fuel that dealers with lorries appear on the beach and attempt to haul away the coal. The miners and their sympathisers, however, could not see things this way, so when the lorries got on the strand, the miners got busy and dug ditches around the vehicles, with what results you can imagine.

A. F. of L. Delegate Graduates as Lawyer

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 14.—While attending the A. F. of L. convention in Detroit as a delegate, C. P. Barringer, president of the North Carolina State Federation of Labor, received notice that he had been granted a license to practice law in his state. He passed

WORKERS TURN TO LEFT WING, SAYS FOSTER

Bureaucrats Afraid to Organize Masses

(By Federated Press.)

DETROIT, Oct. 14.—Without a single Communist delegate at the 48th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, the Reds gathered in a nearby hall Oct. 13 and gave expression to their judgment on the state of affairs in the trade union movement in America.

Their spokesman was William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League and member of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America. He had heard himself denounced that afternoon by the man he said his respects to in the evening. His presence in the federation gallery had been reported to John L. Lewis of the miners.

The Workers Are Getting Wise.

Foster was in high spirits as he addressed the 500 workers in McCollester hall. "They are afraid of the left wing over at the convention," he declared, "and they have reason to be. They are proposing all sorts of schemes to aid the boss to speeding up production, they are fighting with the employer against the worker instead of with the worker against the employer. The worker is finding that out and is turning to the left wing.

Fear to Organize Masses.

"The trade union bureaucrats don't want to organize the basic industries. That would endanger their soft jobs," he further charged. "If the semi-skilled and and the unskilled are organized, that will mean new leadership and new leaders in the federation. The monopoly of the skilled crafts will go by the board. The great body of American workers will than have an inning and these labor fakers will get fired."

Trade Union Capitalism.

Foster sketched the downward trend, as he termed it, of American trade unionism since the war, pointing particularly to the transportation and mining industries, and denouncing schemes of co-operating with the boss like the B. & O. plan, schemes of what he called labor capitalism like banking, insurance and investment companies. He urged organization in basic industries, forming a class labor party, making the unions democratic and free from corruption and agitation for the recognition of the Soviet Union.

Baldwin Mere Progressive Than Green.

He wound up by calling the British Tory premier, Stanley Baldwin, more progressive and more imbued with trade union spirit, than President William Green of the A. F. of L.

ZERO GOES TO HELL TO SAVE DAILY WORKER

Play, Banquet & Dance Attracting Attention

Demands for tickets for the October 24th play, banquet and dance to be given under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party to help The DAILY WORKER, are pouring in to the headquarters of District 8 at 19 S. Lincoln St., according to Arne Swabeck, district organizer.

"The Adding Machine" which will be presented by the Studio Players at Douglas Park Auditorium on Oct. 24, at 8 p. m. will share the attention with the banquet which will be presided over by William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER and famous after-dinner speaker.

After the banquet which will be on the boards at 7:30 p. m., dancing will be indulged in until a late hour in the morning.

He Has His Guts.

As some of our readers may know, Zero was a robot bookkeeper who developed enough courage to ask for a raise after twenty years of service. The boss' reply was that an adding machine rendered his service superfluous.

Burning with disappointment, Zero killed his boss and was promptly executed. Zero's troubles in heaven and in hell keep the audience busy laughing until it is time to eat.

There is an admission price of 50 cent for the play and those who wish to stay for the gussie—and who doesn't?—will be asked to pay extra.

The After-Dinner Speakers.

All things considered this banquet promises to be the brightest event in the history of Chicago—considering the limitations.

Among those that William F. Dunne is going to call on for remarks at the banquet are: William Z. Foster, Max Shachtman, C. E. Ruthenberg, Harrison George, Steve Ruhicki, T. J. O'Flaherty, Sam Hammersmark, Jack Johnstone, Thurber Lewis, James P. Cannon, Arne Swabeck and other well known characters.

word of discussion of the proposition.

Denounce Fellow Dog Contract.

The yellow dog contract was denounced as a challenge to "Our American Constitution." It was declared as fully destructive of human liberty as a condition of peonage.

"It shackles the workmen's hands," says the report. "It prevents him from voluntary association with his fellow workmen. It prevents him from having a voice in determining the terms of employment and conditions of labor."

"It makes him a voiceless human cog in the machinery of industry, it transforms him into a helpless victim, made such so that the employer may establish autocracy in industry." Except to "denounce and condemn," however, it offered no method of fighting the "yellow dog" contract.

Cites Industrial Development.

Again the question of industrial development in this country came up when Delegate T. W. McCullough was reporting for the executive council's report committee, stating that, "modern industrial development has gone forward so rapidly, that even the closest observers are unable to keep fully abreast of it."

The report declares that, "since the dawn of the post-war era we have known such manipulation of antagonisms as make the high feance of the earlier part of the century appear like the innocent amusement of amateurs."

It cites the fact that "thousands of the employes of the various great manufacturing and transportation concerns of the country have invested large portions of their savings in these concerns lured on by the specious and attractive promises from stock promoters or from the management."

"Employs Ownership" Discussed."

Delegate Parcy Thomas, commercial telegraphers, pointed out that these forms of "employe ownership" were especially prevalent in the communication industry, which he said was capitalised at ten billions of dollars. He cited especially the American Telegraph and Telephone corporation capitalized at fifteen hundred million dollars and the Western Union Telegraph company capitalised at two hundred million dollars. Delegate Thomas pointed out that common and preferred stocks totalling forty-two millions of dollars was listed on the New York stock exchange which, if they were ever assessed will would result in a rainfall that has not been exceeded since the flood."

other court in an effort to prevent it from enjoining some other party.

Delegate Hussey argued the delegates to vote for judges who understand the labor movement claiming, "they will not enslave you." The committee report was adopted.

Say Little on Wage Policy.

This convention has said very little about the new wage theory promulgated at Atlantic City last year. No effort has been made to show that it has brought results.

Declarations were adopted endorsing co-operation between unions and management, providing for the union-menagement scheme that is supposed to combat and eliminate company unions. It is declared:

"Many 'open shop' managements in recognition of the interdependence of process have organized channels for employe representation and company unions, which it is alleged have some of the external aspects of trade unions. But they are essentially and fundamentally different in the potential, spiritual and subcentive forces that constitute the difference between merely working together and co-operation."

It is announced that Major Peter J. Brady, president of the Federation Bank in New York City, has been appointed by President Green as the A. F. of L. representative at the American Legion convention in Philadelphia. It was Major Brady who recently escorted President Green and members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor thru the Plattsburg Camp in New York state.

Delegates from Florida warned workers against coming to that state under the present conditions.

A "Mild Attack."

The convention voted concurrences in the rather mild attack on the Communists contained in the executive council's report.

Greater activity in collecting funds for the Gompers' memorial was urged. Altho Gompers has been dead now almost two years only $98.50 for his memorial had been collected up to August 31, 1926, according to the official financial report.

When the question of furnishing a room at the building of labor department of the league of nations at Geneva, Switzerland, came up, Delegate Furpeach told the delegates that the statues before the entrance to the building represented a Goddess of the Fertility, whose name had also escaped his memory.

While the delegates burst into laughter President Green commented on the appropriateness of these two figures.

Cloakmakers of Chicago Assess Selves for N. Y.

S. Kirschbaum company, who this week received their scheduled raise in wages, announced that they had voted to add to their assessment the increase they had received. Their wages were increased from $2 to $5 a week. This announcement was greated with great applause. The cutters of the same company did the same thing last week, when they received their increase.

As practically every garment worker in Chicago is scheduled for an increase this week, it is expected that they will all follow the lead of the handsewers, pressers, and outfitters, and donate their increase to the cause of the New York strike.

The joint board was instructed at the meeting to wire the New York union greetings from the Chicago workers, expressing their approval of the militancy with which the strike is being conducted, and promising all the financial aid possible.

The Second Step.

The second step in relief plans will be taken on October 21 when a conference of representatives of all labor organisations in the city will be held to discuss plans of lining up the entire Chicago labor movement behind the strikers.

N. Y. UNIONS JOIN PROTEST OF STRIKERS

Needle Trades Move to Aid Cloakmakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Plans are now being successfully completed, it was announced last night at the offices of the Emergency Labor Conference, 180 East 26th Street, for the march to city hall Saturday at noon in which thousands of trade unionists are expected to participate. The demonstration will form at Union Square and will proceed downtown to city hall.

A committee, which is expected to consist of John Coughlin, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council; Morris Sigman, president of the I. L. G. W. U.; Louis Hyman, chairman of the cloakmakers' general strike committee; J. M. Budish of the Capmakers' Union, and other prominent trade unionists of Greater New York, will appear before Mayor Walker to protest against the wholesale arrests and other police brutalities inflicted upon striking cloak pickets in the garment zone.

Sullivan Accepts.

John Sullivan, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, has wired his' acceptance of the post of honorary chairman of the Emergency Labor Conference to help the 40,000 striking cloakmakers and to combat the injunctions obtained by employers against the garment workers and the traction workers.

In the interim, a series of meetings and stage, to give financial aid to the cloakmakers are being arranged.

Needle Trades Act.

The Joint Council of Capmakers will hold a mass meeting today to determine the form of financial support to be given the garment workers. At the same time, shop chairmen in the dress industry will meet for the same purpose. The Furriers' Joint Board will hold a meeting of shop chairmen the same time.

At a meeting of Raincoat Makers, it was decided to tax 1,300 members $1 each per week for the support of cloakmakers for the duration of the strike. This course was adopted at the suggestion of A. Wetzgart, manager of Local 20, Raincoat Makers' Union, Another $4,500 had been raised thru a $5 tax of the membership.

To Give $10,000.

At a meeting of the United Workmen's Co-operative Association, which runs Camp Nitzedaigat at Beacon, N. Y., a motion was adopted to appropriate $10,000 for the cloakmakers' cause. The association was addressed by Ben Gold, manager of the Furriers' Joint Board, who made an impassioned appeal for the strikers.

The general picket committee of the striking cloakmakers yesterday announced success in stopping nonunion work in six of the largest shops in the city. The picket committee has been renewing its activity in Bath Beach, Brownsville and East New York with signal success, I. Goretsky, chairman of the committee, announced. Goretsky, who has been a thorn in the side of the manufacturers, has been arrested for "malicious mischief" and has been held in $5,000 bail.

CALLES FAVORS ANTI-IMPERIAL BRUSSELS MEET

Full Text of Cable of Acceptance

BERLIN.—The full text of the cable-gram of support and endorsement of the Brussels anti-imperialist congress to be held in January, 1927, has just been published by the International Organizing Committee:

"I received your cable in which your organization (The International League Against Colonial Suppression) supported us on behalf of all affiliated bodies and parties in the fight against catholic reaction; also informing us of the international anti-imperialist conference to be held in January in Brussels, and that this congress will be ready to aid Mexico in its fight. I ask you to convey my profound thanks to those who signed the cable of felicitations to us, and assure them that my government is prepared to continue its work against backwardness and fanaticism without any reluctance, not only on behalf of the Mexican people, but also in order to contribute to the defin. liberation and greatness of all nations.

"I would be very glad, if your league would accept a representative of Mexico on its executive."

Delegates from South America and Central America are assured. The Chinese-American Brotherhood of New York has written its approval of the Brussels conference. In a letter to the All-America Anti-Imperialist League they say:

"In regard to the Brussels conference, we are fully in favor of this movement . . . If there should be anything that we can do for you in order to make your move successful, we are glad to do it in any way within our limited capacity."

European Steel Trust in an Agreement With Metal Manufacturers

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—Almost the single topic in financial circles last week was the international steel agreement, which, it is now believed, will almost certainly be joined by the smaller Central European countries. The last opposition within Germany is now known to have been overcome thru the new agreement between the home Steel Syndicate and the Association of Iron-Consuming Industries.

The consuming manufacturers agree to cease agitation for reduction of steel duties, while the producers undertake not to exploit the international agreement in order to raise home prices and not to expand further into the domain of finished manufactures.

Further, they agree, to make the international agreement contingent on the granting of favorable import conditions by France for German metal manufactured wares in the expected commercial agreement.

German steel experts declared positively last week that neither America nor England has anything to fear from the international combination. The first effect of the agreement will be to advance Continental prices.

These, however, will only gradually reach the level of German home prices, and it is presumed that in the meantime the export bounties of the German steel syndicate will be continued.

Manufacturers Hear Pleas for Russ Trade

NEW YORK—(FP)—"The whole trouble between Russia and America is founded on ignorance of America regarding conditions in Russia," stated Col. Hugh L. Cooper, consulting engineer, to the National Association of Manufacturers' convention session on Russia. "The Russian government as it exists today is not only stable, but an honest one so far as graft is concerned." He urged that a delegation of 50 from the U. S. Chamber of Commerce go to Russian to study market conditions.

Interested in Power.

"I predict that eighty soon after they return to the United States, there will be an arrangement between this country and Russia for settlement of existing difficulties and for increasing trade between the two countries," Cooper is interested in the Dnieper river hydro-electric power development planned by Russia. His brother is the promoter of the project to utilize the power of the Bay of Fundy tides between Maine and New Brunswick, Canada. Maine is supporting the plan and work has begun.

Russia needs credits "not for war supplies, ammunition or other infernalia of destruction, not even for articles of consumption," Isaac J. Sherman, director of Amtorg Trading Corporation, told the convention. She needs long-term credits "exclusively for constructive purposes, for means of industrial and agricultural production." H. Parker Willis, vice-president N. Y. Journal of Commerce, told of observations he made on his tour of Russia this year. "Factories are finished the finest and workers are

Trade Union Unity in Cecho-Slovakia Near Realization

PRAGUE—(FP)—Half a million organized workers comprising the unions in Czechoslovakia affiliated with the Czech and the German national federations may soon be brought into a single organization. Progress in negotiations between the two federations since the Karlsbad conference of Sept. 15, at which Secretary Odegeest of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions presided, is reported satisfactory to both sides.

The two groups have made an agreement to establish joint trade union committees. Only the principles to be applied by these joint committees have still to be ratified.

MEXICAN LABOR UNIONS MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

Crom Wins 2,000,000 in Eight Years

MEXICO CITY, (By Mail) — The Mexican Federation of Labor, known familiarly as the CROM from the initial letters in Spanish, now counts a membership of approximately 2,000,000 industrial and farm workers according to Ricardo Trevino, general secretary of the organization which embraces over 2,200 industrial unions and about 2,200 rural organizations.

Only Eight Years Old

Those leading spirits whose virtue and personal force have counted so largely in the rapid, sturdy and widespread growth of a labor movement in Mexico look with satisfaction on the measure of success labor has attained in organization since the inciplency of the CROM only eight years ago.

But they do not stop at this landmark. New units of workers are coming into the CROM every day and the Central Committee now holds for the goal that the time will not be far distant when there will not be a single individual among the vast number of Mexican workmen who does not at least know how to read and write. The requests for school books and supplies, for libraries, in fact for everything serving for the education of the masses fairly pour into the offices of the Mexican Federation of Labor.

Want Schools — And Get Them

Local groups of workers and farmers form every part of the Republic at the same time make urgent appeal direct to Pres. Calles and to the Department of Public Education asking that primary and rural schools which are indispensable be established and teachers appointed to take charge of instruction. President Calles has already responded to the eagerness of the people for education with the establishment of some 3000 rural schools. And this is only a beginning he says.

Prussian Diet Riots over $5,000,000 Gift to Kaiser Wilhelm II

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—The Prussian diet, dominated by socialists, was forced to adjourn in an uproar, when Communist members attacked the government proposal to give the ex-kaiser $5,000,000 and three castles as compensation for the loss of his throne.

Particularly did the Communists point out that the giving to the kaiser of the Hohnberg castle implied that the kaiser was to return to Germany to live. The socialists defended the project on the ground that giving him the castle allowed them to tax the $5,000,000 granted him, but failed to point out why he should be given this in the first place.

A body of 100 surrounded finance minister Hopker-Aschoff who spoke in favor of the proposal. But the Communists became so spirited in their demonstration that fist fights and general rioting forced adjournment without action.

Venezuelan Dictator Crushes Labor Unions and Bans all Weapons

CARACAS, Oct. 14.—(FP)—President Gomes, who has been dictator of Venezuela for some 23 years, has caused his congress to enact a law forbidding the importation into Venezuela of black and smokeless powder and knives and machetes which are not to be used for domestic, agricultural or industrial purposes.

This is an addition to the existing law against importation of "elements of war," and is construed by Latin America as an indication that Gomes fears another revolt.

Last year the dictator released from prison a long list of liberals or political suspects who had survived long periods of confinement in various fortresses. He did not, however, raise the ban against trade union organizes. The only labor organization in the country is one created by Gomes for purposes of parade.

Mexican Labor Greets Rangel

THE labor movement of Mexico has recently had the privilege and the pleasure of greeting one of its oldest comrades who has just been released from thirteen years' imprisonment in an American jail for so-called political crimes.

Jose Maria Rangel is the man's name. He is old, quite old. He is broken in flesh. Only the light of his eyes could not be wholly put out. More than all else his eyes tell the story of the wrong done to the brave soul within. For thirteen years from his prison in Huntsville, Texas, Rangel's eyes saw afar the passing of the day and the coming of the night and, at all hours, inhumanity more terrible than was ever convincingly told in words.

AS one sees his eyes, it becomes impertinent to ask him what he has done, what has been done to him. Everything is irrevelant save the feeling that tragedy such as has teased great minds of all time for adequate expression is here incarnate in a human frame that can yet breathe, within a heart that still is beating and a mind that can yet put the things of the world in order and reach out to things beyond the world.

This man was a dreamer. He preferred to make his dream a reality rather than to be at peace with things as they are. He loved his fellowmen. When in his native Mexico, tyranny wrought the unhappiness of the masses, there was no leisure, repose or delight for him.

RANGEL was among the first men in Mexico who, conscious of the rights of their class and unable to bear the dictatorial regime of Porfirio Diaz, began to agitate in the name of social freedom. Flores Magon, the Vazas and a handful of other Mexican workers in Mexico began to organize associations of workers.

They were persecuted by the Diaz regime and often compelled to seek refuge in territory of the United States. Rangel was several times imprisoned by Mexican authorities. At last in 1910 he was dragged to an underground prison in Mexico City where the liberal revolution of Madero found him and liberated him.

THEN Madero was murdered by the most bloody tyrant Latin America has ever had to suffer, Victoriano Huerta, and the dreamer, still unchastened, more than ever impenitent, once more took up his work for the redemption of the laboring classes in Mexico.

The United States, as it happened, was that year of 1913, committed to a policy of strict neutrality. Rangel and his followers were caught in American territory while they were preparing an armed movement against Victoriano Huerta, Madero's assassin. They were sentenced by an American court to imprisonment for no less than five or more than ninety-nine years, and hard labor.

FROM 1913 until now, the patriotic offenders were victimized by petty officials of the Texas state government to whom Mexicans are creatures for extermination. For thirteen years, Rangel and his little band of liberty-loving comrades breathed foul air, were beaten and tormented, had heat in summer and cold in winter for their enemies. Some of the men died. Others, in an attempt to liberate themselves, killed their guards and were slain by the law.

Rangel lived thru it all. He is only sixty years old. Could be hale and hearty. Instead, there comes at times a flush over his pale cheeks, his eyes have an unwordly glimmer, and a little cough shakes him. His hair is all gray. His body is bent.

BUT it was because there were enough men of the stamp and resolution of Rangel that Mexico is free at last from the rule of Diaz and the rule of Huerta. Rangel seems perplexed and a little unaccustomed to the Mexico he now finds.

It is too much like the Mexico he dreamed of, conspired for, revelled in while international authorities chased him from city to city until they finally caught him and bound him and caged him to break him.

IT was thru the constant efforts of the Obregon and Calles govern ments and at the continued instance of the Mexican and American labor organizations that Rangel and the survivors among his followers were finally released. The organization of the American Federation of Labor delights him. He can still feel pride.

He is proud that because there were men of his quality—men like Flores Magon who died in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas—Mexico has now e national labor organization able to take care of itself and of the country.

RANGEL, with arms that move fitfully, seems literally to take Mexico's labor movement and wrap it about his gaunt, bowed figure. The flush lights up his cheeks again. His eyes blaze with feverish pain and the little cough drives knives into his lungs.

Soviet Union Raises Wages; Lowest Paid Get Largest Raise

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 23 (By Mail).—The Council of People's Commissars of the Soviet Union approves of the proposal for increases of wages for the workers in the metal, textile, coal and other industries and for the railway, post and telegraph workers. At the same time the Council of People's Commissars requests the proper authorities to bring about a reduction in the administrative and economic costs in the socialized industries and in the transport, post and telegraph apparati.

Concerning this measure the commissar of labor, Comrade Schmidt, declares that the wage increase for the workers in the lower wage categories, in those branches of industry where wages have lagged behind the general level of wages will amount approximately to 10 per cent. The individual wage increases of the various branches of industry will be determined upon the revision of the collective agreements.

Perhaps Crane Would Like to Begin Talking About Serious Matters

WASHINGTON—(FP)— Charles R. Crane of Chicago, former minister to China and adviser to Woodrow Wilson, lunched at the White House on Oct. 7 and discussed foreign policies. Crane has been active and persistent in opposition to recognition of the Soviet Union. Some of his properties were nationalised at the time of the revolution of October, 1917.

Speculation was rife as to whether he came to advise Coolidge on Russian, Syrian or Chinese matters. Pressure from business groups in favor of negotiations with Moscow has lately increased.

M. Ninchitch gave the correspondents to understand that Jugoslavia had practically given up hope of

Reactionary Germans Want von Seeckt Not to Resign from Post

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—The resignation of General Hene Von Seeckt, following exposure of his granting permission to Prince Wilhelm, son of the former crown prince, to participate in German army maneuvers, is causing great commotion in the army.

The reactionaries have always counted on Von Seeckt to use the army with an iron hand against working class rebellion and his resignation from commander in chief of the reichswehr, now before President Hindenburg, has alarmed the officer class to the point of "taking drastic measures" to prevent its acceptance.

As the participation by the royal family in the army of the republic is forbidden by the peace treaty, and as the general has admitted it was allowed, the council of ambassadors is to consider the affair and may send a strong note of protest to the government.

PRAGUE, Oct. 14.—The Czecho-Slovakian cabinet, headed by Jan Cerny, has resigned and has been succeeded by a ministary under the leadership of M. M. Svehla, who has previously served as premier. Dr. Edouard Benes remains as foreign minister in the new cabinet.

MOSCOW, Oct. 14.—(FP)—In the hope of making the 200,000 gipsies within its borders learn the advantages of systematic labor, the Soviet Union has begun to establish shops and workers' associations among them. The first 2,500 have been enrolled. A state commission has undertaken the task of transferring these wanderers to locations where they may steadily reside.

Schools have been established for the gipsies, and a commission of scholars has been working out a gipsy alphabet. Within a month the publication of school books in the gipsy language will begin.

BRITISH MINERS ASK YOU TO GIVE ONE MEAL A DAY

Bread Means Life and Victory to Strikers

October 1st marks the sixth month of the great British coal miners' strike. The crucial hour approaches —threatening and menacing. Both sides are measuring their final strength. Victory will go to the side that can hold out e month or six weeks longer.

Heroic Fighters.

For one-half year the miners of Great Britain, their wives and children have fought with their backs to the wall—dry-eyed and bleeding from wounds that seemed never to heal. Children die of hunger; women age overnight, and men become physical wrecks from the went of bread. But yet they fight on.

On October 5 the International Workers' Aid of America received the following appeal from its sister organization in England, which speaks on behalf of the women and children:

Comrades and Friends of America:

We thank you from our hearts for what you have already done for us, and wa ask you again and again to stand by us. We will do with very little, but we must have BREAD AND MILK.

The masters and the government are both tightening the circle around us. Even the military forces are being prepared against our man. They do not fear to die in combat, but if we are to win this battle—this battle for the right of the workers to live and for the right to be organized, then brothers and sisters of America and of all other countries, you must not forsake us in this, the final hour, when every leaf of bread means life.

We ask you to help us that we may be able to eat at least one meal a day, for that you send us your donation. Now and tomorrow and until we are the victors.

(Signed) WORKERS' INTERNATIONAL RELIEF COMMITTEE.

The International Workers' Aid calls upon all workers and friends to heed this call for help and to send all contributions immediately to our national headquarters at 1553 W. Madison street, Chicago, Illinois.

Russian Government Encourages Book Study

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 14 Russian workers are hungry for knowledge, Miss L. Haffkin Hamhurger, chief librarian of the Institute for Library Science of the All-Union Lenin Memorial Library, Moscow, told the American Library Association convention at Atlantic City. "At night one sees thru the windows of houses, old and young pouring over books. Large meetings are held where lecturers talk on all subjects from science to literature. Working women hold meetings to learn and discuss problems. The government and private societies are working for the education of the adults and vocational education has increased 70% since 1914. Russia is happy in its new form of government with its huge masses of people enjoying a comparative prosperity that it never dreamed of under the czars."

Arms Ban at Mexican Border.

CALL CONFEREN TO FIGHT THRE ON PHILIPPIN

Time Is Near to Ass Independence Demand

Urging upon all sincere advocates of Filipino independence that now i the time to declare themselves e a group of organizations including the All-America Anti-Imperialist League and the Fellowship of Reconciliation has issued a call for a conference to meet in Washington Dec. 17-19. According to the announcement:

Fear Death Blow.

"Every day's news makes it clear that the forces of American imperialism are preparing to deal a final death blow to the national aspirations of the people of the Philippine Islands. Governor-General Wood's autocratic regime has reached the stage of pronounced conflict with the Filipino people. Civil liberties have been wantonly infringed. Filipino leaders have been imprisoned for daring to criticise the general.

"The Wall Street interests," it says, "fired by the sudden realization that the Moro provinces of the islands contain 1,500,000 acres of the best rubber-growing land in the world, have launched upon an elaborate and spectacular campaign for intensive exploitation of the Philippines, under monopoly, colonial conditions. They have such determined support from Washington that decisive steps to accomplish their ends are plainly about to be taken. The Bacon bill, which already before congress, would take away 52 per cent of the territory of the Philippine Islands and place it under dictatorial and exclusive American rule, thus creating a new Ulster in the Philippines. The two Kloss bills further threaten the authority of the Philippine legislature. Now President Coolidge announces that one of the principal points of his forthcoming message to congress will deal with the Philippine question."

Would Defend Jones Law.

This means, according to the announcement, determined drive for the repeal of the Jones law of 1916 giving the Filipinos some share in the Philippine government and promising them eventual independence; attempts to destroy the Filipino independence movement; tightening and perpetuating American imperialist rule in the Philippines.

The special committee for organizing the conference includes, among others, Georgia Brooks, executive secretary; Duane Swift of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, treasurer; Moorfield Storey, Albert F. Coyle, E. C. Wentworth, William H. Holly, Clarence Darrow, Robert Morss Lovett, Waldo Frank and Phil E. Zimmerman. The call for the conference a point of focus for mobilizing all of the anti-imperialist forces in the country and for attracting nation-wide attention to the cause of Filipino independence.

Warns British Labor of Renewed Assault

LONDON—(FP)—Warning British labor of coming attacks on trade unionism, George Hicks, the new head of the Trade Union Congress, condemned company unions and appealed for amalgamation of unions and united front in defense of every group attacked by employers. Hicks sent the message while on the way to the A. F. of L. convention as fraternal delegate from the T. U. C.

"Our first and foremost job is to unleash the miners in their struggle," he said. "Then the whole trade union movement has got to be equally ready and alert to support any other section of workers which may be attacked."

Dealing with the concerted attack by the employers and government on the legal rights of trade unions, he pointed out that the Tory convention will consider political means of placing the heart out of trade unionism.

"The so-called company unions are likely to prove a very sinister factor in breaking up our forces unless we crush them right from the beginning. A man who joins a company union puts his very soul in the keeping of the capitalist enemy." Hicks warned.

Stressing the necessity of amalgamating trade unions, Hicks appealed for sinking all differences in the enemy was at the gate. "Amalgamation," he said "must now be our watchword. The consolidation and strengthening of our forces is a vital and imperative necessity."

"There is not a man or woman active in our movement," he added "who is not convinced that the next government in this country will be a labor government."

Y. WORKER CONCERT NETS $1,300 IN N. Y.

First Cannon Is Fired in Big Driye

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—To the tune of $1,300, New York Communism started its reply to the appeal for immediate funds in the "Keep the Daily Worker" campaign.

This is the amount, above all expenses, realized at The DAILY WORKER concert held at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave., Sunday afternoon when the first cannon in the battle to collect $15,000 right now in the New York district was touched off. The campaign for this quota is to be carried to every last of the section and every nucleus already actively engaged in the fight.

Divide Honors.

Honors for the success of the concert as the first word in the drive were divided between the speakers who made the appeal for funds, Wm. F. Weinstone, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, and Pascal P. Cosgrove, former owner of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, the artists who delighted the 2,500 listeners who packed the Opera House, and the Daily Worker Builders' Club.

The Mandolin Orchestra Lyra, with Max Goldenstein conducting, won long-lasting applause.

Fine Program.

The program containing ten numbers was one of headliners, and was marked by variety. George Halprin showed himself complete master of the piano in his Chopin, Liszt and Moskowski numbers. Edith Segal brought down the house with her Russian folk dances filled with artful suggestion and the charm of "sweet sixteen." Playing with fine concert, the trio composed of Elfrieda Bose, violinist, Nesum Benditsky, cellist, and Samuel Josps, pianist, won hearty applause and the demand for encores. Raisel Starkman possessing a contralto voice of arresting purity delighted joy. Sophie Melzer accompanied her. The solo work of Alfrieda Bose, violinist, was delightful as was also the cello number of Nesum Bendituky. All the artists donated their services.

Is Only Weapon.

"The daily circulation of the capitalist press in the United States is $2,000,000," said Weinstone in his closing appeal for funds to help The DAILY WORKER. "And what have the workers to combat this army of lying liars? Our weapon only, The DAILY WORKER.

He told how the New York press had maintained a conspiracy of silence concerning the strike of the thousands of clothmakers despite the fact that there had been a mass meeting attended by 25,000, and hundreds of arrests.

"Every time a poodle dog sneezes in the home of the wealthy you'll find his picture in this same capitalistic press," said Weinstone amid laughter.

Necessity to Struggle.

Cosgrove pointed out the absolute necessity of the workers having an organ of expression if they are to carry on the class struggle.

Following the concert, L. E. Katterfeld, eastern agent for The DAILY WORKER, pointed out the results of this concert had produced twice as much as the previous Daily Worker concerts put together. He said, however, that the remaining thousands in the New York quota must be raised immediately to save the organ.

Lee Kling and Arthur Smith were announced as the New York winners of the Trip to Moscow campaign which ended July 4.

New Hampshire Holds First Conference on Problems of District

By BERT MILLER.

The state of New Hampshire, with its many miles of territory and its few isolated units, offers a difficult problem to the district organizer, who wants to maintain contact with his units. The railroad fare to these points is prohibitive. A tour means a waste of much valuable time away from the center. Written reports are uneven and most difficult for the Finnish comrades in this part of the country.

The proposal of a regional membership conference was therefore made to solve the difficulty.

Arrange Conference.

Comrade Passanen, the active secretary of the West Concord branch, with the help of his comrades arranged the musical and financial entertainment for Saturday evening, Oct. 10, at Scandia Hall, West Concord.

The attendance was excellent including party and non-party members.

On the following Sunday, the party conference began lasting all day. The cities represented were Keene, Enfield, Wilton, Concord, Penacook, covering in all an area of about 100 square miles.

The proceedings were carried on in Finnish, so that every comrade felt fully able to express himself. The remarks of the district organizer were translated.

The meeting began with a report of the district organizer on the activities of the party in the election campaign, on the industrial field, defense work, relief, etc. Attention was then called to the DAILY WORKER campaign and to the various activities to be emphasized in the future. An immediate collection was taken up for the daily, collection books were distributed and plans were outlined for running affairs for raising additional money.

Give Much Relief.

This was followed by a report of units which showed considerable activity in raising money for Passaic, for the British miners, getting subs for the daily, defense, women's clubs and for the Finnish club. The report showed that sympathizers were actively helping the party in its campaign and the English speaking elements were co-operating. Comrades from other units raised questions and criticised freely. Attention was called to the lack of industrial activity, to insufficient English contacts, to poor functioning of fractions and to the necessity of a more solidified state-organisation. It was voted to ask the district committee to approve of the formation of a sub-district for the Hampshire with an executive committee (centered in Concord, the state capitol) in charge. Comrade Penesen was chosen as organizer.

The remainder of the session was devoted to a discussion of the question of forming a national federation. Almost everyone participated, but the question was left open for further discussion.

MONEY IS NEEDED FOR CAMPAIGN OF WORKERS PARTY

Half Million Pieces of Literature Out

The campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party is now in full swing in New York City. The candidates are all on the ballot. Meetings are going ahead with full steam, and the campaign of the party is beginning to assume the aspects of a real good political campaign. The district executive committee of the party has issued a call to the Socialist Party for a united front but this has been ignored by the socialist party, and the Workers (Communist) Party is now going ahead with its own campaign and its own candidates.

Over a half million pieces of literature have been printed and are now being distributed by the membership through their various sections. The district campaign committee has printed the following election literature: "Smith the Strikebreaker," the acceptance letter of Gitlow, candidate for governor, the acceptance letter of William F. Dunne, candidate for U. S. Senator, so that every comrade fully able to express himself. The remarks of the district organizer were translated.

The meeting began with a report of the district organizer on the activities of the party in the election campaign, on the industrial field, defense work, relief, etc. Attention was then called to the DAILY WORKER campaign and to the various activities to be emphasized in the future. An immediate collection was taken up for the daily, collection books were distributed and plans were outlined for running affairs for raising additional money.

LABOR MINISTER OF CANADA JOKE FOR CANADIANS

But "Labor" Swallows Heenan as "Veteran"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OTTAWA, Can., Oct. 14. — Labor men thruout the dominion are laughing over the tribute paid Peter Heenan, Canada's new minister of labor, in a recent issue of Labor, the railroad men's official publication, printed in Washington.

Labor, in hailing Heenan as a "veteran trade unionist," says his selection is gratifying to organized labor.

A Pulpwood Laborite.

Heenan was for a number of years a "labor" representative in the Ontario legislature, where members of the various parties often joked with him because large pulpwood concessionaires in New Ontario, where he lived, never opposed his election. His opponents, altho of reactionary parties, were considered less desirable than this passive laborite.

A Strike-Breaker Labor Minister.

Mackenzie King, who recently returned to power, was hard pressed for a labor minister. James Murdock, who held that portfolio in a previous King cabinet, was badly beaten a previous election, while in the last campaign his conservative opponent received 12,300 votes as against 8,182 polled for this "labor" champion running on the liberal ticket. Murdock is best remembered as the vice-president of the Railroad Trainmen, who sent strike-breaking railroad men into Winnipeg to break the 1919 general strike.

His successor as minister of labor was J. C. Elliott, a member of the present government, who, as a lawyer, represented a farming constituency.

King Worked for Rockefeller.

King was Canada's first minister of labor, qualifying for this job by his experience as handy-man for John D. Rockefeller, Jr., during the capitalist labor war in Colorado during the early days of the world conflict.

King, with a salary of $25,000 a year, a private secretary and a valet, visited Colorado, where he developed the plans for the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. to build its company "union" plan which it crippled unionism. King, however, frequently refers to this "record" when he is twitted by conservative opponents for his failure to join the Canadian army in the world war. His excuse always is that he, altho a single man, did more serviceable work than he would have performed in the trenches thru bringing "harmony" between capital and labor in Colorado.

LYNN, Mass.—(FP)—The 250 workers at Gold Bond Shoe Co. are striking by Boot & Shoe Workers union order to enforce the agreement obtained seven months ago with the firm. The company has violated both wage scale and working conditions provided in the pact.

NEED FOR REAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS' UNION SHOWN BY U. S. STANDARD LOWER THAN IN 1906

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Urgent need for the organization of farm labor into an all-embracing agricultural workers' union is emphasized by a U. S. department of labor report on wages of farm labor compared with the cost of living. The report shows that farm wages have not kept pace with the cost of living. The purchasing power of the average farm worker in 1923 was 7.3 per cent below that in 1913 and 17 per cent below in 1906.

Need of Unionism Clear.

The unfavorable position of the unorganized farm worker appears in striking contrast with the position of organized labor. Union wages, according to department of labor figures, will today purchase about 28 per cent more than in 1919 and 15 per cent more than in 1906.

In 1923 the average monthly farm wage without board was $47.88. This compares with a peak of $65.08 in 1920 and with $30.31 in 1915. Farm wages have thus fallen more than 26 per cent since 1920 to a level about 58 per cent above 1919. The cost of living in 1923, according to the department, was still 75.7 per cent above 1913.

Get Less Than 1906 Standard.

Farm labor hired by the day averaged $2.40 without board in 1923. In 1920 this casual farm worker averaged $3.56 and $1.46 in 1915. Thus farm workers paid on a daily basis are averaging more than 32 per cent under 1920 and only 63 per cent more than in 1913.

The department's figures showing monthly and daily farm wages without board and the change in purchasing power in terms of the 1919 dollar are:

| | Farm Wages Without Board. | | Purchasing power |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Per month | Per day | in 1913 |
| 1906 | $24.19 | $1.33 | $1.13 |
| 1919 | 30.31 | 1.49 | 1.00 |
| 1914 | 29.72 | 1.49 | .96 |
| 1915 | 29.97 | 1.46 | .94 |
| 1916 | 33.53 | 1.80 | .91 |
| 1917 | 46.19 | 2.00 | 9.4 |
| 1918 | 49.13 | 2.61 | .87 |
| 1919 | 56.77 | 2.10 | 1.06 |
| 1920 | 65.06 | 3.56 | 1.09 |
| 1921 | 49.59 | 2.17 | .92 |
| 1922 | 49.09 | 2.14 | .85 |
| 1923 | 46.74 | 2.48 | .94 |
| 1924 | 47.33 | 2.44 | .96 |
| 1925 | 47.88 | 2.47 | .93 |

In only two years since 1919 has the purchasing power of farm wages been higher than in 1919 and even then it was less than in 1906. In every other year agricultural workers have been worse off than in pre-war years. In the two years 1921 and 1922, when deflation was at its height, farm workers could purchase only about five-sixths as much as in 1913 and little more than three-fourths as much as in 1909.

Shows Industry Leech on Farming.

The contrast between the present purchasing power of farm workers and that of organized city workers emphasizes something more than the need for a strong agricultural workers' union, altho that is of immediate importance. It reflects also the exploitation of agriculture as a whole in the interest of capitalist industrialism. Cheap food is essential to the great city empire which is growing up to the glory of the international bankers whose capitol is New York.

FEDERAL CHURCH COUNCIL DENIES UNIONIST PULPIT

Tom Tippet Proves His Suspicion Correct

DETROIT, Oct. 14.—Not only the Detroit but the federal council of churches, a national organization of protestant churches supposedly devoted to furthering social justice, wills under the pressure of outside power when it comes to freedom of the pulpit. This was exemplified when the invitation of the council secretary, James Myers, to Tippett to speak in Detroit from a pulpit while the American Federation of Labor was in convention was suddenly cancelled.

Not Exactly Correct.

"I'm awfully sorry," Myers told Tippett, who is educational director for the miners in southern Illinois and is himself a member of the United Mine Workers, "but we can't let you speak because you are a member of the Workers Party."

"But I'm not a member of the Workers Party and never have been," Tom replied.

All the Same.

"That may be true," Myers said, "but the papers might say you are and that will be just as bad for us as if you were."

Tippett later said that he had accepted the church invitation with great reluctance as he thot it of little use to try to speak to church people on industrial problems and that he was not at all hurt to find his inner convictions confirmed by the action of the federal council.

PENN. LABORITES RUN MAURER FOR STATE ASSEMBLY

Bower Is Also Nominated for Legislature

READING, Pa., Oct. 14.—(FP)—The Mellon-Grundy $10,000,000 slush fund spent in the Pennsylvania primaries wasn't successful in putting across the pious Pepper for U. S. senator. But these famous American anti-labor agencies effectively bought the machinery of the state government and will undoubtedly elect one of their creatures governor in November.

Faced with the prospect of an aluminum administration without a single able opponent in the state legislature the socialists and trade unionists of Reading are running James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor and Andrew P. Bower, vice-president of the federation, as candidates for the state assembly.

Elected Three Times.

Reading has elected Maurer to the legislature three times in the past. The socialist vote of the last municipal election forced the old line parties to combine to beat the socialist running for mayor.

Maurer will pull a lot of non-social ist and scattered votes on the strength of personal popularity in this town where he was born and started his career. The keenest of the ward bosses concede that Maurer and Bower are probably going to win on November 2.

MONTREAL—(FP) The value of the products of the mines and quarries in Quebec province during 1923 was 25.7% greater than in 1924. But the payroll of labor was only increased 5%, according to the provincial department of mines.

In asbestos mining 2,836 workmen were employed, their payroll being $2,724,000, or on the average less than $1,000 a year. The value of the asbestos output, at the point of production, was $8,976,900.

GEORGE L. BERRY STRIKEBREAKER; LOVES THE BOSS

Proud of His Scabbing Achievements

By The Federated Press.)

DETROIT— (FP)— Prevalent notions that the American Federation of Labor confronts the most terrific battle in its history in its sanctioned intention to organize Henry Ford's auto workers are discounted by Maj. George L. Berry, president Intl. Printing Pressmen's Union.

"The idea that we've got to fight our employers is a relic of a bygone day," Berry confided to The Federated Press. "I know there's a lot of talk here," he continued, waving his arm vaguely toward the other delegates, "that we'll have to have a knockdown battle with Ford if we are going to unionize his employes.

Help the Boss Says Berry.

"But that's all reactionary talk. The modern, the progressive way of handling such a situation is by co-operation, not conflict." The major, who owes his title to service in the supply department of the army during the world war, deprecates strikes and direct incitements to workers to unionize in favor of more pacific means.

"For example, the thing to do here in Detroit is to send labor's efficiency and production engineers into Ford's plants. There we can show him waste in the human factor, perhaps waste in the machine processes. We can save him hundreds of thousands, millions, thru our expert counsel.

* * * *

Talk to Henry.

"Then we can go in the front door —not the back, mind you—sit down with Henry Ford in his office and prove to him in dollars and cents that co-operation with his employes is more profitable than lack of organized relations. Instead of shouting unions at Ford under his factory windows, we can go into partnership with him if this plan is followed."

Asked if he would propose this plan to the convention he responded wearily, "What's the use? They're not advanced mind."

Proud of Scabbing.

He referred with pride to his handling of the New York pressmen's strike a few years ago. Going to New York immediately he told the publishers, he said:

"This isn't your strike. I'll break this strike. Well, I beat in strike-breakers from all over the country to man the presses, broke the strike and then got a $5 increase. Just two weeks ago I went back to New York on the expiration of the contract. The publishers came to see me at my hotel. A week later they trot back an offer of a $5.50 increase. That meets my request for a small raise, I told them, but now I want you to issue a public statement that this raise is given the pressmen because of their policy of co-operating with their employers, helping the technical advance of the industry and adding to the efficiency of newspaper publication.

Owns Three Banks.

"Write it yourself, George" they countered.

"That's the policy that wins. We have three banks under our control now and an experimental printing shop at Pressmen's Home, Tenn., where we spend $750,000 a year without producing one piece of commercial work. That money is the best money our union spends, for it represents our contribution to the advance of the printing industry, to the creation of larger profits for employers and consequently bigger wages for the employes.

"That's the new gospel of labor," was Berry's benediction to the interviewer.

How Passaic Women Handle Scabs

By LEONA SMITH

MONDAY night, at a meeting of Workingwomen's Council No. 8, Passaic, it was found that one of the council members had become a scab. This council meets on South Street, near the Gera Mills. It is a neighborhood that has been kept very clean of scabs. Already the children had a picket line around the scab house and were walking up and down, howling and singing.

"So that's why she went on the picket line by Botany, so she would not be known around here," the women said. Everybody was excited. If the members of the workingwomen's councils were going to become scabs, what kind of an organization would we be? Something must be done.

We elected a committee of four ed!" It seemed that the women's husband had met them at the door with a stick. It was really he that had driven his wife back to work. The children rushed in between so that he could not hit our women. One of them, Mrs. Waldroff, had managed to get into the house in spite of the stick.

We went on with our business, and pretty soon Mrs. Waldroff came back. She had talked with the scab woman and showed her how she was betraying the workers if she went back to the mill, now when we had held out so long to win the strike. "I was scared," said Mrs. Waldroff. "But I went in there anyway. You got to have nerve to do things." And she had been successful, for, the scab woman had promised not to go into the mill any

WAR DEPARTMENT CREATING THE MILITARY MIND

Poor Pacifists Simply Paw the Air

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Compulsory military training is kept in, principle under direction of the U. S. war department to create "military mentality" not military skill, in the opinion of Reinhold Niebuhr, writing in the first issue of the revived World Tomorrow. Niebuhr, pastor of Bethel Evangelical church in Detroit, is one of the two clergymen whose churches were not closed to the message of organized labor. Niebuhr's congregation kept its door open to Albert F. Coyle, editor Locomotive Engineers' Journal, speaking for the federal council of churches on union labor and the church.

War is Inevitable.

The baneful psychological effect upon the average member of the R. O. T. C. (Reserve Officers' Training Corps) is to incline him to the conviction that war is natural and inevitable," says Niebuhr. There are over 60,000 students in high schools, preparatory schools and colleges compelled to take military training, while all the war department's outspoken arguments have been shattered.

"The spirit of free co-operation, which is the basis of democracy, and the spirit of intellectual curiosity, which is the basis of science, are both alike imperiled by the military mind which makes unthinking obedience the summum bonum in the hierarchy of virtues," declares Niebuhr.

Pullman Porters Have Jurisdiction Problem to Fix at Convention

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A "conspiracy of silence" is evident in the Chicago newspapers in and around Chicago in any and everything relating to the present day organization of the pullman porters into their own, independent union.

Altho the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters held on over-flow meeting with nearly three thousand people present on October 3, which was addressed by important speakers, not a single Chicago newspaper mentioned the event. Reporters from several papers were present, but evidently their accounts of the enthusiasm of the Chicago porters did not sound exactly in key that may have hankered to the jingle of corporation money. The great Pullman company has its offices in Chicago and is never without heavy advertising favors to dispense.

It is not always necessary to take a mortgage on a man's soul to secure his services. Often it suffices to buy his second hand automobile.

20 Millions Changed Hands in Series Bets

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Not less than $20,000,000 changed hands on the world series which resulted in a victory for the St. Louis Cardinals over the New York Yankees in seven games. This was the estimate of Broadway gamblers today as the big "pay-off" began. It was said that $2,000,000 were bet on yesterday's game alone.

The event thus became the biggest betting series on record, in addition to being the richest. All attendance records were broken when a total of 328,051 persons saw the seven games and the total receipts of $1,207,564 was another high water mark.

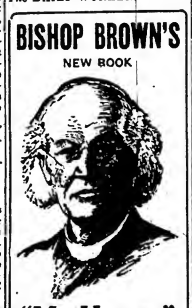
BISHOP BROWN'S
NEW BOOK



"My Heresy"
The autobiography of an idea.
"Bishop Brown's book will do much to open the minds of those who still accept the doctrines of supernaturalism. It will help to destroy illusions about the sacredness and holiness of the pillars of the Church, in this case represented by the House of Bishops. It reveals a man whose honesty and courage will win the admiration and respect of his readers."—From a review of "My Heresy" by C. H. Roth-

By Upton Sinclair

Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair

This meeting with Paul was the most exciting event of Bunny's life. It transvaluated all his values; things that had been wicked became suddenly heroic, while things that had been respectable became suddenly dull. Bunny, confronting the modern industrial world with its manifold injustices, had been like a man lost in a tangled forest. But here he had been taken up in a balloon, and shown the way out of the tangle. Everything was now simple, plain as a map. The workers were to take over the industries, and run them for themselves, instead of for the masters. Thus, with one stroke, the knot of social injustice would be cut!

Bunny had heard of this idea, and it had sounded fantastic and absurd. But now came Paul to tell him that it had actually been done! A hundred million people, occupying one-sixth of the earth's surface, had taken over their industries, and were running them, and would make a success of them—if only the organized greed of the world would stand off and let them alone!

Bunny took Paul in his car, to show him what had happened to the field while he had been away. They went winding in and out among the derricks, stopping here and there to chat with some friend among the workers. They drove down to the main road, where stood the new refinery, that wonderful work of art. Before them rose a great building, made entirely of enormous baking-pans set one inside another—a stack half way to heaven; the angels were making caramels for the whole world, daintier with a new, patented flavor, and sickish sweet odors that spread over the hills for miles and frightened the quail away!

It was twilight, and the white steam that rose from these pans had a faint violet tinge as it merged with the sky. Electric lights came on, white and yellow and red, until the place looked like a section of Coney Island. And this resemblance increased as you drove farther, and came to a building, long and low, in which forty-four Dutchmen sat hidden, puffing on forty-four pipes, and doing it all in unison, like an orchestra; the most comical effect you could imagine—forty-four exhausts all keeping time, quick and sharp—puff-puff-puff-puff-puff-puff!

Bunny felt his old embarrassment in connection with the Paradise tract; his title to these vast possessions was not clear; and Paul was bound to be jealous, realizing how his family had been tricked. But, then, in swift flashes of revelation, Bunny discovered how completely out of date these old feelings had become. Nevermore would Paul be jealous for his lost heritage; never would he consider the claims of the Watkins family—any more than the claims of the Ross family! The Paradise tract belonged to the Paradise workers; the beautiful new refinery was a ripe peach, hanging on a tree and waiting to be picked! All that was needed was for some one to point this out to the men. If Paul had not been weak and exhausted, he might have pointed it out that evening and they could have taken over the plant, and had it ready for operation under the new management by morning! All power to the Soviets!

VII

Bunny went back to the university, charged with these electrical new thoughts; at one moment he would be trembling with excitement, and at the next he would be frightened to realize what he had been thinking. Some instinct warned him that the idea of expropriating the industries of Southern California would find no chance with his class-mates; so he contented himself with telling the good tidings about Russia—that the revolution was not a blind outburst of ferocity, but the birth of a new social order. Bunny told this; and Peter Nagle read the gospel with his large mouth wide open; while Gregor Nikolaieff said yes, but why had they got his cousin in jail; and Rachel Menzies said they had got thousands of Socialists in jail; and Billy George said, "Let's get a group of fellows together and have Paul come and talk to them."

The rumor spread with magical swiftness through the university and the quick imaginations of Bunny's friends supplied all those details about which he had been silent. Bunny Ross knew a workingman who was an out-and-out Bolshevik, and had made Bunny into an out-and-out Bolshevik, too. "The millionaire red" became his future designation. Men and women gathered round to question and argue with him; the arguments often broke up with furious word rows, but all the same it was interesting, and they came back for more. Bunny was made into a center of Soviet propaganda; for, when they drove him to the wall with their arguments, what could he do but go to Paul for more facts, and then come back and hurl them at his adversaries' heads? His fraternity brothers sat up half the night with him, wrangling over his challenge to everything they considered good.

With rest and home cooking Paul picked up considerably, and in a couple of weeks came down to Angel City to meet a friend. Bunny joined him, and had another adventure, in the person of Harry Seager. This man, ten years older than Paul, was the head of a small business college, who had put his affairs into a partner's hands and gone in for "Y work" during the war. They had sent him to Siberia, to help those two hundred and eighty railway men whom the bankers were paying. He had travelled up and down the line, seeing everything there was to see, and now he had "kicked over the traces," and was telling the truth about the situation, in spite of the protests of the "Y" authorities, and the army, and the state department, and everybody that could put pressure on the head of a business college in Angel City.

American Capitalism's Stinking Brew

The competitive struggle for wealth and power, the prime moving force of capitalist society, is producing in America some of the most obscene developments on record.

It suffices to mention only a few of the most recent occurrences:

There have been such inspiring things as the wholesale bribery of the electorate in Pennsylvania and Illinois, the exposure of the filth and corruption in which the whole state of Indiana wallowed under the rule of kleagles and klaliffs with such trimmings as rape and murder, the open gang warfare in the streets of Chicago, the second largest city in the United States, the never-ending exposure of bribery and other forms of graft on the part of prohibition officers, high and low, the spectacle of a former attorney-general shown guilty of corruption on a grand scale—altho the jury disagreed—the exposure of Frank Farrington as a $25,000 servant of the coal operators while holding office in the miners' union, the unashamed pandering to representatives of blood-stained royal houses as in the case of the queen of Roumania.

We have skimmed only the surface of the evil-smelling mess which American capitalism brews, but it is enough to turn the stomach of a Dyak head-hunter.

All of these noisome happenings are accompanied with paeans of praise for the great and glorious christian civilization which accepts as an institution such horrible manifestations of bestiality as the murder by mobs of four Negroes in seven days—sacrificed on the stinking altar of white supremacy.

"Capitalism," said Marx, "came into being dripping with blood and dirt from every pore. It will go out the same way."

If in its present "healthy" period, American capitalism reeks with such rottenness, what will it become as the American working class begins to seriously challenge its power as decay sets in?

Cleaning the Augean stables was child's play compared to the task of disinfecting that the workers in this country will have when the proletarian dictatorship drives the diseased rats of capitalism into the holes and corners from which they will be chased.

Giving the American labor movement the cleansing it needs so badly will be good training for the bigger task.

Silence Aids Reaction in Mexico

One of the most important developments affecting labor is America, and internationally as well, arousing the deepest interest thruout the world, namely, the controversy between Mexican labor, the government and the catholic church, was not even discussed at the A. F. of L. convention when it came on the floor.

It is obvious that tremendous pressure was brought on the Mexican delegation by A. F. of L. officialdom to agree to this manner of disposing of a life and death question of the Mexican labor movement and we can only guess at the role the state department played in these negotiations.

No more striking proof of the manner in which the present trade union leadership subordinates fundamental principles to internal politics has been given. A straight from the shoulder declaration for the separation of state from church in Mexico, unequivocal support of the agrarian program contained in the Mexican constitution and denunciation of all attempts to take advantage of difficulties created by counter-revolutionary activities in Mexico to bring that nation still more under the domination of Wall Street, is the least an honest leadership could have done and preserved its self-respect.

The suppression of the entire question is objectively a repudiation of the policy of the Mexican labor movement and will be so construed in imperialist circles.

The official colonial policy of the American Federation of Labor, judged by this action alone, is hostile to the basic needs and demands of all the Latin-American peoples because in one form or another they are grappling with the same conditions which the Mexican labor movement faces.

Silence on this subject gives consent to the attacks of reaction.

COMMITTEE ON CHILD LABOR GIVES SOME POINTERS TO MANUFACTURERS WHO PLAN STUDY OF CONDITIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(FP)—Pertinent reminders regarding short-comings of various state laws on child labor are given in The American Child, organ of the National Child Labor Committee, in commenting on the five studies proposed by the National Association of Manufacturers. Howell Cheney of Cheney Bros., silk manufacturers, is chairman of the manufacturers' association committee on junior education and employment, which is making the child labor studies. The association has not previously been known to show any but a pro-child labor and anti-legislation attitude.

Poor State Protection.

The National Child Labor Committee, which has worked for the protection of American child workers for a quarter of a century, reminds the manufacturers' investigators that in nine states children of 14 may go to work without showing any evidence of educational attainment whatever, and in seven of these states the compulsory school attendance period ends at the age of 14.

The second reminder is that in 18 states the law does not require a certificate of physical fitness signed by an authorized physician as condition of employment for any child under 16.

The third reminder is that in 12 states it is now unlawful to employ children under 16 more than eight hours a day.

The fourth reminder is that in 17 states there are no laws to prohibit children 14 to 16 from oiling, wiping or cleaning machinery in motion.

manufacturers' association proposes are: 1. Laws of various states on employment of minors; 2. number of child workers under 16 and kinds of work; 3. number, nature and causes of accidents, hazards of trades to children under 16; 4. extent to which 16 years olds stay in school with comparison of promotions and results of child workers under 16; 5. whether some basic plan of education should be given to or required of all children, regardless of differences of individual ability or circumstance.

Sandwich Millionaire Drowns.

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 14.—D. P. Davis, who rose from a vendor of sandwiches in Jacksonville shipyards during the war to one of the state's wealthiest men, was drowned when he fell off the steamship Majestic in midocean this morning, according to a cablegram received here today by Arthur Y Milam, vice-president of Davis Island, Inc.

The plan of The DAILY WORKER to organize the workers into shock brigades is the only way to build a militant labor movement.

NEW GUNS FOR AMERICAN IMPERIALISM

As a sort of reminder of the fact that militarism is not by any means dead in this country, the above pictures of new artillery units of the army rather demonstrate that the war-workers are very busy.

Open Shoppers Crow Over Detroit 'Prosperity'

By ROBERT W. DUNN, Fed. Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The city in which the American Federation of Labor is holding its convention is 97 per cent open shop, only 20,000 out of 700,000 workers being employed in strictly closed shop establishments, according to John Logan Dryden, president Detroit Employers' Association, addressing the open-shop session of the National Association of Manufacturers at its 31st annual meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.

"Wages are higher, shop conditions are better" than in other cities, Dryden declared. "Detroit's prosperity is due entirely to the right theory of industrial relations"—meaning the open shop. "We have almost ideal labor conditions, thanks to our board of commerce, citizens' committee, builders' exchange and employers' association."

Cite British Report.

BOTH Dryden and John Henry Hammond of Brown Bros. & Co., chairman of Bangor & Aroostook Railway, devoted large chunks of their prepared speeches to crowing over the report of the so-called labor delegation which visited America at the expense of the London Daily Mail. Dryden quoted the complimentary bouquets attributed to this delegation in reference to the open-shop automobile metropolis. Hammond, citing long passages of the British report, remarked:

"It is difficult to believe you are reading a report of a trade union delegation and not that of a delegation of bankers." The report emphasizes the lack of the class war spirit in the United States, the importance of the sale of corporation stock to employes, and the weakness of trade unions here, particularly in the metal trades. There is much about "co-operation and fellowship" between capitalist and worker, which Hammond heartily endorsed. It is well known that the British labor men were generously quoted by American corporations, publicity departments without the delegates actually making the statements.

Edgerton Presides.

THE open-shop session was opened by John E. Edgerton, president N. A. of M., in the Astor gallery decorated with placards bearing anti-union slogans such as "closed shop cripples labor supply," "closed shop brings industrial decay," together with appropriate quotations from Henry Ford, William Howard Taft, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman and Senator Reed of Missouri.

Edgerton assured the 270 delegates, over 70 representing employers' associations, that the N. A. M. "is not an anti-labor organization." He contended it "is consistently and distinctly pro-labor," for it is interested in all labor, not only in the 10 per cent organized in trade unions.

WITH this "delusion dissipated," he introduced Dr. George B. Cutten president Colgate University, who declared that "the power in industry has been coming back into the hands of the employers, for labor has abused its opportunity."

He conceded that the unions had been of some use to the workers, but that the wide open shop was the solution of the troublesome labor problem. He bewailed the "sloth, sabotage and strikes system" of the A. F. of L. unions and lectured the bricklayers (who were not present at the Waldorf) on their failure to lay sufficient bricks (to suit the academic mind on laborers') taste. He insisted, contrary to reports of economists and engineers, that the last ten years had seen increased wages but lower production.

Call Labor "Morons."

REFERRING to unions' demand for a share in management problems, he asked what the "moron shoveling ashes over the back fence of the factory yard should have to say about such matters." He left the impression that trade union card carriers who insisted on collective bargaining were morons or worse.

He assailed sympathetic strikes and declared that the late Samuel Gompers made labor an "outlaw" when he once asked god to "save labor from the courts." When Gompers said this, Cutten stated, "he did more harm to labor then anyone else."

BANKER HAMMOND dwelt on "co-operation" and gloried in the tendency to sell stock to workers and introduce group insurance schemes. He declared magnanimously that he was not opposed to labor organization, but that it should not interfere with industry. He told how the railway heads broke a strike of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and how it defeated the shopmen in 1922. Since then "the slackers have been eliminated and the men are faithful and loyal." He said railroads' efficiency was not due to the unions, but in spite of them. The banker, in loaning money to railroads, took into consideration "the added risks" induced by labor organizations, he said.

Praises Detroit Churches.

JOHN L. BELFORD, Brooklyn catholic priest, who once said socialists should be hung, attempted to prove by Pope Leo XIII encyclical letter of 1891 that "there is no such thing as class hatred" and that "the right of private property is absolutely sacred." Belford provoked the longest outburst of applause when, referring to Detroit churches' action against A. F. of L. speakers, he roared: "I don't believe a church is a place for labor leaders to talk. If they want to talk let them go and hire a hall."

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

ON O'LEARY AND A. F. of L.

W. F. Dunne, Editor: Note enclosed clipping of the World. This O'Leary is a rat, stool pigeon, for Gompers. Green doesn't seem to want him, so he is sticking around, hoping to get in the gravy again that he had for years under Gompers.

He always rape men like Ben Gold and you. He lied about Passaic. His record is full of rat cries about Reds. O'Leary has always rotted his articles. He is a Civic Federation-Ralph Easley-Payroll Fat Boy.

So now, you have the Fakers up a tree on 40-hour work week. Web unions had a 40-hour week, and 36-hour alight week, until sold out in the Web strike in New York. Now it is 48, 46, and they talk of 48.

Electrical workers on newspapers got a wage increase, but went back to 48 hours. So now they claim the A. F. of L. policy is shorter work day and have the nerve to point to the auto industry as their work.

I look forward to your story of Portland to Detroit. Old Gompers was a "bunk artist," but Green and the others are just as good. Woll is in the insurance game. They all want to get a game going, as they seem to know they cannot kid the workers much longer.

A Worker Who Reads All Your Writings.

Red Cross or "Red Tape."

Dear Comrades:

It seems to me it would be a good thing if someone would investigate the doings of the Red Cross. We are a sudden we are advised to pay cash for everything. I just heard today that in Cumberland, Maryland, $50,000 was collected for the Red Cross, and millions all over the state. Is that money used to pay officers of the Red Cross? It looks like a shame. We received letters from acquaintances asking if we needed help. We wrote no, the Red Cross and state take care of us. And I suppose thousands have done the same. Now this report is out, money on the strength of such report is collected, we have to pay cash for everything, and if we have no cash what then? Does the salary for Red Cross have to come first.. Some graft! Do not tell my name, just say Ft. Lauderdale, as I have to suffer. We slept from the 17th of September to October 4 in tent under two standing walls, altho I begged to fix up some way so we be dry at night, but got no relief till the 4th. It is more red tape than Red Cross.

Yours truly,
A. Reader,
Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION

By ERNEST HAECKEL

In spite of this broadening tendency in theology and philosophy at the beginning of the twentieth century, it is an unfortunate anachronism that the ministers of public instruction of Prussia and Bavaria call in the wake of the catholic church, and seek to quench the spirit of the Jesuits in both lower and higher education. It is only a few weeks since the Prussian minister of worship made a dangerous attempt to suppress academic freedom, the palladium of mental life in Germany. This increasing reaction recalls the sad days of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, when thousands of the finest citizens of Germany migrated to North America, in order to develop their mental powers in a free atmosphere. This selective process formed a blessing to the United States, but it was certainly very injurious to Germany. Large numbers of weak and servile characters and sycophants were thus favored. The fossilized ideas of many of our leading jurists seems to take us back sometimes to the Cretaceous and Jurassic periods, while the palaeozoic rhetoric of our theologians and synods even goes back to the Permian and Carbonaferous periods.

However, we must not take too seriously the anxiety that this increasing political and clerical reaction causes us. We must remember the vast resources of civilization that are seen today in our enormous international intercourse, and must have confidence in the helpful exchange of ideas between east and west that is being effected daily by our means of transit. Even in Germany the darkness that now prevails will at length give place to the dazzling light of the sun. Nothing, in my opinion, will contribute more to that end than the unconditional victory of the idea of evolution.

Beside the law of evolution, and closely connected with it, we have that great triumph of modern science, the law of substance—the law of the conservation of matter (Lavoisier, 1789), and of the conservation of energy (Rober Mayer, 1842). These two laws are irreconcilable with the three central dogmas of metaphysics, which so many educated people still regard as the most precious treasures of their spiritual life—the belief in a personal God, the personal immortality of the soul, and the liberty of the human will. But these great objects of belief, so intimately bound up with numbers of our treasured achievements and institutions, are not on that account driven out of the world. They merely cease to pass as truth in the realm of pure science. As imaginative creations they retain a certain value in the world of poetry. Here they will not only, as they have done hitherto, furnish thousands of the finest and most lofty stories for every kinds of art—sculpture, painting, or music—but they will still have a high ethical and social value in the education of the young and in the organization of society. Just as we derive artistic and ethical inspiration from the legends of classical antiquity (such as the Hercules myth, the Odyssey and the Iliad) and the story of William Tell, so we will continue to do in regard to the stories of the christian mythology. But we must do the same with the poetical conceptions of other religions, which have given the most varied forms to the transcendental ideas of God, freedom, and immortality.

Thus the noble warmth of art will remain, together with—not in opposition to, but in harmony with—the splendid light of science, one of the most precious possessions of the human mind. As Goethe said: "He who has science and art has religion."

Our Monistic system, the "connecting link between religion and science," brings god and the world into that unity in the sense that Goethe willed, the sense that Spinoza clearly expressed long ago and Giordano Bruno had sealed with his martyrdom. It has been said repeatedly of late that Goethe was an orthodox christian. A few years ago a young pastor quoted him in support of the wonderful dogmas of the christian religion. We may point out that Goethe himself expressly said he was "a decided non-christian." The "great heathen of Weimar" has given the clearest expression to his Pantheistic views in his noblest poems, "Faust," "Prometheus," and "God and the World." How could so vigorous a thinker, in whose mind the evolution of organic life ran thru millions of years, have shared the narrow belief of a Jewish prophet and enthusiast who sought to give up his life for humanity 1,900 years ago?

Our Monistic God, the all-embracing essence of the world, the Nature-god of Spinzone and Goethe, is identical with the eternal, all-inspiring energy, and is one. In eternal and infinite substance, with space-filling matter, it "lives and moves in all things," as the gospel says. And as we see that the law of substance is universal, that the conversation of matter and energy is inseparably connected, and that the ceaseless development of this substance follows the same "eternal iron laws," we find god in natural law itself. The will of god is at work in every falling drop of rain and every growing crystal, in the scent of the rose and the spirit of man.

McNAMARA FLAYS REACTIONARIES IN LETTER TO I. L. D.

What James B. McNamara, labor in San Quentin, thinks of the reactionaries in the American trade union movement is pungently stated in the October issue of Labor Defender, monthly organ of the International Labor Defense, published at 23 South Lincoln street, Chicago.

Writing to James P. Cannon, secretary of the I. L. D., McNamara says:

"I have received a check for five dollars, which is the '10ch monthly prisoner's relief.' I feel very grateful for same and if I never receive any more I shall always keep it in mind, for it is far more than the respectable leaders of the trade union movement have done, in the last fifteen years. With a very few exceptions what a slimy bunch they are. I often wonder if they cannot see where their policy, or program, or whatever they call it, is leading them, or are they too stupid to see it?

New Leadership Wanted.

"It is an awful thing to find fault and criticize, but when all the organized forces of society have, and stand ready to use force against the workers, and Greed, mixing with those forces, condemns the general strike, one is justified in finding fault and criticizing. The workers must respond to a new leadership or all the sacrifices made by the workers in the past forty years are lost.

"Wishing the International Labor Defense success in all its undertakings, I am, decained—

"J. B. McNamara.

We Must Make It Ten Thousand by Monday, October 18

By JAY LOVESTONE.

We must have ten thousand dollars collected by Monday, October 16, Otherwise The DAILY WORKER—this means you—will hear from those to whom it is mortgaged. Unless the necessary additional three thousand dollars come in over the week-end we will not have the paper to print on. The DAILY WORKER has been extremely lenient as a creditor to working class organizations. You cannot expect capitalist organizations to be as lenient with credit to us as we have been with the workers.

But the workers and farmer readers and friends must prove that they are not going to let the DAILY WORKER be crushed in the grip of SLUMBER.

This is a fine start. There is no reason on earth why we can't keep up the pace. There is every reason why we should. In fact, WE MUST DOUBLE OUR PACE IN GETTING FUNDS, or all the splendid efforts put up to date will go to waste.

The week-end is a good time to contribute to the KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND. Saturday and Sunday are the best days to see workers and to get them to do their bit to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The workers in the giant Ford factories have shown their readiness to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. They have given hundreds of dollars. The Ford workers know that they need THE DAILY WORKER and are speeding up to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The anthracite coal miners have dug down deep to help KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

From the soft coal fields, from the steel mills and from the wheat fields, the response has been good.

Boston, Stamford, Conn., New York City, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Va., Chicago, and Los Angeles—are all on the job answering our call to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

BUT MUCH MORE CAN AND MUST BE DONE, AND DONE QUICKLY.

REMEMBER—MONDAY IS THE TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR DEADLINE!

Show that you are a friend of The DAILY WORKER. Help The DAILY WORKER when it is in need. Show your support by deeds. Rush the funds to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. Make Saturday and Sunday, October 16 and 17, banner days in the drive.

Make it ten thousand dollars by Monday, October 18, to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

TO PROTEST BRUTALITY OF POLICE

The Organized Labor of New York Acts

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—To perfect plans for the parade of organized labor to City Hall Saturday at noon to protest to Mayor Walker against the wholesale arrests of striking cloakmakers for peaceful picketing the executive committee of the Emergency Labor Conference, which is also combating injunctions against the garment and traction workers, met at 8:30 last night in the council room of the International Building, 3 West 16th street. The parade in which thousands of workers are expected to participate will start from Union Square.

Relief Organization.

Last night there was a series of mass meetings of organized workers seeking to raise funds to help the cloakmakers in their present strike. The Joint Council of Cap Makers met at 6 o'clock in Beethoven Hall, 210 East Fifth street. Shop chairmen in the dress industry met at the same time at Manhattan Lyceum in Webster Hall, 119 East 11th street. The Furriers' Joint Board held a meeting of shop chairmen at the same time in Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth street.

Chairmen of settled cloak shops met immediately after work at Stuyvesant Casino. The purpose of the meeting was to consider how to make more effective their aid to the cloakmakers still on strike.

A special meeting of the Garage Workers' Association will be held tonight to help the garment workers.

The Protest Committee.

The committee which will address the protest to Mayor Walker against police methods in the present strike consists of: John Coughlin, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council; Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Louis Hyman, chairman of the cloakmakers' general strike committee; J. M. Budish of the Cepmakers' Union and others.

To Protest.

I. Goretsky, chairman of the cloakmakers' general picket committee, was held for the grand jury in $7,500 bail for alleged felonious assault. Union leaders call the charges against Goretsky as being "trumped up" because of his committee's activity in preventing non-union production by would-be strikebreakers who are persuaded not to take the jobs of those on strike.

Arrest a Frame-Up.

The activity against Goretsky, the union pointed out, follows hard upon the arrest of I. Moscowitz, secretary of the picket committee, who received a five-day sentence for disorderly conduct, and the arrest of Elias Marks, vice-chairman of the committee, on another charge.

Goretsky declares that this move against him and his colleagues will fail to break the activity of his committees. He pointed to the stoppage of six non-union shops Wednesday in the downtown district outside the garment zone and the stoppage of a shop in Brooklyn as proof of his assertion.

Strawn Sees Coolidge and Kellogg; Chinese Defeat Powers' Plans

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — Silas Strawn, appointed by Coolidge as the American commissioner on the international commission set up by the Washington conference to fix China's customs duties for her end decide for or about the extra-territorial rights of foreign nations in China, was received by Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg yesterday.

The report to the president is secret and Strawn refuses to comment on the conference, but it is known that the imperialist aims of foreign powers in these matters were utterly destroyed by China's national revolutionary movement.

DETROIT ELECTRICAL WORKERS' SEND $550 FOR PASSAIC RELIEF

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 15.—The General Relief Committee of Textile Strikers, 743 Main Avenue, announced last night the receipt of a check for $550 from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 58, Detroit, Mich., as the first result of a fifty cents assessment that union has levied on its membership for Passaic strike relief.

EX-DRAGON HAS LOOSED TONGUE IS NEW REPORT

"Stevie Has Talked" Is Hoosier State Rumor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 15.—"Stevie has talked! Stevie is back in the fold!"

This was the message brought back today to re-kindle the dying embers of Indiana's independent political house cleaning.

It was brought here from behind the grim walls of the state penitentiary at Michigan City, where "Stevie"—D. C. Stephenson, ex-kleagle dragon who it said lifted the curse which actuated Indiana's alleged puppets of state and municipal officialdom—is in "solitary" serving a life sentence for the death of Madge Oberholtzer almost a year ago.

And the men who brought the new life blood to the omasieted investigation was a public official of high standing—Grand Jury deputy, William H. Schaeffer.

Schaeffer Takes Trip.

Schaeffer, accompanied by Earl Klinck, former ally of Stephenson and co-defendant with him in the Oberholtzer trial, left Indianapolis two days ago, shortly after Stephenson's dramatic appearance before the grand jury, empanneled to probe charges of corruption in Indiana politics, and his equally sensational refusal to talk before a civil court before which he was summoned to give a statement of his assets in a damage suit.

The trip was a compromise arrangement. Court Asher was not satisfied with Stephenson's attitude. And Asher, devoted pal of "Stevie," could not believe the street gossip that his idol had turned him down—had "sold out"—to the very men he had said he would expose on return for alleged promises of freedom. They were with Stephenson for three hours.

He Talks.

Both indicated that Stephenson had gone over all the vast mass of charges that have emanated from him. He discussed and reiterated all of them, verbally, it is believed, but it is known that he did not reveal the location of the documentary evidence which supports his allegations. This, he maintained, as he has in the past, will be produced "when the circumstances warrant."

Both stood ready to give an account of the conference to the grand jury during the day. Early indications were that they would be summoned as soon as that body convened.

Tear State to Pieces.

Thomas R. Adams today said that he had had no official word from Senator Reed concerning the committee meeting but he was vehement in declaring that he would be on hand to be heard by them. There will be others there with him, to corroborate his charges and all members of the party will leave here with the expressed determination to "tear the state into little pieces."

NEW ORLEANS—(FP) — Approximately 500 Orleanians with an estimated pay roll of $100,000 a month will be affected by the proposed removal of the headquarters of the Southern Pacific Railway from this city to Houston, Texas.

K. K. K. DRAGON OPENS UP AGAIN

After D. C. Stephenson, former Indiana ku klux leader, now serving a life term for murder, had startled the country with his threat to expose sensational corruption in Indiana state and local politics, he revealed his attitude and maintained a discreet silence when asked to present his testimony in court. Upper photo shows Stephenson, seated at right, in court at Indianapolis. Guards attending him during his leave of absence from the Indiana state prison, are seen with him. Now another has it that Stephenson is going to "split the beans," evidently by way of further pressure on his former satellites in an effort to get out of the pen.

C. O. P. SENATOR STARTS WAR ON HIS OWN PARTY

Norris Invades Penn. State Against Vare

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The eyes of both major political parties were centered today on Senator George W. Norris, insurgent republican leader of the senate, who will launch a "one-man" crusade tomorrow to overthrow the traditional landslide republican majority in Pennsylvania's pending senatorial election.

Throwing his support to William B. Wilson, democratic nominee, Norris will take the stump with the hope of defeating Representative William S. Vare, republican "boss" of Philadelphia, on the record revealed by the recent senate "slush fund" investigation of the Keystone State's primary. Norris will speak first in Altoona tomorrow night and thereafter devote the remainder of the campaign to "addressing as many voters as can be reached."

The action of the Nebraskan, who is a nominal republican, may be fraught with significance to a good many political fortunes outside of Pennsylvania. For one thing, political leaders here look upon the move as serving notice the insurgents will fight to the bitter end every effort to seat Vare, should he be elected, and also as forecasting another contest to unseat Frank L. Smith, republican nominee in Illinois, if the latter should be victorious in November.

Causes G. O. P. Alarm.

Aside from these two contests, the Norris crusade also caused republican leaders some alarm because it widens the breach between the so-called republican insurgent group and the regular administration ranks. Thus far in the present senatorial campaign the regular republican organization has constantly held out the "olive branch" to the insurgents, extending aid to the candidacies of former Senator Smith W. Brookhart in Iowa and Senator Gerald P. Nye in North Dakota, both insurgents.

BIG RUBBER COMPANIES GET MILLIONS GOUGING WORKERS & CONSUMERS

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 15.—According to the most recent statistics, the wages of the rubber workers of Akron in 1925, when an average of 43,000 workers were employed, amounted to $46,317,000. Net profits in the year 1925, for the eleven tire companies in Akron, which produce 82% of all the rubber tires in the country, amounted to $54,000,000. In other words, the rubber companies, after paying all expenses and putting millions of dollars into sinking and reserve funds, made a net profit of 83%.

Unjustly Convicted, Man Freed, a Wreck

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 15.—Henry Schmidt, a nervous, brooding physical wreck was discharged from the Statesville prison today with a full pardon. He had served six years of a life sentence, unjustly imposed, according to the pardon board.

Andy Berg and Mike Zaitas, also sentenced for the robbery—but for shorter terms—swore at the trial, that Schmidt was not implicated in the robbery.

However, the record shows, police who made the arrest said he was the leader. On this evidence he was convicted.

Wife of Police Head Rents Booze Palace

CLEVELAND, Oct. 15.—The wife of safety director Barry, who cannot rest when hunting down the illicit booze places of other people, has let out a place on St. Clair and Waterloo Road in this city, to people who are conducting an old-time barroom.

This place is fitted with all the appurtenances of the old time her, and yet the wif eof the safety director pretends ignorance as to the situation. "Where ignorance is bliss," and the wife of the safety director gets away with it.

PERMANENT DATE WORKERS UNION WILL BE FORMED

Women's T. U. L. Starts Organization Program

Steps toward the formation of a permanent union of Negro women employed in date stuffing factories in Chicago with the 150 women who are now on strike against the Marsa date factory as a nucleus are scheduled with the announcement Friday that the Women's Trade Union League has started definite activity toward that end.

Agnes Nestor of the league conferred with the strike leaders and officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor Friday to draw up a concerted plan of procedure. The league will co-operate with the federation in forming the union.

Will Be Unionists.

The strikers who are now entering the third week of the walkout in protest against increases in wages and poor working conditions are determined that they will not go back except as trade unionists.

A relief campaign is under way to provide financial assistance to the women, and practically all of the Negro labor unions are backing the strikers. Tho I. W. A. is directing relief plans. On Sunday the strikers will receive credentials from the C. F. of L, it is announced, and a campaign to solicit relief funds from all Chicago labor unions will be launched Monday.

Electricians Aid.

The Negro Electrical Workers' union sent a delegation to the women at their last meeting, proffering the co-operation of the union. The Electrical Workers also contributed money to the strike fund, and offered the assistance of an attorney to aid in legal affairs.

The strikers also announced that it is considering plans to call a conference of all Negro unions in the city with the idea of forming a Negro labor council, which would represent Negro workers in this and all other anti contingencies.

CATHOLICS GET A. F. OF L. TO INVESTIGATE MEXICAN UNIONS; AID PROMISED TO U. S. STRIKES

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 15.— Plans for financing the two Strikes being conducted under the banners of the American Federation of Labor, in New York City and Passaic, N. J., were before the meeting of the executive council here today.

It is announced that $25,000 will soon be available for the Passaic textile strike as a result of action by officials of international unions. Altho details were not available, it is known that ten international unions have each pledged $1000 to Passaic for immediate payment, while nearly a score more has promised to take the matter up with their executive boards as soon as they return home, easily assuring $15,000 more.

In addition an appeal will be sent out to all unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. to contribute not only to the Passaic struggle but also the New York strike, being conducted by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. From present indications the relief campaign in aid of the British coal miners will be allowed to die out.

The executive council meeting is also confronted with the kind of investigation it will conduct into the struggle between the Mexican government and the catholic church in that country. The recommendation adopted does not specifically order that a mission be sent to Mexico. The council might conclude that it can get all the necessary information by correspondence.

It is claimed that the council already has large masses of information on the religious struggle in Mexico. It may adopt the attitude that it assumes toward the Soviet Union, that it knows enough about the problem to give any desired decision. The present attitude that the catholics in the federation are trying to change, is one of "hands off."

Catholics Split

When the struggle of the Mexican workers against the catholic church swept into the floor of the American Federation of Labor here it developed that wide breaches existed in the ranks of the catholic delegates on this question.

The catholic bloc was plit in twain, part of it finding a bitter spokesman against Mexico in James W. Fitzpatrick, member of the Actors' Union, delegate of the Waterbury, Conn., Central Labor Union, while Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, teamsters; John C. Harding, printers, and Matthew Woll, photo engravers, all professing themselves as devout and faithful catholics, rallied to the defense of the A. F. of L. executive council.

To Probe "Crom" and Calles Relations.

President Green, in closing the debate, was the only non-catholic to take the floor on this question. The report of the committee on international relations on the Mexican question merely repeated the position already taken on this matter, with the addition that an investigation be made into the relations between the Mexican Federation of Labor and the present Mexican government.

It was thought for a time that all discussion on this matter would be hushed up. It was freely predicted that no one would speak on this matter. But it became evident as the convention were on that the' died-in-the-wool papists were not to be completely smothered. When Fitzpatrick entered the convention arena as the champion of Rome, there is no doubt but that he had the sympathy and well-wishes of most of the catholic delegates in the convention.

Attacks Mexican Federation.

He launched into a most vicious and vulgar diatribe not only against the Mexican government, but also against Mexican organized labor, worse even than any attack that has been directed against the Soviet Union.

No effort was made to stop him, not even when he turned upon the A. F. of L. officialdom, charging that the "unsolicitated President Green and

NO CHANGES IN A. F. OF L. OFFICIALDOM

Closer Relations With Amsterdam Approved

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 15.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor here made no changes in the personnel of the leading officialdom. There were no contests in the selection of administrative officers for the ensuing year. The administration slate went thru without a sign of opposition.

President John L. Lewis started the annual parade by nominating William Green for re-election as president. Green is a member of the miners' union and Lewis fostered practical flowers galore around the convention hall in his effort to keep the mantle that had fallen from the shoulders of the stricken Gompers" on the shoulders of the former secretary of the miners' union, where they have rested since Gompers died. The results of the annual election was as follows:

The Officials of the A. F. of L.

For President, William Green, miners.

First Vice-President, James Duncan, granite cutters.

Second Vice-President, Frank Duffy, carpenters.

Third Vice-President, T. A. Rickert, garment workers.

Fourth Vice-President, Jacob Fischer, barbers.

Fifth Vice-President, Matthew Woll, photo engravers.

Sixth Vice-President, Martin F. Ryan, railway carmen.

Seventh Vice-President, James Wilson, pattern makers.

Eighth Vice-President, James P. Noonan, electrical workers.

Treasurer, Daniel T. Tobin, teamsters.

Secretary, Frank Morrison, printers.

All the vice-presidents are the presidents of their own organizations with the exception of Duffy, who is general secretary.

Coefield and Berres to Britain.

John Coefield, president of the plumbers, and Albert J. Berres, secretary of the metal trades department, were selected as fraternal delegates to the British Trades Union Congress, while Thomas McQuade, Plate Printers' Union, was selected as fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

Delegate John Mangan.

Chicago Federation of Labor, announced that Coefield had all the necessary diplomatic qualifications of a fraternal delegate, that he also had the physical qualifications, being willing even to swim the British Channel. It is declared that Coefield and Berres were selected to go to Great Britain as the result of a deal made last year resulting in the selection of Frank Farrington and William Hutcheson. Farrington never got to the British Congress, as the result of revelations in Illinois.

L.A. CARPET WORKERS FIGHT 15% WAGE CUT

Injunction Issued by Capitalist Court

By J. O. BENTALL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 14.—A drastic injunction has been issued against the Tapestry Carpet Workers' Union, which has been out on strike in the Philadelphia Carpet Company shop for three weeks, forbidding the strikers from picketing, talking to their fellows, visiting the homes of them and interfering in any manner with the business of the company and its agents.

The injunction judge went the other one better when he inserted in his order that his dictum holds good for officials of the union past, present and future.

Fighting Wage Cuts.

The Philadelphia Carpet Company, which employs about 300 workers, had been picked out to start the program of wage-cutting among the carpet manufacturers of this city. The first plaint was 15 per cent. It was 15 per cent too much. The workers walked out in a body. Picketing was begun and the scabs so far are few and fumbling, unable to produce anything but empty rolls.

The Tapestry Carpet Workers' Union is the strongest and most aggressive organization in this city, and is in complete control of the situation. The tapestry carpet workers are 100 per cent organized, with no break in their ranks. About 25 scabs are now strolling goods in the struck shop and the company is protecting them with a goodly police crew that honors the scabs by hauling them in funeral hearses to and from work. These scabs are so stupid that they ask the foreman if carpets are young carp.

Already the other carpet shops have assessed themselves weekly percentage of wages to assist the strikers, as they realize that this fight must be fought out now or all the workers will get the same wage cut thruout the carpet industry.

Mass Picketing.

The strikers are adopting the method of militant mass picketing. They have sent to Passaic for the songs that the strikers there have sung for 25 weeks and Philadelphia will be hearing music in the near future that will outclass the grand opera, especially among the workers.

Two Painters, One From Chicago, Win Brookwood Tuition

KATONAH, N. Y., Oct. 14.—(FP) — Winning essays in a scholarship contest put William Absolon, Local 273, Chicago Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers, and Lou Hornig, Local 127, of the same union, into Brookwood Labor College this year. The scholarships are provided by their international union and the essay contest was held—with two economics professors of Purdue (Ind.) university as judges—to select the lucky students from a group of candidates.

Absolon wrote on "the closed shop as a means of furthering the cause of labor" and Hornig on "trade unionism and politics." Alternates selected were Franklin Lopez, Local 8, Indianapolis, and Gerald V. Morris, Local 1158, San Francisco.

Forty-seven trade unionists will form the student body at Brookwood Sept. 15 at the sixth year October 13.

Make Electric Light Bulbs Too Fast, Cut Down Worker Payroll

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 14.—(FP) — General Electric is stopping the production of electric light bulbs in Scranton. The management says that labor saving machinery, enabling several times the production per man of several years ago allows the necessary output with a restricted number of plants.

Factories in Minneapolis, St. Louis, Fort Wayne, Ind. and Central Falls, R. I., have been closed in the last few years. The Scranton plant worked only five days a week at 60 per cent capacity the last year. The Scranton plant has been cut to 40 employes from 230 while the company is considering whether it shall be maintained for some other purpose or closed altogether.

Make it a weekly habit.

AKRON BLUECOATS ARREST VENDOR OF "RUBBER WORKER"

Bosses Conduct Campaign of Terrorization

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 14.—Following the terrorization that the rubber bosses have exerted upon the rubber workers, by firing the most prominent among them who dared to join the Rubber Workers' Union, last night, one of the men who was selling the Rubber Worker, the official organ of the union, was arrested.

The men sell the paper when the workers come from the shop on all three shifts. It was eleven o'clock at night and the paper was going well, when a policeman approached John Stonben who was selling the paper, and took him to headquarters.

No Ordinence Covers Case.

There is no ordinance requiring men to procure a license to sell the papers. But the cop thought he could get something against the man by accusing him of distributing the paper free of charge. The paper sells for two cents, and many of the rubber workers do not even ask for change but give the men 5, 10 and even 25 cents.

The lawyers appeared on the scene, and finally the young man had to be released.

Discharge "Faithful."

In the past few weeks a new system has been introduced. This system is called the "merit" system. Formerly a man would be promoted, or at least would not be discharged when times became slack, if he had been long in the service. But now the attitude is that a young man who can produce is worth a dozen who only have service plus. One after the other of the old service men are being thrown into the street, and young virile men are being given their jobs.

The eagerness with which the workers surround the sellers of the Rubber Worker indicates what their frame of mind is.

THE SUNDAY WORKER

FIFTH AVENUE TAILORS WIN 40-HOUR WEEK

Marked Effect on the Unorganized Workers

NEW YORK, Oct. 13, (FP) — The 40-hour week is gained by another group of New York workers. A sharp one-week strike, lining up the smart Fifth avenue shops where ladies order and dressers and furriers do order, was handily won by Ladies Tailors' and Customs Dressmakers' Local Union 38, international Ladies Garment Workers' Union. Numerous arrests enlivened Fifth avenue during the week, without halting the strike.

Eight months a year the straight 40-hour week is to prevail, as with the fur workers' union. Then for four months, during two 2-month busy season periods, the shops will be open Saturday morning also, for a 44-hour week, with straight time for the four hours overtime.

Wages Increased

The 40-hour week will be compensated by a weekly wage three dollars higher than before the strike and during the busy seasons the tailors will be making about eight dollars more for 44 hours than in the same time prior to the walkout. New minimums for tailors will be $58 a week; for drapers, $50, dressmakers, $40 and finishers, $35.

Affects Many Unorganized

Eighteen hundred union members benefit directly and as many more unorganized workers receive average increases of $2 to $5 a week—though still below union standards, — and shorter hours for many.

In fact the advertisements for help in the want columns of the World and other papers from non-union plants promise the 5-day week for many shops as an inducement.

Hundreds of Girls Join Union

Most of the union members are tailors — the highest paid craft represented — but surprising success was had with the strike call to the dressmakers and finishers.

The latter two groups are largely "American girls". Several hundred joined the union and conditions are now ripe for a big organization drive to secure the closed shop in the still unorganized, plants.

Keyes "Unaccountably" Ill in McPherson Case

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14.—District Attorney Asa Keyes, prosecuting the Aimee Semple McPherson preliminary hearing, became suddenly and unaccountably ill today as he prepared to go to court to press "conspiracy" charges against the evangelist and her mother.

Keyes' illness, it was reported, was diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning. Deputy district attorneys Murray and Dennison will continue with the McPherson preliminary hearing until their chief is able to come to court. Keyes' illness, it was said, was not grave.

ALL GLASSES TO VOICE PROTEST FOR ROUMANIANS

New York Meeting Will Expose Tyranny

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—All shades of political opinion will be represented at the Union Square mass meeting which has been arranged by the New York Section of the International Labor Defense for Monday, Oct. 16, at 8:30, to protest against the persecution of political prisoners in Roumania.

Voice Protest.

United in their condemnation of Roumania's white terror, Robert W. Dunn, Bishop Paul Jones, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Forrest Bailey, Ben Gitlow, Carlo Tresca and others will address the meeting and voice the protest of American workers and intellectuals against the inhuman treatment of workers and peasants by the Roumanian authorities.

Denied Civil Rights.

In addition to torture, the denial of all civil rights is being used against political prisoners by the Roumanian government in its effort to crush workers' organizations. The authorities are determined that there shall be no evidence of discontent in Roumania, that all shall appear to be happy and peaceful so that when Queen Maria arrives here seeking a loan she can point to a stable and well-controlled country which would be certain to pay back its debts with interest.

Trial by Jury, in Roumania, has been abandoned in most workers' cases. After beatings and torture, prisoners are tried under martial law by a military tribunal. Prisoners are court-martialled just as they would be in time of war, and to make this seem legal, the government announces all of a sudden, that the district in which the workers were arrested is under martial law—altho no one had ever heard of it before.

One Court Sentences.

One of these military courts, at Kischinev, sentenced 189 prisoners to terms totaling 711 years. The military council of Klausenburg sentenced a group of young workers—all under 20 years of age—to a total of 61 years imprisonment for the crimes of organizing labor.

All the participants in a conference of workers and peasants in Turu-Severin were arrested and kept a day by the police. When they protested against this illegal detention, the police chief said, "I am the law, gentlemen, and I interpret it that as I like."

Labor government action is nothing but the business risk of a Roumanian politician."

Avaracce at Bottom.

All of these proceedings, together with the frightfully brutal treatment of political prisoners, is merely the carrying out of General Averescu's announcement that "Every attempt to interrupt public order by whatever means or in whatever way will be suppressed not only with extreme energy, but mercilessly."

Let the workers of New York City come to Union Square next Monday at 5:30 and show what they think of a government which so persecutes those who strive to better the conditions of the workers.

Ku Kluxers Are Armed Gunmen, Suit in Ohio for Property Reveals

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 14.—The fight that is going on in the Summit county klan is leading to many revelations. When the konklave of the Ku Klux Klan took place in Washington about a month ago, Dr. W. K. Smith, head of the Summit county chapter, was removed from office just as the Ohio delegation was swinging into line in the parade. Then the fight began, the original cause being property in Akron valued at more than $50,000. Charges of insubordination were brought against Smith, counter-charges being freely made. C. Gilbert Taylor, grand dragon of the realm of Ohio, made the following statement:

"I came to Akron Labor Day and saw klansmen carrying rifles and guns on their hips in an unlawful manner."

To this Smith replied, "This month yet, we understand there is to be at Dayton a competitive military drill by the klavaliers. Its (Taylor's) assignment is unique, since they (the Ku Kluxers) marched behind him with rifles and were reviewed by him at Newark (Ohio) when he was conducted into office. He also reviewed them at Beras, leading the parade and one of his staff remarked to me, 'A soldier is under every rock.'"

At the Buckeye Lake konclave, the camp was protected by military discipline, plenty of guns were in evidence, and Evans' own cottage was behind a guard line."

No better evidence is necessary as to the nature of the Ku Klux Klan. It is a militarily armed organization, and the secrecy the workers under stand that it is no "law-abiding," "Christian," organization depending on love, the better it will be for them.

CATHOLICS GET A. F. OF L. TO INVESTIGATE MEXICAN UNIONS

the chairman of the executive council must clear their skirts of the crime and the deception practiced upon them by the Mexican Federation of Labor," that Fitzpatrick denounced as "the kept woman of the Mexican government."

The Mexican question came up in the report of the committee on international relations on the Pan-American Federation of Labor and the Mexican Federation of Labor. It said in part:

"In keeping with the foregoing principles and in the interests of all concerned, it is recommended that the executive council of the American Federation of Labor be authorized to inquire into the relationship of the Mexican Federation of Labor and the Mexican government for the purpose of ascertaining all the facts possible and with special reference to the relationship alleged to exist between the Mexican government and the Mexican Federation of Labor for the information of the affiliated unions."

Delegate Fitzpatrick was on the floor as soon as Delegate Woll had finished reading the report of the committee and moved its adoption. He started out by referring to President Green's comment on the Eddy incident to the effect that there was something about the atmosphere of Detroit that made ineffective all the rules of common decency.

Green Unsophisticated.

Fitzpatrick charged on the Mexican issue the art of deception had been practiced on the unsophisticated president of the American Federation of Labor.

"This Mexican government," he charged, "when stripped of its sheep's clothing, stands forth undiluted in the red underwear of Communist Russia."

Fitzpatrick then told the story of the Irishman who had denied his faith when found drunk in the gutter by two sailors.

The sailors had addressed the Irishman as a "dirty, drunken Roman catholic hunk," but the Irishman had answered, "I'm a liar, I'm a Presbyterian minister."

Fitzpatrick then declared, "For the purpose of this debate I am a Presbyterian minister."

Green the "Kept Women" of Calles.

"I admit that the recommendation of the committee is an honest effort to find out the true conditions south of the Rio Grande," said Fitzpatrick. "I admit it is an effort to get the truth about the Calles administration of the Mexican government and its kept woman, the Mexican Federation of Labor. I know it will not be a bona fide investigation like that conducted under the direction of Mr. Roberto Haberman, Calles' representative about Mexico.

"We have interfered in every row the world over," he went on. "Today before yesterday we knocked the heads off the thrones in Italy," and urged that this was good precedent for interfering in the Mexican situation.

What About A. F. of L. and U. S.?

"There is no question," he said, "about what kind of a government there is in Mexico. It's red from the top of its head to the bottom of its feet. It is our duty to let the Mexican people know it, to reveal to them this foul union of Calles (president of Mexico) and the 'Crom,' (the Mexican Federation of Labor)."

Economic Interest Least.

He charged that it didn't matter whether Jews, Holy Rollers, or catholics were involved, that if the American Federation of Labor was only going to concern itself with man's right to work and have no higher ideals, then it had better go out of business. It was entirely useless.

"After a committee of the American Federation of Labor has investigated conditions in Mexico, it will be in no position as to whether there is a Communist regime in the Mexican Federation of Labor. The first move in the Communist philosophy is to destroy any sense of spiritual values. That is what has happened in Russia. That is what is happening in Mexico. If this goes on successfully then nothing can stop Mexico from becoming another Russia."

Fitzpatrick concluded by declaring that after an investigation has been made that the American Federation of Labor will then take the correct position, that it will act an example for the labor movement of the world and not be under the influence of the paid propagandists of Bolshevist Mexico.

Woll Regrets Division.

Delegate Woll next got the floor for the committee declaring that he was glad Fitzpatrick supported the report of the committee, but claimed it was unfortunate that it had proposed the case before an investigation was made.

"Delegate Fitzpatrick charges that the executive council was deceived," continued Woll. "It is now of the many reports in the archives of the executive council then he would not say that it had been deceived. It sent the best material that the executive council is failing to conserve the interests of the American labor movement.

Feels "The Situation" Also.

"The A. F. of L. is not organized to adjust religious controversies. The investigation will be had and the facts will be made known in the same line of orderly action. We will not permit partisanship to divide us. As trade unionists, let us get the facts. I am of the same faith as the brother who has just spoken and I feel the situation just as keenly as he does.

"I urge no more discussion on this subject. As honorable and righteous men let us give the truth to the world as we trade unionists find it!"

Executive Council Not Deceived.

But Fitzpatrick had forced open the floodgates of discussion. Delegates Harding and Tobin were on the floor close together, while in other sections of the hall other delegates were clamoring for attention. President Green recognized Tobin, treasurer of the federation, head of the teamsters' union and an ardent Catholic.

"As a member of the executive council," he began, "I can't sit idly by and listen to the statements that have been made. We are told that the executive council must clear its skirts of the slime and deception practiced upon it by the Mexican Federation of Labor. I want to say that there is no slime on the executive council. I don't know whether Delegate Fitzpatrick has been in Mexico, but I have been in Mexico," continued Tobin, as Fitzpatrick chimed in with, "I have, too, sir."

Doing "All it Could."

Tobin then told of an incident that happened during the visit of the A. F. of L. executive council to the Pistahkey Military Training Camp in New York. He said that he had there met "Fighting Father" Duffy, a catholic priest who had been with the boys in France. Tobin said that Duffy had studied the Mexican situation and declared that the A. F. of L. has been doing all that it could be expected to do.

"I'm satisfied with Father Duffy's judgment," announced Tobin. "There are a few who are trying to inject the religious question into our American labor movement. We have prevented that issue from being raised and we have brought about the best results for the American labor movement. Every attempt to raise the religious issue has failed and it will fail now. We will not let the Mexican situation, or any other situation, raise this issue. I profess the same faith as Brother Fitzpatrick, but with all the power that is in me I am going to help preserve the American labor movement. Keep out all the religious issues that may come here from Mexico, Italy, Texas, or any other place.

Now, Who's Secrecy Is This.

"We have sent secret documents to Mexico. They cannot be made known now. But they will show that the executive council is doing all that it can and should do in this matter.

"We're old, practical men in the labor movement, we come here from the executive council of the American Catholic Church O. K.'s A. F. of L. activities, the church have said that you have done all that you could have done, we can be satisfied with the work of the executive council.

"Nothing can be gained by heaping abuse upon the executive council, the Mexican people and the Mexican government at this time."

Before the delegates had recovered from this speech, Delegate Harding had the floor, recognized by President Green. Hardly had Harding started speaking, however, when the delegates began yelling, "Question! Question" drowning out the speaker.

When President Green pounded the convention into order, Delegate Harding pounded with, "I am not in the habit of being squelched by any one yelling "Question! Question!"

Harding then told of accepting the invitation of the Calles government to visit Mexico City and he present at the installation of Plutarco Calles as president of Mexico.

Must Keep Hands Off.

"I learned a little while in Mexico," he said, "I learned enuf to believe that the A. F. of L. should keep its hands off insofar as Mexico is concerned.

"I resent the closing utterances of Brother Fitzpatrick."

Harding declared that any trade unionist who has visited Mexico and mingled with the Mexican people cannot help but sympathize with them in their struggles. He eulogized the constitution of the Mexican republic declaring that anyone, after reading it, would stretch out his hand in fellowship to the Mexican people.

Why Not Publish the Letters?

President Green then assured the delegates that the executive council had not been deceived. He declared it had always been wide awake. He said that the letters in the possession of the executive council would prove that they were thoroly alive to the situation in Mexico.

He charged that Fitzpatrick was unfair in his utterances, but let him off by claiming that he made the statements that he did because he did not have the facts. The declaration of the committee was then carried unanimously.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 14.—Re-submission of the eighteenth amendment to congress and enforcement of the Volstead act until a change is recommended was the chief plank in the republican platform adopted by the republican state convention today.

NO CHANGES IN A. F. OF L. OFFICIALDOM

Whether Hutcheson ever got there is not known. He didn't make a report to this convention. Matthew and James B. Connors, vice-president of the Switchmen's Union, who was last year elected as Canadian fraternal delegate.

Los Angeles Next Convention City.

Out of a field of three cities, including Birmingham, Alabama, St. Petersburg, Florida, and Los Angeles, California, the Pacific Coast won as 1927 convention city by a wide margin.

Members of the Sir William MacKenzie mission from Great Britain to the United States, were presented to the convention. These included Ernest Bevin, British General Transport Workers' Union; James Taylor, member of the executive council of the Amalgamated Engineering Society (Machinists) of Great Britain; C. Randolph Smith, for the employers, and F. W. Leggett, for the government. Bevin offered remarks in the absence of the knightly chairman of the commission. Bevin said the commission was here to get a true picture, uncolored, impartial of conditions in the United States.

The committee on boycotts offered a resolution renewing the boycott against the Holland Furnace Co., of Holland, Mich.

Closer to Amsterdam.

On report of the committee on International relations the convention unanimously approved of the efforts of the executive council to develop closer relations with the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam). The report noted with approval the correspondence that had been going on regarding this subject, regretting that no agreement had yet been reached.

It noted with satisfaction that the Amsterdam international had stood as a stalwart bulwark against the effort to substitute Communist activities for trade union activities.

The report looks forward with anticipation and pleasure to the time when the principles of trade unionism will be fully adhered to, making it possible for the A. F. of L. to associate itself with the international Federation of Trade Unions. Correspondence to this end between Washington and Amsterdam will continue.

The action of the executive council in sending out an Appeal for relief for the striking British miners was approved.

Another Stall.

Delegate Furnseth did not defend his resolutions demanding opposition to the world court, the league of nations and the so-called labor heroes of the league. On recommendation of the committee the matter was referred to the executive council. Last year the question of the world court was referred to the executive council for study, but the committee announced that the United States senate voted for the court before the council had completed its study. It was declared that there is no proposal before congress at the present time calling for U. S. entry into the league, so no action was required at this time.

President Green called attention to the fact that William H. Johnston, former president of the International Association of Machinists, was a visitor at the convention. Green said this was appreciated by the delegates.

Ignores a Question.

L. J. Flint, executive vice-president of the Citizens' Committee of Detroit, on behalf of 45 local groups of business men, sent a letter to the A. F. of L. convention urging that, "Before the conclusion of your convention it is sincerely hoped that you will discover this committee. What can the Federation do for Detroit workmen? May this subject be made a special order of business?"

The convention took no notice of the document.

N. Y. Health Center of Garment Workers Helps Other Unions

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(FP)— The ladies' garment workers' union health center of New York is rapidly expanding its medical services to other unions. One hundred and twenty-five members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers received physical examinations and medical treatment since the first of the year.

Three hundred and forty-three physical examinations of members of the Fur Workers Union were given in addition to a special physical examination of three hundred striking fur workers during the recent strike. Members of the Musicians' Union, the Bakery Workers and a number of other unions have taken advantage of its expert service. All applicants for membership to the ladies' garment workers' union must take the health center's examination.

Dr. Georga M. Price, director, attended the International Conference on Tuberculosis in Washington this week and was a delegate to the American Public Health Conference that opened in Buffalo October 11.

MOSCOW AND LENINGRAD WORKERS SWAMP OPPOSITION IN VOTING

By JOHN PEPPER.
Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 15—The unanimity with which the workers of Moscow and Leningrad repudiated the opposition in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union led by Zinoviev and Trotsky is shown by the vote of the party units in these cities as published in Pravda.

In Moscow, 53,950 voted for the central committee of the party while only 178 or 3 per cent voted for the opposition. In Leningrad, 39,728 members voted for the central committee while the opposition polled only 526 or 9 per cent of the votes.

Thus the opposition in these two important cities received about 500 votes, or .57 per cent of the total.

Trade Union Tactics Class Trains Worker for Active Service

The class in trade union tactics and strategy of the Chicago Workers' School, which is conducted by Arne Swabeck, is primarily one of practical training. The first introductory session has been held with an endeavor to gain a sufficient historical background to better understand the character of the various aspects of the trade union movement and to better understand the changes of methods, tactics and policies during the various historical periods.

The historical part is taken up just sufficiently to give the proper basis. Then follows the more important character of the international trade union movement, the trade union movement in the United States during the present capitalist imperialist development, its policies, structure, its methods and tactics. This is the main point of the whole course.

SYNDICALISM CASES BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Ruthenberg, Fiske and Whitney Appeals are up

Decisions of tremendous importance to the labor movement of this country will be rendered by the United States supreme court in its October term on the appeals of C. E. Ruthenberg, Charlotte Anita Whitney and Harold Fiske. The appeals involve the legality of criminal syndicalist laws in three states, affecting similar laws in other states, and will decide the freedom or imprisonment of scores of workers who are directly connected with the cases.

The appeal of C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party arises out of his conviction under the criminal syndicalism law after William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, a co-defendant, was freed as a result of a hung jury. Not only Ruthenberg and Foster, but a large number of other active workers in the labor movement of the country are involved in the famous Michigan Communist cases. All of the defendants were arrested in connection with a Communist convention which was held in Bridgman, Michigan.

If the appeal of Ruthenberg is denied by the United States supreme court, he will be obliged to serve his term immediately. The prosecution has intimated that with Ruthenberg out of the way, Foster will be retried, and after him all the other workers who are defendants in the case.

The appeal of Charlotte Anita Whitney arises out of her conviction under the California Criminal Syndicalism law, for membership in the Communist Labor Party. A contributing "crime" was a speech delivered by her on the Negro question before a women's organization.

Harold Fiske, a member of the I. W. W., is appealing his conviction under the Kansas criminal syndicalism law.

Should the supreme court rule unfavorably on the pending appeals, the criminal syndicalism laws which were drawn up and have been used solely against the labor movement and its development will be strengthened by an O. K. from the highest judicial tribunal in the land. There is no doubt but that this will mean intensified use of these laws against the labor movement.

"American labor must be on its guard for the coming decisions of the supreme court on the three test cases," said James J. Cohen, secretary of the International Labor Defense, which is conducting the defense in the Ruthenberg case. "The criminal syndicalism laws are aimed at the working class as a whole and against the most militant workers in particular. If the supreme court renders a decision which sends Ruthenberg, Fiske and Whitney to prison, the entire American working class must unite in a concerted movement of protest against this attack which is directed at them. We must not permit the existence of a situation where fighting workers are thrown into capitalist prisons and allowed to stay and rot there because of an indifferent working class. International Labor Defense intends to keep the movement of defense for these workers alive until there is no longer any chance that they will be snatched from active work in the ranks of labor and forever away into the living death of imprisonment."

Atheists' Society Launches Public Forum in Gotham

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The first meeting of the newly-organized Ingersoll Forum will be held Sunday evening, Oct. 17, at 8 o'clock. Clement Wood, the well-known author, poet and critic, is to be lecturer and director of the forum, his subject for the first meeting being, "Is There a God?" Speakers from the floor will be a feature of the programs.

Among those soon to speak at the Ingersoll Forum is Bishop William Montgomery Brown, the "heretic bishop." Admission is free to all, and the meetings are held in the Chamber of Music Hall, Carnegie Hall, 154 W. 57th street, Manhattan.

Helping the Boss.

A NEW NOVEL
By Upton Sinclair
(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

Dad was up to the ears just then in work, on account of some wild-catting they were planning on the Bandy tract. But Bunny insisted he must meet Harry Seager, and lured the two of them to lunch, and Paul also, and before the soup was eaten they had got Dad so stirred up that he did not eat any more. Of course he was horrified at their story; but there was no use expecting his mind to work the same as Bunny's. Dad couldn't straighten out all the tangles in the world, and didn't feel the impulse to try. What worried him was that the Japs were in Siberia; and that our diplomacy was so unaware of oil; and most of all, that his son was falling under the spell of wild and dangerous ideas.

This fellow Seager, for example—a big six-foot Westerner, handsome as a Viking and picturesque because of hair turned prematurely grey by his labors; you couldn't deny the fellow's facts, you couldn't think he was lying—but good Lord, there was no use being thrown off your base, and going round the country raising a public disturbance, attacking the government because it had made a blunder in the confusion of war-time, and that hadn't known how to get out.

Bunny dragged his father to a Socialist meeting at which Harry Seager was to speak. It was in a big hall, with two or three thousand people packed into it, and Dad thought he had never seen so many dangerous people in all his life before; foreign faces, dark and sinister, intense-looking intellectuals with hair over their collars, women with short hair and big spectacles, workingmen, sullen and dull, or sharp-faced, bitter—oh, terrible, terrible people! And this man Seager, lashing them to frenzy. Telling about the "death-train" he had seen on the Trans-Siberian—more than two thousand men and women packed into cattle cars, prisoners of the "Whites," who did not know what to do with them, but ran the train here and there, shunting it onto sidings for weeks while the victims perished of hunger, thirst and disease. And American troops standing by, feeding such murderers, supplying them with money, protecting them with guns! Yes, and it was still going on! Right now Polish troops were invading Russia, wearing American uniforms, killing Russian workingmen with American ammunition! What did the people of America have to say?

What the people of America had to say was a roar that sent shivers down the spine of J. Arnold Roes. He looked about him at this human ocean tossed by a storm—hands waving, fists clenched, heads bobbing up and down with excitement; and he knew what it meant—nobody could fool him. When presently the crowd burst into cheering at the name of Lenin, they were not cheering for what the Russian Lenin had done, but for what some American Lenin meant to do. "Hands off Russia!"—that was mere camouflage; what they meant was, "Hands on Ross Consolidated!"

And then, out of the corner of his eye, Dad stole a glimpse at his son. Bunny apparently did not feel one particle of his father's fear! Bunny was like the rest of the mob, his face shining with excitement. Bunny was shouting for "Hands off Russia!"—and either he did not know what this mob meant to do to Ross Consolidated, or else—worse yet—he did not care!

VIII

The little bunch of "reds" from the university had attended this Seager meeting, and next day were all a-thrill with it. Most of Bunny's fraternity brothers refused to go; and more they proceeded to criticize an argument they had not heard! Bunny's feelings boiled over as he listened to them. All this rubbish about nationalization of women, these faked figures concerning millions of victims of Bolshevism! It was a disgrace to a university that such stuff should pass for knowledge, and no effort made to contradict it. Bunny voiced this idea to Peter Nagle, and Peter went home and talked to his father about it, and it came back somewhat changed, he was willing to serve as editor for a student paper to present the truth.

There was another meeting of the conspirators, and thirty dollars was quickly subscribed, and it was voted to publish a four-page weekly sheet of all kinds of truth-telling, to bear the name of the "The Investigator." It was agreed that the best approach to the Russian problem was Harry Seager, because he had been a "Y" worker in good standing; therefore Rachel Morales was requested to write a two thousand word interview with Mr. Seager. Another young rebel was to collect facts and rumors concerning secret payments made out of an alumni fund to bring promising athletes to Southern Pacific. Bunny, as social light of the crowd, was assigned the theme of college snobbery, apropos of the fact that a Hindu student with high scholarship records had been black-balled for the "U."

And then Peter Nagle brought up his favorite hobby, in the form of a poem mildly satirizing God. There was some question as to the wisdom of bringing in the religious issue, but Peter asserted his prerogatives as editor; either he was or he wasn't, and if he was, then he took his stand upon the Russian formula, "Religion is the opium of the people." Billy George backed him up, insisting that the new paper should cover the whole field of modern thought.

Well, "The Investigator" was written, and edited, and set up into galleys, and pasted on a "dummy," and then cut up and pasted differently. At last it was printed; there lay the sheets, fresh from the press, soft and damp like locusts newly emerged from the chrysalis. Next day they would be dry; and meantime, "Sh! Not a word!"

How were the papers to be distributed? There had been much discussion. Bunny, with his lordly ideas, wanted to give them away. But Rachel brought word from her father, the tailor, who was also literature agent for Local Angel City of the Socialist party, that the papers must be sold; people wouldn't respect them otherwise. "What they pay good money for they will read," said Papa Menzies, with proper Jewish insight; and his daughter added, with proper Socialist fervor, "If we really believe in our cause, we won't mind a little ridicule." It was a call to martyrdom, and one after another they responded—though not without qualms.

Summary of the A. F. of L. Convention

The forty-sixth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor made the following record on important issues:

1. Independent working class political action.

The convention reaffirms its stand for support fo candidates on capitalist party tickets.

2. Company unions.

The convention listened to a wordy denunciation of company unions, authorized the executive council to levy an assessment to raise a fund to fight these organizations and then nullified the action by accepting the principle of worker-employer co-operation which is the basis of company unionism.

3. Support of the Mexican Federation of Labor in its struggle against religio-feudal reaction in home and imperialist aggression by the United States.

The convention, after a one-sided debate in which the catholic delegates attacked the Mexican labor movement, adopted a resolution authorizing an "investigation."

4. Trade union delegation to the Soviet Union.

The convention without a dissenting vote concurred in the recommendations of the executive council which stated that no delegation to investigate conditions in the Soviet Union was necessary.

5. Recognition of the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union.

The convention without a dissenting vote concurred in the most untruthful and vicious anti-Soviet Union resolution yet passed by an A. F. of L. convention.

6. Employe ownership and company stock-selling schemes.

The convention denounced such schemes but went on record for the practice of "thrift" by workers and urged them to exercise care in purchasing stocks.

7. Support of Passaic strike.

Swept off their feet by the tremendous sentiment for the textile strikers by their heroic struggle, and with some evidences of old fighting spirit of the American labor movement in evidence, the convention overruled Vice-President Woll, took up a substantial collection in the convention and authorized a relief campaign which has already raised some $10,000 dollars.

Fear of Communist criticism if the strike was allowed to collapse because of inadequate financial support after the A. F. of L. had taken charge of it was undoubtedly of great influence in getting the convention to take the action it did.

8. Organization of the unorganized.

The convention hurled loud and wordy challenges at the Detroit open shoppers, but it failed to meet the acid test of abandonment of jurisdictional claims when it came to a resolution for the organization of the auto industry. The convention action on this question was merely platonic.

9. Support of the British miners' strike.

Secretary Morrison reported that the sum of $100,000 had been raised for relief, but no further action was taken.

An embargo on coal was not even discussed.

10. Militarism.

The convention gave unqualified endorsement to Citizens' Military Training Camps.

11. Support of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' strike and struggle against injunctions.

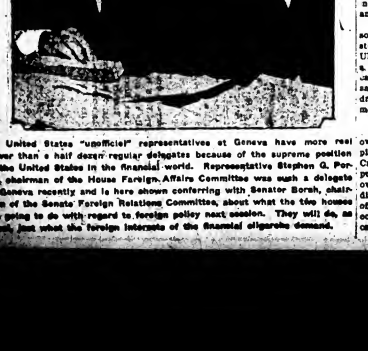
The convention voted support to the strike and the fight against injunctions, but did not endorse mass violation of injunctions.

This summary shows that the convention acted favorably only on purely trade union questions and on these only when it was confronted with a struggle which failure to support would have resulted in severe damage to the prestige of the leadership.

The conclusion is that the left wing must strive to get larger masses into motion, broaden the struggles and in this way force official down to support them or discredit itself still further before the membership.

Only in this way can the American Federation of Labor be jarred out of the rut marked for it by American imperialism.

PORTER RETURNS FROM "OBSERVER" JOB AT GENEVA DISARMAMENT MEET



United States "unofficial" representatives at Geneva have more real power than a half dozen regular delegates because of the supreme position of the United States in the financial world. Representative Stephen G. Porter, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee was such a delegate to Geneva recently and is here shown conferring with Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, about what the two houses are going to do with regard to foreign policy next session. They will do, as usual, just what the foreign interests of the financial oligarchs demand.

From Portland to Detroit

ARTICLE 11.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

We have seen that in Great Britain and America the struggles of the workingclass were more bitter during the development of centralized industry when great changes were taking place in the workingclass itself as well as in the middle class and in the organization of industry.

Engels, writing in Sorge in 1892, speaks of this phenomenon:

"Also here in Great Britain the class struggles were more virulent during THE PERIOD OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF BIG INDUSTRY and died down during the period of Great Britain's undisputed industrial world domination . . . . it is precisely the revolutionization of time-honored conditions thru the development of industry which revolutionizes peoples' brains."

The United States, in spite of its superior position, does not enjoy undisputed hegemony of the world markets. It is preparing to battle for such a position and it is this preparation which is placing new burdens on the workingclass (as well as lower sections of the middle class) and which is the basic motive for the tremendous re-concentration of industrial capital (and centralization of governmental power) which has been so marked in the United States in the last four years.

There is hardly a single basic industry but has been either reorganized, either by new capital issues or by becoming part of greater mergers by the banking groups. For the first time huge mergers are appearing in the soft coal industry and plans have either been completed or are under way for the consolidation in metal mining, rail transportation and the automobile industries. The concentration of control of the electric power industry (an efficiency measure par excellence) is going forward at a rapid rate. Huge electrification schemes (in which railroads are included) are being developed rapidly with the magic title of "super-power."

The rise of industry in the south (iron and steel, chemicals, coal and textiles) with no organization what-ever among the low-paid workers, brings backward southern labor into direct competition with the higher paid workers of the north without any necessity for migration taking place.

The reserve of natural resources is being surveyed by the capitalists with new care and the expansion which is taking place is much different from the old care-free manner in which the early American buccaneers of industry exploited these rich fields.

Efficiency systems are the order of the day, speed-up devices are introduced in all industries and the burdens on the workers consequently increased.

The standard of living of the American workers is still high and the restriction of immigration doubtless has decreased competition for the job (especially that the high standard of living has strings to it.

The purchase of automobiles by workers will serve as an illustration. They are bought on the installment plan, and as insurance companies write off thirty-three and one-third per cent per year for depreciation it is easily seen that the purchase of automobiles does not mean a capital accumulation for the workers.

What it does do is this:

It allows large numbers of workers to enjoy some of the privileges of the middle class without becoming financially independent. The weekly or monthly payments keep him tied to his job but at the same time possession of an automobile strengthens his belief in the beneficent possibilities of American capitalism. But his boasted independence is a fiction.

What is true for the purchase of automobiles holds good for many other semi-luxuries which raise the standard of living of the American workers—radios, home electric washing machines, graphophones, pianos, furniture, etc.

Only a capitalist class occupying a superior position in the world markets could finance such immense outlays as the credit buying system entails and it will be financed only so long as American capitalism can easily accumulate this surplus. In essence they are artificial devices to keep the workingclass satisfied and have nothing in common with the basic process of capitalist distribution. They will be wrecked by increasing competition in the world markets.

The weakness of trade union organization and the lack of class-consciousness of the American workingclass are the greatest source of strength for American capitalism. It is at these two points that the task of the Communists and the left wing assumes major importance.

We have already noted the fundamental weakness of the trade union leadership and of the trade union movement as a whole—the acceptance of the capitalist system as the Alpha and Omega of social systems. It is thus unable to lead the American workingclass in this period except in the main direction in which the capitalists want it to go.

The basic task of our party in a period when centralized capitalist government appears on the side of the master class in every struggle which they have with the workingclass has been indicated by Marx in a letter to an American worker, Bolte, written in 1871:

Wherever the workingclass is not, yet sufficiently organized to undertake a decisive campaign against the collective power i. e. the political might of the ruling classes, it must certainly be educated for it by continuous agitation against the policy of the ruling classes which is inimical to workingclass interests. IF THIS IS NOT DONE IT WILL REMAIN A PLAYTHING IN THEIR HANDS, as shown by the September revolution in France and to a certain extent by the game successfully carried on in Great Britain by Gladstone and Co. (Emphasis mine.)

How Russian Workers Aid British Miners

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

Crimea, Oct. 10 (By Mail).—It is so often stated abroad that the money raised for the British coal strike is sent by the Soviet government and not by the Russian workers, that my own experiences, traveling in the past two months over a thousand miles or more of the Soviet Union, on entirely different business, may be illuminating.

Two months ago I was traveling on a steamer on the Volga—two days' journey east of Moscow. At present I am sick in a sanitarium in the Crimea, two days' journey south of Moscow. A space of four days' travel, and a time of two months—yet in all of that time I have been under the constant impact of the campaign for raising funds.

Workers Interested.

On the river Volga is a trade union—the water transport workers. They have their own daily newspaper, printed for all the water transport workers of the Soviet Republic. A column or two in this paper was devoted to reports of contributions and explanations about the meaning of the coal strike in England.

On the steamer were some 49 workers, members of this union. The secretary of the Communist Party (there were ten Communists among these 49 workers) called a meeting of the workers. He said that other workers were giving from a quarter of a day's pay to a full day's pay. He urged them not to be backward. They discussed the question freely and voted to give half a day's pay to help the miners.

Teachers Solicit.

Four weeks later I was in a children's colony near Moscow when one of the younger teachers approached me. She also was collecting for the British miners. She had a long list of all the employes in the institution and all of the friends and neighbors who might come under the sphere of influence of the colony. Opposite each person's name was written the amount they gave. Contributions ranged from a few kopeks donated by the washwoman who supported a food-fed family on a very small number of rubles per month to two or three rubles given by the most highly paid members of the staff.

"You are supposed to give a day's pay if you can," she told me, "but of course people who are hard up don't give so much. I want to get everyone in the institution down for something, and no one so far has refused."

Two weeks later on my journey south to the sanitarium the train stopped at Kharkov, capital of the Ukraine. A pleasant-looking girl with a badge and a tin bank came into the car. "For the British miners," she said, "and hold out the bank." I dropped in a small silver coin and almost everyone else did likewise.

In Crimea Also.

And now, as I lie on the veranda overlooking the sunny Black Sea, and pick up the newspapers printed in the Crimean Republic—an autonomous republic, remember, quite proud of its own government and with historic traditions that go back beyond the days of Homer—I find from one to two columns daily devoted to this same campaign. The old newspaper of July 19, discovered in a forgotten drawer, also devoted many letters to money. Today, and the next paper, brought this morning, does the same.

"Strengthen the help to the British miners," reads the headline. The office and commercial employes of the Crimea—a small organization in a peninsula with only a few towns—have given over 5,000 rubles. They are holding a special meeting to learn the present situation of the strike. They have voted to continue help to the extent of 1 per cent of their wages "for all the time the strike lasts."

This is the usual form of donation as the strike lengths. Next day three city federations have copied the office employes and have voted to give henceforth 1 per cent of all wages "beginning with the month of September, as long as the strike shall last."

There is another popular form. The column announces that "Comrade Elmichel gives five rubles to the British strikers and names comrades"—here follow six names of persons he chooses to call. These persons are then expected to give five rubles also and call other names. Thus the endless chain goes on.

Meantime the general news of British labor, with special reference to the strike, continues to occupy front page space in all Russian papers, second only to the important war news from China. The Russian workers understand thousands of rubles and are not only giving money, they are giving interest, as to a struggle which they regard as their own. No other workers in the world have half the knowledge of the issues involved, except the British workers themselves.

WASHINGTON POLITICAL GOSSIP

Washington, Oct. 15. (FP) — Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Reconstruction League which was organized after the war by labor and farmer progressives, shows that 4,000 persons got over one-sixth of all corporate dividends paid in the year 1922. His figures are drawn from the Federal Trade Commission's report on national wealth and income.

This sort of statistics has helped to discredit the "Mellon and Rockefeller" stock-ownership idea, cultivated by public utility companies in their stock-selling campaigns. The Washington administration holds the recent liberal majority in the Federal Trade Commission responsible for gathering the figures originally. Huston Thompson of Colorado has been the most stubborn of the liberals on that commission.

News Note—President Coolidge's spokesman on Sept. 24 grimly croaked the word that Huston Thompson would not be reappointed. His term has just expired. A corporation Democrat will take his place.

"How Tariffs Are Made" is illustrated by The Prairie Farmer in a statement made by a senator just before the Fordney-McCumber tariff act was passed.

"You ask me how the Tariff bill was framed. The answer is simple. During the last months of his life Senator Penrose (chairman of the committee) could give little attention to the construction of the bill. His technical advisers prepared tentative schedules.

"When he died Mac (Senator McCumber of North Dakota, later beaten by the farmer-labor progressives) took over the mass without knowing what it was all about. He told some of us we had to produce a tariff bill. He asked us to help. We helped. All the senators he consulted told him to frame schedules that would help them personally or their friends. Mac did it. That's the way the tariff bill was framed."

What The Prairie Farmer does not know is that McCumber is now a prosperous lawyer-lobbyist in Washington, whose biggest job was the securing of a retroactive repeal of estate taxes that saved some $4,000,000 to the Clark heirs in Montana.

He handled the Senate end, according to capitol talk, while Mondell of Wyoming and another lame duck handled the House. Their fee was rumored to have reached $1,000,000. The tariff helping-around sheds light on this achievement.

Allen W. Dulles, career man in the State Department and son-in-law of former Secretary Lansing, has resigned from the service on the eve of going to Peking to be secretary of the American legation. He recently was at the arms discussion in Geneva as a member of the American delegation.

Dulles' letter of resignation says bluntly that he cannot take another promotion because the better jobs require a greater private income in addition to the official salary than he can supply. Hence he is going to gather money as a member of the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell in New York.

This Dulles resignation emphasizes the tone of American representation in foreign diplomacy. It apes the other capitalist powers in large personal expenditure on entertainments, luxurious surroundings and general plutocratic setting. It knows little of common folks anywhere.

We are all striving for world peace and preaching the brotherhood of man, says Joseph C. Grew, undersecretary of state, addressing the first Pan-American congress of national directors of public health. One of the most polished and wily of American diplomats drawn from the entrenched social group, Grew does not permit himself to be caught out by any Latin American cartoonist as a humbug. He says "preaching," not "promoting", or "seeking" or "holding" the brotherhood of man.

Scientists from half-dozen Latin despotisms nodded approval of his choice of language.

NEW ORLEANS—(FP)—Four hundred non-union workers have joined the ranks of the striking boilermakers and marine repair work is practically tied up at this port. Strikebreaking organizations are promising wages higher than the scale demanded by the union to secure outside help but without avail.

Why 'King Lynch' Still Rules

By WM. PICKENS, Field Secy. of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

It seems that some of our dailies (notably an editorial in the New York World of Oct. 9th) are trying to minimize the awful significance of the fact that two colored boys and a girl were lynched in South Carolina after one of the boys had been declared not guilty of murder and when it was reasonable to expect that the other boy and the girl would also be freed of the charge.

The World rings the changes on the idea that the authorities and the better people are altogether blameless of this mob murder, that the courts had done all they could do, and that there was "no mobbing of a colored man" by the authorities,—and that all the trouble is due to the mere little insignificant fact that "blood-thirsty brutes merely took matters in their own hands."

South Civilization Weak.

But just THAT is the gravest phase of the whole matter: the society of the south has so conditioned the life of its Negro people that even the power of the state, the authority of the courts and all the goodness of its "good" people cannot protect an innocent Negro child from being lynched by "bloodthirsty brutes."

What does that mean? It means that the south, the better south, needs the co-operation and help of the rest of the republic to save civilization in the south. But this is the one necessary conclusion which the New York World, and some other apologetic sources seem reluctant to reach. If the situation is as the World describes it, an anti-lynching law of congress and the power of the national government are sorely needed in every community like South Carolina.

Doubts "Better Class."

The writer of this is 45 years old and has lived at least two-thirds of his life in the heart of the south—and he is not so sure, as is the New York World, of the absolute inculpableness of the better south for the action of these "bloodthirst brutes." The legislature of South Carolina, for example, has passed scores of laws discriminating against colored citizens and "excluding" them from equality in almost everything except the equal right to pay taxes. These discriminating laws give the impression to the lesser minds of the white majority that the Negro is little less than human, and the simpler minds are so logical that they conclude that if a Negro should not have the same chance as a white man in a public park, on the public vehicles and in the voting booths, he also should not have the same rights as a white person in a court of justice. And we are forced to acknowledge that in the conclusion, the lesser minds show themselves to be more logical than the legislature.

Actions Consistent.

The action of these "bloodthirsty brutes" is terribly consistent with the notion of those southern senators, who said on the floor of congress that lynching was for rape and that they were opposed to a national law against lynching. A lynching is the most logical conclusion of a dirty Jim Crow car. The human mind is too simple a thing, especially the mind of the unsophisticated mob, to be able to comprehend that a Negro is at one and the same time like other human beings and different from all other human beings,—and that Negro people are not to be treated with injustice, contempt and terrorism everywhere else except in courts of law and in jails.

If the political and social philosophy and practices of the "better south" have made it powerless before its "bloodthirsty brutes," the south needs some outside help

Babe Ruth's contract has expired with the N.Y. With the new contract as an incentive the Bambino will be out to break all records for home runs in the world's series. He has a new record. The newspapers are in respect he is to ask for a raise in his new contract.

All the good writers seem who will have to pay the salary of Colo. King of Bull Run legged by members not to attend games played with this high-priced team. He has authorized his name to be used in advertising such products as "Kandy" goods. He is continually in threats to promote recruiting for military service. He plays the patriotic game for all the money there is in it. He is not only a good ball player but also a good "patriot" who knows there is money to be found in the flag. Such is Babe Ruth. And such is the business of professional sports. Phooie!

It was bound to come: the life story of Gene Tunney broadcast by Mr. Hearst. We learn that Tunney's first public bouts were staged as "church benefits." How shocking! Lifting hands for Christ's sake! His last fight was also somewhat of a church benefit. The publicity when old catholic Joseph mashed in on some free advertising. Cardinal Wheeata, Bishop Whelanhanna and a few other dignitaries threw a big feed for the near champion. There was plenty to eat and drink something to wash it down. The church was mentioned quite often and the old song goes "the papers mind their flock."

You live in New York? You get that tired feeling? Your liver is in some kind of queer? You need exercise! You can get it by joining the Red Star Sports Club. This workers' sports club is now carrying on a membership drive. Your application will be gladly accepted any Thursday after 8 p.m. at 50 Manhattan Ave. Step around.

A. A. (Cold Cash) Pyle has raised several hullabaloo in amateur tennis circles. Besides discussing Langdon, he has also made professionals of Vincent Richards, Percy, Manny K. Bowers, Howard Kinsey and Snodgrass. He is also pushing so fast he might have landed a few before this is printed.

This means America has no chance at international tennis honors next year. Meanwhile this man Pyle (of course) will present the "world's greatest tennis players to captivity" at least from one to five dollars. Watch the fun in the National Amateur Association. You will see horrified versions of rules and we can assure you the "amateurs" who have not yet listened to the measured words of Pyle are going to get a nice luncheon in "Tennessee" money. But it will be quite hard to keep the dirt hidden. Sports are now definitely a business. Usually a pretty bad business, too!

The Bronx Workers' Sports Club is on the lookout for a few good young basketball players. If you think you are one of them, step over some evening to the club rooms at 1367 Boston road. This is, of course, only a New York opportunity.

Well, the old master is gone for. Dempsey dedged Harry Wills successfully for years. Finally ago and heavily did the rest. Jack Sharkey, a very much used Wills decidively did demand him Swap-The list of aspirants for the heavyweight championship. So Jacky our friend Tunney will now please crash below.

Ups a and lame. Here was a spherical boxer who, because he was a Negro, was Jim-Crowed out of glory and the gate that's on it. It was difficult for him to get bouts at all times. Altho a logical contender for a few years, Dempsey carefully avoided a fight with him. Dempsey was then no slouch. Neither was Wills. The bout should have been worth seeing. That is, if you enjoy the gentle art of hitting them.

After fighting seldom, already at the age of forty, Harry Wills was beaten by a new man. The old question don't, respond. The kick is kicking in his pantsbut. Here's something like the case of our old capitalist system. The old boy has seen his best days. The Communists know it. The working class, young, carrying the kick of a male in each fist, will come along and sock capitalism into the list of ex-champions. That's the history of all fighters and also all social systems. And remember—ex-champions never come back!

Triumphant Reaction in the Trade Unions

Drawing by O'Zim.

THE sum total of the Detroit convention of the American Federation of Labor can be summarized in a few words. It is triumphant, brazen and self-satisfied reaction.

In this there is little of a surprising nature. A. F. of L. conventions are so organized as to prevent almost completely rank and file expression. The protesting voice of the outraged, exploited and betrayed masses is not heard in these conventions. It is the reactionary bureaucrat, the corrupt faker, the brazen servant of the employers who bosses and dominates the proceedings.

Matthew Woll, William Green, Wilson, Lewis, Walker and a host of others—what is the labor movement to them? An object of exploitation, a means of enrichment. A step-ladder to money, power and luxury. These are the people that dominated the Detroit convention.

Is it any wonder that the convention went into a fit of frenzy when Sherwood Eddy mentioned favorably the Soviet Union? Is it surprising that the convention reaffirmed its determination not to lead the workers into struggle against the employers under the mask of co-operation with the capitalists?

The true voice of the masses, which is expressed by the left wing, was not heard there. It could not penetrate the thick walls of reaction and the undemocratic machinary. But this voice is present and alive. The frenzied attacks upon the left wing, the Trade Union Educational League and William Z. Foster bear witness to this fact. The struggle will go on and the victory belongs to the masses.

Here Is the Queen!

YOU may not believe us, but this is the picture of the Queen of Roumania as she looks thru our spectacles. Of course, a queen is a queen and far be it from us to say otherwise, but some evil-minded persons have associated Marie with people whose conception of morality is about as elastic as a check autographed by a confidence man.

It is this way. Roumania is a small country and in this period of capitalist imperialism small countries are usually in trouble, because they have very little to lose except oil wells if they have oil wells they are in demand; if they have not they are granted the right of self-determination.

Roumania developed into something of a greasepot, so John D. Rockefeller, being a confirmed baptist, lighted the christian candle and called on all the world to notice that Marie was the handsomest queen that ever hit the sidewalk. It should be noticed that Marie knows every European capital as well as a poet knows his synonyms. In fact, for a number of years, whatever her husband Ferdinand left undone, she did, it.

It came to pass that the kingdom of Roumania could see the wolf approaching the door and the wise men of the country, being persons of easy touch (we mean touchable persons), or members of that fraternity that live on their wits, felt that the queen, who is supposed to be easy to look at, might be a good drawing card in America. Peggy Joyce married five husbands, and every other actress not married to her profession did the same. Why not the queen? Even the her husband Ferdinand is dying of rheumatism.

Frankly, the reason why the queen of Roumania is coming here is because Roumania is broke and the queen is the country's foremost pawnbroker. There are some oil wells in Roumania. Rockefeller has a mortgage on them. Naturally John D. will use his influence to make things easy for the queen.

Bassarabia comprises a large piece of land that was stolen from Russia by Roumania when Woodrow Wilson helped to write the treaty of Versailles. If Marie makes a hit in the United States, perhaps our solons may be more susceptible to accepting the status quo.

There are other reasons why the queen should come here, but as far as the workers are concerned this old parasite represents one of the most reactionary ruling classes in Europe and every worker should look on her as an enemy.

Sherwood Eddy at the A. F. of L. Convention

DETROIT, 1926.

To the Tune of Yankee Doodle.

O Mister Green! O Mister Green!
Aint Eddy awful naughty?
Such naughty boys are seldom seen;
To praise the Bolshes sought he.

This wicked Eddy dared to raise
His voice at the convention,
Though mixed with slams, he dared to praise
Those whom to only mention.

Makes Mister Green and Woll and Frey
And other labor fakers,
Throw a fit and rage and cry
Like holy roller shakers.

O Mister Green! O Mister Green!
Aint Eddy awful naughty?
Such naughty boys are seldom seen;
To praise the Bolshes sought he.

The Theater Season in Moscow

By RUTH EPPERSON KENNEL

THE Moll (Little), on the magnificent theater (opium) box nerves from the Stoibol Opera House, is the gold dramatic theater in Moscow, where some of the artists have been playing for many years. It therefore smells strongly of the past, is fondest of old melodramas, especially foreign, and is popular with the older generation. But a new play "Zagmark," by a Russian dramatist, the story of a spy uprising in ancient times, is creating general interest because of its knowledge, simplicity and unusual plot. Zagmark-Zagmark, with peace in his wife. Here we find some of the magnificent tensile effects of the Imbibit: play alone with flung up against a white plaster of one coloured in from the ancient path, a counterpart, a masked prince, the merchant of a palace, the wife of a city. The most beautiful scene is a rich banquet in tavern and feast of unbounded splendor, and the walls and parapets of a fortified city standing after of against the storm.

The tavern is rent by her fashion, in payment of a fine imposed by the president, and put up for auction, naked, in the market place. Her lover buys her, but the king sees and takes her aboard his ship. One of the princes, a defender of the oppressed, befriends her and is consequently thrown into prison. There he plots an uprising to place him on the throne. The five episodes of the tomb, the one day in the year when the people can do what they like. On this day, the king and his consort in magnificent robes mount their golden thrones raised on the open place outside the palace, and with impressive ceremonies liberate the prince, who is acclaimed ruler by the people. His first act is to demand the king's wife, and upon receiving her, in turn has up for auction, forcing her to disrobe. This is a signal for a general uprising of the serfs; the king escapes to his castle outside the city and long months of siege follow, during which the people feel that even their former life was preferable. Finally the king, by promising the lover the restoration of his bride, persuades him to open the side gates of the city. The hordes of soldiers swarm in and overpower the serfs. The girl, discovering too late the plot in which her lover has sacrificed his honor and his life, kills the king.

STILL another play of revolution and rebellion marks the close of the theatrical season. We find a suggestion of "The Hairy Ape," in the new play by Bill-Belotserkovsky, "Fort Helm!" or as the Russian has it, "Helm to the Left!" presented at the branch of the Moll Theater, an attractive studio some distance from the center. The time of the play precedes "Storm," being in the period before the revolution and at the beginning of civil war. The first act of the drama, which is in nineteen episodes, takes place on a foreign steamship just at the outbreak of the world war. In it "Rose, China" and "The Hairy Ape," we have a realistic picture of life among the workers. In the crew of the steamer the author has created strong, lovable heroes with whom we feel a community of sympathy. In contrast to the atmosphere of tropical heat in which the crew labors at the opening of the play, while the British captain and rich American passengers sit in steamer chairs under awnings, when we ourselves almost drip with perspiration. And so vivid is the storm in mid-ocean that we feel the motion of the ship and the wind against our faces; it seems that we too are swept along the dark decks in the hurricane and finally lie panting with the sailors in their bunks. The five episodes of the first act take place on deck, in the captain's cabin and in the sailors' bunks, the walls of which, sliding back, throw open the cabins onto the deck. The fifth episode shows the arrival at the port of New York and the appearance on shipboard of various quacks and crooks, including the Salvation Army singing, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye."

The steamer set, with the aid of certain decorations, becomes a New York saloon in the second act, where an exaggerated and false picture of the New York underworld is presented; as in the "Hairy Ape," the American millionaires are characterized as degenerate gentlemen in top hats and dress suits, who come to survey in cold-blooded curiosity the antics of the prostitutes and pimps, and the sailors who have returned for recreation after their long voyage. This scene, devoid of originality, unreal and ugly (as a critic in "Pravda" has observed) is unworthy of the rest of the play. It could only justify its existence as an episode, instead of a long act, since it has no direct bearing on the plot.

In the third act, the immigrants are sitting about on the dock and our sailors who drift in, discuss the recent Russian revolution with a Russian immigrant, who later joins the crew. The appearance of a motion picture company and the commandeering of the immigrants to take part in the thrilling film of a Russian princess trying to escape from the howling mob (represented by three or four actors in Russian blouses and huge hats), and the immigrants at the dock who are instructed to pull out their shirts) makes a very funny climax to the act.

In the last act, back on the liner again, we find military discipline prevailing, as the steamer is carrying arms to the Russian White Guards and the crew preparing to mutiny. The fifth episode with the overpowering of the captain and officers who watch helplessly as the crew greets a Bolshevik entier, and as the cheery command, "Left, Helm!" is given, the steamer turns back without delivering the arms.

Adhering to the conventional forms of the Mall Theater, the production, while more realistic and less stylized than "Roar, China" lack originality. The playwright, on unfamiliar ground in depicting foreign scenes and characters (altho as a seaman he knows the life of a steamer), is less powerful than in "Storm." But the play on the whole has that wholesome simplicity and sincerity characteristic of the playwright and, in production borrowing somewhat from its predecessors, is a worthy finale to a brilliant season.

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

"MEN OF PURPOSE."

A GENERAL is at the head of the committee promoting this picture. A post of the American Legion presents it. The advertising of the picture urges: "Every American Citizen Should See It." So I did (at the Randolph). For all these reasons and because it is said to be the "Official Allied Production depicting the complete history of the world war"—"Most remarkable spectacle ever shown on the silver screen."

Well, it isn't. Tell it to the marines. It is neither "a complete history of the world war" nor the "most remarkable" blah! blah! blah! It cost me all of four-bits to see it and I can assure you it isn't. But it is a spectacle. A spectacle of outrageous war propaganda staged, as the picture assures you, "to show our government that we are ready to serve it in whatever need may arise," or words to that effect.

Just enough actual war is shown to serve the purpose of the legion-type patriots. You know the stuff: The Kaiser was grounded to blame for everything. We entered the war to save civilization, etc., etc. The war is pictured as a nice war. There are a few bodies, some mud and some dead bodies. But not too much. Not enough to discourage any young man from joining the marines. Should this picture have stirred you to patriotic action there is a marine recruiting sergeant stationed at the door. That's the kind of a business this is.

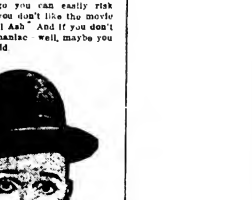
"THE STRONG MAN."

IF you are tired of Indians, bad men, good women and heaving chests in the movies, see this picture. You will see Harry Langdon. Here is a first-rate mimic whose antics are a pleasure to see. One of these lucky days he is going to get something to act in that will give better scope for his real ability. When he gets it; this comic cut-up will take his place as a real comedian and second only to Charles Chaplin.

We advise you to see this picture (showing at the Oriental), if only to see Langdon with a most realistic and amusing cold. (If you can get any fun out of a cold!) It's so real it will make your nose run. It is also a bit of mimicry the equal of any we have ever seen anywhere. It would do credit to Chaplin himself. Do you remember the scene in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" in which Langdon was "doped"? This is even better.

There is a good deal of waste motion in both plot and action. The plot is far below even the level of the usual comedy standard. And brother that IS low! However, there are occasional situations that are really laugh-provoking, and Harry Langdon makes most of these in true artistic fashion.

With all its faults, this is the kind of picture in which you will find a good deal of wholesome fun. If you are in Chicago you can easily risk seeing it. If you don't like the movie there is Paul Ash. And if you don't like this Jazzmaniac well, maybe you are growing old.



THE PASSAIC STRIKE—To be shown in Chicago, at the Garland Blvd. Auditorium, Friday, Oct. 22.

MEN OF STEEL—A picture intended to make you kiss your boss every morning. (Roosevelt)

WAR—A truly splendid picture (Harding)

ACROSS THE PACIFIC—We are glad to credit George G. Nathan with this beautiful word of criticism: "Gloria."

ALONA OF THE SOUTH SEAS—Gilda Gray in a good motional actress (Uptown).

MARK NOBTRUM—War tokum.

THE ROAD TO MANDALAY—Will someone tell us why they make these things?

SON OF THE SHIEK—Valentino.

THE AMATUER GENTLEMAN—The photographer is good.

TIN GODS—Kenta Adams is the best part of this.

UP IN MABEL'S ROOM—Marie Prevost in derniere.

Note: Only Chicago theaters showing pictures for the week are listed. Pictures of current week changed Monday.

- THE THEATER -

"THE COCOANUTS"

HERE'S something somewhat different in the line of musical performance. There is not a naked lady in it, nor is there a single bathtub! But you will find a compensate you for the loss of good nudity, good lines, good music, and the happy Marx Brothers.

If you care for musical hai-de-ral you will enjoy these fallows. Harpo, Chico and Zeppo Marx are clever chaps. Here is the old slap-stick art modernized, and with intelligent handling. Each is a good clown. Groucho is a buffoon not only gifted, but also given a collection of good lines to speak. (The book is by George Kaufman.) Harpo is a Rinkido clown who doesn't speak, but lets his mimicry speak for him. These two of the Marx brothers ineffectively (these are four of them) are enjoyable fathers and a mess combinations.

The rounds by during Rustic de notching much to "write home about," but it is useful. The ladies are graceful and an eyeful. They are also well adorned and plentifully so. An evening's performance filled with the antics of good comedians who work hard to please makes unnecessary much nudity to cover any lack of ideas and cleverness. The dancing is very good, and especially the numbers by the De Marcos, which will please those who lean to graceful motion.

You will find the ideas and plot the same old warmed-over hash. However, you will also find you won't care a bit as long as the Marx brothers keep clowning away. It's absurd stuff. It's been down buffoonery that will make you forget your troubles for a couple of hours and rest your work-ridden carcass. It will even repay climbing those blamed steep steps which we humbly have to climb at the Erlanger (old Palace) to get to the gallery seats.

What Congress Will Do for Us

(IF IT GETS A CHANCE)

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

WHEN the worker and farmer cast their votes for congressmen and senators in the forthcoming election, they should not only keep in mind the astounding record of both parties in the last congress in vying with each other in subservience to big business and in their eagerness to reject any measures of benefit to the worker and the poor farmer, but they must also keep in mind what the next congress proposes to do to them if the same balance of forces prevails.

There need be no guess work as to the program of the next congress because it has already been frankly stated and no worker or farmer who supports the old parties need complain of being taken by surprise when the next session of congress begins its work.

A few days ago, Mr. Snell, chairman of the powerful house committee on rules, after a friendly chat with President Coolidge made a frank and fairly complete statement as to what the next congress proposes to do to the workers and farmers and the re-sources of the country if the present servants of big business continue to "represent" the people in the next sessions.

According to Mr. Snell, Number One on the order of business is "The disposition of Muscle Shoals." "Disposition" in this connection is a tremendously polite word. The Muscle Shoals power development cost the American government over $150,000,000. It is such a gigantic power center that a former secretary of war of the U. S. government declared: "If I were greedy for power over my fellow men, I would rather control Muscle Shoals than be elected president of the U. S." But congress has safely locked away in its archives the recommendation of the majority of the Muscle Shoals Joint Congressional Committee proposing to give this enormous development into private hands—into the hands of the Muscle Shoals Power Distributing company which is controlled by the Electric Bond & Share Co. Now the Electric Bond & Share is a modest little company which controls 1,700 power companies in 40 states of the United States (that was in last April, they may have covered the other eight states by now). And Electric Bond & Share in turn is controlled by the General Electric Co. And the General Electric Co. is controlled by J. P. Morgan & Co. And incidentally the Muscle Shoals Power Distributing Co. is made up of 13 associated South Eastern companies that sweep from Kentucky to the gulf including Georgia and Florida. Still incidentally it is interesting to note that one of those 13 companies is the Tennessee Electric Power Co., which according to Pour's Public Utility Manuol is linked with the Aluminium Co. of America owned by the "master mind" of the Coolidge administration, Andrew W. Mellon.

The second order of business for the next congress, according to Mr. Snell, is the "passage of bills increasing salaries of judges."

The third order of business is the "Radio Control Bill." What that will mean in the matter of thought control and in the matter of insuring the success of another scandal, we can judge from the practices of Mr. Hoover so far, from the difficulties already put in the way of the Chicago Federation of Labor's establishing a broadcasting station of its own (even before Mr. Hoover had the power to stop them) and in the refusal to permit Gitlow and Norman Thomas to broadcast speeches after they had been invited by broadcasting companies in New York City.

Next in line comes the "River and Harbor Bill" some of the money in which may involve useful appropriation but which by and large, can be summed up with that picturesque term drawn from congressional vocabulary—"pork barrel."

Next according to Mr. Snell comes "Farm Relief Legislation." What this will be like we can judge from the fate of the Haugen McNary Bill in the sessions just ended and from Mr. Coolidge's repeated statements of his program for what he calls "farm relief." But Mr. Snell is taking no chances on being misunderstood so he hastens to add, "In my survey of the farm situation I find that the condition in the west is now as good as desired and the republican party will do everything possible consistent with sound procedure (emphasis mine, B. D. W.) to alleviate the condition of the western agriculturist." What Mr. Snell means by sound procedure his vote and the vote of the majority of the last congress on even such a pitifully inadequate measure as the Haugen-McNary Bill clearly indicate.

But let us return to the order of business. Next in the ambitious program comes the "Consolidation of the Railroads." This means a single super-railway trust, of course, under a system of private ownership, the disappearance of the last vestiges of competition between roads and the creation of one powerful railway super-trust means that the old railway motto of getting from the farmer as freight rates "all that the traffic will bear," will be amended so as to read "just a little more than that."

Next comes the "annual appropriation bills." Last year they amounted to about $4,500,000 at the same time that Coolidge was blabbing about his economy. By economy he means Muscle Shoals power development cost the American government over $150,000,000. It is such a gigantic power center that a former secretary of war of the U. S. government declared: "If I were greedy for power over my fellow men, I would rather control Muscle Shoals than be elected president of the U. S." But congress has safely locked away in its archives the recommendation of the majority of the Muscle Shoals Joint Congressional Committee proposing to give this enormous development into private hands—into the hands of the Muscle Shoals Power Distributing company which is controlled by the Electric Bond & Share Co. Next comes the "annual appropriation bills." Last year they amounted to about $4,500,000 at the same time that Coolidge was blabbing about his economy. By economy he means those items in the budget that are not economy at the expense of the workers and poor farmers but a liberal and free hand when it comes to big business and the "pork barrel."

The next point in Mr. Snell's modest little program is "measures to reorganise the prohibition enforcement unit and strengthen the laws as to search and border control." This means another few thousand additional snoopers on the already enormous government payroll. When Coolidge took office, there were 600,000 persons on the payroll of the national government and he has since added 30 or 30 thousand more. Taken together, the national, state and city bureaucracies, we find that for every ten men gainfully employed in other industries there is one on the payroll of the government—national, state and local. We have thus the largest and costliest bureaucracy in the world and all Coolidge's economy blabb does not prevent the high cost of government from being one of the great burdens upon the farmer and worker in the United States.

Finally, Mr. Snell admits that this is a short session of congress that is coming and that time will not permit him to do everything that big business requires of him, so his official statement, as reported in the press adds that "the session would be too short to consider much more than the above measures. This leaves out the proposal to regulate wage disputes in the hard coal field and to distribute coal in case of strike." In other words, he promises that a measure forbidding strikes in the coal industries similar to the Watson-Parker Bill in the railroad industry will soon be put across but big business cannot expect everything in one short session of congress. Moreover this reveals that congress is not only planning to outlaw strikes in the coal fields, but also to break strikes by distributing coal that no one should occur. To distribute coal in order to lessen a coal famine, to distribute coal at cost in order to limit the sufferings of the poor in our big cities in mid-winter, to distribute coal in order to break the monopoly of the coal trust over this most necessary of products—all this would be, in the language of Mr. Snell, "paternalism" and "inconsistent with sound procedure to alleviate the condition." To distribute coal to break a miners' strike—that is politics and good government as Mr. Snell and the majority of the present congress understands it.

Now the issue is up to the workers and poor farmers. Mr. Snell has spoken after conference with Coolidge and he has spoken with a rare frankness for which we should be grateful. If the same kind of congressmen of the republican and democratic parties are returned to the next session, we know in advance what they will do for and to the American people. At least everyone will know what kind of congressmen and what kind of congressional program he is voting for and if the workers and farmers do not revolt at such cynical frankness and elect representatives of their own, then they will have nobody to blame but themselves when the next congress represents the interests of big business and not the interests of the workers and farmers of America.

The Farmer Wants to Know

By JOHN B. CHAPPLE

CAPITALISM'S reactionary farm papers, printed by the millions of copies and sold for almost nothing, have proved one of the most subtle and vicious weapons for lauding the growing feeling of solidarity between the farmer and the city worker. This flood of capitalist propaganda has perplexed the man who toils in the fields, and for many years has rendered his groping toward a united front with the city proletariat sterile.

But capitalism by one of the inherent contradictions has produced a farm population intelligent enough to tear the veil of ignorance from its eyes. The flood of capitalist "dope" is about done for. The young farmers—those who are not driven off their farms and into the cities—will have none of it; economic pressure is so severe that even older men, minds dulled by long hours and little time to think, are vomiting up this poison.

"The Country Gentleman"—the name is a ghastly joke and an attempt to falsify the farmers' position and give him a set of ideals that will line him up with his enemies, the exploiters, in the class struggle—is one of these farm papers that drips capitalist poison.

To begin with, "The Country Gentleman" is published by the Curtis Publishing company, Philadelphia, which also turns out the Saturday Evening Post—leader of the blackest kind of reaction.

In the advertising pages of "The Country Gentleman" you will find Fisher Bodies, Timkin Bearing, Mobil oil, Westinghouse, Crane, Johns-Manville, Western Electric, Gold Medal, Fisher Bodies, Timken Bearing, Mobil-Gas, Swift, and the run of auto and tobacco ads.

What you will not find is anything about the farmers' revolt, about the rising mortgages and for sale signs, the delinquent taxes and the crops spoiling on the ground because of the marketing system and the freight rate barriers.

No, instead, there are the usual editorials about our grand constitution, about the millions of homes of "free" men and women, about the "rule of reason and law rather than force," about the community churches, the "centers of spiritual revival"— one final effort to hoodwink the farmer, to interest him in the "sweet bye and bye," so he won't struggle when the economic blindfold is slipped over his eyes. A rural pastor gave this game away when he told a farmer who had become interested in co-operative projects that such things would never work out because the Almighty had given humanity many tongues at the time of Babel and people would not be able to work together but must seek individual salvation—not forgetting the rural pastor's salary as dispenser.

These so-called farmers' magazines advice building more buildings to help the lumber manufacturers, buying more machinery to help international Harvester, borrowing more money anything and everything except attacking what's wrong.

Another example is "The Farm Journal," also loaded with the advertising of American Telephone and Telegraph, National Electric Light, American Radiator, Hollywood-in-Florida, Harvester, General Motors, and the rest.

A favorite stunt of this magazine is to send out salesmen to ask the farmers questions—and get their money. The idea of the questions is to make the farmer feel important—his answers will be the basis of a "demand" upon congress. There is an insidious angle to this scheme too. The farmer is misled if he believes he co-operates willing and when he says yes, he gets one like this:

"Do you think that child labor should be controlled by congress?"

Before the farmer gets a chance to answer, the subscription agent pulls. Gets on him.

"Do you want your children to sit around till they're eighteen, never doing any chores? If they don't do any work till that age, will they ever do any work? Do you want to give away the right of controlling your own sons? Do you want to be prohibited from having your son turn the whetstone while you are sharpening a blade?"

The farmer, who can barely keep alive working fourteen hours a day with his wife and children working too, says no.

It is easy to figure what this sort of a survey can be used for by a paper with its capitalist backing. Farmers' signatures will turn out to be the "thousands of good American citizens opposed to child labor legislation." Thus the farmer unintentionally plays into the hands of the mill barons, crushing out lives of the children of the mill towns.

This is the last thing in the world that the thinking farmer would want to do. And this sort of thing does not work nearly so well today as it might have a few years ago. Farmers are becoming conscious of themselves and their place in society—and their close relation with the city worker. The lie about "different interests" which was used by capitalist politicians in fighting the old non-partisan league and which is tried every time the farmer and city worker move toward closer union, has lost its force.

The capitalist poison disguised as "help for the farmers" no longer goes down. The secretary of one farm club advised its members:

"There's too much reading of what's the matter and what to do and what not to do. Our farm papers are misleading us. They're telling us the legislature and congress will solve everything. It's a lie—it's their lie. The legislature and congress are not going to do anything. All the farmers must become class-conscious and unite they become so, they will get nothing."

The president of another farm organization contrasted agricultural progress in Russia with the exploitation of the farmers by the capitalists in this country, and wound up:

"I'm a radical and I admit it. I don't care if they run me out of town with a horsewhip."

The day of the "Country Gentleman" dope is passing. The farmer does not care to be that kind of a gentleman, he knows that he too is a worker, a partner of the factory worker in the city not an enemy of the factory worker as the capitalists tell him.

He is turning away from the subsidized pages of enemy "farm papers," turning away from the comic "relief" ideas of Arthur Capper, the "good management and diversified farming" formula, turning away from the "liberalism" of Frank Lowden, the same sort of knife-in-the-back that almost wrecked the English labor movement at the close of the 19th century.

Today's farmer is studying Communism because it offers him a real road to freedom.

"Reminiscences of an American Loyalist 1783-85. Edited by Jonathan Boucher. Published by Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston and New York.

THESE Reminiscences of an American Loyalist" is the autobiography of a certain Reverend Jonathan Boucher who was rector of Annapolis on the eve of the first American revolution. The memoirs then gathered dust, edited by his grandson, Mr. Boucher was a well-known preacher in his day. He was pro-government to the core. With the outbreak of armed struggle in the colonies Boucher was forced to go back to England where he was consequently contrasted with the opposition of the men of several succeeding figures in British foreign politics at the close of the 18th century.

The writer of these memoirs came to Virginia in 1759 and soon became an intimate friend of George Washington. This friendship continued till late in 1775 when the preacher, much harassed by revolutionists, was compelled to flee the country.

Thru Tory Eyes.

A good portion of these reminiscences is of no interest at all to the reader. The details of personal and family life concern us only to the extent that they give us a picture of the social conditions at hand. In this respect, the Boucher memoirs have lasting value to the student of American history. Of course, no primary-school historian will gather any inspiration from this book. But for the historical materialist, the Marxian student of the great American revolution, there is substantial instructive material available in this writing.

Reverend Boucher looks at the first American revolution calmly thru the lenses of the high-bourgeois, pro-government man at any cost and at any and all times. He tries hard to give us the impression of fair-mindedness and objectivity. He succeeds only in emphasizing his tory viewpoint. For instance, Boucher speaks admirably of George Washington because his first education was received at the hands of a convict servant whom his father bought for a schoolmaster.

The Church and Our First Revolution.

BOUCHER vividly describes the life of working, the every-day doings of the foundation of the established church in the colonies in the impossible pre-revolutionary days and during the revolution. He says beautifully:

"In my own parish I remember with pride and comfort I had not a single dissenter of any denomination. Some of the thoughtful people of these less happy parishes applied to me to go amongst them and endeavor to shock the delusion. Accordingly I prepared some sermons which I delivered among them, and by the blessing of God with much effect, that many who had been decoyed from the church returned to it . . ."

In the eyes of Mr. Boucher, who was a typical tory preacher, the forces opposed to the government "seemed to aim at a total renvercement, and to stick at nothing to attain their end." Only in the usual criticism of revolutionaries at all times by all shades and sections of the defenders of the status quo of class relationship. The remaining that some individuals of his order joined them irregular, licentious and prodigious," he bitterly cries out against an act providing for the trial of his fellow tribe-pounders by a jury composed equally of laymen and clerks.

Then Boucher lifts the lid off the attitude of his church to the revolution when he declares: "The church and the churchman did stand much in their way; or the great, placemen had seemingly contrived to place our order in the front of the battle, that themselves might take shelter behind us."

"Those of our devout who have no sense of humor might well chafe at Reverend Boucher's implied disapproval of the revolutionaries' skilful use of the church and their faith in the prowess of the heavenly father's representatives on earth as a shield against revolutionary bullets and bayonets. To go on:

"The unpopular part I had lately taken, respecting government had cost the people against me," says our tory preacher. This leads Boucher to characterize the Americans of his day as "indeed a singularly violent, pure-proud and factious people." All of which goes only to show that the manners were right in their attitude towards the church which then, as in today, was primarily an integral part of the whole state appartus which they were fighting to destroy. Boucher clearly reveals to us the close workings between the assembly of Maryland and the church in these enlightening lines:

"The management of the assembly-affairs left very much to me; and hardly a bill was brought in which I did not either draw or at least revise, and either get it passed or rejected. It is not necessary here to set down how such things are done; they were done in that provincial assembly; and I have not a doubt but that they are done in the same manner and by the same means in the British parliament. All the governor's speeches, messages, etc., and also some pretty important and lengthy papers from the council were of my drawing up. All these things were, if not certainly known, yet strongly suspected."

Indeed, the pious and righteous preacher doesn't utter a harsh word in all his reminiscences about the means used to forge such a oneness of church and government. The tory confession is not so all-inclusive as all that. The reverend takes much pain, however, to question all the means used by his enemies—the opposing class, struggling for supremacy.

An Estimate of Washington.

A VERY interesting tory estimate of Washington is thus given by Boucher:

"I cannot conceive how he could, otherwise than thru the interested representation of a party, have ever been spoken of as a great man. He is coy, blunt, stern, slow and cautious, but has no quickness of parts, extraordinary penetration, nor an elevated style of thinking. In his moral character he is regular, temperate, strictly just and honest (excepting that as a Virginian, he has lately found that there is no moral turpitude is not paying what he considers he owes to a British creditor) . . . But he seems to have nothing generous or affectionate in his character."

Boucher goes on to tell about one of his meetings with Washington while the latter was on his way to assume command of the Continental Army. "Everybody seemed to be on fire, either with rum or patriotism, or both." The preacher narrates how he warned Washington that many events would transpire which have since then occurred. Washington then assured him that no such things as a civil war or struggle for independence would ensue. Says Boucher: "With more earnestness than was usual with his great reserve he scouted my apprehensions, adding (and I believe with perfect sincerity) that if I ever heard of his joining in such measures, I had his leave to set him down for everything wicked."

Obviously, Washington couldn't then see the objective logic of class warfare. The inexorable development of the conflict of opposing classes cannot be halted or dominated by personal wishes, promises, or hopes of any individual, no matter who he may be.

I Got a Job

By A Woman Worker Correspondent

IN the qua of about forty women and a larger, very much larger number of men, waiting outside the employment office of Young's factory on Westminster and Russel. I found myself along with them in the rain waiting for a job.

I was "lucky." Out of the many women there, some husky enough to be used by the bosses to replace men in the monotony of factory work, I, a slim girl, was among the half a dozen that were given a job.

The foreman told me that the work would be somewhat dirty, but the pinch of unemployment had made me feel brave at the moment that I answered him that I did not mind the dirt.

Of course I had to pass thru the regular red tape that is uniform thruout the factories of Detroit—answering questions as regards age, ability, etc.

Inside the factory there is one very noticeable fact—the large number of women. There is no doubt that they outnumber the men—and no wonder!

The wage, if we may call it such, is the grand sum of 25c an hour or $12.00 a week. Women's hands are far cheaper then male hands!

The system of speed-up work is most modern and of course exacting. The bench moves at a certain speed. If one is slow, the work piles up. This means a constant and continuous speed in which one dare not stop even for a second. It is understood that the speed is not at a snail's rate, but a speed that will mean as great a day's production as possible—regardless of the wage paid to the worker.

Nine hours a day on your feet!

I have to get up at 5 a. m. to get to work at 7.00 a. m., and we have but half an hour for lunch in which time I must get to the nearest restaurant to rush down a meal.

The dirt of the place is terrible. There is no supply of soap, and one must buy soap IN THE SHOP at 10c a bar.

To wash, one must mas cold water to take off the grease. Such things as towels are conspicuous by their absence.

I suppose the next innovation will be a charge of 10c for the use of towels when they will be supplied!

Out of the $2.00 a day that I receive, I will have to buy a pair of overalls to keep my dress from getting all full of that filthy grease and dirt.

Besides my regular operation. I have to carry bundles of springs on my shoulder. What with standing all day and carrying, at the end of the day I feel not a little tired out, but extremely fatigued.

The intense noise of the machinery just makes one's head swirl. To be out in the open is like coming out of a jail after 40 years imprisonment. One staggers home to rest and after having rested the meal is just choked down one's throat. All the appetite is killed thru the noise, the dirt, the speed and the stink.

I sure am lucky! I got a job!

KARL MARX

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS BY PAUL LAFARGUE

II.

CUVIER, an undying worker and a great master of science, had a series of work-rooms constructed for his personal use in the Museum of Paris which he directed. Each room was designed for a special occupation, receiving the necessary books, instruments, anatomic devices, etc. Whenever he tired of one task, he stepped into the neighboring room and dedicated himself to another; this simple change in his spiritual occupation, as they tell, meant a rest for him. Marx was quite as untiring a worker as Cuvier, but unlike the latter, he did not have the means to install several study-cabinets. He rested while he walked up and down his room; from the desk to the window there was visible on the carpet a totally worn-out strip as sharply defined as a foot-path in a meadow. At times he stretched out on the sofa and read a novel; sometimes he read from two to three together which he took up intermittently like Darwin, he too was a great novel reader. Marx especially loved those of the eighteen century and particularly Fielding's Tom Jones; the modern writers who entertained him most were Paul de Kock, Charles Lever, Alexander Dumas pere, and Walter Scott—tho latter's "Old Mortality" he called a masterpiece. He manifested an outspoken liking for adventurous and humorous stories. At the peak of all romancers, he placed Cervantes and Balzac. Don Quixote was for him the epic of dying knighthood when virtues were becoming absurdities and roomfoolery in the bourgeois world which was just then arising. For Balzac his admiration was so great that he wanted to write a criticism of his great work "La Comedie Humaine" just as soon as he had completed his economic study. Balzac was not only the historian of the society of his time, but also the creator of prophetic figures which were to be found under Louis Philippe, as yet in embryonic state, and which developed themselves completely only after his death under Napoleon III.

Marx read all European languages and wrote three, German, French and English, to the marvel of people who knew these languages; he gladly repeated the expression: "A foreign language is a weapon in the struggle of life." He possessed a great talent for languages which his daughters inherited. He was already 50 years old when he began to learn Russian, in spite of the fact that this language has no close etymological connection with those old and modern ones that he knew. After six months he had already gained sufficient mastery of it to be able to delight in the reading of the Russian poets and writers whom he especially valued: Pushkin, Gogol and Schtschedrin. The reason for his learning Russian was to be able to read the documents of the official investigations which the government suppressed on account of their frightful revelations; devoted friends had procured them for Marx who is certainly the only West-European economist to whose knowledge it came.

Besides the poets and romancers, Marx had still another very noteworthy means of resting spiritually; that was mathematics for which he felt an especial liking. Algebra even offered him a moral consolation; he took refuge in it during the most painful moments of his agitated life. During the last illness of his wife, when it was impossible for him to occupy himself in the usual manner with his scientific labors; he could only escape the pressure which the sufferings of his companion exercised on his being by submerging himself in mathematics. During this time of spiritual pain, he wrote a paper on infinitesimal calculus which, according to the statements of the mathematicians who know it, is supposed to be significant and will be published in his collected works. In higher mathematics he found again the dialectic movement in its most logical and, at the same time, most simple form; according to his opinion, only that science was really developed which had reached the point of being able to make use of mathematics.

Marx' library, consisting of more than a 1,000 volumes which he had carefully collected in the course of a long life of research, did not suffice for him; and for years he was a zealous frequenter of the British Museum whose catalog he rated very highly. Even his opponents have found themselves compelled to recognise his extensive and profound knowledge which he possessed not only in his own field of political economy but also in history, philosophy and the literatures of all countries.

Altho he always went to bed at a very advanced hour, he was nevertheless always up between eight and nine o'clock in the morning, took his black coffee, read his papers, and then went into his study where he worked until two or three o'clock the next morning. He interrupted himself only long enuf to take his meals and of evenings, when the weather permitted, to take a walk to Hampstead Heath; during the day he slept two or three hours on his couch. In his youth he was in the habit of staying awake whole nights at his work. Working had become a passion with Marx; it so absorbed him that he often forgot to eat because of it. It was not seldom that they had to call him repeatedly for meals before he came down to the dining room; and someday he had eaten his last bite when he was off to his room again. He was a very poor eater and even suffered from want of appetite which he tried to overcome by eating highly salted foods, ham, soaked fish, cavair and pickels. His stomach had to pay for the colossal activity of his brain. He sacrificed his entire body to his brain; thinking was his highest pleasure. I have often heard him repeat Hegel's expression—his master of philosophy during his youth: "Even the crimbs thought of a villain is greater and loftier than the wonders of heaven."

His body must undoubtedly have been a powerful constitution to be able to bear such an unusual manner of living and such exhausting spiritual labor. And, in fact, he was very powerful; his height was above medium, his shoulders were broad, his chest well developed, his limbs well proportioned altho his spinal column was somewhat too long in comparison with his legs, as is often to be found in the Jewish race. Had he participated in gymnastics a great deal in his youth, he would have become an extremely powerful man. The only exercise which he had practiced regularly was walking; he could tramp for hours, chattering and smoking or climb hills without feeling the slightest fatigue. One can assert that he worked walking in his study; he sat down only at short intervals in order to write down what he had thought out as he walked. He also liked to chatter very much while walking, stopping from time to time as the discussion became lively or the conversation important.

Bread Riots in Berlin

Why the U. S. Is in the Phillipines

By HARRISON GEORGE

NOW we know what the Spanish-American war was about!

It was not to free Cuba from "Butcher Weyler," even tho to turn it over to "Butcher Machado." Nor was it to free the Phillipines from the Spaniards, but rather—we have found this out after a quarter of a century—to free the Moros from the Phipinos!

Time was, and the veterans of those days will bear witness, that the Phipinos were regarded as a rather decent people, compared to the Moros. That was when the Moros were still unconvinced of the beneficient qualities of United States regulars, who "civilized 'em with a Krag-Jorgenson" rifle and jumped on their bellies after pumping them full of water.

THAT was time, also, when the Phipinos still believed the promise that the United States would grant them full and unrestricted independence. Whoever heard of an exploiting power "granting" anything to its exploited people without it being forced to! Few Phipinos are so naive nowadays.

But since that distant time the capitalists of the United States have found out that the Phipinoes are chock full of natural wealth and rich resources, hard woods (not to speak of General Wood), sugar lands, rice paddies, gold mines, coal mines and the lord knows what else. Then, in addition, they recently discovered that Mindanao, in Moro-land, was an excellent place to grow rubber.

It happens that British capitalists caught the Yankees asleep at the switch and got a monopoly on rubber before the Americans woke up. With the result that American automobile owners are paying the British war debt to the United States by the way of the British corner on the rubber supply.

THUS it is that Colonel Carmi A. Thompson, personal representative of President Coolidge, is touring the Phillippine islands "investigating" the overwhelming demands for independence coming from the Phipinos who are becoming a little incredulous of Yankee promises.

There is a law in the Phillippines that no corporation can own more than 2,500 acres of land. For some reason or another, Bill Taft's supreme court has never been able to declare that law unconstitutional. And it now appears that this law restricts the United States Rubber trust from going into the islands where the Moros are, Mindanao and Basilan, in the Sulu archipelago, and turning a patriotic penny into an even more patriotic dollar by developing immense rubber plantations to break the British monopoly.

SO we arrive at what is known as the "Bacon Bill" in the U. S. Congress, which would outwit the vigilant Phillippine legislature, by cutting the Moro country loose from Filipino rule and establishing a rather brass-faced dictatorship of American officers over the territory, naturally conducive to giving the American Rubber trust anything its heart desires.

Colonel Thompson remarks that:

"The success of the Basilan rubber planters convinces me that a rubber industry could be developed in the Philippines which would make the United States independent of any foreign rubber control and keep pace with the automobile tires and other rubber goods required by the American people."

THERE are 1,500,000 acres in Mindanao and Basilan, suitable for rubber growing. And Colonel Thompson observes further that:

"Filipino labor is said to be more intelligent and efficient than labor in the Middle West. I am much impressed with their physical vigor, skill and willingness to work. What is needed is capital."

What can be done with the boon of capital is explained by J. W. Strong, who introduced Para rubber cultivation at Isabella in 1906 and is now manager of the American Rubber company. He told Colonel Thompson that the net profit last year from nearly 2,000 acres of cultivated rubber, and some 325,000 trees, was 16 per cent on the investment. A few years of that would pay of the entire original capital charge and the rest is clear velvet. It probably has done this for this plantation already.

Altho the Moros and Filipinos are supposed, in the American newspapers at least, to be at sword's points at each other, Mr. Strong remarked that the workers of both races "work peaceably together" and what is more to the point, they work for 60 cents a day.

WITH profits such as this in view, the American capitalists are prepared to "save the Moros from the Filipinos" or even to save the Moros from themselves. So as a counter-move to the Filipino demand for independence, we are hearing a chorus of morally righteous editorials in the American capitalist press that the U. S. must not desert the Moros, must protect the Moros, the dear little Moros, from the tyranny of the Filipinos.

CRADLE SONG

By JIM WATERS.

Oh, Newborn,
Child of the Toiler,
This is a bitter world for you;
From the shrunken breast of your mother,
Till the cold arms of death enfold you,
Hunger will be your bitter companion.
Many years of fruitless toil will come and go
Before you understand the ways of Mammon;
Then thru this sodden age will come
The ray of hope that animates us all,
And then your face will hunger for the Dawn.

Oh, Newborn,
Child of the Toiler,
This is a bitter world for you;
But even so we greet you,
And prepare your loins for weapons of revolt.

Art and the Four Stages of Socialism

By A. V. LUNACHARSKY

THE idea of socialism can be diversely conceived and interpreted. It is complicated. Here, even more than in the sphere of art, each new step does not obviate the preceding one but, on the contrary, includes it in a broader system. Here we are not dealing with the stages of the complete expression of socialism.

The First Stage.

In the first stage, the so-called social question is considered as a question of the inequality of man, not biological, but legal and economic inequality. One is tormented by the consciousness of the profound injustice of the fact that at one social pole is found well-being and superfluity, and at the other—miserable, oppressive poverty.

The petrified ears birth to the idea of philanthropic socialism; the step-children of society—to the socialism which Engels called "that communism which is founded solely on the demand for equality," and of which Kautsky said that "it is vulgar and naive: it was created not by social far-sightedness, not by altruistic thinking and feeling, but by urgent material needs, the struggle of class interests."

Philanthropic socialism, the socialism of sympathy for the sufferings of the people, has outlived its time and has not only become useless but, in many cases, harmful. Art has frequently enlisted in the service of socialism, but in so doing, has seldom raised itself to broad and exalted conceptions; it remained didactic, shading tears and expressing indignation like an editorial in an honest newspaper.

The struggle for economic interests, sanctified by the idea of equality, is even now the concrete foundation of the entire socialist movement. Other artists have approached it and described it with more understanding and with more profound sympathy. But they did not raise themselves to the highest level of art, remaining on a level of naturalistic understanding. The artists exhausted themselves portraying the misery, the need and the ire of the proletarian, but they were afraid to understand his enthusiasm, as if ashamed to introduce "romanticism" into the sober portrayal of his struggles. An artist, not a proletarian, will hardly succeed in creating a masterpiece while standing on this naturalistic level. Nevertheless, one cannot fail to hail the gifted attempts of such writers as Mirabeau, Delagrazie, Tschaikovsky and especially Gorki.

The Second Stage.

THE great French Revolution was the first to proclaim with such force the right of equality for every being. The thirst for freedom in the relations between people, that is the principal moral nerve of the end of the eighteenth and the entire nineteenth centuries.

But it turned out—and the courageous people, who had no fear of delving into the matter, had perceived it very early—that political and even spiritual emancipation is neither adequate nor concretely possible without the economic emancipation of man. The capitalistic dream of achieving such a freedom on the basis of the division of property among all, of founding a kingdom of equal, independent citizen-owners—this dream has disappeared. And then socialism came forward as a lawful continuator of the emancipation tendencies of the revolution: it set itself the task of organizing collective ownership for the complete emancipation of man.

Art is easily carried away by ideas of freedom because no one values freedom to such an extent as does the artist. The glorification of freedom, often full of enthusiasm, led to the creation of great works. But the artists have seldom expounded the idea of the necessity of instituting the collective human property as the sole basis upon which it is possible to erect the structure of freedom. The novels of Bellamy and even of Morris and several of the last works of the unique and gifted Veit, it seems to me, leave the reader cold. They are too much social treatise and too little art work; but the worst is that the whole stormy striving after freedom can be called off with the question asked by Zarathustra: "You tell me I am free, free. . . But for what are you free, my brother?"

Freedom cannot be an end in itself. As such, it merely appears to the slave. If the goal of socialism is freedom, then what is the goal of freedom? Enthusiasm over "empty freedom," which has lately acquired new strength and, in addition, has been spoiled by an unpalatable mysticism, is the enthusiasm of the holot and the cripple, the person who is smothered and who therefore thinks that air, the right to breathe, is an end in itself. One cannot deny the great significance of the art of the love of freedom, agitating and calling to revolution. But it is not very enduring. The idea of pure freedom is one-sided and perhaps that is why the people who are unable to give it a content, exchange it for a mystic gas, with which their freedom is filled, and which roars towards its ecloude, ever remaining empty and light because of this very emptiness.

"These writers are really attempting to transcend the limits of simple naturalism and to listen to the "romantic" in the soul of the proletarian.

The corrupt and disappointed thirst for freedom often manifests itself in an unexpected form—it becomes a thirst for freeing oneself from one's social duties, that is, simply a thirst for egotistic aloofness from the world process, from the struggle for concrete freedom and its new concrete content.

The Third Stage.

MORE profound and more lofty is the concept of socialism as the new collective world born within the old individualistic world. The basis of both worlds is the social character of the process of labor. But, for the artist, the inner process is much more important here—the struggle is the soul of man and of mankind between the two bases, individualism and collectivism. I personally believe that the collectivistic attitude, the growth of the new collective soul, carries along with it not merely a powerful interest for the artist, the naturalist-investigator, but also a powerful quality of value, capable of inspiring masterpieces permeated with the highest enthusiasm. Unfortunately, the artists of our time have naturally given themselves over to individualism which has scarcely any feeling for the phenomenon of the new collective soul that is just beginning to try out its wings—which, at present, are still weak. Their misfortune lies in the fact that they are everywhere accepting the psycho-pathological phenomenon of the mob as the true example of collective feeling and thinking and as the true expression of the collective psyche. They are inclined to accept, especially the finer sympathies, as for example, the lofty sympathies of the heroes and martyrs of the collective idea, merely in their external, individualised aspect without noticing their deeper social character. But then, shall we not be obliged to wait for the artist-proletarian to express the collective-creative processes of human life? I do not think so. Even art itself, if conditions help it to find the normal forms of life—circles, schools, tendencies—can lead to correct performances. I want to say that the artist who carries on his work as teacher, training pupils, who feels that he is giving expression to groups and to masses and is their inspiration, can discover the bright depths of the new super-individualistic soul thru simple self-observation. Unfortunately, individualism is ruining our artists. Instead of great forms of art, schools, we see before us a forced, hysterical striving after originality, aloofness. Our artist can hardly create collectively at all, and that deprives him of the possibility of understanding the rising and growing collective psyche.

The Fourth Stage.

BUT if one merely considers here the standpoint of philosophy and history as a new epoch in human culture, differing radically from all former epochs there which mankind has lived, socialism takes on a fascinating lustre. Labor, in all of its forms, is a process of the humanising of nature, of its subjection to reason, of the conquest of the universe. But it cannot have the same significance in all its fullness so long as it is piecemeal and is conducted chaotically. Its piecemeal character, its disorganization, expresses itself in the degrading fact that it is a slave of the economic environment which it has itself created, of its own means of production. No less frightful and degrading are the class and national struggles which arm nomic environment which it has itself created, of its people one against another. The stage of profound disorganization of insane squandering of, cultural forces, of internal struggle, is absolutely unavoidable in the growth of the economic power of man—but once it is understood, it becomes a curse. A significant part of the most painful and the most offensive sufferings of men are created by men themselves in their blind and fatal struggle and division among themselves. The process of destroying the dependence of the inspired person upon his soulless tools, of destroying class and national struggles, is difficult and complicated; but as a result of this process, an enormous quantity of living, cultural forces must be set free. The rapidity of the progressive movement of mankind will transcend all conceivable boundaries. Mankind will be transformed into a harmonious family of gods which will consciously follow its great goal—to secure the existence and development of great phenomenon in this world: enjoyment, thinking and creation—phenomena, which arose in the world as a result of a happy concurrance of climatic and chemical conditions on a small planet and which find themselves in constant danger of senseless loss of energy or even of destruction as a result of these latent processes. The self-defense of the human kind is closely bound up with attack. The eternal goal of man and the goal which is continually drawing farther away from him, is to become a God, the prime thought and the feeling heart of the world. On the road to the realisation of this dream, which has been of past and present, there will be created colossal cultural works and there will be realised the growth of refinement of the capacity to feel and enjoy, of the power of thought and the commanding mightiness of the will, indescribable in our language.

Socialism as a social question, is the prerequisite of true culture; it sets itself the goal of organizing even now the enormous but disintegrated forces of humanity.

Socialist as a teaching is the true religion of mankind, divested of its mythical cloak in which the inadequate development of the intellect and the feelings of our fathers had enveloped it. It unites our "humble," "materialistic" origin, the unavoidability of suffering, or degradation thru which we have lived, of baseness and error which we have committed; the inevoidability of the bitter draught of sufferings which we are still to take, and together with all this—the loftiness and greatness of the task of all human co-operation which sets before itself ever more clearly the goal: there must be a god, a living one, an all-happy and all-powerful one. We are his creators!

Scientific socialism reveals, abstractly and in its basic lines, the painful, moving, majestic and strange process of god-creating, otherwise called economic process. Art, the art of tragedy, must reveal and make us feel this process in the whole, concrete, fiery, multi-colored, stormy transformation of its endless, real or conceivable manifestations. Every true art of tragedy is socialistic. Conscious art of tragedy is doubly socialistic.

Socialism needs art. All propaganda is embryonic art. All art is propaganda. It is the education of souls, their cultural transformation. On the general basis of the tragic world view many tendencies are naturally possible which may contend with one another. But such a struggle is capable of giving birth to new lives, to new blossoms, is capable of adding surfaces to the thousand-surfaced figure of the human soul.

The union between scientific socialism and true art is a natural one. Unfortunately, very few at present understand the full cultural significance of socialism, and at the same time, new masterpieces of true art are unfortunately very rare.

Jumping Up From the River

A Story

By GEORGE JARRBOE

GOING down on the ladder Patrick dared to pause. For a split-second stolen from the master. "I am going down, always going down. Some day I shall go up." Other longshoremen shouted at him, admonitions to drop into their midst. He sneaked a look at the long ropes, canes precariously dangling, "whips" as aptly called, why not nooses, nooses that slowly strangled a man, relaxing reluctantly now and then so poor quality food could be thrust in the decaying mouth. Big feet up, big feet down, down swear slinging like little mosquitoes, half-uttered protests and murmurs of trapped slaves. Hooks plinked into cargo, methodically, like oars of galley-slaves. The hold of the ship the bottom of a dark river, filled with tortures and chains. Bodies. Big boxes. Boxes. Hoodlum holes. Comrades giving a hand in their clumsy way. Loamy smells of putrefying brains. Hell. Dig the hook in.

Case fell out of sling. Patrick naively touched his right ear, felt a little blood where the half-cent weight grazed him. Had to have a chew on that. Felt like rushing to the toilet. "Nearly got you, Paddy me bye. We get it sooner or later. Your turn'll come," jobbled the big-hearted foreman.

Early in life Paddy took to the docks. There was a mother who required all the little fellow could earn, why hell three times what he could earn, the meagre necessities seemed to make her slide quicker, she went out like a light. Somehow, doubtless from some naughty person, the boy got the idea this was all wrong. He resolved to get the low-down on it.

He followed up school. Wearing on the sorely tired body, life-giving to the budding mind, bright seeds of far horizons, of the peoples' heroes "plunging thru the thunderstorm," of the ultimate calm blue sky and sweet-oozing river. While the big boxes stretched his muscles, books flexed his mind. A ladder out of his present unhappy life, rungs by the cynic aristos of Athens, Spinoza, distorted sayings of a certain Judean Communist, the sunburst that was Shelley, naughty Germans, that baddest of bad boys Lenin. Hell. Dig the hook in.

Son of owner of line disturbed him. Fat, bloated, the aristo made no use of chance to see world and its lost cities, understand and succor its lost men and women. Paddy had just been reading of Akragas, "the most beautiful city of mortals." Ah to go to Akragas, though he had not read its white temples were obscured by smokey factories.

Factories!

Paddy trembled at a poem by a naughty New York radical. About the factory wench and her dream of better things, she got caught and she couldn't wed, so into the dark river, though the workers, all of 'em, were marching to her relief. Horizon dotted with five-pointed stars, added Patrick, and hammers and sickles.

Why couldn't the masters pay more? This bloated fellow had a hand in it. Why the fat stuff was standing squarely in his way on the ladder. Guess the workers would have to present their bill. No doubt about payment then. I should say not. Hope to kiss a pig. Fat follows on the latter. Knives cut meat, it is also susceptible to explosion, in the distance drums, the day of glory marches nearer. Beautiful women up above—Helens, Sonnicas, Follies girls, perhaps even virgins—the kind men drowned railroads for and sweated 500 fellow men on a great unhappy liner, and for each vessel 400 longshoremen must strain away months of life that such beauty might be brightly robed and royally jeweled. A tithe of one pearl would have saved the factory girl from the river. Fat stuff, will you never get off the ladder? Shall we have to slap you to sleep?

Three hundred pound bags of beans. Best breakers of backs and guts I know. Slaves carry 'em on their backs or try to. Bags. Tons, twenties, hundreds, millions. Bags. Bags. Thugrees. Assassins. Bags. Comrade gasping in the wings, blood on his lips, more blood coming. Ain't it annoying. Another lowbrow's got an internal hemorrhage . . . "Up from your tail there!" the foreman at him in kindly tones. Paddy snitched a look at the ladder. Up it wended, up from the broken backed men, up from squalid homes reeking always of foul toilets, up from comrades slowly recovering in hospitals, up from unsung corpses of the industrial dead, up to a fine home, a lovely woman, really happy children, nearer landscape threaded with a silver river, glinting with hammers and sickles and five-pointed stars, winking a promise of freedom. Long roll of workers' drums and world-wide army marching. Hell. Dig the hook in.

Patrick groaned.

For a breather coming out into square of hatch, there was the bloated fellow grinning down at him. At his side a fabulous face that must have bloomed in Akragas. Jolly girl, of good shape. Probably having lots of fun. Happier and happier. Huh! The unwed mother plunging into the dark river.

"Paddy me bye!" protested the big-hearted foreman. The chained young colossus hastened to dig his hook in a cass. Rattling of the winches on deck above. Winches too often defective, causing drafts to fall and take human lives, winches the masters cared little about, so much profit in the cargo you know, life-taking winches, thought-murdering winches, proper excrescence on the dingy river, damnable winches, sugaring the drums-fire of heavy machine-guns. Machine-guns. Winches. Machine-guns! Machine-guns! I must get back to my hook, said Paddy, the day of glory is not arrived.

Growing unbearable at the bottom of this hot and filthy river, into which the tortured factory girl had flung herself. Time to go up on the ladder, up to the woman of Akragas, up from foulness, fecal death. How sweet the new air. He dropped the slave's hook, stood up straight, breathing deeply, a free man.

Paddy smiled happily. Things ahead looked really worthwhile. Perhaps became another case fell out of sling, this time with butter aim, they never found the ear with the pitiful scratch. A bit of cheap mess, I fear, on very valuable cargo. But Patrick, himself seemed to mount, and burst on his famishing eyes white strand and white: columns, a gorgeous countenance under bluest sky, gaily decorated with five-pointed stars and hammers and sickles. Up from the dark river! In big ears as he passed the roll of drums was drowned by the tread of all earth marching, the river was clearing up, big feet down, big feet up, sweat stinging but never mind, free men, free forever,

CANTON ARMY NEAR CAPTURE OF SHANGHAI

Sun's Army Collapsed; His Capital Taken

SHANGHAI, Oct. 17.—This city, the "Paris of the Orient," may soon become the prize of the Cantonese armies, if developments of yesterday are any measure of what is to come. The forces of General Sun Chuan-fang, in Kiangsi province have been beaten and routed, Nanking, his capital, is reported taken, and, in addition, the governor of Chekiang province has gone over to the Cantonese and is thought to be preparing to attack Shanghai from the south.

Had to Run for His Life.

So complete was the debacle in Kiangsi, that General Sun was compelled with his staff to make a personal flight, hiding himself on a foreign gunboat at Kiukiang, as his defeating troops turned the city over to the Cantonese. It is believed they are fleeing to Nanking, above Shanghai about 150 miles in Kiangsu province.

General Uprising Against Him.

Two of Sun's strongest supporters went over to the Canton armies and the reactionary general, who is one of the organizers, along with British imperialist agents, of the "Constitutional Defense League," financed by the British, had to flee from his own troops and civilians who had been angered by continuous looting and murdering of his command.

Cantonese troops are in full possession of Kiangsi province and their commander, General Cheuk Kei-shih, has already started to reorganize the leaderless soldiers who are joining the Canton forces en masse.

Nanking, Sun's Capital, Taken.

Sun's flight to Nanking, his capital in Kiangsu province, is likely only to result in his capture there, as it is reported that Cantonese detachments, disguised as civilians but bearing arms, have entered Nanking by the aid of sympathetic Chekiang provincial troops.

As Sun's flight took place, about 1,200 of his troops who had not gone over to the Cantonese were killed when the Kuang Yuang, a British ship of the China Merchant Navigation company and loaded with arms, took fire in Kiukiang harbor. The munitions exploded, discharging shells over the city and killing most of the 1,500 soldiers aboard before burning down to the water.

Loses Chekiang Province.

Governor Lisia Chan of the province of Chekiang, the rich province lying south of Shanghai, yesterday declared his province independent of Sun Chuan-fang's rule and is reported to be ready to aid the Cantonese march on Shanghai.

In Shanghai the foreign police reserves have been called out to guard the foreign concessions, while two miles south of Shanghai the troops of Sun have torn up the railway and are placing artillery hoping to block the expected attack from Chekiang province, the capital of which, Hangchow, is only 157 miles south.

Little Hope for Reaction.

The only hope of stopping the advancing Canton armies from capture of Shanghai is the forlorn one that Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian reactionary may send some reinforcements south. But as Sun never helped Chang when asked, it is not expected that Chang will worry much about getting help to Sun.

Of course, there is the other hope of foreign intervention on a large scale, a movement that is being organized by the British.

Polish Bandit Slain.

WARSAW, Oct. 17.—Zotlinsky, a notorious Polish bandit, was slain by police here in a raid on a "bandit party" staged by the robber. In the last few months, Zeilinsky is said to have committed numerous murders, thefts, and burgleries in and near Warsaw. His romantic inclinations caused him to give away, and the place was discovered by the police. Several of his guests were also seriously wounded.

Austrian Cabinet Resigns.

VIENNA Oct. 17.—The Ramek ministry has resigned. It is announced President Hacnisch has accepted the resignation, but requested that the members of the ministry maintain their posts until a new cabinet could be formed.

KELLOGG DOESN'T LIKE EXERCISING OF POWER BY CHINESE RADICALS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17. — (FP) Secretary Kellogg has instructed the American consul in Canton to protest the laying of an additional tax on imports and exports—above the customs rates permitted by the foreign powers—in those parts of China controlled by the Canton national government.

Other powers have made similar protest, but the new taxes are being collected by the radical government in its ports. Canton takes the position that it is a sovereign Chinese government with which the powers will have to negotiate.

SOFT COAL STRIKE WILL BE CERTAIN

So Says Editor of Gas Makers' Journal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 17.—"It can be said with reasonable certainty that a soft coal strike will take place next spring," was the assertion of Floyd W. Parsons, of New York, editorial director of the Gas Age Record, to the American Gas Association convention. He continued:

"The operators insist that they will be able to break the strike before it causes any considerable discontinuance to the consuming public. However it is never safe to predict what may happen in a labor controversy of this nature. Several times when the miners' union appeared to be on its last less diligent efforts of the labor leaders succeeded so well in consolidating their forces that the union came back stronger than ever."

LABOR BANK IN PITTSBURGH IS SWINDLE VICTIM

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 17.—Information charging conspiracy were filed here today against three officials of the Brotherhood Savings and Trust company, a labor bank, and two others before Alderman A. M. Maloney Flynn, Bishop Paul Jones, Robert W. Dunn, Forrest Bailey, McAllistar Coleman, Paxten, Hibben, Ben Gitlow, and Carlo Tresca.

Tell of Persecution.

They will tell the stories that never reach the ears of our American people about the horrible persecution of workers and peasants in Roumania who dare to speak against the rule of oppression there, and who try to organize for better conditions in factories and on the farms.

Thousands of New York workers will join in this expression of solidarity with their Roumanian fellow-workers, and in a mighty protest against Roumania's government and its queen.

No Scopes Decision.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 17.—The supreme court has adjourned until November 20 without indicating what decision is to be made in the appeal of the John T. Scopes evolution case.

Banker Sentenced.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 17.—Ramsey Bauchamp who embezzled and misapplied two million dollars from the Union and Planter's bank, was sentenced to five years in Atlanta prison and fined $140,000. Bauchamp was vice-president of the bank.

SECRECY SURROUNDING QUEEN'S ITINERARY IS CONNECTED WITH LOANS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—A great deal of secrecy surrounds the arrangement of plans for Queen Marie's visit n the United States. There appears to be much confusion caused by reason of the fact that itineraries are being made up for the royal party by several different agencies. But since it is quite definitely known that the Queen is coming to the United States largely to effect an arrangement for the floatation of large loans for Roumania, it is likely that much of her time will be spent in the East, chiefly in New York. The United States Lines is already preparing to embark the queen on the Levia-than for the return trip, which, it is announced, will not occur until Christmas, giving the royal consort three months time in which to transact her business.

The opposition party in the Canadian house of commons will be led by Hugh Guthrie next year. He was elected temporary house leader at a caucus of the elected conservative members of parliament.

SCHOOL CHILDREN FORCED TO BOW TO QUEEN MARIE

L. I. D. to Protest Show of Royalism

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—In the mad frenzy to do homage to royalty, even the children of America are being forced to pay e part

In New York City, five thousand youngsters are to be taken from school on the morning of October 23 and made to do honor to Princess Ileana who is being given a reception at the Capitol Theater by a woman's civic committee, headed by the society matron, Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris.

If the visits of European royalty continue as frequently as they have occurred during the past few years, the children of our so-called democratic country will be well instructed in the proper way to treat a monarch.

L. I. D. Will Protest.

It is to protest against this sort of welcome to the representatives of Roumania's fascist government that the New York section of the International Labor Defense has arranged a demonstration in Union Square on Monday the 18, at 5:30.

There will be a number of prominent speakers including Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Bishop Paul Jones, Robert W. Dunn, Forrest Bailey, McAllistar Coleman, Paxten, Hibben, Ben Gitlow, and Carlo Tresca.

D. OF J. MAN REVEALS PLOT AGAINST SACCO

But Boston Globe Did Not Publish Letter

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DEDHAM, Mass., Oct. 17 (FP)—Although the hearing of Sacco and Vanzetti's last motion for a new trial has already passed and Judge Webster Thayer is supposedly considering the evidence prior to giving his decision for or against the two Italian workers, another affidavit bearing on the motion has been filed by defense attorney William G. Thompson.

A letter of Fari Felizus Weiss, department of justice agent, to the Boston Globe—which that paper did not print—is incorporated into Thompson's affidavit. Weiss was named in other affidavits supporting the new trial motion as one of the men considered in connection with the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti on the payroll robbery and murder charge.

Reveals Plot Against Law.

Weiss confirms the affidavit of John Russamanti (secured by defense attorney Fred Moore four years ago but not used until Thompson entered it in support of the last motion.) Russamanti was an undercover man whom Weiss proposed to the then district attorney Frederick G. Katzmann, as one who could be put in a cell next to Sacco to get evidence.

Weiss claims in his unpublished letter to the Globe that he explained to Katzmann "that anarchists do not commit crimes for money, but for a principle, and that banditry was not in their code."

Weiss further claims that he had intended to put a spy next to Sacco as much to clear him of the murder charge as to convict him, although it was asserted at the recent hearing that Sacco and Vanzetti were framed on the capital charge in order to discredit them when federal agents could not get sufficient evidence to deport them as radicals.

A. D. of J. Man Now.

Weiss was not in the federal service at the time of the Sacco Vanzetti arrest and trial but had been previously and is now again, though stationed in the west.

He says to the Globe that he told Katzmann he knew Sacco was an anarchist. Weiss concludes his letter with charges that Katzmann is trying to clear himself of the "Ruzzamenti Sacco" and that Ruzzamenti "delivered my life into the hands of the international reds the world over by his perjury" in giving the defense an affidavit.

Three Killed in Fight in Monterey Legislature

MONTEREY, Mex., Oct. 17.—Three persons were killed and several persons were injured in a revolver battle between opposing factions in the state legislature here.

The battle occurred outside of the legislative palace and followed a heated debate during which charges were made that the agents of Governor Siller had made attempts to assassinate two deputies.

Oscar Spaniveda, chief clerk of the chamber of deputies, a policemen and a bootblack were killed. A newspaper reporter who hurried out to cover the story was seriously wounded.

Editor of B. of L. E. Journal Assailed by Pres. John L. Lewis

NEGRO STRIKE IS FEDERATION MAIN BUSINESS

Conditions are Menace, says Fitzpatrick

Discussion of the strike of the Negro women date staffers here was the main topic at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor Sunday afternoon.

The federation pledged its support to the Negro women and voted unanimously to give them credentials to solicit strike funds from all labor organizations affiliated.

President Fitzpatrick introduced the discussion declaring that the strike has a great significance to the entire labor movement. It exposes the exploitation of the Negro workers, he said, which is a menace to all workers, as the bosses use their power over unorganized Negroes to decrease all wages.

Horrible Conditions.

"This strike opens a little corner of the terrible conditions under which Negroes must work," he said. "These factories form a reservoir of cheap labor, coming up fresh from the south, and exploited in such a manner."

Conditions under which they work are horrible, it was related, and such that the stuffed dates produced there are unfit for human consumption. Fitzpatrick declared that he had appealed to the U. S. department of labor to investigate, and that the Mars company, where the women were employed, refused to remedy conditions.

Whitemen Speaks.

"We've got to fight to go forward," said Fitzpatrick in closing.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman of the American Negro congress, and Mrs. Fannie Warnettas, president of the union, addressed the meeting by invitation

A. F. of L. Report Wast.

A written report on the A. F of L. convention was read at the meeting. It contained very little of importance, and emphasized mainly the question of whether or not shoppers of Detroit were more loyal during the world war than unionists. The questions of Passaic aid, organization of auto workers, and the speeches on Russia were omitted.

FAVORABLE REPORT ON MEXICAN UNIONS HIDDEN BY THE A. F. OF L.; WON'T GO TO LABOR CONFERENCE

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., October 17. — It developed today that reports by William D. Mahon, fraternal delegate to the Mexican Federation of Labor convention at Mexico City, in March, and of James B. Conners, delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress at Montreal in September, were slipped into the last day's proceedings. They were not read to the convention.

Mahon's report was pretty well loaded with dynamite. Mahon declared that, "The first action of the convention was to send a telegram to Plutarco Elias Calles, president of Mexico pledging the undivided support of the 'C. R. O. M.' (the Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana, or Mexican Federation of Labor) in his attitude towards the church and endorsing his conduct of administering the government of the Republic of Mexico."

Mahon reported in detail the various activities of the Mexican labor movement, its war against fascism, establishing a college to train labor officials, the founding of an institute of social science, developing the cooperativa societies, these matters coming before the gathering of 400 different resolutions. Only 83 resolutions came before the A. F of L. convention here.

It Was "Some Sight."

Mahon reported there were 1,525 delegates at the Mexican congress, compared to the less than 500 here. Mahon told of President Calles coming before the gathering, seking for the floor, not as president of the republic, but as "a comrade and fellow worker." Mahon reported, "To me this was some sight."

Mahon reported that seven years ago the Mexican Federation of Labor had only 7,000 members, whereas it now has 1,500,000, not much more than a million less than there are in the A. F. of L. Mahon declared:

What Catholics Don't Like.

"The cheering that followed the close of President Calles' address was the most wonderful that I have ever experienced in my 40 years of work, which has brought me in touch with many conventions and mass meetings of workers."

This is what Delegate James W. Fitzpatrick in his attack on the Mexican labor movement referred to as "the foul alliance between Calles and the C. R. O. M."

Trevino Conceals Truth.

Ricardo Trevino, secretary-general of the Mexican Federation of Labor, who was fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention, declared that he was satisfied with the action of the convention in its closing session on religious church war. He declared that Delegate Fitzpatrick was merely stating his own personel opinion. Of course, this is not true, since Fitzpatrick was speaking for a strong section of the catholic bloc in the convention.

There was nothing unusual in Conners' report. He declared that Fredorick G. Roberts, fraternal delegate of the British Trades Union Congress at Montreal, in his speech, "appeared to be strong for the Labor Party of Great Britain."

Dodge International Conference.

No delegation of the American Federation of Labor will attend the International labor conference to be held at Mexico City, Oct. 21-26, at which it is expected that most of the countries affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam)-will be represented.

Ricardo Trevino, secretary-general of the Mexican Federation of Labor, waited in vain for a favorable answer here in the lobby of the Tuller Hotel while the executive council discussed the matter in secret session. The attitude of the A. F. of L. executive council on this subject was characteristic of many of its actions.

It did not turn down the invitation extended to it by the Mexican Federation of Labor; in fact, it was really accepted. But it was done after President William Green, or some member or members of the executive council must go, if anybody went. President Green, however, in common with every member of the executive council found that they would be too busy to make the trip, that they had other more important engagements.

Nothing announces that delegates from 13 countries will attend the gathering, including many of the South American countries, with spokesmen present for Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Spain and other European countries. It is expected that Edo Fimman, president of the International Federation of Transport Workers and former secretary of the International Federation of Trades Unions, will attend. Perhaps the A. F. of L. council took the action it did, feeling that it did not desire so quickly to develop this close con-

NEGRO SHOPPERS PRAISE GREEN FOR REACTION

Loud Attack on Soviet Workers' Republic

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 17.—Bitter hostility on the part of Detroit's open shoppers toward the American Federation of Labor changed to a veritable upproval of many of the convention's actions here before the hour of adjournment arrived.

This change of attitude was most clearly apparent in the local "American Plan" press, that spewed forth its poisonous "open shop" venom as greeting to the arriving delegates, but later learned how to take the A. F. of L. officials to its editorial bosom and con soft acquiescence of the administration's policies so overwhelmingly endorsed by the assembled delegates.

Open Shoppers Have Reason.

This was especially true of the Detroit Free Press. Its editorial greeting to the convention was a demand that no efforts be made to organize workers locally, especially in the auto industry, charging that the workers were better off under the local open shop regime. No doubt the slavery-like conditions in the auto shops will be buried at the heads of the A. F. of L.

But the action of the convention on the questions of the Citizens' Military Training Camps, its opposition to the recognition of and sending of a delegation to the Union of Soviet Republics chanced all that Thunderous salvos of editorial applause greeted the conventions approval of these schools of militarism and of the imperialist opposition to the workers' and peasants' government

Open Shop Finds an Affinity.

Thus the Free Press entitles its leading editorial: "Two Bumps For Communism" and hails "the scorching condemnation of Communism and all its works, particularly as they are represented in Soviet Russia, which the American Federation of Labor convention embodied in a unanimously adopted resolution."

The 100 per cent capitalist Free Press is happy to note that the A. F. of L. is "standing against radicalism, and particularly against radicalism of the Moscow brand," which it claims is a bad blow to the Soviet crowd, but

French Cabinet Fears to Open Debt Question

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The French government will not ask for ratification of the British and American debt settlements before February. It was learned authoritatively today.

The delay has been decided upon in the hope that the November elections in the United States and the French senatorial elections in January may change the situation

The government, it is learned, has made a canvas of the situation and found that there is little chance of the present parliament ratifying the agreements.

Mail Clerks Injured.

DENNISON, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Four mail clerks were injured here when the engine and eight mail cars, with three sleepers on the Pennsylvania road were derailed. The clerks were not seriously injured. It is believed.

Young Worker Killed.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 17.—Orville Lane, a young worker in the paper mill here, was scalded to death when an explosion occurred in a "soda" cooker. Several other workers were seriously burned. No reason for the explosion is given.

Forge Ahead to Keep The Daily Worker! Philadelphia Sets the Pace

By JAY LOVESTONE.

WE are moving ahead to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER. We may be a little more slow than we have hoped to be. But we are getting there.

Philadelphia is setting the pace. In so far as THE DAILY WORKER campaign is concerned, Philadelphia is certainly not a sleepy city. Every district of the Workers (Communist) Party has been assigned a certain quota which it must attain to order to enable The DAILY WORKER to continue. In this contest, to date, some of the districts are doing well. Others had better wake up and wake up quickly. Unless they got on the job very soon, they will wake up to find that there is no DAILY WORKER to KEEP.

WE herewith publish the achievements of the different districts of the Workers (Communist) Party thru October 14th. Examine the table carefully and see whether you have done your duty or failed to respond to the urgent call to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

| District | Quota Assigned | Amount Collected thru Oct. 14 | Percent |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. Boston | $ 4,000 | $ 453.25 | 11.3 |
| 2. New York | 15,000 | 1,348.50 | 9.3 |
| 5. Philadelphia | 3,000 | 926.60 | 30.9 |
| 6. Buffalo | 1,100 | 87.50 | 8.0 |
| 8. Pittsburgh | 2,500 | 346.30 | 13.8 |
| 9. Cleveland | 3,000 | 273.50 | 9.1 |
| 7. Detroit | 2,900 | 665.25 | 24.2 |
| 10. Chicago | 7,500 | 1,554.54 | 20.7 |
| 8. Minneapolis | 3,500 | 82.10 | 2.3 |
| 10. Kansas City | 1,000 | 265.00 | 26.5 |
| 12. Seattle | 2,500 | 88.10 | 3.5 |
| 13. San Francisco | 2,000 | 362.25 | 18.1 |
| 14. New Haven | 1,000 | 123.00 | 12.3 |
| Agricultural District | 400 | 106.00 | 26.0 |
| Canada | ..... | 17.00 | ..... |

UP to October 15th, we have collected $6,778.12.

The Philadelphia district leads in the proportion of its quota it has collected to date. The Chicago district has to date raised the largest sum. The Detroit, Kansas City and Agricultural districts are making a good showing. Districts, far stronger organizationally, are trailing these sections of our party. We hope that this will serve to arouse some of the higher but slower districts to speed up.

Of course, in many districts the machinery for the KEEP THE DAILY WORKER campaign has not gotten into full swing yet. Mass meetings, dances, balls, bazaars, banquets, rummage sales, picnics, entertainments and affairs of every description have been arranged. All of these will surely bring the necessary relief.

BUT we must hurry up. WE MUST GET SOME BIG CONTRIBUTIONS AT ONCE. The next few weeks are our most critical and trying time.

There certainly must be thousands of workers—friends and sympathisers —in every section of the party who have not yet been approached for a direct immediate contribution to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

If your district has made a good showing to date, there is only one thing for you to do. Hurry up. Bruce up. Do better. You can do it. You must try harder and the results will be there for The DAILY WORKER.

If your district has made a good record to date, it shows that you are on the right road. It shows that you can get results. Very likely you can do much better even than you have done so far. There is every reason for believing that you can deliver even more telling support to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

LET US ALL FORGE AHEAD TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

EMPLOYERS TRY TO SPLIT PAPER BOX STRIKERS

Spread Lies to Bring About Dissension

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Employers in the paper box industry yesterday took a new tack in their efforts to break down the morale of the 4,000 striking box workers. Anonymous circulars were distributed to workers early in the morning, purporting to come from dissatisfied union workers and criticising the leaders for their conduct of the strike.

Charge Disloyalty.

The familiar lies resorted to by bosses who have their backs to the wall were spread across the page. The leaders were charged with being in the pay of the bosses, of selling out and of disloyalty to the rank and file of the strikers.

Manager Fred Caiola and other officials of the union were cheered at a mass meeting of workers when they branded the circulars as a trick of the employers to break the strike. Caiola declared that one manufacturer on Wooster Street had been seen distributing these circulars in person.

Anthony Capparo, special organizer for the union, praised the efforts for their fine work throughout the past 16 months. He maintained that the former corrupt officials of the union had connived with the manufacturers to get out the circulars.

Bosses Afraid.

"Why didn't those responsible for issuing these circulars have the nerve to sign them?" shouted Manager Caiola. "When the union makes accusations against anyone our officials always sign the statement. The bosses are showing by their tactics that their backs are to the wall. The wall is bound to fall very soon and the bosses will go down with it!"

William Pickens, field organizer of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, praised the union for admitting Negroes into its ranks on the same basis as white workers. "The unity of labor is better than any consideration of race or language. The owners of your factories hang together, but they want to divide you. Every white man who sets himself against a Negro worker is playing into the hands of the bosses. Every black man who sets himself against a white worker is undermining his own chances of advancement."

Mooney Branch of I. L. D. Meets Tues., Workers Are Invited

The "Mooney" branch of the I. L. D. will meet Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, at 3209 W. Roosevelt Road, workers of that neighborhood being invited. Fred Mann, of the National Executive Committee will give a short talk.

Wednesday evening, Oct. 20th, the Irving Park Branch will meet at 4051 N. Drake; the Cicero (International) branch at Liberty Hall, 14th and 49th Ct., and the Boosters and Organization Committees at 768 W. Van Buren St.

Lowden Against Reductions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and possible presidential timber, has announced himself as opposed to a "competitive tariff" which would lower the standard of prices of manufactured goods to that of farm goods. He believes the solution is in bringing the farm prices up.

BOSS' FRAMEUP IS BOOMERANG, STRIKE GAINS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

By J. O. BENTALL.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 17.—The arrest of Richard Ward on a trumped-up charge that he beat Helen Fairbanks, a scab in the Philadelphia Carpet Company shop which is now on strike, is reacting as a boomerang against the bosses of the "struck" shop, the workers in all the other shops taking sides with Ward.

Not Even There.

Ward was working in the Cochran shop and was not present at the time the scab girl was supposed to have been beaten. She assured two girl strikers, as well as Ward, of having beaten her, but the girls were working in another shop at the very time when the alleged beating was said to have taken place.

Ward is held in $500 bail and the girl strikers are also held for a hearing.

The story is so thin that the Fairbanks woman, who is scabbing in the Philadelphia shop, is now sought by an officer with a warrant for her arrest on a charge of perjury.

Lies on Age.

When she first came as a scab she claimed that she was 21 years old. But in order to make a better impression on the court she says the bosses told her to say she is only 16. The bosses are now quite uncertain about the testimony of this weak girl, and if they cannot use her and if she is later brought up for perjury they will desert her and she may land in jail for a year or two.

The strike is still 100 per cent strong and the picketing is kept up every day, while the bosses find it more expensive to keep up appearances.

Cleveland Traction Company Head, Who Fought Labor, Dead

CLEVELAND, Oct. 17. — John J. Stanley, head of the Cleveland Street Railway company, and well-known in American traction circles, died here last week. Stanley has been known in recent times for the brutal refusal to concede the street railway men a decent wage. Several months ago the street railway men demanded an increase in wages, but it was promptly refused by Mr. Stanley. The street car men then proposed that as the street railway company had to get a new charter, the so-called Taylor grant, which granted them the charter, should be amended to include a clause providing that the street car men might belong to a union affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

Officials of the Cleveland Federation of Labor and of the street car men, lobbied in the municipal council, the assurance being given to the delegates of the Cleveland Federation of Labor that the amendment would pass. Just as everywhere, labor's influence is so great among the "friends" that the amendment was defeated by a vote of 18 to 6.

A few weeks ago it was announced that street car fares in Cleveland will be raised from 6c to 7c. But there has been no announcement that the street car men's wages will be raised. In view of these facts, it is therefore astonishing to read in the Cleveland Citizen of October 9, a statement by the street car men that: "We know that many of our members will feel that they have lost a friend."

CHICAGO RADIO STATION OBTAINS A. F. L. APPROVAL

Delegates Return from Detroit Meet

By CARL HAESSLER, Federated Press.

Delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention, which closed in Detroit, Oct. 14, have returned to Chicago. Delegate John Mangan, representing the Chicago Federation of Labor, had his resolution for endorsement of WCFL, the labor-owned and labor-operated Chicago radio-station, unanimously carried, with instructions to the executive council to further study radio development and their bearing on labor. His resolution to force a straightening out of the snarl between the International Horseshoers' union and the Chicago local did not pass but it brought about a negotiated agreement.

Gets Resolution.

Delegate Christian Medsen of the painters accomplished his purpose also when his resolution to aid in seeing justice done to a small number of Hindus long resident in this country was referred to the executive council for active support if it is found not to violate the immigration policy of the federation.

Will Broadcast Passaic.

"We'll tell the whole Chicago area of the need for Passaic relief and so put our labor radio to good labor use," declared Charles F. Wills, a machinist delegate and business manager of the Chicago Federation News, to the convention at Detroit.

While he was uttering those words another labor project was going out over the ether from the municipal labor broadcasting station WCFL in Chicago. This was the talk on the co-operatively grown and marketed apples of the Wenatchee District Cooperative Association, the selling end of the Washington State Farmers' Union. The Farmer-Labor exchange of Chicago is handling 150,000,000 apples for the co-operative farmers, each case bearing the farmer's union trades council.

Ohioan Officials Doubt Validity of U. S. Constitution

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 17.—According to the "Rubber Worker," official organ of the Rubber Workers' Union of this city, the mayor of a city in Ohio recently stated that he did not know "whether the constitution would hold good in the courts today." According to the Rubber Worker, evidently the question of free speech was under discussion, when this mayor delivered himself of this bit of wisdom.

When one considers the various other ways transpiring in this town, as for instance, that company police use company ambulances at night to search the homes of the men without warrant, and are allowed to do this because the company police at the same time have city police authority, then one cannot wonder that those in authority do have doubts as to the constitution of the United States.

Tell-Tale Records Are Shrouded in Secrecy in the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

It is one full month today since Judge Webster Thayer, in the Norfolk County Court at Dedham, Massachusetts, "took under advisement" the demand for a new trial for Nick Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. But still no decision.

The American Federation of Labor has held its convention during the last two weeks in Detroit, Mich., and called for an investigation of the activities of the department of justice in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. But no desire was shown to really fight the case and rouse all American labor to the doom that threatens two courageous workers in the dungeons of New England. These are ominous developments.

* * *

The confession of the former department of justice agent Fred J. Weyand, that no one believed Sacco and Vanzetti guilty, has already been reviewed in these columns.

The confession of Lawrence Letherman, for 25 years a post office inspector, and for three years local agent of the department of justice in Massachusetts, supports the startling revelations made public by Weyand.

Lethermen says that while he was post office inspector he collaborated with the agents of the department of justice in matters of joint concern, including the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The man under him in direct charge of that case was William J. West, who is still attached to the department in Boston. Letherman says that before, during and after the trial, Mr. West had a number of "under-cover men" assigned to this case, including Ruzzamenti and Carbone, a number of men assigned to watch the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, all under-cover men, and one or two of them employed by the committee.

Lethermen states that the department of justice was anxious to get sufficient evidence against Sacco and Vanzetti to deport them, but never succeeded in getting the kind and amount of evidence required.

IT WAS THE OPINION OF DEPARTMENT AGENTS HERE THAT CONVICTION OF SACCO AND VANZETTI FOR MURDER WOULD BE ONE WAY OF DISPOSING OF THESE TWO MEN.

It was also the general opinion of such of the agents in Boston as had any actual knowledge of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, that Sacco and Vanzetti, altho anarchists and agitators, were not highway robbers and had nothing to do with the South Braintree crime.

Letherman says there is or was a great deal of correspondence on file in the Boston office between Mr. West and Mr. Katzman, the district attorney, and that these letters and documents on file in the Boston office would throw a great deal of light upon the preparation of the Sacco-Vanzetti case for trial, and upon the real opinion of the Boston office of the department of justice as to the guilt of Sacco and Vanzetti of the particular crime with which they were charged.

It is pointed out that records still held in secret, and which the present attorney general, Sargent, in Coolidge's cabinet, refuses to reveal, will show that the department of justice at no time considered Sacco and Vanzetti guilty of the holdup and murders at South Braintree.

They will show, however, the actual collusion between the department of justice at Washington, under the thumb of the New England mill owner, Senator Butler, and the local prosecutors in Massachusetts who owe their power and tenure in office to the multi-millionaire shoe factory and textile mill owners.

This is the shoe-and-textile tyranny that placed Anthony Bimba on trial for blasphemy and sedition at Brockton, Mass., that refuses permission for workers' meetings practically thruout its entire domain, building every possible hulwark for its class rule against the rising power of the workers. Victory in the Sacco-Vanzetti case for the mill owners, will mean the strengthening of this tyranny. Victory for the workers thru the saving of the lives of Secco and Vanzetti will help open the way for the organization of the New England mill workers into trade unions and the strengthening of the political power of labor. The Sacco-Vanzetti case is a crucial struggle for the whole American labor movement.

Tomorrow:—Nick Secco and his lawyer, William G. Thompson, meet Celestino Madeiros, who confessed that he played a part in the South Braintree crime, face to face in the Dedham jail.

COWBOY PRAISES METHOD USED IN PASSAIC STRIKE

Best Conducted She's Seen, Says Leader

DETROIT, Oct. 17.— (FP) — "The most splendid piece of organization work I have ever seen." That's what Sara Conboy, secretary of the United Textile Workers, thinks about the Passaic strike relief work.

Mrs. Conboy, in direct touch with the Passaic strike for union recognition and decent pay since the thousands of Passaic textile workers joined the A. F. of L., is emphatic in her praise of the efficient machine which has furnished the financial sinews of war in the long struggle.

"We have a man, Wagenknecht," she added, "who is a financial genius. To him I attribute a large measure of praise for maintaining the spirit of the men and women out on strike, thru keeping up a steady flow of relief funds from all parts of the country.

"Never have I seen such splendid spirit after so many weeks and months of privation," she declared. "It is a triumph of union relief organization."

Favorable Report on Mexican Unions Hidden by A. F. L.' Convention

tact with the Amsterdam International.

In view of the fact that the next meeting of the executive council will not meet again until in January, at St. Petersburgh, Florida, great interest centers about what the council did not do, rather than what it did at its meeting here.

No steps were taken to carry into effect the demand for an investigation of the struggle between the Mexican church and government. This will therefore be delayed for at least three months. This question may either have been something to do with the failure to send a delegation to the proposed conference at Mexico City. Such a delegation would of necessity be compelled to report on the Mexican religious war.

So far as could be learned no action was taken, nor even a report received on the so-called investigation of the recent successful strike of Fur Pur-riers' Union in New York City. In a letter mailed several months ago by President William Green to Ben Gold head of the Joint Board of the New York Furriers' Union, it was stated that the "investigation" was nearly completed at that time.

There were indications that the executive council would make some recommendations to the convention that has just adjourned here. But no such report was made. The matter not coming before the convention. And now the members of the executive council have scattered for another three months without even considering this matter.

Similarly with the much advertised organization drive in the automobile industry, this matter was referred by the Metal Trades Department to the A. F. of L. convention, which in turn sent it to the executive council, which in its turn has made no plans for immediate action.

Passaic—A Challenge to the A. F. of L. Leadership

Statement by the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party in Answer to the Attack on the Communists at the A. F. of L. Convention.

THE convention of the American Federation of Labor has been indulging in its annual attack on the Communists. Because the Communists insist that the trade unions must be militant fighting organisations for the workers' interests, and criticise the inactivity, compromises, weaknesses and deals with the bosses of the leaders of the A. F. of L., the Communists are denounced as disrupters of the labor movement.

The American Federation of Labor, in this convention, has answered its own attack on the Communists. Facts and actions speak louder than words, and while the A. F. of L. denounced the Communists in words, in action it was obliged to recognize the work of the Communists in relation to one of the biggest constructive achievements for the American labor movement in recent years.

THREE months ago the executive Council of the A. F. of L. sent out a statement to the local unions warning them against giving relief funds to the Passaic strike and denouncing the Communists in connection with this strike. At the Detroit convention the A. F. of L. went on record unanimously to make an appeal for relief for the striking Passaic workers, took an immediate collection in their behalf of over a thousand dollars, and ordered a conference of international presidents for the purpose of securing other funds immediately.

By this action the American Federation of Labor recognizes the strike at Passaic as one of the most important [illegible] It has been compelled to take over and give support to a strike which it has previously denounced. It has been compelled to come to the support of the first great movement in several years of unorganised workers for trade union organisation and resistance to the attacks of the employers. Who Organized the Passaic Workers?

THE A. F. of L. is compelled to recognise and take up the struggle of the Passaic workers, but at the same time it denounces Communists as disrupters of the labor movement.

Will the A. F. of L., now that it has declared that it stands behind the Passaic strike and recognizes its importance, tell the American workers who organised the Passaic workers, who aided them in carrying on their fight during the past eight months, who organized the movement for relief funds which has enabled them to carry on their heroic struggle during all these months?

THE A. F. of L. knows that this could not be done. The achievement for the American labor movement was carried thru by the initiative and support of the Workers (Communist) Party. It knows that it was the Communists who came to aid of the utterly oppressed Passaic workers when the bosses tried to make their exploitation even greater thru enforcing a wage cut. It was the Communists who aided them to organize their strength thru forming a union. It was the Communists who aided in fighting their battles on every field.

AND even after eight long months of rebuffs and denunciation of the Passaic strikers by the A. F. of L. the way was found to have the Passaic strikers enter the A. F. of L. thru becoming a local of the United Textile Workers' Union, the Communists [illegible] about. The Communist even agreed to the sacrifice of Alfred Weisbord, who had for all these months been the leader of the strike, and who had won the confidence and loyalty of every striker in Passaic by his devotion to the cause of the workers.

Because the Communists stood for a united labor movement they exerted all their influence to have the Passaic strikers join the A. F. of L. The Communists are for all the workers of the United States organising in labor unions and uniting their strength in one all-inclusive American Federation of Labor. They are for international unity of the labor movement. They are fighting on every front to bring about such a unity of labor for a militant class struggle in the interest of the workers and against the capitalist bosses.

A Challenge to the A. F. of L.

THE Passaic workers were organized with the aid of the Workers (Communist) Party. The Passaic workers' fight has been carried on thru the past eight months because of the support of the workers who gave relief funds to the Passaic workers, and this relief was organized with the aid of the Workers (Communist) Party. Thru the activities and efforts of the Workers (Communist) Party 16,000 formerly unorganised workers have been added to the A. F. of L.

WE challenge the leaders of the A. F. of L. who denounce the Communists as disrupters, to place a similar achievement thru their effort in building the American labor movement before the American workers. Their own records show a decline in the membership of the A. F. of L. Why has not the A. F. of L. acted to organize the twenty million unorganised workers in the great industries [illegible] launched an aggressive campaign to bring these workers into the A. F. of L? These workers are waiting for the A. F. of L. to act. The Communists are doing their part toward organising them. They will in the future bring the A. F. of L. more Passaics—they will organize the unorganised, highly exploited workers wherever possible.

The Communists, whom the A. F. of L. leaders denounce as the disrupters of the labor movement are showing by facts and action that they are the builders of the labor movement.

THE A. F. of L. leaders denounce the Communists because the Communists insist upon action, upon work. They insist upon policies which will strengthen the labor movement. They demand the organization of the unorganised, they demand the amalgamation of the trade unions into industrial unions in order to strengthen the workers in their fights, they demand the organization of a labor party, they demand a militant fight in labor's interest industrially and politically. The Communists are a thorn in the side of the reactionary leaders of the A. F. of L. because they insist the A. F. of L. shall fight for the workers interests. Their insistence on a fight for the workers interests disturbs the peace and comfort of the jobholders at the head of the A. F. of L.

The A. F. of L. and Passaic.

THE A. F. of L. is now officially committed to the support of the Passaic strikers. The workers at Passaic and the members of the trade unions over the country must see to it that it actually given that support.

In order to win the Passaic strike must be fought with the same militancy, with the same uncompromising attitude, which has been shown by the workers thus far.

That the Passaic workers will do their part, we know. They have shown thru long months that they can fight, that in spite of sacrifices and suffering demanded of them, they will not accept defeat.

The A. F. of L. must not be permitted to alter this spirit and compromise the struggle.

The A. F. of L. bureaucracy is on trial before the American workers. Can it do what the Communists have done at Passaic?

Every worker must watch closely the actions of the A. F. of L. bureaucrats in the Passaic situation. The workers must demand the mobilization of all the resources of the labor movement to win the Passaic strike.

THE workers at Passaic must not permit any compromise of their interests. Passaic must be a victory for the workers, a victory for the American labor movement.

The A. F. of L. may denounce the Communists, but the Communists will continue their work to build the labor movement. They will continue their work in support of those measures which will win victories for the American workers in the struggle against the capitalist employers.

The answer of the Communists to the denunciation of the A. F. of L. will be more work to build a stronger, more effective fighting organisation of the workers thru

Organization of the unorganised;

Amalgamation of the trade unions;

Formation of a labor party;

A class struggle by the workers against the capitalists.

Central Committee,
Workers (Communist) Party.

General Secretary.

WORKERS OF INDIA SEND DELEGATE TO LABOR CONGRESS

Inhuman Treatment of Workers Exposed

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng.—(FP)— "I have come all the way from India to bring you a message from the Indian workers," said S. Chandra Lall in his address as first delegate from the All-Indian Trades Union Congress to the recent British Trades Union Congress at Bournemouth. "We Indian trade unionists followed closely your general strike and were inspired by this splendid working class demonstration. The same British capitalists who exploit you, exploit us. Because the Indian worker's standard of living is so low, your standard of living is being forced down.

"In the Bombay textile mills the average monthly wage for a man is $9.60 and for a woman $5.70. These are government figures. A Calcutta jute mill worker earns $8.80 a month. A worker on the tea plantations earns from $1.20 to $1.60 a week. As for the British empire, I say if it means enough slavery for millions of people, let it die!"

Lall's speech, the one note of revolt sounded from the congress platform, was received enthusiastically by the delegates. The general council received it in silence. Lall got no gold watch and silver necklace for this wife, as did the fraternal delegate from America, Pres. Hutcheson of the carpenters.

Interviewed Lall said, "The Indian Labor movement is still weak. We have only $60,000 of the 30,000,000 workers organized. The 300,000,000 peasants are barely organized at all.

"While the Indian people have been kept in great ignorance (only 1 in every 17 can read or write), and the British government has used every means of coercion and cajolery, the spirit of the workers is good. They have revolted in many great strikes against the ruthless exploitation of the British and Hindu capitalists. British capital controls the export trade and all coal, tea and jute. Indian capital controls the steel works and the cotton industry, the main manufacturing of India."

On the political situation, Lall said, "The electorate is composed of the middle class, the landlords and peasants being prohibited from voting by property qualifications. India will never win her freedom except through the organized workers. The Non-Cooperative Movement failed because the leaders refused to see this."

Chandra Lall, a young lawyer but newly practicing his profession, is a member of the educated class who has deserted his caste and Oxford training for the Indian Labor movement. He has been active as a labor promoter since 1920. He has led big strikes in fields of the railway workers, textile workers, jute workers and others.

Reluctantly Turn to Revolutionary China

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Radical China is providing the only safeguards to American and other foreigners in the midst of the bitterest civil war the country has yet known, while reactionary and militarist China is turning a savage face toward its foreign allies. That is the perplexing fact which American state department officials gather from dispatches from Nanking, Hankow, Shanghai and Canton. It is confirmed by special press dispatches from China and is now digested by a reluctant editorial in the New York Times which always has sentiments with diplomatic Washington.

Frank Lockhart was sent to Hankow as American consul-general to look after consular and commercial interests in central China and to report on the dangerous spread of the nationalist doctrine of the "red" government at Canton. New Lockhart reports the Cantonese forces as respecting the rights of Chinese and foreigners, while the militarist Sun Chuan-fang is marching his campaign against the radicals by indiscriminate massacre and looting.

Reluctantly the American authorities in touch with China, who feel responsible for the safety of American lives in that country, are turning to the Cantonese "radicals," friendly to the Soviet Union, as the one element which may restore order and a hope of progress in the nation.

Coal Production in Kuzbas District Grows

MOSCOW, Oct. 17.—Kuzbas coal to the amount of 1,327,000 tons will be produced in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1926, according to plans of the Autonomous Industrial Company of Kuzbas, announced by the official Tass news agency. For the year just ended the production was 773,800 tons. It was in this field that many Americans, led by W. D. Haywood, undertook some years ago to restore production of coal and steel. Many of these recruits left the region before the mines and mills had returned to anything near their pre-war level of production.

Why not a small bundle of The DAILY WORKER sent to you regularly at $ [illegible] per week mailed?

Five Months Fight Leaves Miners United

LONDON, (FP)—Only 5 months of the mining lockout British miners are holding their ranks solid in all important coal fields. The 200 thousands returning to work are in less important coal fields producing only for local markets.

Starvation and lack of sufficient relief put the miners in a hopeless position in spite of their heroism throughout the struggle. After adjusting internal friction, the British Labor Party is launching a national campaign in conjunction with the Trade Union Congress to rouse public opinion for the miners. Meetings are held throughout the country and the government is asked to resign and go to the country on the mining lockout.

Government forces are by no means united, although they keep up a better front than the labor movement. After Churchill was minded to bring the dispute to an end, prime minister Baldwin was forced by his party chiefs to overrule Churchill. It is understood that banking interests influenced Churchill, but the de-hards had enough power to force the mine owners' point of view.

Business interests realize that if the miners are defeated it will be at the cost of hopelessly injuring British industry. According to government figures, about one billion dollars has already been lost in coal output alone. Some of the coal markets have been lost permanently.

Other industries tried to keep going by importing foreign coal, but the costs have been prohibitive and the coal interests. Industry is shutting down again or further restricting production. Supply of gas is being restricted. Only a fraction of street lamps are being used. The darkened streets remind the inhabitants of the war days, when streets were dimmed for fear of Zeppelin raids.

If the miners are temporarily defeated, the lessons they have taught themselves will long be remembered. There is bound to be less eagerness to force the miners into a fight in the future. Strikes as the miners see, there is plenty of life left in them.

Whatever humiliation is forced on some of the districts, the two important districts of South Wales and Yorkshire will defy for many months longer. Most of the British coal is mined in these two areas. A. J. Cook, Secy., and Herbert Smith, Pres., of the Miners Federation, come from these district and are representative of the spirit prevailing there.

That only severe privation forced the return of the miners who have given way is quite evident. They include many single men not entitled to any poor relief and with no families to rely on. The Federated Press also found that the areas which weakened were those where the poor law commissioners brought down relief to an impossible minimum or cut it out entirely. Families of five and six found it impossible to go on with less than $5 a week for months.

Mine owners who got miners to return to work say that these men are weakened after weeks of privation and unable to do the required work. They produce much less than usual and break down easily.

That the fate of the British miners' struggle will have an important bearing on the mining situation in America is suggested in the following statement of a London financial paper: "If the policy of union control should triumph in England, this is bound to have a repercussion in labor politics in the U. S., and there will be a tremendous drive even here against the part of the union to secure a continuation and strict enforcement of the Jacksonville agreement."

Progress in Siberia Under the Soviets

By TOM BARKER, Federated Press.

NOVO SIBIRSK, Siberia—(FP)—"Soviet Siberia is now at the point where American middle west was the right after the civil war," says Peter Kletes of the Siberian executive political committee, whose 74 members govern an area larger than the United States. "We are tremendously rich in natural resources, but otherwise we are poor, although we are making progress. We need machinery on credit."

Kletes is to represent the industrial district of Kemerovo, controlled by "Kuzbas." He is in charge of shipments at the chemical plant.

We talked in the recently opened House of the Soviets in the Siberian capital, a building stately and beautiful, commanding the lordly Ob river. Kletes came to Siberia with the first Kuzbas group in 1921.

"Before coming here I lived in the state of Washington for 19 years as lumberjack and farmer," he said. "I still have a 100-acre lot there. In Siberia we have the most single area of agricultural land in the world. The peasant dumps the stable manure into the creek and the soil still smiles each time year after year. There is coal by the billions of tons, iron ore, gold, rivers, forests teeming with fur-bearing animals, fish. Richest country in the world.

"We have are planning everything, every step of the way. We are a government that is operating industry, and we know where we're going and what for. Everything is provided for in our state budget: Loans extended to Siberia are but one item in the mutual firm, but by the resources of the soviet state.

"Let the United States recognize us and we will find a billion dollars of equipment a year in piece of the $100,000,000 we are buying today."

Then the farmer asserted himself. "I was out camping last summer in a village. About 100 yards away there were two beehives. Do you know, we never saw a bee near our camp all the time. The flowers were so plentiful that the bees just hopped off the hive right on to them. They did all their honey hunting within a 10-yard radius."

Then the 19-year residence in the western states showed itself: "Greatest country in the world, I'm telling you, is our Soviet Siberia," Kletes wound up.

BRITISH COLOR LINE BARS HER BLACK SUBJECTS

Police Card Has Their Nationality "Doubtful"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON—(By Mail.) — The despicable "Color Bar Act" recently enacted in the Union of South Africa, which is an outrage on the most rudimentary principles of justice, has led to considerable adverse criticism in the British press. This criticism, however, is evidently, not so much it at all—due to the injustice of this act as it is to the fear of the nationalistic spirit of the present government of South Africa.

In general it is implied that this act is a reversal of the empire's policy, but the reversal, if such, is in method only. While focusing the attention on South Africa the example of "British liberty and fair play" in "the mother country" (of the Hottentots!) goes unheeded.

A Joynson-Hicks Decree.

"The Special Restriction (colored alien seamen) Order 1925" signed "W. Joynson-Hicks," notorious red-baiter, is not less unjust because of its camouflaged phraseology. This order is as much a discrimination against color as is the South African Color Bar Act: it is only more subtle in its application.

It compels colored seamen to carry an identification card bearing photo and description, and must be stamped by the police whenever the bearer signs on and pays off a vessel in the United Kingdom. Failure to comply with this police registration may mean deportation. Its scope of application puts a new phase on the word "alien"—making it practically synonymous with the world color.

Nationality "Doubtful."

Colored seamen born within the empire who have made their homes in the United Kingdom for 20 years or more and who have been officially recognized as British up to April the 6th, 1925, (when this order came into force), are now classed as of no or "doubtful" nationality; colored seamen who served in the imperial army and navy during the great war as British-born subjects and seamen of color who left the land of their birthare not exempt, unless they have a passport.

To obtain a passport, which is evidently the only evidence of British nationality accepted to exempt the individual from this "alien" registration, he its unique features in this case. This may perhaps be best illustrated by citing a case:

A Case in Point.

This man was born in the British West Indies. He was married in England some 22 years ago, and has settled down in the United Kingdom as British. He has served in the imperial army and navy during the great war as British-born subjects and seamen of color who left the land of their birth are not exempt, unless they have a passport.

W. P. Ticket is Only Independent One in Colorado Election

DENVER, Oct. 17.—The Workers Party is the only party in the state of Colorado which stands for independent political action. Altho there are three parties in the field besides the republican and democratic parties, almost all radicals realize that the socialist ticket and the so-called farmer-labor ticket, which has been recently filed, are not interested in getting the workers awakened to independent political action. The writer has approached many of the former members of the socialist party here, and all claim they have had nothing to do with the filing of this ticket, which has been filed not by a socialist, but by a single taxer who makes a living circulating petitions and would just as well circulate a petition for the republican or democratic party as he would for the socialist party.

Furthermore, there are candidates on the socialist ticket who have never been socialists, or members of the socialist party. Every candidate on the Workers Party ticket is a member of the Workers Party.

Three candidates of the six on the state ticket of the Workers Party are members of A. F. of L. unions.

We are ready to withdraw our candidates and support any bona-fide representative party which puts up a straight labor, or farmer-labor ticket, independent of either the republican or democratic party.

William Dietrich, Candidate for Governor of the Workers (Communist) Party.

YOU'LL STAY UP NIGHTS

reading the new LITERATURE CATALOG of the Daily Worker Publishing Co. Hundreds of books are described and indexed and the catalog is sent FREE ON REQUEST.

So, promptly at eight-thirty next morning, the campus in front of the Assembly building, beheld a sight, the like of which had never thrilled the student-body of S. P. U. since the first days of the Methodist Sunday-school. The discoverer and heir-apparent of the Ross Junior oil field turned into a newsboy! Standing on a bench, with an armful of papers, shouting, sailing, "The Investigator! First issue of the Investigator! Five cents a copy!"

Did they buy them? Oh, ask! They crowded around Bunny three deep, he couldn't make the change fast enough; as the excitement spread, they crowded six deep, ten deep—it was a mob, a riot. Everywhere, all over the campus, men and women, seeing the throng, came running. An accident? A fight? What was the matter? People who got their copies and drew out of the crowd became centers of minor disturbances, others trying to see over their shoulders, asking questions.

For just about ten minutes this went on; until from the Administration building there emerged, portly and dignified, with gold nose-glasses and a roll of fat around his neck—just such a personage as you would meet in any big real estate office or bank in the city—Reginald T. Squirge, Ph., D., Dean of Men. Quietly and masterfully he penetrated the throng, and quietly and masterfully he took charge of the millionaire newsboy, and conducted him into his private office, still clutching his armful of papers. "Wait here," he commanded, and again went out, and returned with Peter Nagle; a third time he went out, and his prey was Gregor Nikolaieff; while at his heels came deputy deans, appointed ad hoc, escorting the other criminals.

How many copies had been sold no one could say; the unsold copies were stacked in a corner of the Dean's office, and if they were ever counted the result was not made known. But enough had been distributed to set the campus ablaze. "Have you read it?" 'Have you got a copy?"—that was all anybody heard that day. The price of "The Investigator" leaped to one dollar, and before night-fall some had sold for two or three times that price.

One reason was that a copy had reached the Angel City "Evening Booster," most popular of newspapers, printed in green, five editions per day. The second edition, on the streets about noon, carried a "streamer head" across the front page:

RED NEST AT UNIVERSITY!
Bolshevik Propaganda at S. P. U.

There followed a two-column story, carried over to page fourteen, giving a lurid account of "The Investigator's" contents, including the most startling of the facts about the hiring of athletes for the university, and the whole text of the satiric poem about God—but alas, only a very brief hint as to what Harry Seager had told about Siberia. A little later in the day came the rivals of the "Evening Booster," the "Evening Roarer" and the "Evening Howler"; they had been scooped one whole edition, but they made up for it by a mass of new details, some collected by telephone, the rest made up in the editorial offices. Said the "Evening Roarer":

RED COLLEGE PLOT UNEARTHED

and it went on to tell how the police were seeking Russian agents who had made use of Southern Pacific students to get their propaganda into print. The "Evening Howler," which went in especially for "human interest stuff," featured the ring-leader of the conspiracy:

MILLIONAIRE RED IN COLLEGE!
Son of Oil Magnate Backs Soviets!

And it scooped its rivals by having a photograph of Bunny, which it had got by rushing a man to the Ross home and informing Aunt Emma that Bunny had just been awarded a prize for the best scholarship record in ten years. The good lady was so excited she sent the butler out to the corner drug store three times to see if the "Evening Howler" had arrived with the story of that prize!

IX

In the ordinary course of events this newspaper excitement would have lasted thirty-two hours. Next afternoon's papers would have recorded the fact that the university authorities had banned "The Investigator," and on the following day their screamer-heads would have proclaimed, "Film Star Divorces Champ," or "Magnate's Wife Elopes with Cop."

But fate had prepared a fantastic torment for the "parlor reds" of S. P. U. On the morning after their flyer in publicity, it chanced that a wagon loaded with blasting material, making its way through Wall Street with customary indifference to municipal ordinances, met with a collision and exploded. The accident happened in front of the banking offices of Morgan and Company, and about a dozen people were killed. A few minutes after the accident, the bankers called in America's sleuth-celebrity to solve the mystery; and this able business man, facing the situation that if it was an accident it was nothing, while if it was a Bolshevik plot it was several hundred thousand dollars, took three minutes to look about him, and then pronounced it a plot.

And forthwith throughout the world a horde of spies and informers went to work, knowing that if he or she could find or invent a clue, it was fame and fortune for him or her. A wave of witch-hunting swept the country, and other countries for two or three years thereafter new discoveries would be made, and new "revelations" promised, and poor devils in Polish and Roumanian dungeons would have their arms twisted out of joint and their testicles macerated, while eager newspaper readers in New York and Chicago and Angel City waited ravenously for promised thrills.

CLEVELAND COURT ORDER DEFIED BY BUILDING TOILERS

Won't Work Beside Scab Glaziers

CLEVELAND, Oct. 14.—Since Sept. 18, 600 building trades workers have been on strike, refusing to work with four non-union glaziers. These glaziers were working on the Ohio Bell Telephone Building for some time, and the contractor in charge of the building refused to discharge them.

Result of Former Strike.

The whole controversy arises out of the strike of the painters and glaziers which began on March 1 and lasted for several months, ending in the return of the men on the conditions that they had when they went out. The strike was broken by the chamber of commerce, manufacturers and building contractors of the city, forming a "citizens' committee," backed up by a fund of $5,000,000 to introduce the open shop in Cleveland. As it was obvious that the painters and glaziers had lost their strike, since the strike committee advised the men to return on the old terms, the contractors, backed up by the citizens' committee, decided to retain their non-union help despite any protests of the union.

Contempt of Court, Charge.

On September 18, therefore, 600 men working on the Ohio Bell Telephone building walked out. Four of the union officials were ordered by the court, to have the men return to the job. In court, however, they declared they had not ordered the men off the job. As under such circumstances the court order was not being respected, the four officials were cited for contempt of court.

A meeting took place today, at which it was decided that the men will not go back as long as the four non-union glaziers are employed. The men declared that they would defy their own leaders if they should attempt to carry out the court order.

Will Maintain Rights.

It is clear that the so-called constitutional right of men to work or to refuse to work will be upheld by the 600 building trades workers, and no court can order them back to work. Chief Justice Homer G. Powell of common pleas court is of the opinion that if the union is to be regarded as a union with responsible leadership the men must obey their orders. Should the judge succeed in his intention it will be a most dangerous decision for the workers, for instead of taking action against a union all that will be necessary will be to take action against a few leaders in the hope of thereby paralyzing the union. The Cleveland building trades workers are resolved to stand by their rights.

Los Angeles Workers Demand New Trial for Sacco and Vanzetti

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17. — More than 1,000 workers gathered at Cooperative hall, 2706 Brooklyn avenue, and passed a resolution demanding that a new trial be given Sacco and Vanzetti by the state of Massachusetts.

The resolution pointed out that whereas the real perpetrators of the crime for which the two radicals were charged had confessed, a new trial should be given the Massachusetts comrades.

The resolution also cites the testimony of two former department of justice operatives, telling of how Sacco and Vanzetti were "framed."

A copy of the resolutions was sent to the governor of Massachusetts.

An Appeal to Working Women—By One

By FRANCES RIBARDO,
A Textile Striker.

WOMEN are the most exploited class. You know life is not very pleasant for any one that works in the mill and then has to come home and do more work, take care of the children and do all the washing and housework at night. I know from experience that it is a dreadful life and we women can make it better if we want to.

We women in Passaic, Clifton, Garfield, and Lodi have staged to organize in the Workingwomen's Councils, affiliated with the United Council of Working class Housewives. Already we have five or six hundred members. The United Council has done everything for the children during the strike. They opened the kitchens for the children in Passaic and fed them there and at Victory Playground.

You know, as we all know, that this strike brought out the women to fight along side of the men. Men and women were exploited. The bosses gave starvation wages. A home with five or six children could not be supported on twelve to twenty dollars a week.

Women must organize themselves and come out of the kitchen and learn what the class struggle is about. If there is a strike they must come out on the picket line and support the men and women on strike.
